Tuesday's editorial article titled "Decency in the Bathrooms" provided a much needed wake up call to those not following the author's three-step process in men's bathrooms. Agreed; maintenance is not responsible for the mess in the bathrooms because they do all they can to keep it clean. I will argue that bathroom cleanliness has not so much to do with the 3-step process violators as it does with people who don't throw away their tp and paper towels into the proper places. The bathroom in the DuBois Library and men's room on the first floor in the rear part of the School of Management are notorious for this.

My other concern in the bathrooms involves graffiti. I loathe the sight of little phrases like "Bush sucks!" and "420 crew." If you have something to say,write it in your diary or to The Collegian. I don't need to see a paragraph explaining why our political leader is failing while I'm on the can.

All the taggers and message writers and anyone else who writes graffiti should restrain themselves from their punk high school antics and devote their free writing time to their term essay that is due tomorrow. Are these graffiti-ists the same people who steal the soap dispensers? Where do people take the dispensers? It is very illogical to take it back to your room. Maybe they will return them when they realize the waste of wetting their hands, running to their room to apply soap, and then sprinting back to the bathroom to rinse them off! Bathroom behavior, like the Massachusetts economy is in sorry state, but if we work together, if we persevere, we can make our bathrooms more enjoyable than our dorm rooms. Well, maybe not.

So throw away that paper waste, save your Sharpie for labeling CD-R's, flush the mush, and for everyone's sake, leave the soap in the bathroom.

Jamison Shipley
UMass student

autumn splendors

the sweet glow of

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PROVIDENCE, RI – It's the warm glow that initially attracts one to a jack-o-lantern. There's the bright yellow light beaming full-strength through the carved-out middle, of course, but then there's the varying shades of orange of the pumpkin's outer walls, radiating from the light within. The jack-o-lantern has been one of the main icons surrounding Halloween for decades, and yet it's rare to find an attraction solely devoted to this hallowed-out vegetable. Rare, yet not impossible.

Enter John Reckner, a mailman from Oxford, Mass. with a devoted family by his side. Reckner, his family and all their friends specialize in something most do as pure amusement once a year: they make jack-o-lanterns – over 5,000 of them yearly.

The Jack-o-Lantern Spectacular, set up for the second consecutive year at the Roger Williams Park Zoo, brought in approximately 80,000 spectators last year. And thus far this season, the crowds are still coming in droves, averaging 4,000 guests daily.

The attraction takes guests down the park's wetlands trail, in the past used as a dinosaur exhibit and with a few old relics scattered about the path as proof. The trail winds and weaves through heavy foliage, past the Wetlands Lake and through a steep hillside bank. But it's not the forestry beauty

Turn to JACK-O-LANTERN page 8

By Jessica Pelletier
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SUNDERLAND – Have you ever wondered what it would be like to have your own Field of Dreams experience? Ever wanted to play a game of catch with your father running the acres of waving corn? Wonder and want no longer, for the past three years, Sunderland has been home to one of the only corn mazes in western Massachusetts.

Mike Wisneman and Will Sullin, creators of the maize maze, spend their seasons developing new and exciting ways for people to wander the seemingly endless paths carved into the cornfield. This year's pattern is a six-acre portrait of the Sultan of Swat, Babe Ruth. (Past portraits have included the Mona Lisa and the back of the Massachusetts state quarter.)

A short drive down route 116 will get anyone in the mood to spend some quality time outdoors walking the massive labyrinth. Ancient maple trees stretch their golden-hued limbs over the entrance to the farm, as they have for eons now. Rows of farm stands tout their oddly shaped gourds and colorful hanging basket plants.

And if you do plan on joining the rest of the area in the festivities, make sure the weather's on your side. The fun is strictly outdoors on this farm, and a soggy Saturday might put a damper

Turn to MAZE page 7

gather round for

Spook

haunted happenings

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

WEST SPRINGFIELD – In New England, late-autumn nights bring chills to the Storrowton Village Museum. The wind swirls about this replicated colonial New England town like dancing ghosts out for a midnight ride. Soon, the sun drops below the horizon, and cool temperatures descend. Faint lighting, provided by electric, traditional-looking lanterns on black posts, create dim illumination throughout the village's rectangular grassy area, outlined by small buildings harboring lit window-candles (again electric), a quaint, historic church and a gazebo. Walking through one mid-October night, there's just the slightest edge of eeriness.

Turn to STORY page 8

WEST BRIDGEWATER – The Berwick Boys Foundation, hosting its 20th annual Halloween fundraiser this October, invites brave onlookers to journey into the spookiest house in the town, and this weekend (Oct. 24-27) marks its last days of the season.

House of Horrors – A Generation of Terror, as its named, took nine months of planning and three months of construction, incorporating this year's new themes with detailed scenes, props and costumes made possible through a partnership with Macabre Makers.

An experienced company working with attractions in cities from New York to New Orleans to San Jose, Macabre Maker has been contracted to create haunted atmospheres and creepy designs for events such as the Global Halloween

Turn to HOUSE page 7

MICROLOGY

Dedicated to the subtle science of microwave cookery in all its forms and varients

WITH JESSICA PELLETIER

Not too many Muggle years ago, we were introduced to cakes and candies, which remain (for the most part) unduplicated by nearly all foodservice companies. One would assume that the chance to bottle their own brand of "butter beer" would have left Pepsi-cola oozing with bubbly joy. Well, with Halloween on the way and still no way to Harry Potter fans to celebrate, I'm gonna take matters into my own butter-crusted hands and create culinary delights the like of which have never been seen outside Diagon Alley.

Pumpkin Pasties – This spice-lined treat was first consumed by Harry aboard his first train to Hogwart's (And I'm only going with spice-lined because of the traditional nutmeg and/or cinnamon found in our holiday pies.) To be honest, why even go with the whole baking-shebang this time? There have been snack cakes barring the familiar shape of our All Hallows gourds for decades now. I'm saying if you're going for the whole "authentic," Harry Potter party dish out a couple of these babies microwave them for 15 seconds or so and serve em with a smile.

Bertie Bott's Every Flavor Beans – At last! Someone finally got the right idea with these candies. Jelly Bellstine purveyor of the flavorful tiny bits we all know and love came out with their first batch of beans shortly after the release of the first film. Unfortunately, you ended up paying more money for the same flavors (gutlarh sold in stores. This past summer, however, I had the good fortune to browse the shelves of some candy stores found along beautiful, coastal Maine. There, before my very eyes were the same revolting flavors found in the books. Booger, vomit, grass and even ear wax are only a few of the pastries provided for your sampling. But trust me on this one. I can honestly say that vomit and dirt live up to their real life flavors perfectly. As for the rest of them, I haven't got a clue what earwax tastes like, so there's no basis for comparison.

Cauldron Cakes – This one will take some construction on your part, but the end result is so worth it. Take a ball dozen or so miniature sponge cakes – you know, the ones you're supposed to use for strawberry shortcakes, the ones with the indentation in the middle – and coat them in melted milk chocolate. Then drape them with four inches of black licorice rope from one side of your "cauldron" to the other. If the handle refuses to stick, cram it into the side of the pastry and fix any smudges with more chocolate. When you're done, just place them in the fridge or freezer until the chocolate hardens again. Oh, they're done? Good. Place a gummy worm in the indentation of the pastry and cover with a dollop of cool whip. And no, this recipe did not come from one of my mother's Women's Day magazines. I honestly thought about its creation while watching the movie. Yes, I am that dorky.

Butter beer – Two versions of this beverage exist in Rowling's novels: one served hot and frothy in mugs and the other bottle cold in... well... bottles. Online recipes abound, and let me be the first to say some of them just plain suck. Butterscotch flavored syrup and a glass of club soda aren't going to cut it my friend. The more R-rated version of this drink involves a shot of butterscotch schnapps in two cups of milk, a half-teaspoon of vanilla, a half-teaspoon brown sugar and a teaspoon of butter heated and blended until creamy. But if you're underage or just enjoying the flavor, not the inebriation, then regular butterscotch syrup will do.

Fizzie Wizzbies – A serving of these candies will give you the ability to hover for a few moments in midair. In the real world, other things make us fly, and I'm not about to do recipes on what those are, so here's a version of the fizzy candy. If you've got the time, rainbow sherbet deep-frozen and rolled in pop rocks works wonders. Otherwise, you can grab a pack of the candy lollipops with the flattened tops or some sour warheads and a pack of pop rocks candy. Coat the candies with a thin layer of light corn syrup and roll them in the pop rocks like a dog in a pile of filth. Voila – a fizzy taste sensation without the illegality of drugs!

Pepper Imps – These are supposedly the hottest of candies imaginable, which leads us back to warheads again. The Cinnamon ones do nicely, and wrapping a piece of Big Red around the outside. You're left with two different textures of hard and chewy. Try not to swallow the gum when you've gotten to the hot part of the candy by the way. Steam won't come out of your ears, but these candies are pretty damn hot just as they are.

Chocolate frogs – Nestle has resisted in making these amphibian delights, but someday I hope they pick up the idea and run with it. Think of how much our cellulitic would benefit? Tadpole truffles with chocolate cream filling, caramel croakers with smooth chewy caramel... the possibilities are endless. If you've got a frog chocolate mold, more power to you, but most college students lack such finers. Until then, I'm holding out for the goods.

That's it for this year's scrumptious spookies. Have fun knifing amusing patterns into the rotund bodies of enormous gourds, and let's hope next year's fad isn't something from Sponge Bob Square Pants, or I'm going to have precious little to work with.

Jessica Pelletier is a Collegian Columnist.

Bon Jovi worse than forgotten and lost; they're back and lacking

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BON JOVI
Bounce
Island

Sometime in the 15-year period between their self-titled debut and the release of 1999's nearly double platinum Crush, Bon Jovi have transformed from big-haired pop-metal heartthrobs into respected elders of the rock generation.

Bounce, their latest, is the band's full-fledged rallying call for legitimate respect and glory. It's the band's way of proclaiming they are part of the New Rock Hierarchy (the group of newly minted institutions like U2 and the Red Hot Chili Peppers) and not a bunch of hair-metal survivors that got lucky by having hits after the fold of the genre. But Bon Jovi were never more than cheese-metal gods with no real push for true legitimacy; their strength came from honest-to-goodness guilty pleasure anthems such as "You Give Love A Bad Name" and "Livin' On A Prayer." They were never what you would call a good band.

A stab at maturity is always a good thing for any band, especially one that has been around for nearly 20 years. But Bon Jovi's attempts at the kind of breadth and scope that Bruce Springsteen bought to his latest fall flat. Bounce is wan and deflated, and it's covered in a substance that can only be described as Limburger.

Bon Jovi have had to go through their career being compared to fellow New Jersey native Springsteen, but the comparisons were probably unfair – Springsteen's classic arena rockers were worlds away from Bon Jovi's bombastic pop-metal opuses. Sometimes, though, the comparisons are completely spot on. Just as Springsteen came back with The Rising, which addressed the horrors of Sept. 11, Bon Jovi attempt the same maneuver with songs like "Undivided," "Everyday" and "Bounce." But the results here are far more ham-fisted than anything on The Rising, once again illustrating the kind of grit and grace Springsteen applied to his music.

The songs lack the poetic lyricism of The Rising; the lyrics here are clumsy and generic. On "Undivided," Jon Bon Jovi sings, "That was my brother lost in the rubble/ that was my sister lost in the crush," illustrating that there is no doubt that the song is about 9/11. The song begins with a charging, thunderous bass line, which allows it to kick up some dust before limping towards the end. "Bounce," a song about both the country's resilience and the resilience of the band, has no such luck. It's toothless from the get-go.

"Everyday," the lean, mean first single off Bounce, recalls the band's hooky leading single from Crush, the teen-leaning call to independence "It's My Life." No surprise that it was used to sell the album: "Everyday" is the best song here. The lyrics are still obvious odes to Bon Jovi's hardly subtle thematic leanings, but the music has a tightly focused precision. Jon Bon's vocals – which sound grittier and raspier than in the past – roll over the compact hard-rock melody with an ease lacking in the rest of the album.

After the one-two musical punch of "Undivided" and "Everyday," the album collapses inward on itself. This can be blamed on too many sludgy riffs and even more sappy, saccharine ballads. The band actually has the gall to give songs titles like "Love Me Back to Life" and "You Had Me From Hello." The music is as sappy as those names. "Love" is the kind of power ballad that Lifehouse and Our Lady Peace have created to far richer success in recent years; "Hello" is even more stultifying in its spinelessness. I'm a big sucker for romance songs (more than most guys), but these songs are nearly toxic in their syrupy qualities.

Some of the songs were inspired by Jon Bon's acting career. But the "cinematic" (the words of the press release, not me) "The Distance" is fairly vapid, even if it is played fairly well. It's the bridge between the moderate strength of the first two tracks and the lackluster levels of the remainder of the album. "Joey," a story song in the mold of Elton John's "Levon," drowns in sticky goo.

The press release says Bounce is, "a complete body of work rather than a collection of singles." No, Bounce is two decent singles towing a blubbery mass of cheese.

■ maze

continued from page 5

on your fun.

"Our business is entirely dependent on the weather," said Wisseman. "We've lost a couple weekends this year to bad weather, so we may stay open until the first weekend of November. It's the curse of the great Bambino."

Inspiration for this maze came from another Massachusetts maze on the opposite side of the state. A neighbor of Wisseman's traveled to the Sterling, Mass. maze and immediately thought of the acres of land adjacent to his home. The spot is ideal for tourists to visit, due to its location to Sugarloaf Mountain and its proximity to route 91.

An interesting twist on this maze, however, are the games found at strategic locations along its paths. This proves most helpful, as playing the games gets one through the maze without traipsing around in a field for hours. Since Babe Ruth is the subject of this year's maze, baseball fans have arrived and are looking to see other references to the great American pastime. And artist/illustrator/designer Sullin does not disappoint. Partner Wisseman firmly stated, "I wouldn't do it without him." This year's activities within the maze have ranged from photo identification to a crossword puzzle involving baseball trivia.

The average time for completing the maze runs from one and a half to two hours if the weather is nice and the people really work hard at the games. Of course, this is in contrast to the Sterling maze that has an average time of between three and four hours and lacks the games, proving fine considering the entire point of that maze is to get one lost. But if looking for a less complicated way to spend an afternoon, Mike's Corn Maze is definitely for you.

Construction of the maze begins in May and starts with planting the seeds and marking off the field into a checker board-style grid. A photograph is taken and divided into sections as well. That's where Sullin comes back into the picture. At three weeks old, the stalks can be easily cut, with the use of a scythe and formed into the selected pattern. The resulting pattern is reminiscent of a woodcut. GPS systems were used on a past maze, but inaccuracies proved too much of a hassle, and the grid method has reigned supreme. The busy season frequently provides more work than the two men can handle, and students are employed to help out.

A new addition to the maze is a potato cannon, which challenges contestants to attempt hitting a variety of targets in a separate section of the field. One dollar will get you three shots with the prizes ranging from a postcard or candy bar to your very own farm grown pumpkin. Just like a carnival midway game, sometimes it's not how much money you spend; it's the thrill of winning that makes you happy.

And should you travel through the faded, waving corn stalks and the pangs of hunger suddenly strike, a cafe/concession stand is available with hotdogs and hamburgers on hand to take care of your appetite.

The Amazing Maze is no stranger to publicity, despite its rural roots. Recent media coverage of the farm has included CNN and Good Morning America. An average day of attendance on a good weekend can run up to 800 people. Teachers take notice; school groups are welcome during the week to get a look at the local attraction. And should any child become squeamish due to the enclosure, areas have been set aside along the edge for an easy exit. At no time are you ever trapped within the maze. But don't attempt to push your way between the carefully planted rows within the maze, or you might wreck the design.

As for next year's maze design, no one is revealing much. "People like to be kept in the dark," Wisseman said. "We need to have a little mystique." He did inform, though, that the two men are contemplating building two separate mazes in the future.

So, if you're tired of holing yourself up in your home watching reruns of MTV's Cribs, a change of scenery awaits in only a short trip to Sunderland for an afternoon of trivia, target practice and one of the most fascinating agricultural displays this side of a crop circle.

GUSTENE MARK WEISS

THE LATEST MAZE IN SUNDERLAND HAS BABE RUTH AS ITS THEME. NOTICE WHICH TEAM UNIFORM DESIGNER WILL SULLIN CHOOSE TO PLACE ON THE GREAT BAMBINO.

■ house

continued from page 5

Convergence the New England Haunter's Gathering and Transworld.

This season, the House of Horrors – A Generation of Terror will also feature a fire-breathing sideshow for guests who get through the haunted house. The Berwick Boys Foundation describes the entire attraction as "truly intimidating and not intended for little children."

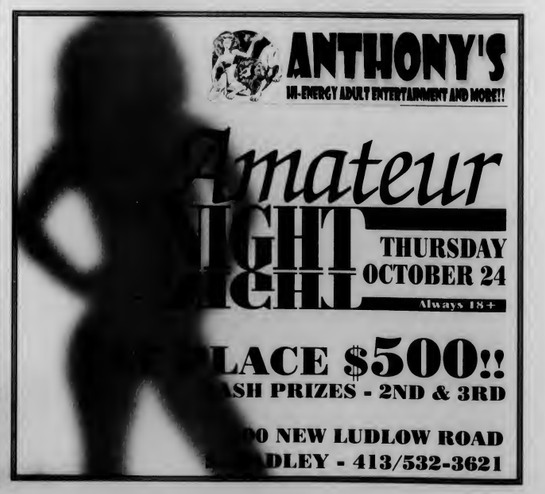
The event's proceeds benefit the Berwick Boys Foundation, which sponsors a winter program of applied training in auto mechanics, woodworking, boat repair and leadership for teenage boys. In addition, summers bring an eight-week summer camping and wilderness experience for the boys on a 700-acre island on the Maine coast.

The haunted house is open from 6:30 to 9 p.m. on Thursday and Sunday and from 6:30 to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The attraction costs $7 per person, which includes free popcorn and admission to the fire-breathing sideshow. Foundation Headquarters is located on 335 West Street.

On the Net: http://www.berwick.org.

– Jennifer Eastwood

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
online at www.fineartscenter.com
545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS FOR TICKETS



SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26
STANISLAVSKY OPERA COMPANY IN PUCCINI'S LA BOHEME
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8pm
One of the top Russian opera companies performing today. Puccini's beautiful and passionate music, sets which imaginatively recreate the spirit of Paris around 1930, and the voices of renowned singers promise an unforgettable evening of opera. Sung in Italian with English supertitles.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1 AND SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2
THEATRE DE LA JEUNE LUNE IN HAMLET
Bowker Auditorium at 8pm
Jeune Lune seeks to create an entirely new kind of theatre that is immediate, high-spirited, passionately physical, and visually spectacular. For this tour, the company will perform Shakespeare's famous tragedy of the Prince of Denmark, Hamlet. Love, madness, envy, hatred, betrayal, murder, and mayhem shot through with transcendent theatricality. And, like poor Yorick, full of "infinite jest."

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 5&6
STOMP
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30 pm
Exhilarating music, theatre, choreography and performance art, STOMP is explosive, provocative, sophisticated, utterly unique and appeals to audiences of all ages. If you haven't seen STOMP, go. If you have seen it, take someone who hasn't and share the pleasure! SPONSORED by

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14
FOSSE
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30
Fosse is a journey in song and dance through the extraordinary career of showman Bob Fosse. Fosse includes rarely seen dance and musical numbers from the choreographer's earliest works, as well as many numbers from films and television shows that have never been seen on stage.

Catch the beat Share the Joy
TAKE 3 and SAVE 15%
545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS
TICKETS ONLY $7, $10, $15
FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
Amateur
NIGHT
THURSDAY
OCTOBER 24
Always 18+
PLACE $500!!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND & 3RD
00 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
LUDLEY - 413/532-3621

You don't have to unwrap it, unroll it, or worry that it can Break.

Depo-Provera is 99.7% effective. Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Of course, using condoms is the only way to protect yourself against HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases, but make sure you're also as protected as possible against pregnancy. That's why more women than ever are choosing Depo-Provera — it's 99.7% effective when administered on time every 3 months.

Remember, Depo-Provera doesn't protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Some women using Depo-Provera experience side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months and some may experience a slight weight gain. You shouldn't use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant, if you have had any unexplained periods, or if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a possible decrease in bone density.

Depo-Provera. One of the best and most convenient ways to protect yourself from pregnancy. Ask your health care professional if prescription Depo-Provera is right for you.

See what Depo-Provera is all about. Call toll free 1-866-519-DEPO or visit Depo-Provera.com.

Depo-Provera® Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Please see important product information on adjacent page.

© 2002 Pharmacia Corporation UX002161702 9/02

■ story

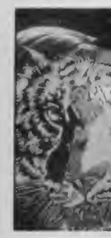
[illegible] Not many first themselves in this area often. With the exception of the Big E — Northern Eastern States Exposition — attracting crowds from near and far in the latter weeks of September, not many things bring boards of people to this little town on [illegible] the street from the Big E's replicas of each New England state's[illegible]. An occasional wedding at the historic white, powdery domed [illegible] sometimes brings guests to the area past September's end for the gala event as well as a [illegible] wedding rehearsal. Shops dwell in some of the [illegible] stock-in-trade like Yankee Candles and shaped glass [illegible] spread evenly. However, while open the entire time during this autumnal run, these shopping hours are now cut back and limited. The road [illegible] the Big E grounds security [illegible] closed down by ticket booth one cold, mid October night is [illegible] of the time, especially evenings. Storbridge Village Museum [illegible] still Quiet. Untouched by [illegible].

A year [illegible] though none of this will matter. The [illegible] [illegible] during the Big E are nothing [illegible] commerce. No bedding chimes will ring that night. The [illegible] and [illegible] their cash registers for the [illegible]. The [illegible] Friday night Storrowton Village Museum will become ghoulishly frightful, as the storytelling program "Haunted Old New England" takes center stage.



"Haunted Old New England" begins in the village's Meetinghouse, one of those buildings outlining that grassy rectangle, at 7 p.m. Damon Cook, an entertainer from Worcester, Mass., will then set out to captivate audiences with his spooky stories and songs, dating back to the 18th and 19th centuries, in the village's candlelit church.

"There's nothing terribly scary," Jackie Sullivan, assistant to the director of the Storrowton Village Museum, said of the forthcoming tales, as the event is geared towards families.

This is the village's 12th year performing the one-night program, Sullivan explained, and the stories and teller change each year. This October, Cook, clad in authentic colonial dress, comes to the village with much anticipation, as he is an acquaintance of the museum director. ("Both worked at Sturbridge together," Sullivan said.) and thus is known firsthand from the directors to tell a vivid a story and charm an audience.

Admission cost $5 per person. Children under the age of six are admitted free. Reservations encouraged but not required. Call (413) 205-5051.

■ jack-o-lantern

Depending on the weather the pumpkins are replaced every three to four days, even though Reckner and his team put a layer of bleach and garden [illegible] to help preserve its shelf life.

"We change things around," Reckner said. "Most pumpkins have to be changed three or four times, so we change the scene and that way, we don't have to keep drawing the same scene over and over."

While most of the carved pumpkins run an average size no bigger than a typical beach ball, Reckner and his crew do throw in a few surprises, including about 20 pumpkins exceeding 300 lbs., varying between Atlantic Giants and Big Macks, many of them grown in Pennsylvania. Besides an impressive weight (some Atlantic Giants this year weighed in at 800 lbs.) and width (the premier 1177 lbs. Big Mick highlighted at the attraction's opening) is recorded as the widest pumpkin ever grown — it was brought in from the carving area on a fork lift with the intricate carving side face down so as not to damage the design and lifted up right by eight grown men) carving these enormous veggies proves impressive. The interior walls on pumpkins of this size average six inches thick, and as Reckner pointed out, to even get light to show through the wall at all it must be as little as a 1/4 inch wide. In other words, those gutting these massive pumpkins literally need a shovel and an abundance of patience.

The actual carving begins three days before the first show, this year held on Oct. 10. Reckner separates his crew into two teams; one for gutting and creating the simple jack-o-lanterns, which range from funny faces to musical notes to accompany some intricate Mozart-themed ones, and another team to conquer the intricate ones, most of which's work is completed in Oxford and transported on a 45-minute drive to the Zoo. Drawing for the intricates begins in mid-September, so that 2/3 of all the artwork is completed by show time. (However artwork for the replacement pumpkins occurs throughout the spectacular's three-week event.)

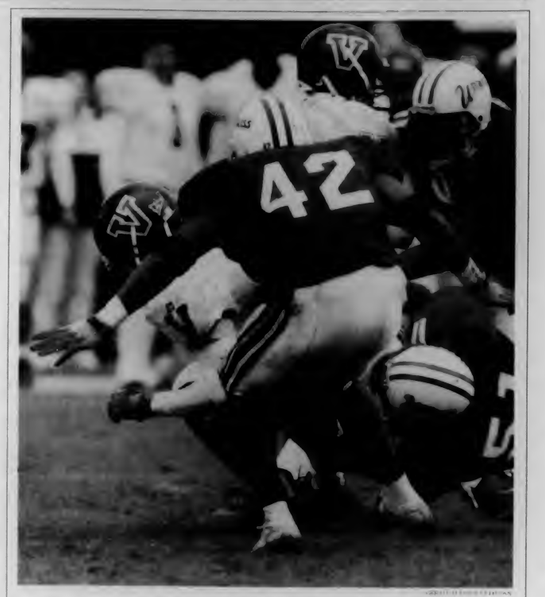
The result is a grueling schedule for Reckner and his companions, working at the zoo from early morning till between 12-1 a.m. that night. Why all the fuss, you might ask? Fascination is the simplest answer. Fourteen years ago Reckner and his companions began the event in the Oxford's town square and Reckner has yet to loose his passion about the entire production.

"It began as a small town event, and as it grew, they looked for a bigger public place," explained Laura Dunn, Roger Williams Park Zoo public relations specialist. "So they moved to Salem and then brought it to the zoo last year where they have plenty of room space and scenery."

Reckner's memory of it, though a little more detailed, sums the story up in a similar fashion, as he recalls taking a trip to Northern Vermont 16 years ago and finding this lovely, quaint town with couple of covered bridges in corner of town. Big Mack pumpkins lit with light bulbs on the front porches of almost every house and a hillside of jack-o-lanterns lit with tea candles.

"So we combined both techniques," he said. "[After the Oxford town square], we were at Salem for one year at the town common across from the Witch's Museum. It's just a flat landscape, so it really didn't enhance the show at all."

As such, when Jim Woods of Providence Tourism, who had viewed the spectacular in Oxford, spoke with Reckner and his companions about moving the gala to the Rhode Island zoo the next year, they agreed.



"It works out, because they've got the recourses we don't," Reckner said. "We're good at carving pumpkins."

The spectacular actually turns out as a fundraising event for the zoo as well, said Bonnie Davis, Events Coordinator Point of fact, last year's event brought profits that allowed the zoo to refurbish their elephant living area.

In the end, 20 to 30 people work on the trail daily, beginning four hours prior to opening, to get it ready for each showing. A crew journeys out into the Westland's Lake in water gear to secure the water pageant imagery section that dazzles the senses. Smaller sugar pumpkins individually attached to towering trees loom overhead, each lit with twinkle lights, usually reserved for the Christmas holiday, and a hillside filled with nothing except that soft yellow and orange glow smoothing the area creates a view similar to the one Reckner originally saw, inspiring him so profoundly those many years ago.

The spectacular runs through Oct. 31 from 6-11 p.m. daily. General admission is $10 for adults, $8 for seniors and $7 for children ages three to 12. Children under three are free. While no individual advance tickets are sold, groups of 20 or more may call (401) 467-0150 for advanced reservations and group rates.

On the Net: http://www.roger-williamsparkzoo.org.

ANTON MCKENZIE MADE 14 TACKLES (11 SOLO) AND CAME UP WITH A GAME-SAVING FIELD GOAL BLOCK IN THE CLOSING SECONDS OF UMASS' 17-16 WIN OVER VILLANOVA. MCKENZIE WAS NAMED A-10 DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK AND DINN BROTHERS UMASS CO-PLAYER OF THE WEEK FOR ITS EFFORTS

■ notebook

continued from page 12

visit to Newark.

Escaping from Durham

New Hampshire almost made it two upsets in the conference last week as 14th-ranked William and Mary slipped out with a 34-27 triumph. Jonathan Smith ran for a career-high 198 yards and a touchdown, while Dave Corley threw for two scores and ran for another. Rich Musinski pulled in seven passes for 126 yards as nine different receivers caught passes for the Tribe.

Stephen Lewis ran for 119 yards and a score for the Wildcats, while Mike Granieri threw for 162 and one touchdown. UNH had won its previous two contests after starting the season 0-4. It will go for win number three on the year next week, but should have a tough task at Tubby Raymond field.

The Tribe has won four in a row to vault to a tie for second in the conference. Three straight A-10 victories have been key for William and Mary, but consecutive games against teams atop the conference.

A home game against Northeastern and a trip to Villanova should answer a lot of questions in the race for the conference championship, where at least six teams are still in the running.

Back on track

Richmond opened up the season with a crucial conference victory over Delaware, but dropped its next two A-10 games. With a trip across the state to Harrisonburg this weekend for a matchup with JMU, the Spiders had a chance to get back on track.

The Richmond defense swamped the Dukes, knocking out starting quarterback Matt LeZotte early on in the game and holding JMU to just 144 yards. Once Richmond got up in the game, it was lights out for its opponent, as the Spiders held the ball for more than 41 minutes and ran away with a 26-0 shutout victory.

The Spiders' ball control offense was at its best, rushing the ball 66 times for 263 yards on the ground. Ten different players ran the ball for Richmond, with four players carrying the ball more than 10 times, led by Kenny Daniztker's 133 D'Prey Walls completed eight of 17 passes, but had two of them go for touches. Doug Kirchner won A-10 Special Teams Player of the Week honors with four field goals and a pair of extra points.

LeZotte was done for the game with a bruised elbow after throwing an interception on his only pass. That left things in the hands of true freshman Jayson Cooke, who went just 7-for-14 with two picks in the contest. The Dukes ran just 55 plays from scrimmage in the contest.

The Spiders hold destiny in their hands, as they have yet to play conference powers Northeastern, Maine and William and Mary. Should they win out, they would likely get a bid into the Div. I-AA playoffs. As for the Dukes, they have lost four straight conference games after starting the year two-for-two in conference, and will look to right the ship against Massachusetts at homecoming this week.

Out of conference success

The A-10 won both of its non-conference games this weekend, with Maine rebounding from its first loss of the season to trounce Florida International down South 33-7. Northeastern trumped cross-town rival Harvard 17-14 in a hard fought contest in Cambridge.

The Black Bears controlled the ground game, posting 218 yards while allowing FIU just 28 yards rushing. Maine lost its shutout with only 12 seconds to play in the contest, as a Tori Robinson one-yard plunge put them on the board.

The Huskies got a pair of touchdown passes from Shawn Brady, including one early in the fourth to put NU in the win column. Anthony Riley had 124 yards on the ground for the visitors.

Hofstra had the week off and will play at Maine this weekend.

Depo-Provera
Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension
Birth control you think about just 4 x a year
DEPO PROVERA
What other things should I consider before using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
What symptoms may signal problems while using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
What are the possible side effects of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against transmission of HIV (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases such as chlamydia, genital herpes, genital warts, gonorrhea, hepatitis B, and syphilis.
What if I want to become pregnant after using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
What are the risks of using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
Should any precautions be followed during use of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
Who should not use DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?
Pharmacia & Upjohn
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com

O'Reilly's No. 24 to be ninth retired by Bruins

By Jimmy Golen
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WILMINGTON, Mass. (AP) – He wasn't the best Boston player of his era, or even the baddest of the Big, Bad Bruins.

But no player more perfectly embodied what it meant to be a Boston Bruin than Terry O'Reilly.

"He was all heart, all desire," Joe Thornton, the team's 17th captain, said about the 13th. "He left it all on the ice. That's what a Bruin is supposed to do."

O'Reilly's No. 24 will be retired on Thursday night before the Bruins' home opener against the Ottawa Senators, the ninth Boston player so honored. Milt Schmidt (15) and O'Reilly teammates Bobby Orr (4), Ray Bourque (77) and Phil Esposito (7), will take part in the ceremony.

"It's always a night of goosebumps," said Bruins coach Robbie Ftorek, who made his Boston coaching debut last year on the night Bourque's number was retired. "It gets you going for the game. You want to be part of that history."

O'Reilly was the 14th overall pick in the 1971 draft, but his talent was always secondary to his toughness and his willingness to do whatever it took to get the puck. He could dig in by the crease and wait for a pass, fight for the puck in the corner or simply fight, a style that endeared him to the blue-collar Bruins fans.

"He was a self-made player, and he worked his way up to be captain of the Boston Bruins," said Ftorek, who played against O'Reilly. "He would doggedly hunt down the puck. Do whatever he needed to score and then he'd probably wind up on his back piling into the boards at the end of it. ... He stood up for everybody.

"To play with that heart and that dedication, that's what the Boston Bruins is about. That's what this area is about."

O'Reilly led the team with 90 points and 211 penalty minutes during the 1977-78 season – a combination accomplished in the Bruins' modern era only by Orr and Thornton (Jimmy Herberts did it in 1924-25). O'Reilly remains Boston's all-time leader with 2,095 penalty minutes, and he is fifth in games (891), seventh in assists (402) and eighth in points (606).

In 1986, O'Reilly took over as Bruins coach and compiled a 115-86-26 record over three seasons, leading the team to the 1988 Stanley Cup finals. This summer, he became an assistant coach of the New York Rangers.

"He was one of the most popular players ever – and I'm not just talking about in Boston," Bruins defenseman Hal Gill said. "It's been a long time coming."

So is Boston's home opener.

The Bruins will play their first game at home after a six-game road trip, going 4-0-1 after a 5-1 loss on opening night to Minnesota. That's much better than expected for the team that is without last year's top forward Bill Guerin, top goaltender Byron Dafoe and top defenseman Kyle McLaren.

The Bruins are also without forwards Sergei Samsonov, who has sprained ligaments in his right wrist, and Martin Lapointe (broken left foot) and goaltender John Grahame (separated right shoulder).

"A lot of people say a lot of things, but what matters is how we play," Gill said. "We did get a pretty good spanking from Minnesota, but we learned from it."

Pleasant says Pats' losing may be good

By Howard Ulman
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) – Anthony Pleasant hasn't played in three weeks, and in that span, the New England Patriots have failed to win a game.

The starting defensive end – and respected leader of the line – thinks that poor showing may help the Super Bowl champions.

"Any time you're on top and you're winning, I think everybody has a little ego and thinks they can't be stopped," he said Wednesday. "I mean, losing is good. It wakes you up and keeps you focused."

The Patriots were 3-1 before Pleasant missed the next two games, both losses, with a shoulder injury. New England didn't play last weekend and plays host to Denver on Sunday.

Pleasant doesn't know if he'll be back by then and is listed as questionable for the game.

"It's very frustrating," he said. "I miss lining up and just trying to keep guys calm and not get overexcited."

Pleasant tied for second on the Patriots last season with six sacks and had 1 1/2 before being hurt in the fourth game, a 21-14 loss at San Diego.

His teammates value his knowledge and experience – 13 pro seasons with Cleveland, Baltimore, Atlanta, the New York Jets, San Francisco and New England.

"He's just a quiet leader," said Steve Martin, a defensive tackle in his first season with the Patriots. "Him not being there really makes a difference."

The Patriots defensive demise began while Pleasant was still playing. They held on for a 41-38 overtime win over Kansas City, then allowed a season-high 258 yards rushing against San Diego.

The losing streak reached three games as the defense allowed its third and fourth 100-yard rushers of the season, Miami's Ricky Williams and Green Bay's Ahman Green.

The Patriots must play with the same intensity they practice with, Pleasant said.

"That's what we're not doing," he said. "We're our own worst enemy. Sometimes success can be your own worst enemy, too."

If opening at 3-0 and extending their winning streak to 12 games made them complacent, any aura of invulnerability has faded.

The Patriots haven't led at halftime since their second game, a 44-7 rout of the Jets. That followed a 30-14 season-opening win over Pittsburgh, which had been touted as a Super Bowl contender.

The Steelers lost their first two games but are 3-1 since then.

"We started out good, but the race is not given to the swift. It's the one that lasts to the end," Pleasant said. "You think about Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh started out bad, now they're 3-3 and now we're 3-3."

Pleasant started 6-7 of 68 games before missing the last two and his absence is one of many reasons the Patriots have struggled. They've also missed tackles, lost one-on-one battles on the line and in the secondary and committed 10 turnovers in their last three games.

The week off may have helped Pleasant physically, but his condition could regress if he's hit on the shoulder.

"It's very frustrating," he said. "I feel that I can help and it doesn't look good when we're not really playing well and everything just begins to snowball."

He still tries to help his teammates.

"Week in and week out, he still tries to be there for us and give his insight," Martin said.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

points – in the win as well.

"Some good things occurred with puck possession," Cahoon said. "A lot of things did offensively happen because we were more organized on defense. It wasn't just about our offense getting better, it was about our defense getting more organized."

The Maroon and White holds a 1-3 all-time record against the Mavs, but this weekend's game marks the team's first trip to the Mullins Center. UMass won its first game at Civic Auditorium 3-2 in 1997, but has lost the last three – two in Cahoon's first season, by the scores of 3-1 and 3-2.

The Minutemen will be looking to gain momentum for the upcoming conference season, which starts Nov. 1 with a game against Top 15 Providence and will be followed the next night with a trip to Boston to take on Northeastern.

"We're taking it game by game, trying to move progressively forward," Cahoon said. "You're looking in essence for the team to play well. I've been saying it since I got here, if we play well, the wins will come."

UMass is also hoping for the healthy return of Mauldin, who was injured on a center-ice check against RPI. Mauldin, who led the league in scoring, is a key piece in a balanced offense. A decision on him playing will be made by the coaching staff, though according to Cahoon, Mauldin likely will not play unless he's 100 percent.

But with a wealth of depth at forward and lots of youngsters itching to play, finding someone to step into the lineup should not be a problem for Cahoon.

"[Having such depth] keeps everybody honest," Cahoon said. "It's not really easier [to have so many players], because there are a bunch of guys who aren't differentiating themselves. It's not that they're playing badly, just that they're not putting distance between themselves and the pack."

Big Green takes OT battle

By Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A nailbiter, one goal contest, and crunch time are all terms that can describe overtime. Sudden death overtime is the most suspense you can find in sports. A single mistake can cost your team the game.

The Massachusetts field hockey team suffered a heartbreaking 1-0 loss in OT to the Dartmouth Big Green yesterday afternoon.

Dartmouth	1
UMass	0

After her team fought for 72 minutes through the extra long game, Head Coach Patty Shea had nothing but positive comments about the Minutewomen's performance.

"To fight that hard and lose in overtime, it really stinks," Shea said. "We took steps forward, because [Dartmouth] is a team with a lot of firepower. We feel better about the game than they do. We're a young team, but we held our own. We just played hard and fought all the way."

The Maroon and White (2-15, 2-1 Atlantic 10) crossed the New Hampshire border to challenge a powerful Dartmouth team at Scully-Fahey Field. The Big Green (9-4, 3-1 Ivy) has found a freshman sensation in goalie Lauren Balukjian, who recorded her third shutout of the season. Dartmouth is 7-1 with Balukjian guarding the cage.

"Dartmouth is an excellent team," Shea said. "They are very strong, very physical and have every starter but one back from last season. We fought hard through the whole game, but we didn't do enough to win the game. By that, I mean we played too much defense."

The Minutewomen showed determination and heart as Dartmouth both outshot and outcornered them. The Big Green had 20 shots against the Maroon and White's defense, while UMass could only manage three. Dartmouth also had 14 more corners than the Minutewomen.

"We made mistakes, but we overcame them," Shea said. "There are still some basic things that we are continuing to clean up. After that, we'll be fine."

After a scoreless game through regulation, the Big Green went on the attack. Freshman Nina Fulmer fired a shot on UMass cageminder Ashley Egland. Egland made the save, but junior Rebekka Stucker took the rebound that found the back of the cage, exactly two minutes into OT. Stucker's goal was her fourth on the season, and her third game-winner this year.

Ashley Egland was a wall against all Dartmouth shots until that one fatal shot in overtime. Egland made an eye-popping 13 saves on the 14 Dartmouth shots on net. No. 30 logged all 72 minutes of action.

For the offense, Sarah Bohonowicz recorded all three shots in the game.

This game was somewhat meaningless record-wise to the Minutewonen's season. The loss isn't within the conference, so it will not affect their chances of making the A-10 tournament. Though, their last three games are critical against St. Joseph's, Temple, and Rhode Island. Shea feels her team is still focused on its conference and earning a bid to the tourney.

"We have a crucial weekend coming up. The A-10 conference is still in our hands," said Shea, who has only lost three A-10 games in her coaching career.

"We control our own destiny."

JUNIOR GOALKEEPER ASHLEY EGLAND MADE 13 SAVES YESTERDAY AGAINST DARTMOUTH, BUT COULDN'T HOLD THE SHUTOUT THROUGH OVERTIME, AS THE MINUTEWOMEN FELL 1-0 IN 72 MINUTES OF PLAY.

WRITE FOR SPIZZY

POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
at North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $79.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Companies
(One mile North of UMass)

comedy CONNECTION
THIS SATURDAY AT 8:30PM!
HUKELAU
413•593•522
705 Memorial Drive, Chicope
1st Time Appearance
Host of BET's "Comic Vie
ARNEZ
Back By Popular Demand!
Sat., November 16th!
It's The Return of "Dr. Dirty
JOHN VALE

As an engineer in the U.S. Air Force, there's no telling what you'll work on. (Seriously, we can't tell you.)

United States Air Force applied technology is years ahead of what you'll touch in the private sector, and as a new engineer you'll likely be involved at the ground level of new and sometimes classified developments. You'll begin leading and managing within this highly respected group from day one. Find out what's waiting behind the scenes for you in the Air Force today. To request more information, call 1-800-423-USAF or log on to airforce.com.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheap Heating Oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 585-5565 or come by the Commuter Service Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

AUTO FOR SALE

'88 Buick Lesabre V-6, Power Good Condition Clean $1300 546-1853

CHILDCARE

Babysitter needed for 1 Male Commuter Services on Bus Bulletin Board. Your age and salary in www.cshrc.org, then click on Family Services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live-in opportunities as well.

CHILDCARE

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Berkshire East Ski Resort Hiring Both Full and Part-Time Ski & Board Instructors E-mail lherrick@Berkshireeast.com Lift operators call 413-339-6617 www.berkshireeast.com

Wanted. Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext

EMPLOYMENT

U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers for Rent: Cheap! $10 for the year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

FOR SALE

Two Turntables and Mixer Gemini 2000 and Gemini PS676 $500 Call Eric 546-7277

Massaversity of Umichusetts clothing massaversity.com

Tori Amos Tickets for sale. Nov. 19. TSongas Arena. Good seats. Best offer. Call Kevin 546-4640.

FURNITURE

Double Size Serta Mattress w/ Box Spring. $80. Plaid Couch and matching Chair. $40. 17 inch Sharp TV. $75. Best offer on anything. Call Nick 253-4039

FURNITURE

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@guitarwarrior.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/ security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room available now through remainder of fall semester $300.00 a month. On Bus Route. Next to Amherst College utilities included. 508-776-9523

ROOM FOR RENT

In the Brook Townhouses 425/ NEG. On Bus line Patio Basement Washer/ Dryer No down payment NEG. – Just rent Call 413-896-6946

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Large 4 Bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

Sunderland 2 Bedroom Corner Unit ON BUS ROUTE $820 Utilities included available immediately 397-9912

TICKETS

Eight concert tick-

TICKETS

ets for American Idol Worcester Centrum for Oct 28 413-737-2793

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299 Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreak-travel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT

TRAVEL

Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties! Spring Break 2003 Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

USA Spring Break Presents Spring Break 2003 Campus Reps Wanted Earn 2 free trips for 15 people Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, Acapulco, South Padre and Florida Call Toll Free 1-877-460-6077

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with

TRAVEL

MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/3
3	NBC/6
4	Fox Sports Network
5	PBS/57
6	10+ N Cinema
7	WB/40
8	UPN/38
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX/61
11	ABC/40
12	NBC/22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN Info Channel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN 2
18	LIVE-19
19	ESPN Classic
20	Cinemax/Movies
21	CNN
22	CNN/HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	University Channel
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NASA
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	QVC
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	CMT
38	USA
39	TNN
40	MTV
41	MTV2
42	VH-1
43	TNT
44	TBS
45	E! Entertainment
46	Sci-Fi Channel
47	Court TV
48	Nick at Nite
49	Comedy Central
50	Cartoon Network
51	Game Show Network
52	TV Land
53	FOX Family
54	Univision
55	Galavision
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
59	C-SPAN2
60	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

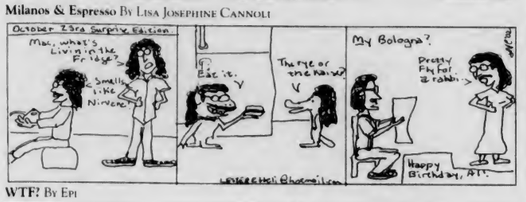
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

WTF? By Epi

Hello sweet Water and Jane whatever my name is. No Point-a Finger-at me-ing-ly. BASTARD, Ya!
You did eat.
You made us your new mommy for today!!
Can't we (or not)
You have to control your anger issues and stop jumping to conclusions. However, you made girls cry. Ya!
Hey! Leave me alone!
Hey! You! You cannot do it to Jane whatever my name is!
Hey! Leave me alone!
Hey! Leave me alone!
Hey! Leave me alone

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Madness commences

By Matthew E. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Don't think you can walk through the Campus Center and hide from Steve Lappas. With a seat under his belt as the sovereign of UMass basketball, Lappas knows what his team needs.

We have to get the students into the gym, 10-0 seat. He said after morning practice yesterday.

So a little over three hours later Lappas was in the Campus Center reeling in student stragglers with free tickets to Saturday's Midnight Madness event.

Enlisted in his aid were guards Anthony Anderson and Kyle Wilson and forward Jacky Rogers.

Lappas and co. won't know the result of their mini PR venture until patrons begin to ring the turnstiles of the William D. Mullins Center at 10:30 p.m. on Saturday evening.

But as of now, Lappas' commitment to meeting student enthusiasm back into the program is a certainty.

The first step toward that goal begins when his players step through the mist of the Mullins and, on the backdrop of ear-ringing music and pyrotechnics, are introduced to the maroon and white devotees.

With three freshman and six players who did not see game action a year ago, fireworks will be necessary to aptly acquaint a revamped Minuteman roster with the fans.

But don't expect the publicity weighted event to give much of an inkling of how UMass' season will shape up.

Like Lappas said, "It's for the players and for the students, as it should be. I think they'll be excited. They're looking forward to it."

For a coach, however, it can be nerve-racking, as hopes are his roster will conclude the night unscathed.

But for the fans it's a chance to see the players openly blend personalities with passion, as 13 toned athletes, teeming with adrenaline, play to the crowd with atmosphere piercing dunks and shooting displays.

From a player's perspective, it's relieving to get on the court and compete after two full weeks of practice.

Usually Midnight Madness marks the beginning of the college basketball season, but with the input of Lappas the University pushed the event back two weeks to avoid the long Columbus Day weekend.

Thus, fans and players alike were forced to bridle their anticipation of the festivities.

"It's starting off differently this year because we've been practicing," senior forward Micah Brand said. "But it's still exciting for me."

With the departure of high-flying forward Jameel Pugh, the ever-popular slam-dunk title is up for grabs. But whether its two-time finalist Raheim Lamb, freshman jumping jack Mike Lasme, or some other Minuteman soaring away with the crown, everybody – the fans, the players, the coaches – will be glad they were in attendance.

Well, maybe not the coaches.

No day of rest for UM ice hockey

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Along with NFL football, church and brunch, something else has recently become a Sunday tradition in Amherst – college hockey.

The Massachusetts hockey team will play yet another Sunday contest in non-conference game against Nebraska-Omaha at 4 p.m., before it gets into the bulk of the Hockey East schedule next week.

"It's pretty big," sophomore forward Greg Maufdin said. "It's a non-conference game. But we can feed off of it because every Hockey East game is a dogfight. It's going to be a great game. Playing this team and coming out with a 'W' is big for going into the Hockey East season."

The Mavericks (2-2-1-1 Central Collegiate Hockey Association) are making their first road trip of the season, having hosted the Maverick Stampede (won by Denver) and a pair of games with Miami. UNO will face Boston University on Friday before hopping on the Mass Pike westbound for a Sat., with the Minutemen (4-1, 0-1 Hockey East).

"We've got a lot of things to work on," UMass Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "I think guys are just excited to play – they're not worried about conference or out of conference at this point."

The Mavericks are led by the offensive duo of Scotty Turner (2-8–3a) and David Brisson (3g-2a). Jason Jaworski (3g-0a) has been impressive from the blueline, but the Mavs have done most of their damage with a balanced attack where 18 players have recorded points in the first four games of the season. Turner has been the one for UNO to turn to in the clutch, as he has delivered both of the team's game winning goals this season.

Dan Ellis has had his issues between the pipes this season, posting just a 4.09 goals against average and a .885 save percentage, but has been aided by Brian Haaland, who made 11 saves in relief to lead the Mavericks to a 6-5 double overtime victory over Colgate in the first round of the Stampede. Haaland took over for Ellis after two periods and finished off the final 45:43 without allowing a puck by him to allow UNO to move on to the finals.

The Minutemen will look to carry momentum from a come from behind, 4-3 victory over Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute last Sunday. Jeff Lang won Hockey East Defensive Player of the Week with a goal and an assist while helping the defense limit the Engineers to just 12 shots on freshman Gabe Winer. Freshman Matt Anderson picked up two assists – his first two collegiate

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

GERALDH LINGO/COLLEGIAN

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN KELLY SICAVISH AND THE UMASS HOCKEY TEAM WILL HOST NEBRASKA-OMAHA SUNDAY AT THE MULLINS CENTER

The Dukes are up

GERALDH LINGO/COLLEGIAN

FRESHMAN RAUNNY ROSARIO RUSHED IN TIMES FOR 81 YARDS AGAINST VILLANOVA LAST WEEK. ROSARIO IS AVERAGING 77.9 RUSHING YARDS PER GAME THIS SEASON, GOOD FOR SEVENTH IN THE A-10. WITH 95, HE HAS THE FEWEST CARRIES OF ANY RUNNING BACK IN THE TOP 10.

JMU looks for an upset

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's the perfect time for a letdown.

Not to say that the Massachusetts football team (5-2, 3-1 Atlantic 10) is going to lose this weekend in Harrisonburg, Va., but all of the traps are set for the No. 16 Minutemen.

UMass is coming off two of the biggest regular season wins in its history, a 20-10 drubbing of then-No. 2 Maine two weeks ago, and a 17-16 nail-biter over then-No. 4 Villanova last weekend. Easily the two biggest contests of the year in terms of highly touted opponents, the Minutemen had no trouble getting up for the pair of contests, which extended their winning streak to three.

Now the Maroon and White finds itself in a recently unfamiliar role as the strong favorite against a floundering James Madison squad that has fallen off the map after a strong start.

But there are certain things that UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple must combat this weekend to avoid a major upset, one that the entire A-10 is hoping for.

"Everybody [in the conference] wanted us to beat Villanova last week," Whipple said. "Everybody wanted us to beat Maine the week before. Now everybody wants us to lose this week."

First, James Madison is expecting a solid crowd Saturday at Bridgeforth Stadium. There have even been rumors that the game will sell out because of Homecoming Weekend.

"It's going to be a big crowd," Whipple said. "I know we'll get a tremendous effort from [JMU]."

No problem for Whipple's crew, after all, as his team went into Carter-Finley Stadium in front of 51,500 screaming NC State fans earlier this season, but this is a team that is much better on it's home turf.

"They just play different at home," Whipple said. "They play at such a higher level at home than they do on the road. More so than any other team in the conference."

A bigger worry has to be the letdown factor. James Madison was chosen to finish last in the conference during the preseason. And despite a 3-1 start, the Dukes can easily be overlooked, especially when UMass is coming off two huge games.

Whipple believes that this won't be much of a problem, either, as he claims his team understands the importance of every conference matchup, regardless of the opponent's record.

"We're just going about our business," Whipple said. "It's an important game. If they want to be champions, they have to win this week. The goal is to be the A-10 Champion and we have a chance.

"If we win this game, we're one step closer to what everybody wants."

The good news for the Minutemen is that, despite some worries after last weekend, they are relatively healthy.

Quarterback Jeff Krohn, one of the best signal callers in the conference, left the Nova game with a head injury, but will likely be under center for the Maroon and White against James Madison.

"[Krohn] is going to practice [this week]," Whipple said. "He's our best quarterback, so certainly the chances of winning are better [with him playing]."

Also, redshirt freshman running back R.J. Cobbs, who ranks third in the A-10 in rushing yards per game, should be 100 percent by game time. No. 3 scored a pair of touchdowns against the Wildcats Saturday despite seeing limited action with a knee injury.

Healthy stars and superior talent on paper should extend UMass' winning streak to five games.

But you never know.

UMass proves worthy in two wins

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

When Massachusetts topped No. 2 Maine two weeks ago, excuses were flying around as to why the Black Bears didn't perform – the weather, the trip, the loss of their top two receivers.

Now the Minutemen have defeated No. 4 Villanova, and it seems much the same. With their 17-16 victory over the Wildcats this weekend, they moved up just four point in both polls to 16th (Maine (sixth in both) and Villanova (12th in both) still rank ahead of the Minutemen across the board.

But with the Maroon and White's 17-16 victory over the Wildcats, it showed that it will be one of the key players in the Atlantic 10 title run, as three weak road opponents (James Madison, New Hampshire and Rhode Island) and a pair of home contests against two rivals (Delaware, Hofstra) remain on the schedule.

Anton McKenzie received due credit for his performance in UMass' triumph, as he picked up A-10 Defensive Player of the Week honors. His 14 tackles – 11 unassisted – were tops on the Minutemen, and his blocked field goal with less than a minute to go was the key to Saturday's one-point triumph.

McKenzie and his defensive mates have improved each of the last four weeks. Intercepting Heisman hopeful Philip Rivers at N.C. State, shutting down Richmond's running attack, similarly thwarting one of the top ball control offenses in Division I-AA against Maine and finally allowing no big plays against Nova's short pass offense. Tom Masella's troops are now fourth in the conference in overall defense, and that includes the 430 yards it allowed against the then-15th ranked Wolfpack offense.

As for the Wildcats, two losses could mean trouble as in the next two weeks Andy Talley's team heads home against fourth-place William and Mary and then hits the road to take on third-place Northeastern. Rhode Island and Delaware to round out the season will be none to easy for Villanova, so unless the offense gets its act together, Brett Gordon and Co. will be on the sidelines come the end of November.

So much for a winless season

Rhode Island last week was the only team remaining that had not won a game. With surging Delaware marching into town, it seemed inevitable that the Rams would come out of the game 0-4 in the A-10.

Too bad nobody told Jayson Davis. The freshman won conference Rookie of the Week honors after being responsible for both of Rhody's touchdowns in a 17-14 double overtime victory. Andy Hall completed just 17 of 36 passes on the day for the Blue Hens, and two lost fumbles spelled doom for Delaware.

Wendall Williams was huge for the Rams as well, picking up 74 yards on five catches, including a 46-yard touchdown that opened the scoring. Williams also picked up 43 yards on just four carries. Shane Laisle kicked the game-winner in the second OT to cap off the upset.

The Rams play host to Richmond this week with a chance to play spoiler in back-to-back weeks as the Spiders are still clinging to playoff hopes. The Blue Hens should have an easier time this week as New Hampshire pays a

GERALDH LINGO/COLLEGIAN

QUARTERBACK BRETT GORDON AND VILLANOVA DROPPED FROM NO. 4 TO NO. 12 IN I-AA POLLS AFTER LAST WEEKEND'S 17-16 LOSS TO UMASS. THE WILDCATS ARE ONE OF FIVE A-10 TEAMS IN THE TOP 16.

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 8

NAS IS BACK. ARTS PAGE 5. | LEE'S BLOOD? ED/OP PAGE 4. | TRAVELIN' MEN SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEEKEND EDITION

FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE THIRTY-SEVEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 10.25.02

Nobel Laureate economist Nash addresses full house

By Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A Nobel Prize winning mathematician drew such an audience that his talk almost never happened.

Somehow, the mathematical "genius" was allowed to go on with his lecture on "Ideal Money and Asymptomatically Ideal Money."

John Nash, Nobel Laureate in economics, spoke at the Student Union Thursday afternoon. Nash's public appearances have seen larger crowds since he was named Nobel Laureate.

The numbers multiplied further yet after Russell Crowe portrayed Nash in the 2001 Oscar-winner A Beautiful Mind.

"That movie," Nash said wincingly.

Nash explained that he was a mathematician, never having served as a professor of economics. "I'm not exactly in the club," he said. Nash is currently working in research at Princeton University in New Jersey as a mathematician. He said that his theories are very controversial and may not sit well among economics professors, particularly his attacks on Keynesian economic theories.

Nash also discussed his experience with paranoid schizophrenia, a disease that ended his time at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1958.

"I guess I hadn't felt sufficiently rewarded in the actual world," said Nash. He described his schizophrenia as "almost an escape mechanism."

"It's not simply painful," he said.

Nash said that in his case, the initial effects of his condition put thoughts in his mind that did not exist in the real world. It wasn't until the schizophrenia advanced that "voices" or auditory hallucinations became present.

"I became more important in this imaginary world," Nash said. He said that A Beautiful Mind did well creating a fictional and artistic interpretation of his schizophrenia.

"Much of [the movie] related to true history and things that were fictional," he said.

The University of Massachusetts Student Union Ballroom was filled beyond capacity twenty minutes before the start of the lecture.

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

JOHN NASH DELIVERED A LECTURE ENTITLED "IDEAL MONEY" IN FRONT OF HUNDREDS IN THE STUDENT UNION BALLROOM YESTERDAY.

Environmental Health and Safety officials came close to clearing the room long before the lecture began. Many of those who were shut out when the doors were ordered shut by EHS officials entered through back doors.

Nash was brought to the University as this year's Philip Gamble Memorial lecturer, sponsored by the Economics department.

"I've been having big crowds lately with all the publicity," Nash said. However, he wasted no time engaging in his lecture on a common form of "transferable utility" money.

"Money is the lubricant that enables the efficient transfer of utility," Nash said. Nash focused on long term economic plans in rela-

Turn to NASH, page 2

Two arrested in sniper case

By Allen G. Breed
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) – A 41-year-old Army veteran and a teenager described as his stepson were arrested at a roadside rest stop Thursday for questioning in the three-week wave of deadly sniper attacks that have terrorized the Washington, D.C. area.

A law enforcement source said a gun found in their car appeared to have the same caliber as the one used in the shootings. The official said police also found a scope and a tripod in the car, and were awaiting ballistics tests on the gun.

"We're positive it's these guys," the official told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The arrests – linked to a telephoned boast about a deadly Alabama robbery – raised hopes of a conclusion to the intensive and often frustrating investigation of the shootings that have killed 10 people and critically wounded three others since Oct. 2.

The men taken into custody were not immediately charged in the sniper attacks, but authorities made it clear the arrests were considered pivotal. A newspaper report said the men were motivated by anti-American bias; police in Washington state, where the men recently lived, said they were not part of any organized group.

President Bush was told that federal authorities were reasonably sure the case had been solved, a senior administration official told The Associated Press, also on condition of anonymity.

"There's a strong feeling these people are related to the sniper shootings," said Douglas Gansler, state's attorney in Maryland's Montgomery County, where the sniper task force is based. Asked if he believed the sniper was still at large, he said "no."

The arrests came hours after authorities descended on a home in Tacoma, Wash., believed to hold clues to the investigation. They then issued a nationwide alert for the car, spotted by a motorist and an attendant at the rest stop.

Charles Moose, the Montgomery County police chief leading the investigation, had said John Allen Muhammad was being sought for questioning in the slayings and called him "armed and dangerous." Authorities said Muhammad was traveling with John Lee Malvo, 17.

Muhammad served in the Army as a machinist and had no training as a sniper, according to a senior Defense Department official. Another official said Muhammad was discharged from the Army in the mid-1990s.

The key break, authorities said, was a phone call to the sniper task force tip line suggesting investigators check out a liquor store robbery in "Montgomery." The

Turn to SNIPER, page 3

SAUL LOEB/AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

HEAVILY ARMED MEMBERS OF A JOINT TACTICAL RESPONSE TEAM ENTER VEHICLES IN A PARKING LOT AT THE MCDONALD'S IN MYERSVILLE, MD., EARLY THURSDAY, OCT. 24, 2002, BEFORE GOING TO A NEARBY INTERSTATE 70 REST AREA AND TAKING INTO CUSTODY TWO MEN WHO WERE SLEEPING IN THEIR CAR. JOHN MUHAMMAD, A 41-YEAR-OLD ARMY VETERAN AND JOHN LEE MALVO, A TEENAGER DESCRIBED AS HIS STEPSON, WERE TAKEN INTO CUSTODY FOR QUESTIONING IN THE THREE-WEEK WAVE OF DEADLY SNIPER ATTACKS THAT HAVE TERRORIZED THE WASHINGTON, D.C., AREA

the weekend with arts & living

Sky's the limit for Atomsphere in Northampton

By Justin Chellman
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

ATMOSPHERE
God Loves Ugly
Fat Beats/RSE

Atmosphere and other accompanying rap groups will perform Sunday night at 8:30 p.m. at the Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton, but those eager for the low-down on this Minneapolis duo before their visit to the Pioneer Valley needn't search any further.

It's cliché to liken a group's sound to a more popular band, but in this case, it fits well: Atmosphere is hip-hop's Radiohead. They're utterly depressing most of the time and only provide a short glimpse of happiness. At the same time, however, they're incredibly deep and artistic, giving the Minneapolis

Turn to ATMOSPHERE, page 5

spotlight event
Tool performs at the Mullins Center tonight at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are still available by contacting the Mullins Center box office at (413) 545-0505.

La Boheme... different... but good

La Boheme seizes Fine Arts Center

Don't let the Italian words of the opera scare you away, for the Stanislavsky Opera Company visiting the Fine Arts Center this Saturday night, presents a twist on Giacomo Puccini's La Boheme. A performance different from the ordinary, this company's version of La Boheme takes place in the 1930s, whereas the original La Boheme takes place in the 1830s. The reason for this change of era? The Stanislavsky Opera Company believes a more contemporary setting better fits today's audiences.

The Stanislavsky Opera Company has a long history and is considered one of the top Russian opera companies performing today. Puccini's beautiful and passionate music imagi-

Turn to LA BOHEME, page 5

CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

By Dan Roy

"Is apathy or activism more prevelant on the UMass campus?"

Nick Vale
Junior
English

"You can't throw a brick without hitting somebody starting a rally."

Heley Patel
Sophomore
Biology

"Apathy. Everybody has an opinion but they just don't go and do anything."

Nikunj Bhatter
Sophomore
Computer Science

"Things need to affect people personally for them to care. But even with the budget cuts, we didn't do anything about it."

Elizabeth Robb
Senior
English

"We're just a bunch of lazy sts. And, ignorance is bliss– we don't always want to think about hard issues."

Philip Seton
Sophomore
ECE

"I'd say about 75 percent of people on campus are caught up in themselves."

Hetal Patel
Sophomore
Biology

"I don't feel safe at night on campus. When you don't feel safe, it's hard to care about other people's issues."

■ Nash

continued from page 1

...an to inflation.

According to Nash, once the average lifespan of 70 years, one dollar's value would multiply four times from birth to expiration. Studying the change of money in this short span does not allow for changes in standard and inflation changes. Later Nash said that it is too early to judge the success of the euro as a less unstable...

Nash discussed the European Union and the introduction of the euro as a single monetary unit among the 15 countries of the union. Debt pardoning has also played a role in governments that issue their own currency.

The government that distributes its own currency pathers its own size," Nash said.

E.U. countries have a central controlling bank, similar to the U.S. Federal Reserve. Nash compared this central power based in Frankfurt, Germany to the Holy Roman Empire.

Trade within country blocs campaigns to interstate trade in the United States, said Nash. He compared trade between the countries to catalogue shopping...

...ber, the only concern is sales tax from place to place.

Nash said that part of the appeal of joining government blocs – including the European Union – comes from the chance to establish currency systems for example, the euro. Nash said that this represents his concept of Ideal Money.

Membership in a social club is only desirable if there are non-members, said Nash, referring to the E.U. countries.

Re-establishing a gold standard is not feasible, said Nash. The reasons for this revolve around the negative psychology around the mining of gold, despite advancements with cyanide mining techniques. Another factor is the psychology that hoarding gold in one location – Fort Knox – is a waste of labor.

Nash continues to research game theories of economics, some of his most famous work, and aspires to continue research as hard as ever. "I'm hoping to do good work. I don't have limited ambitions."

UMass faculty member Cynthia Barstow releases new book promoting Eco-foods

By Andy Rosen
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Cynthia Barstow, an adjunct faculty member at University of Massachusetts, has released a book entitled The Eco-Foods Guide, What's Good for the Earth is Good for You! On Thursday, she began its promotion with a book signing in the Campus Center concourse.

Barstow is a sustainable agriculture expert who currently teaches a course in Natural Products and Herb Industry at UMass. She has been affiliated with the school for 12 years.

Barstow describes The Eco-Foods Guide as a straightforward and conversational examination of the downsides of such common agricultural practices as the use of pesticides and growth hormones, and the overuse of nonrenewable resources.

Dan Kaplan, who runs Brookfield Farm in Amherst and also edited part of Barstow's book, says that now is a very good time for such a book to come out, as the Department of Agriculture recently released a set of guidelines as to what constitutes organic food.

"As more people become interested in this topic, The Eco-Foods Guide will be great for people who don't have experience shopping for organic food, but want to make good choices at the supermarket," Kaplan said.

Barstow says she became dedicated to pursuing the topic of sustainable agriculture about 12 years ago, when she tried to start a family.

"I remember watching a farmer in an apple orchard spraying his crops with pesticides," she says. "I thought that it would be a mistake to take anything grown with so many chemicals into my body, especially since I was trying to have a child."

After that realization, Barstow decided to attend the Stockbridge School of Agriculture to pursue further studies. "I did not want to be pontificating without substance," she said.

Before organic foods could be carried in every store, Barstow explains, there had to be an informed base of consumers.

"I wrote the book in a very no-nonsense way," she said. "So people who were not well informed would not get lost, and people who were informed could still learn something new."

Barstow's book touches on many issues, including genetically modified organisms (GMOs). According to Barstow over 20 percent of our food system contains food that has been genetically altered to preserve freshness, resist infection, or enhance looks.

The problem, according to Barstow, is that it is currently illegal to label GMOs. "Therefore we have no idea what we're eating," Barstow said. She added that she has yet to see conclusive proof that these foods are safe.

Barstow also takes issue with the sub-therapeutic use of antibiotics in livestock.

"Many antibiotics are used to prevent infections in livestock populations, rather than fight them," she said. "This could lead to the development of resistant strains of diseases."

In The Eco-Foods Guide, Barstow calls for a reduction in the use of both GMOs and sub-therapeutic antibiotics. She also offers readers a strategy for avoiding these foods.

Buying locally grown seasonal food is a sure way to be confident that your food is legitimately organic, said Barstow. She points out that buying locally has an added advantage of conserving the natural resources needed to transport and preserve imported goods.

Over the next several months, Barstow will travel to ten different U.S. cities in promotion of The Eco-Foods Guide. Next Saturday, she will be in Boulder, Colo., and then on Nov. 10, she will speak at the Green Festival in San Francisco, which is a nationwide environmental conference.

Barstow said that she is glad she started with today's book signing. "It's always best to start at home," she said. "Today's turnout was great."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar year. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the Collegian Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Bi-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Castaways Lounge
1 81 to exit 24, north on Rte. 5, Wilbraham, Mass., (413) 596-6733
Proudly presents another successful
AMATEUR NIGHT
Monday, October 28th starting at 7 pm

◆ All ladies must be 18 years and older and must apply in person
◆ No Professional Dancers to perform this night
◆ 1st prize $300
◆ 2nd prize $200
◆ 3rd prize $100
Open Monday - Saturday 11am - 1am
VIP Room always available for private parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

comedy CONNECTION
HUKELAU
413•593•5222
705 Memorial Drive, Chicopee
1st Time Appearance!
Host of BET's "Comic View"
ARNEZ J.
THIS SATURDAY AT 8:30PM!

Back By Popular Demand!
Sat., November 16th!
It's The Return of "Dr. Dirty"!
JOHN VALBY

News still needs writers! Interested? Come down to the Collegian and talk to Dan or Amy.

Anti-war rally gathers for peace

ANDREW GEORGIS
A group of war protestors rap on the Student Union steps as part of an anti-war and anti- president Bush rally yesterday.

By Hirak Shah
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Anti-war and anti-Bush activists protested the possible war between the United States and Iraq yesterday on the steps of the Student Union at 12:30 p.m.

The protest was organized by Ryan Coughlin, who works in the Traprock Peace Organization. The organization is against military action against Iraq.

The rally started with a rap sung by an activist and was a protest of war that urged the United States to focus on their problems instead of invading another country. Before he finished he said, "The people running this country are not for peace."

The next speaker was Reverend Kelly Gallagher of Northampton who said she wanted to speak about three things: great sadness, great truth and a great promise. The great sadness she talked about is the American way of life, and that each and everyone is part of the American empire. She called the American way of life, "immoral, unjust, and dangerous."

"We have power to change and to still believe we live in a democracy and that democracy still belongs to the us," Gallagher said when talking about "the great truth."

She went on to blame the media, including ABC, CBS and NBC, for leading on the American public and making them think that we need to go to war to keep America safe. The great promise is that people can change and the success of the London march of 350,000 and the 1.5 million in Italy proves that.

The next speaker, Eric Lin, spoke on why the war would be a bad idea.

"War is the dumbest thing. The U.N. sanctions against Iraq kill four million Iraqi children a year," Lin said. "Bush linking Iraq with al Qaeda is wrong. War will destabilize the Middle East more than stabilize it with an American military government."

The next speaker from Traprock Peace Center showed a copy of The Recorder, which had a two-page pullout with 4,000 names of people against the war. She tried to portray the point that there will be a "new future of perpetual war."

John Buttell of the International Socialist Organization also spoke, saying that he doesn't believe the vast majority are benefiting from the American way of life. He believes the U.S. government is ignorant for thinking it can invade a country that is poverty stricken. Buttell said that he feels people should stand up and speak out against the war.

Amongst the anti-war crowd there were dissenting voices. Matthew Progen spoke on behalf of the University of Massachusetts Republican Club, showing their support for the government.

"We have exhausted all possibilities with to keep us safe," Progen said.

He mentioned how Congress did come to a resolution by giving Bush authority to use military force.

A student in the crowd quoted from Michael Franti of the band Spearhead:

"You can bomb the world into pieces, but you can't bomb it into peace."

MassPIRG organizes river cleanup

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Student organizations and volunteers at the University of Massachusetts are participating in a statewide river cleanup, as part of Make A Difference Day 2002. The cleanup will take place tomorrow, Oct. 26, and is a continuation of efforts made by the Massachusetts Community Water Watch.

Sponsored in part by the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG), Americorps, and the Massachusetts Service Alliance, Community Water Watch volunteers are coordinating a cleanup of the Connecticut River in the Northampton Meadows. The project will be working closely with the Connecticut River Water Shed council.

"The repository has collected large amounts of glass and debris, which is detrimental to life," said Nate Frye, MassPIRG campus organizer for UMass and Amherst College.

Frye also pointed out that the area immediately preceding a river is one of the most important parts, as it acts as both a filter and a corridor for life in and out of the water.

With the Meadows cleanup, Frye hopes to raise water quality awareness and encourage more people to get involved.

"It's a good experience because it makes an immediate difference. You are actually pulling trash right out of the river," Frye said. "This helps to perpetuate knowledge about water quality and how we can make an impact."

"With all of Massachusetts' natural beauty, it still bears the designation of having the second worst water quality in the nation," Frye said. "With that statistic in mind, we could stand to have cleanups every day of the year." Frye is also a member of Americorps and emphasized the need for more volunteers during tomorrow's operation.

The need for water preservation has become a matter of increasing importance. "Water is a non-renewable resource," said Frye, who pointed out that less than one percent of the world's water is drinkable. At a time when the population is growing and supplies diminishing, Frye believes it is important to focus on the quality of bodies of water.

"We want to encourage people to forge a relationship with [the Connecticut river] so that people have a vested interest in preserving that resource," Frye said.

MassPIRG anticipates having a turnout of about 60 volunteers, but Frye pointed out that they could always use more.

"The bus to the Meadows leaves Haigas Mall at 10:45 a.m. on Saturday," Frye said. "Any folks who are interested should call us at 545-0199."

■ sniper

continued from page 1

caller claimed responsibility for the robbery and the sniper shootings, officials said.

Investigators checking the tip matched it with a Sept. 21 liquor store robbery in Montgomery, Ala., in which two employees were shot, one fatally. Montgomery Mayor Bobby Bright said Malvo's fingerprint was found at the scene on a magazine about weapons, though he did not specify whether the print was found before or after the telephone call.

Police traced Malvo to the Tacoma home that was searched Wednesday in the sniper hunt. Malvo had been living in the home with Muhammad, a source told the AP.

A composite sketch of the suspect in the liquor store shootings was made and "there are some very good similarities" to Malvo, Montgomery Police Chief John Wilson said. He said the gun used in Alabama wasn't the same as the one in the sniper shootings, however.

Members of the sniper task force made the arrests without incident at 3:19 a.m. off I-70 in Frederick County, Md., about 50 miles northwest of the nation's capital, said Larry Scott, an agent for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. State police said the men offered no resistance.

The Seattle Times said Muhammad changed his name from John Allen Williams after converting to Islam.

Several federal sources told The Times that Muhammad and Malvo may have been motivated by anti-American sentiments in the wake of the Sept. 11 attacks. Both were known to speak sympathetically about the men who hijacked jetliners over Washington, New York and Pennsylvania, the sources told the newspaper.

Neither man was believed to be associated with the al-Qaeda terrorist network, the sources said.

The Times reported that Muhammad was stationed at Fort Lewis outside Tacoma in the 1980s, served in the Gulf War and was later stationed at Fort Ord, Calif. Malvo, who authorities said is a citizen of Jamaica, attended high school in Bellingham, Wash., last year.

The witnesses at the rest stop called police at 1 a.m. after they spotted the men sleeping inside one of the cars sought in the investigation – a blue 1990 Chevrolet Caprice with a New Jersey license plate. Micah Rasmussen, a spokesman for the New Jersey Department of Transportation, said the car was registered to Muhammad at a Camden, N.J. address.

Investigators spent hours examining the Caprice before putting it in a white trailer and towing it away. With news of the arrests filling the airwaves, truckers blew their horns as they passed by the rest stop.

On Wednesday, FBI agents spent hours at the Tacoma home, eventually carting away a tree stump from the yard and other potential evidence in a U-Haul truck.

The AP's Scott said the stump would be brought to the agency's lab in Rockville, Md. On background, law enforcement sources said they believed it might contain bullets or fragments.

A Fort Lewis spokesman did not return a call for comment on whether Muhammad was stationed on the base.

FBI agents visited Bellingham High School, 90 miles north of Seattle, on Wednesday, reportedly seeking information about Muhammad and Malvo. Mayor Mark Asmundson said both left the area about nine months ago.

Bellingham Police Chief Randy Carroll said his force had known about Malvo since December 2001, when a police officer at the high school filed a suspicious persons report because the youth arrived at the school without transcripts or other papers. At one point, he lived with Muhammad as father and son at the Lighthouse Mission, a homeless shelter, Carroll said.

Pfc. Chris Waters, a Fort Lewis soldier who lives across the street from the Tacoma home, said he called police after hearing gunshots in the neighborhood nearly every day in January.

"It sounded like a high-powered rifle such as an M-16," he said. "Never more than three shots at a time. Pow. Pow. Pow."

One of Muhammad's ex-wives, Mildred, was questioned by the FBI on Wednesday, said Adele Moses, who identified herself as the woman's sister. She said Mildred was living with her in Clinton, Md., southeast of Washington.

Associated Press writers Stephen Manning, Jesse J. Holland and Robert Burns contributed to this report.

New course to be offered in science

By Christine Rutkoski
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Professor Molly Fitzgerald-Hayes, a member of the biochemistry department at the University of Massachusetts, is slated to offer the course tentatively titled My DNA this spring, a class intended for non-science majors interested in science-related social issues.

Fitzgerald-Hayes, along with partner Frieda Reichsman, a UMass graduate student, was driven to create this course in order to make scientific issues that have an effect on everyone's lives seem more approachable for average students. They are hoping to encourage students to learn about these issues and discuss them without the worry of being too entrenched in biochemistry theories.

"We want to make a bridge between the scientist, who always seems to be talking about something no one understands, and the regular people, who could utilize this information to their own advantage," Fitzgerald-Hayes said. "These [issues are] going to be something that affects this age group, not so much my age group."

This course, which was first offered during the Spring 2002 semester and has gained a General Education designation for this upcoming spring, will cover basic DNA related subject matter, including discussion about how DNA and genetics are related to controversial issues in society. Such topics will include DNA fingerprinting, stem cell research, biometrics, and cloning. Many of these issues, like biometrics and DNA in identification situations, have become especially prominent in light of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks and last year's anthrax scare.

According to Fitzgerald-Hayes, the idea for this kind of course began with a 10-week seminar for the Five College Learning and Retirement Program, a group that teaches topics of interests to retired people in the community. The response was a positive one.

"It was really fun," said Fitzgerald-Hayes. "The goal was to try to teach them what they wanted to know about genes and DNA, but to put it into a context that had some reality to it."

The "My DNA Project," as it has become known, soon gave way to other community courses and the implementation of a My DNA course on the UMass campus. According to Fitzgerald-Hayes, the course will attempt to familiarize students with the material by using visuals and hands-on activities including the isolation of the students' own DNA. She believes that these methods of teaching will make the material easier to grasp and seem less abstract and intangible.

Though the material of this course may not automatically seem related to disciplines outside biochemistry and molecular biology, Fitzgerald-Hayes believes that this course "is not trying to make [students] science majors," and will connect to ranging interests, like law, art, religion, philosophy, or psychology. The course will also, in her opinion, be able to arm students with the ability to determine what is correct information concerning these issues.

"We live in an information society," said Fitzgerald-Hayes. "One of the [problems] is how to figure out what to believe or where to start...The more knowledge you have about [these issues] the more confident you feel about making informed decisions."

Though, Fitzgerald-Hayes concedes, getting students over a "science phobia" is a difficult task, she believes the My DNA course will be a valuable experience for those who participate.

"This knowledge really makes [students] more powerful, more in control of their lives," Fitzgerald-Hayes said. "The goal is to have the students learn the information and how to use the information to make their lives better."

On the Net: My DNA course website:http://www.bio.umass.edu/biochem/mydna.

Want to contact news? E-mail us at thedailycollegian@yahoo.com

Interested in a
Challenging and Exciting Career
that will put your Social Concerns into Action?

Consider a career in Clinical Social Work!

To find out more about an MSW or Ph.D. in social work, attend the Smith College School for Social Work.

INFORMATION DAY
Including small group discussions with faculty, students and alumni and information on course work, placement, financial aid and student life.

November 2, 2002
1:00 - 5:30 p.m.
Seelye Hall, Room 106, Smith College

For more information call (413) 585-7960
E-mail: sswadmis@smith.edu
www.smith.edu/ssw

SMITH COLLEGE
School for Social Work

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

America's blood supply:

Safe enough for you?

They're on campus all the time and we've all probably seen them. They're the volunteers for the Red Cross, here for another blood drive. They arrive at the University of Massachusetts for good reason, as this is one of the largest, most concentrated communities in western Massachusetts, with many people who are young, vibrant and healthy. And as the suppliers of half the blood in this country, the Red Cross needs plenty of donations.

It feels great to donate blood, to feel that you're doing your part. Yet if the situation was reversed and you needed a transfusion, how comfortable would you feel about the blood you would be receiving? While many would probably be perfectly fine and could not imagine in this day and age of medical science that there could be any serious problems with the blood supply, current findings by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) lead to a startling different conclusion.

Most of us remember getting the vaccine for Hepatitis B as we started college. Though that disease is relatively calmed, Hepatitis-C has been on the rise in America, and that includes in blood transfusions. In a recent case where a man became infected with the disease that damages the liver, and in its worst form causes can be fatal, the Red Cross was able to determine that one of the four donors who had contributed to the blood for the transfusion tested positive for Hepatitis C.

It is hardly the only issue with America's blood. A whole range of diseases, including HIV, has been found in supposedly safe blood. In one instance in Salt Lake City, the Red Cross had accepted blood from donors who admitted to either having AIDS or having tested positive for HIV.

The FDA states that the Red Cross has been in violation of blood safety laws for 17 years, claiming that while the blood supply is still mostly safe, that instances of mixing safe and unsafe blood, mislabeling and release of contaminated blood, and the loss of HIV-positive blood that is assumed to have been "released and distributed." The Red Cross on the other hand, though it acknowledges that there are always minute risks of catching a disease through blood transfusions, insists that the "blood supply is as safe as it has ever been." Who do you choose to believe?

Our generation came of age in the world of HIV and AIDS, but just after, the blood supply could be tested much more soundly for the disease. Throughout the '80s, there were many stories of people who had been infected with the horrid disease through innocent blood transfusions. Many of them made headlines, such as Ryan White and Elizabeth Glaser. But for each famous person were scores of others who never became well known, such as Mark Hoyle, Benjamin Oyler and Cubby DePrince.

Though not nearly as terminal as AIDS, does the world really need another round of victims due to tainted blood transfusions this time contaminated with Hepatitis C among other diseases? Of course not.

People should still continue to donate blood. It is a necessity as blood supplies many times drop below acceptable levels. That being the case, any group involved in the distribution of the blood supply, including the Red Cross, needs to brush aside all aspects of pride and do whatever it takes to make sure that our country's blood is as safe as it can possibly be. Our lives depend on it.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

Information from CBS News was used in the writing of this editorial.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Help out a friend: Support divestment

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

It seems that the column I wrote last week on divestment made quite a splash with certain people. I was very happy to see this because this means people are thinking about this stuff. Since ignorance is one of the greatest evils that need to be confronted when discussing the conflict in Palestine, this dialogue that has been created is a promising step. However, it is important to again stress the need for divestment. The movement has become widespread and needs to be thought about.

Many people might write this off as being some crazy radical movement that only people with excess facial hair and ragged clothes would support. This movement or any movement should not be thought of that way. This is a movement that should unite students against oppression. Yesterday it may have been African-Americans and today Palestinians. But the Palestinians' time is now. This is a movement that should be supported by any student who stands opposed to oppression.

Oppression has been one of the greatest evils of our time and has been the evil that many of our ancestors faced. What is amazing is that this should be a common evil to all humanity. Every person, from every group, nationality, race, gender and ethnic background has experienced this in some manner. African-Americans have fought for their civil rights in one of the most liberal countries on the face of this earth, not to mention a struggle against slavery. The struggle they experienced is the same struggle the Palestinians face today. We need to recognize that we are all working against a common evil.

Becoming educated in an American public and private school system I learned a lot about the Holocaust. It seems that the Holocaust is one thing that is taught in every school. This makes sense I suppose. Since we have all learned about this evil at some point we should all know about oppression. Especially those who remember the holocaust the most, the victims of it, Polish, Roma, Jews, gays and others that were on Hitler's hit list. We have been taught of this evil, I suppose to learn a lesson for the future. The evil that happened during World War II and the horrors of slavery and the oppression of people everywhere has to tell us that we cannot permit it to continue.

There have been cases in the past where certain areas of the world have experienced forms of oppression. Ethiopia and Eritrea, Bosnia, and Cambodia are just a few. However these nations share more in common than bloody recent histories. In fact, another thing that these nations have in common is that they have all had arms embargos placed on them by either the United States, the European Union, the United Nations or all of the above. Again this makes sense. Arms suppliers around the world have noticed the conflicts that have been eruptioning in these nations and have said that they will not fuel the fire of hatred that burns within the borders of those states. This is not the case however with the conflict in the Middle East. And a divestment movement would help us convey the message that we want it to be that way. A divestment movement will publicly state that it is time to remove support for Israel.

"I have written columns in the past about how democratic Israel really is and can write many more columns on the same issue."

Now, some have said that this is racist or have even tried to label it anti-Semitic (an overused term that is beginning to lose its true meaning). But if the United States is only supporting Israel in the conflict, how would it be racist if we stopped supporting them. I can understand the argument had we been supporting the Israelis and Palestinians equally. If that were the case and we were to remove support for the Israelis then, yes it would be unfair.

But that is not the case. The United States blindly supports Israel in the conflict. It is time to reconsider this stance and look at other cases in history. If we truly want to talk about peace or a political settlement the United States has to be even-handed. The United States cannot claim to be even-handed when American-made bombs are dropping over Palestinian houses. It's time to take a step back and do things right.

I have heard other critics of divestment say that they would not support the movement because the United States is a traditional friend of Israel and Israel is the only democracy in the Middle East. I have written columns in the past about how democratic Israel really is and can write many more columns on the same issue. This is not what bothers me about the argument to support Israel.

The idea of Israel being a traditional friend really bugs me though. My first issue is with "traditional." This makes me think about America's relationship with Israel and its history. Many times supporters forget how America's recognition of Israel was really not about sympathy or valiant things like that. But the decision was purely about the balance of power in the region, the then Cold War, the accumulation of peripheral satellites and control of a resource-filled region. But even if the relationship was based on hypocrisy it may not bother some people because it still is a relationship and Israel's best friend is the world strongest power.

Don't get me wrong, I am totally for supporting your friends, especially in fights. I would jump into a fight for any of my friends because I care about them and their relationship with me is very important. I would gladly help any of my friends who were in trouble or were getting hurt. But I wouldn't help my friend at all if they had cornered a 6-year-old paraplegic and began beating him. In fact I would stop my friend from doing this, and for the safety of the weaker kid, hold my friend down and slap some sense into him. For my friend's own good I would talk to him and tell him that it was wrong to do such a thing to such a weak person. And I would under no circumstances whatsoever tell my friend what he did was just or help him out because that would be wrong.

Israel may be a friend of the United States and that's fine, but if the United States is a true friend they would stop supporting Israel's brutal occupation against a weaker divided and starving population and slap some sense into them for their own good.

Yousef Munayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

Questions? Comments? Opinions? Send your letters to us at editorial@dailycollegian.com

Path to peace

"Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be maintained through understanding." – Albert Einstein

I present before you a goal so worthy that never in my experience have I come across a person who disagreed with it – and rightfully so, for we value nothing more than human life. The goal is peace and it should be the major selector we use when deciding our course of action from here on out. Do you disagree?

We stand on the verge of attacking Iraq. The advanced notice President Bush has given Sadaam Hussein serves as evidence of our confidence. We imposed our will on Iraq in 1991 and, if anything, they've weakened since then.

Let's assume that we could pull off this incursion with few casualties, and satisfy whatever motives we may have – stated and interior. We destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, 95 percent of which (former?) United Nations weapons inspector Scott Ritter claims have already been destroyed. We catch the people who fund and harbor terrorists, people whose existence we have no evidence of. Hussein doesn't hide a la Osama Bin Laden; and we locate and replace him with the puppet dictator of our choice. Finally, we keep Iraq's various political groups from forming small "fiefdoms" (splinter groups), each with a few leftover weapons of mass destruction. Is there any harm done?

EDUARDO BUSTAMANTE

For someone whose goal is world dominance, re-election, or personal economic growth, no there is no harm done. In fact, much is gained. However, regarding peace, our current course of action represents the equivalent of repeatedly shooting ourselves in the foot.

Our government proclaims dedication to world peace. It prides itself on being the "leader of the free world," but forgets to lead by example. This is our first shot in the foot. If we choose this path, we forfeit our ability to lead. People will not follow a hypocrite, and our hypocrisy abounds.

First, we are acting in blatant disregard of the very tool implemented to achieve world peace – the United Nations. And the hypocrisy deepens – not only are we attacking Iraq in blatant disregard of the United Nations, we are doing so because we don't want Iraq to attack other countries in the same disregard.

Second, we are condemning Iraq for trying to acquire nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, while we maintain the largest stockpile of the same weapons known to man.

Third, President Bush justifies this war by proclaiming that Sadaam Hussein is evil. However, he didn't accept that very justification when terrorists attacked us because they believed us to be evil. Evil is entirely too subjective a word to be used as justification for war.

People may not follow a hypocrite but they will certainly attack one. And here is our second shot in the foot. This war will make enemies of people we don't need to make enemies of, and make scared subjects of current allies. There's been no influx of recruits to fight Sadaam.

International support for the war is nearly non-existent. In recent polls 68 to 80 percent of Europeans oppose the war. Saudi Arabia has said it will not support the United States in carrying out any military attacks. Russia, France and China have deemed the war unacceptable, (Each of which, by the way, is a permanent veto-holding member of the UN Security Council.)

The exorbitant amount of money and manpower we are dedicating to military is the third and final shot in the collective foot. In February, President Bush will request that the defense budget be raised from $379 billion to $2 trillion.

President Bush would have us believe that the best way to achieve peace is to drop bombs on those who threaten us. However, if Einstein is correct, we must reach an understanding with our enemies. So let's listen to the issues these people have with us, and see if we can't make reparation before we escalate the violence.

After all, we all want peace. Certainly, it is safe to say that if we had everyone's best interests in mind, no one would be trying to blow us up. I know I would feel much safer if we were educating and nourishing the Middle East, as opposed to bombing it.

The army doesn't just provide jobs for soldiers. It provides jobs for people that manufacture tanks for soldiers; for people that make tank parts for tank manufacturers; and the people that mine the steel for the people that make the tank parts and so on. Imagine the progress towards peace that would come from this level of manpower dedicated to positive growth.

From this analysis, we can derive a structure with which to reach our most honorable goal. First, lead by example: Don't act in blatant disregard of the United Nations, get rid of our own nuclear, biological and chemical weapons (we have managed to secure our country without their use for quite some time now) and don't go to war over subjective judgments.

Second, don't make enemies of people we don't need to make enemies of. Listen to our allies and make sure that we don't make them into "yes men."

Third, take the $2 trillion we plan to spend on destruction and put it towards understanding and growth. Educate and nourish nations so oppressed and impoverished they are driven to murder. Heck, with $2 trillion we might be in a position to educate and feed those starving right here in the United States. Maybe we could even afford a couple new books for the Dubois Library. As the old saying goes, "It will be a great day when our schools get all the money they need and the Air Force has to hold a bake sale to buy a bomber." Will it not?

The wonderful thing about peace is that it is nowhere outside of us. Act as if it's ours, and pool, it is.

Eduardo Bustamante is a Collegian Columnist.

Are we scholars of history?

BRITTANY WELLS

In recent months (the adage, I set we learn from history, we are doomed to repeat it" comes to mind. Anyone remember a little incident called World War II? If not, do, you are in the minority, because it seems that 40 percent of the University of Massachusetts campus opposes the war against Iraq.

The ramblings of Hitler's regime began way back in the beginning of the year 1933. By April the Nazis had established a boycott on Jewish stores, burned books, and in June established the first concentration camp. Hitler continued to ravage Europe unhindered for a full eight years before the United States went to war with Germany. And even then, Germany declared war on America, not the other way around.

The only complaint anyone has ever had about this war was that it happened too late. History has told us that the United States sat on its thumbs and kept quiet far too long to take action against a powerful, deadly and mentally unbalanced dictator. No one accused Roosevelt of using the war as an excuse to take over Germany's lucrative chocolate supply.

Why then, when we are faced with an equally potent, equally destructive dictator, has the UMass campus decided that they want the United States to mind its own business yet again? It seems the majority of you have resolutely dedicated yourselves to sitting idly by, letting Iraq build up their arms, and awaiting Hussein's declaration of war on us.

Saddam has been playing games with the United Nations for quite a while now. He buys his time going back and forth between accepting weapons inspectors and kicking them out. He has never actually agreed to allow inspectors to do their jobs. He merely pretends to agree, putting stipulations on their work, the route they are to enter the country from, stretching out the time before their arrival, and just before the inspectors turn up, he rescinds his invitation.

According to Colin Powell, on the rare occasions that inspectors have made it into the country, the Iraqis have been known to fire warning shots at inspectors to keep them away from suspicious vehicles as well as surrounding a group of inspectors and not allowing them to leave for about four days on account of the fact that they did their job too well – pretty suspicious behavior for a country that Amherst seems to regard as benevolent.

It has been four years since weapons inspectors have laid eyes on Hussein's enterprises and for all we know he has developed advanced biological warfare in addition to other deadly tactics. The weapons inspection issue would clearly not be such a big deal if Saddam did not have so much to hide.

In addition to posing a threat to the United States, Hussein terrorizes his own people, and financially encourages the violence that is saturating the Middle East by paying $25,000 to the family of suicide bombers. And it is not America that has wrought havoc on the Middle Eastern Muslims as evidenced by estimates that Hussein has been responsible for the deaths of 1.5 million Muslims.

I would only ask that those in support of Iraq and in contempt of America hold these two countries to the same standards. Against imperialism? What about Hussein's unprovoked attacks on Kuwait and Iran? Those of you who support campaign finance reform clearly want fair elections. Do you hug the story that Iraq is so democratic that 100 percent of registered voters showed up to vote and that so many people love Saddam that the entirety of voting citizens chose him?

The facts stand indisputable. He is a dictator who rules through fear and threats. He does not tolerate dissent, reason with his enemies or capitalize on his many opportunities to solve conflicts peacefully.

But we're supposed to leave him alone. We're supposed to allow a known enemy of our country go about his business (which happens to be planning our demise), and wait for the well-planned attack. No one wants to think that violence is the answer, but when you're staring down the barrel of a gun, your choices are kill or be killed, and the United States is in fact staring down the barrel of a gun – or a syringe of smallpox as the case may be.

Brittany Wells is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING Weekend Edition

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 10.25.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Nas comes back with unreleased song collection on Tapes

By Justin Chellman
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

NAS
The Lost Tapes
Columbia

"Hate it or love it, like it, bump it or dump it," is one of the first lines Nas kicks on "Purple," the only new track off his new album, The Lost Tapes. This line probably best describes Nas' music over the years.

The man who created Illmatic in 1994 hasn't ever been able to capture the same feeling or level of music genius that he showed on his debut. Hence Nas has borne the brunt of many scorching reviews and digs from critics over the years. Many had hoped Nas would bring back the Nasty Nas of Illmatic and lose his alter ego, Nas Escobar (whom he created on his second attempt, It Was Written). Esco was a gangster rapper who wasn't about the New York streets; he was about living large with cars, women and money. Although It Was Written was not a bad album, the message conveyed through his rhymes left fans unsatisfied.

Many people fail to remember Nas was really the first artist to be affected by the nowadays-ever-familiar Internet piracy problem. Nas had made an album called I Am, and the buzz suggested it was going to be a double album. The success of The Notorious BIG's from beyond the grave double album Life After Death was most likely an influence to this project. Little did Nas or Columbia records know there was a new phenomenon on the rise: burnt CDs. In the fall of 1998 and early 1999, CD burners were not as common as they are now, but the right people had them and knew what to do with them. Such people used the Internet as a tool to download Nas' new album way before its release date.

I myself am guilty of owning one of these albums, but my copy didn't have a double album's worth of songs. What it had was dope. I looked at this burnt copy as a preview of things to come and intended on buying Nas' album when it came out. Once Columbia realized what had happened, they panicked and ordered Nas return to the studio and make new songs to put on the album instead of the ones bootlegged. The result was a relatively unimpressive I Am and an even more unimpressive and disastrous Nastradamus, both made in a seven month period from rushed unemotional songs and songs that were originally cut from the album because they didn't make the grade.

Since then, Nas has made a comeback with his latest attempt, Stillmatic. Nas dropped his Escobar persona and realized, as he admitted to fans that he would never make another Illmatic and that he still has the music in his veins. Pushing to prove himself amidst the slues from former fans, critics and fellow rappers like Jay Z, Nas created an album putting him back as one of the top rappers in the game.

But whatever happened to those songs on my bootleg I Am tape?

In come The Lost Tapes. Now mind you, not all the songs on this album were originally on the bootlegged copies. There are select numbers from the album (such as "Poppa Was A Playa," "Blaze A 50," "Fetus" and "Drunk By Myself"), but then there are others that were left off of Stillmatic and Nastradamus. Most of these songs were never actually lost; they were available in other forms found by browsing downloading sites like Napster or Audio Galaxy. Regardless if you've had them or not, the album is dope.

For a collection of songs, it actually flows well and is a strong listen from start to finish – starting with a soft piano style beat on "Doo Rags" where Nas drops knowledge, reminisces about life on his own scale and then on the grand scheme. Then it smoothly flips into how it was coming up in the game on "My Way" and then about street economics on the Nastradamus cut, "U Gotta Love It." Later, two songs available on alternate Stillmatic versions, "Everybody's Crazy" and the funky old school sample soul beat of "No Idea's Original," keep the listener nodding.

In one of my personal favorites on the album, "Black Zombie," Nas drops some dope lyrics in urging his listeners and young black youth not to believe the stereotypes placed on them – to instead become leaders. The album ends with two tracks about Nas' upbringing. The first, "Poppa was a Playa" speaks of growing up with a musician father who was always around for him when he needed him but was a playa who always cheated on his wife, Nasir's mother. The song is one of understanding of his father, thanking him for staying in a situation many others in his part of town had not. In the last song, "Fetus," Nas thanks his mother for having him and not the debated abortion.

Overall, if you have liked Nas at any point in his career, this album is a good buy. With its dope songs from the various points of the Nas timeline, it is a sure pleaser for listening in your room or playing at a party.

THIS BAD BOY IS FINALLY CAPITALIZING ON HIS UNRELEASED SONGS BY RELEASING A COLLECTION OF BOOTLEGGED TRACKS ON The Lost Tapes.

COURTESY DANIEL HASTINGS

NAS BREAKS HIS WAY BACK INTO RECORD STORES AFTER A MINI-HIATUS WITH A WIDE ARRAY OF PRE-EXISTING TRACKS THAT HAD NEVER BEEN AVAILABLE COMMERCIALLY.

COURTESY DANIEL HASTINGS

The Restaurant Renegades: Amherst Brewing Company

Due to the lack of gourmet eats in the dining commons around campus, we decided to pursue alternative fine dining establishments in and around Amherst. We headed to the Amherst Brewing Company (ABC) in cozy downtown Amherst.

After a short jaunt down the mansion-lined, well-manicured lawns of frat row, we arrived at our final destination. We noticed how chilly the weather had become and therefore voided any chance of the two of us eating on the outdoor patio. Our hostess pointed us in the direction of the live jazz, and we hunkered down at a table for six. The four empty seats left us guessing as to whether or not we would have company joining us for our meal.

Immediately after ordering a half plate of nachos topped with spicy Texas chili, indecision surrounded our table. Placing our menus aside, we downed and fretted over the relative simplicity of the menu, we remained hesitant in our decision-making. Finally, after some severe heckling from our waitress, we made quick, impulsive decisions.

Peter opted for the smoky barbecue burger with fries, while Trevor went with the barbecue chicken sandwich with fries. Although we wish we had more adjectives to describe our meals, they were admittedly generic. Nevertheless, the barbecue sauce thrilled our taste buds, and the fries were so good that we passed on ketchup. We also split the jambalaya, which was an extremely large portion but very plain and had no New Orleans kick.

When we arrived at the ABC, it resembled Olympic Stadium during the eighth inning of a Montreal Expos game. Our immediate apprehension soon turned into relief as the seats filled with dozens of neck-bearded hippies from Hampshire College. The four-person jazz band consisted of a banjo, a mandolin, a rhythm guitar and a violin. The musicians, best described as folk artists with a hint of Alanis Morisette, warmed up for a good two hours and kicked off their set at exactly 9 p.m. Our only complaint was when they strayed from the music and attempted to do some stand-up comedy; this was not helped by our fake obnoxious laughter from the back.

Upon completion of our meals, we were left with hunger pangs, only satisfied with a selection from the ABC dessert menu. Peter went with the Elvis Presley brownie sundae, which was served with chocolate ice cream, because they had run out of vanilla. It was quite chocolaty and a good way to top off the meal. The menu also contained a deep fried Oreo cookie sundae, in which the ABC beer batters the cookie and then places it over ice cream. Their motto, "Don't knock it until you've tried it," and we will do just that. Trevor selected the homemade apple crisp, which was served at a temperature similar to that of volcano Mount St. Helens circa 1980, giving us a chance to hear even more live music while it cooled.

Overall, the ABC provided quality food in a rustic but homey atmosphere. The menu contained all the classics, but lacked the creativity of a great restaurant. The ABC is a perfect lunch destination but doesn't necessarily hit the spot for dinner. Fortunately we left our fake IDs at home because an underage beer at ABC can be quite pricey (a well publicized court case serves as a disclaimer for any under-aged patrons).

Nevertheless, if one was of legal age the ABC's bar contains an extensive menu of microbrews, exotic imports and fancy drinks. The current World Series packed the large bar with talking couples and dudes sporting Omar Vizquel jerseys. If it weren't for our waitress dancing with her fellow employees in the aisle we probably would have been inclined to sit at the bar. As well informed columnists we feel obligated to mention next week's event: The Cold Duck Complex will be playing at 10 p.m. on Saturday. They are a funky hip hop jazzy rap group native to UMass whose sweet sounds are sure to compliment the menu at ABC.

The ABC was a much-needed excursion from the dining commons. The menu was simple but the food was tasty. The live music on Saturdays and Sundays is a compliment to the meal. Our final rating is three out of four stars.

Peter Butkus und Trevor Sieckе are Collegian Columnists.

■ Atmosphere

continued from page 1

duo an appealing sound, because they aren't like a basic, run-of-the-mill rap group. Slug, Atmosphere's MC, drops rhymes filled with so much emotion it carries over to the listener, all backed with Ant's lo-fi, simple, but fitting, beats.

Much of God Loves Ugly deals with Slug's ex-lover, Lucy, the woman he is enraged at for abandoning him while at the same time yearning for her. Much of the rest of the album deals with the ugly sides of life – hence the title. The glimpses of sunshine come in rare bursts, but it seems the best songs on the album are also the most depressing and angry.

God Loves Ugly starts strong with their lead single, "Onemosphere." The song, which gets listeners familiar with the duo, delves into one of the hardest beats on the album. Then Atmosphere slips into "The Bass and the Movement," an ode to hip-hop – how Slug and Ant feel it's supposed to be done. The album continues strong with songs such as "Give Me," where Slug talks directly to the listener over a bluesy harmonica, revealing how he only wants people to remember his name, show him love and be inspired by his music.

The following track, "I—k You Lucy," could quite possibly be the best on the album. Amongst its chords, Slug angrily shouts his pain through the microphone to his ex-lover, claiming to hate her for not needing and leaving him while he still loves her.

The album trails off in the middle for the next six songs with nothing spectacular, except for the title track "God Loves Ugly," which is mostly about Slug in relation to his surroundings but is well carried by a dope piano beat. Then the album picks back up for the last six songs with tracks such as "A Girl Named Hope," with lyrics again about Lucy, and "Modern Man's Hustle," this time about Lucy from Slug's view of the situation and its affect on him. "Modern Man's Hustle" also carries Ant's best beat, complex and smooth on the album.

All in all, God Loves Ugly proves a success for Atmosphere because they have accomplished their agenda: to create an album full of raw emotion and feelings. However, whether or not it will be a success in album sales or with hip-hop fans remains to be seen.

■ La Boheme

continued from page 1

natively recreates the spirit of Paris around the 1930s, as the Moscow Tribune states. "This production is a rare example of an opera in which the performers perfectly match their characters both in terms of beauty and talent."

La Boheme is Puccini's story based on the book, Vie de Boheme, by French author Henry Murger. La Boheme tells of the doomed love between Mimi, a fragile beauty, and Rodolfo, a jealous struggling Parisian poet. This story, rich with human frailty, is filled with beautiful arias, energetic and high-spirited actors and heartbreaking lyricism, explaining why opera lovers all over the world never tire of this touching classic.

And if this storyline rings a bell, yes, you have it right. The musical RENT by Jonathan Larson is based on Puccini's La Boheme – although the two productions differ a bit in storylines and content.

The opera begins at 8 p.m. on Oct. 26 in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. General admission tickets range from $10 to $40. Five College student tickets range from $7 to $15. Call the Fine Arts Center box office at (413) 545-2511 for more information.

- Christine Papazikis

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

La Boheme FEDS INTO THE FAC THIS WEEKEND WITH HEART BREAKING LYRICISM AND ENERGY

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

AUTO FOR SALE

90 Honda Accord 4DR Red 127K Az $3,000 549-4088 Dereck

88 Toyota Celica, Automatic Transmission, 90,000 miles, very clean $1550, 582-9103, 585-0599

88 Buick LeSabre CD Player Good Condition Clean $1300 546-1853

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Berkshire East Ski Resort Hiring Both Full and Part-Time Ski &

EMPLOYMENT

Board Instructors E-mail Jherrick@Bershireeast.com Lift operators call 413-339-6617 www.berkshireeast.com

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

FOR SALE

Two Turntables and Mixer Gemini 2000 and Gemini PS676 $500 Call Eric 546-7277

FOR SALE

Massaversity of Unichusetts clothing massaversity.com

Tori Amos Tickets for sale. Nov. 19. TSongas Arena. Good seats. Best offer. Call Kevin 546-4640.

FURNITURE

Double Size Serta Mattress w/ Box Spring. $80. Plaid Couch and matching Chair. $40. 17 inch Sharp TV. $75. Best offer on anything. Call Nick 253-4039

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels.lessons@mailwaves.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

Room available now through remainder of fall semester $300.00 a month. On Bus Route. Next to Amherst College utilities included. 508-776-9523

In the Brook Townhouses 425/ NEG. On Bus line Patio Basement Washer/ Dryer No down payment NEC. – Just rent Call 413-896-6946

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

2-3 bedroom apartment on Kellogg St.– Great location– uptown. Newly renovated. Front and back porch- Fall option. Call Schuyleroat 253-4643.

Large 4 bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

Sunderland 2 Bedroom Corner Unit ON BUS ROUTE $820 Utilities included available immediately 397-9912

TICKETS

Eight concert tickets for

TICKETS

American Idol Worcester Centrum for Oct 28 413-737-2793

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-

TRAVEL

7710

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas,

TRAVEL

Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	AT&T 3
4	ABSN
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS / 57
7	USA N Cinema
8	WB / 22
9	UPN 38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	CNC 19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel & Living
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNN
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	UTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

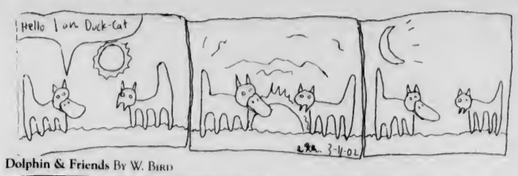
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day ; Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

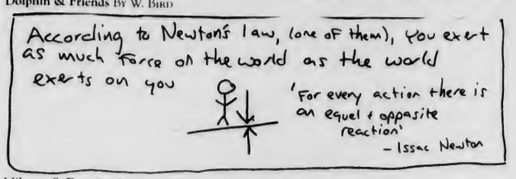


Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.



Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Quote of the Day

"I'm gonna find me two waitresses here and pull me a Fredo."

-Trent, Swingers

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 36	HIGH: 50 LOW: 37	HIGH: 54 LOW: 33

Horoscopes

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) - Avoid frogs at all costs. You know what I'm talking about. You sicko.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) - How the hell do you spell your sign? It must suck if you're dyslexic.

Capricorn (Dec.22 - Jan. 19) - You aren't a Cancer. That's a good thing.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) - Buy a car. And give it to someone. Then kick yourself repeatedly for believing in your stupid horoscope.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20) - Long weekends can be messy. Clean up your bathroom you slob!

Aries (March 21 - April 19) - Watch your temper. It's not worth jail time.

Taurus (April 20 - May 20) - You are going to have the best day of your life. Just watch out for swans. That's right, swans.

Gemini (May 21 - June 20) - Give your friends money. Lots of money. They'll appreciate it, trust me.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22) - You life is full of sunshine. Avoid sunspots.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22) - Roar really loud - but don't disturb the peace.

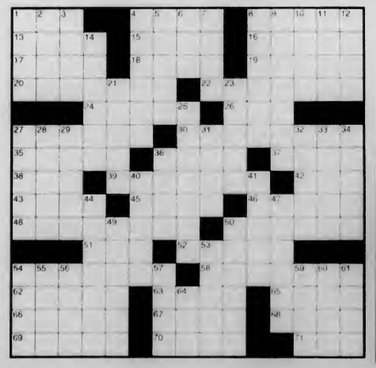
Virgo (Aug 23 - Sept. 22) - Buy a plane ticket to somewhere. You'll be happy you did it once you're somewhere else.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) - Watch your karma. Three can easily turn to 21. Trust me.

Want to read more? Visit us on the web at www.dailycollegian.com

Come write for us!

Interested? Come visit us in the Campus Center Basement.



ACROSS
1 — Too long
4 Writing type
8 Stockholm native
13 Buckets of lumber
15 Mouse catcher
16 Committee
17 Constantly
18 Fifteen
19 Romantic interlude
20 Yacht race
22 Breakfast foods
24 Teen-age
26 Beauty of Superman II
27 Electrical unit
30 Store owner
35 Lovers intently
36 Have supper
37 Wordster Webster
38 Magazine fillers
39 Able seamen
42 Golf teacher
43 Paddy crop
45 Sums for CPA's
46 Fashion
48 Exhaust part
49 Frothy dessert
51 Consume
52 Fares
54 Meals
58 Some computers
62 Eastwood of Hollywood
63 Brickmaker's oven
65 Send forth
66 Trivial
67 Old barge canal
68 Gambler's need
69 Polar explorer
70 Garden intruder
71 Beat softly

DOWN
1 Washstand item
2 Yielded
3 Cyclist LeMond
4 Marble figure
5 Not rural
6 Bad for Pierre
7 Oil org.
8 Flowery shrub
9 Immersed
10 "Paint the Sky with Stars" singer
11 Wooded valley
12 Amnesia
14 Kind of rug or beads
21 Sculpture perhaps
23 Key in data
25 — one's teeth
27 Separate
28 Nitroglycerine collectively
29 "Home Alone" Joe
31 Bonesetter Cabell
32 Unhurried pace
33 Deserves
34 — Island Red
36 Moist
40 Country singer Bonnie
41 Tread heavily
44 Movie dancer Powell
47 Oxidized, as iron
49 Sweet roll
50 Sighed loudly
53 Dragon of puppetry
54 Sgt. Preston's group
55 Nobelist Wiesel
56 — colada
57 Distort as data
59 Leave out
60 Type option
61 Type of ladder
64 Negative emotion

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	D	M	I	T	■	W	I	G	S	■	V	G	N	P
J	R	E	N	E	■	H	A	L	E	■	V	I	O	L
D	A	R	E	D	■	A	G	U	E	■	E	N	V	Y
E	M	I	■	■	B	L	O	T	T	E	R	■	■	■
A	T	T	I	R	E	■	O	N	S	A	L	E	■	■
■	■	■	I	N	U	R	E	D	■	D	E	B	U	T
A	W	A	I	T	■	L	E	S	S	O	R	T	■	■
P	R	E	■	T	A	L	E	N	T	S	■	V	I	A
O	R	A	L	■	A	G	R	A	R	I	A	N	■	■
P	A	R	E	S	■	S	T	O	O	L	S	■	■	■
S	Y	S	T	E	M	■	O	B	J	U	S	E	■	■
■	■	■	S	C	U	F	F	■	N	A	V	E	■	■
R	A	N	G	■	S	I	L	O	■	T	A	X	E	D
O	R	E	O	■	S	C	A	N	■	A	M	O	N	G
B	E	E	■	■	Y	A	N	G	■	M	I	N	T	Y

11-22-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Spring Vegetable Soup

Corned Beef & Cabbage

Fish & Chips

Spinach Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Curried Chick Peas (vegan)

DINNER

Spring Vegetable Soup

Veal Parmesan

Boston Scrod

Tofu Fajita (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matt Brady
Photo Technician	Dan Roy
Copy Tech	Ken Campbell
Production Supervisor	Melissa Hammel
Production Staff	Gerry Auger, Lizzy Nielsen

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

On the road again

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

So much for the comforts of home.

The Massachusetts women's soccer team (9-4-1, 5-0-1 Atlantic 10) won't see the lush turf of Rudd Field for anything more than practice for over the next three weeks. It begins a four-game, stretch of road games on trips that will take the squad through Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., and Virginia.

The Minutemen begin the state-of-affairs matches today in the City of Brotherly Love with a contest at Temple (5-10-0, 2-5-0 A-10). On Sunday, they travel to St. Joseph's (7-6-0, 2-4-0 A-10) for a 1 p.m. game against the Hawks.

The Maroon and White has been riding high atop the A-10, and is unbeaten in the conference. The lone blemish on the conference record is due to Duquesne, which tied UMass, 2-2.

One Minuteman will be bringing some hardware with him to Philly as well.

Senior Jeff Deren added to his impressive awards list this week when he was named the Atlantic 10 men's soccer Player of the Week for the second time this year. It was also the fourth time Deren was given the nod in his career.

But the Minutemen will stress that this year's team is about much more than Deren, who made his mark in the history books this weekend, bypassing Mike Butler and Randy Jacobs as the leading all-time UMass career points- and goals-scorer.

UMass has seen goals from 13 different players, and for the early part of the season, was goaltending by committee as well. Senior Enzo Montare has taken prime ownership of the role as the A-10 season has progressed, but he had to win the job over classmate Dave Doucette and junior Colin Burns – who both put solid efforts in for UMass earlier this season.

Whether the Minutemen are truly the top of the conference could come down to the final game of the season, but they'll know a lot more about their place in the conference after this weekend.

"We know these are important games," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "These are games where we need to do what's expected. I think this is a good test for us, to know if we're that good. We're entering hostile territory, playing at two of the tougher fields to play on. So, we're going to have to get the job done. And I think we're ready to do it."

This weekend, the Minutemen face two teams who sit closer to the bottom of the A-10 standings than the top, and for that reason, could be dangerous.

"They have no pressure," Koch said of the two squads. "And that could mean that they'll play really well. They'll be loose, they're going to be ready to play."

Temple and St. Joseph's both have just two conference wins, and are both coming off defeats to George Washington last week end. The Owls were shutout by GW, 3-0 on Sunday, and the Hawks suffered a 3-1 loss to the Colonials the week ago. St. Joseph's hasn't seen any game action since that loss, as its scheduled meeting with Richmond last Sunday was canceled due to safety concerns regarding the recent sniper attacks in the greater Washington, D.C. area.

GERALD FINOCCHIARO

Evan Myers has scored one-fourth of UMass' last three games. He has scored six times on the season.

The biggest test should prove to be Temple, for whom Koch expressed a lot of admiration.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for the Temple program," he said, "and [Head Coach Dave McWilliams]. He's worked hard, he gets the most out of his players. I think Friday's game is going to be a tough game."

Mets pick Howe as new manager

By Hal Bock
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) – Blocked from pursuing Lou Piniella and unsure that Dusty Baker would be interested, the New York Mets turned to Art Howe as their new manager.

A baseball source, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed to The Associated Press on Thursday that Howe has agreed to a four-year, $9.4 million contract. The move will be announced formally next week, after the World Series.

Commissioner Bud Selig ordered teams not to make major announcements during the Series.

The agreement with Howe completes a bizarre managerial soap opera that involved the Mets, Seattle Mariners, Oakland Athletics and Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

After finishing in last place despite a $95 million payroll, the Mets fired Bobby Valentine with one year left on his contract on Oct. 1 and entered the managerial marketplace. Their top targets were Seattle's Piniella and San Francisco's Baker.

Oakland's Howe was not on their radar screen at the start of the search.

Piniella asked out of the final year of his Mariners contract, saying he wanted to manage closer to his home in Tampa, Fla. Coincidentally, the Devil Rays were without a manager after firing Hal McRae.

The Mariners agreed to let Piniella talk to other teams, provided they received compensation. The Devil Rays and Mets sought permission, but Seattle granted it only to cash-starved Tampa Bay, which had been considered an also-ran in this chase. The Devil Rays managed to strike a deal with Seattle, paving the way for talks with Piniella.

That was when Howe first became an option for New York.

Even though he still had a year to go on his contract, Oakland agreed to let him talk to the Mets with no compensation requirement. That conversation took place last week.

With no one else to talk to, Piniella and agent Alan Nero talked to Tampa and reportedly agreed to a four-year, $13 million contract with the Devil Rays. That left the Mets with a choice: either wait on Baker or go elsewhere.

The Mets chose Howe, also represented by Nero. They met Wednesday and agreed on a contract.

Also affected by the Howe move was Oakland bench coach Ken Macha, another Nero client, who had interviewed with the Mets as well as the Cubs, Texas Rangers and Milwaukee Brewers. He reportedly will get an opportunity to stay as the team's new manager for $1 million, slightly less than what the Athletics were paying Howe.

The bottom line is this: Howe doubles his salary by moving to New York. The Mets shell out $5 million – $2.3 to Howe for managing and $2.7 to Valentine for not managing. And Tampa Bay plunges into the high-priced marketplace with its $3.3 million commitment to Piniella.

Howe guided Oakland to this season's AL West title and three straight playoff appearances. After five years in Houston, Howe joined the Athletics before the 1996 season and is the third-winningest manager in franchise history. His team won 103 games this season but lost a five-game playoff to Minnesota, the third straight year Oakland has been eliminated in the first round.

Did it here with durex® CONDOMS

UMass Weekend Schedule

TIME HOME VISITORS

Friday, Oct. 24

Home
Women's Soccer vs. Temple (2 p.m.)

Away
Men's Soccer at Temple (2:30 p.m.)
Women's Tennis at Cambridge, Mass. (All day)

Saturday, Oct. 25

Away
Field Hockey at St. Joseph's (12 p.m.)
Football at James Madison (3 p.m.)
Women's Tennis at Cambridge, Mass. (All day)

Sunday, Oct. 26

Home
Ice Hockey vs. Nebraska-Omaha (1 p.m.)
Women's Soccer vs. St. Joseph's (1 p.m.)

Away
Field Hockey at Temple (12 p.m.)
Men's Soccer at St. Joseph's (2 p.m.)

Eyeing a place in the race

By Bob McGovern
COLLEGIAN CONTRIBUTOR

The Massachusetts women's soccer team (4-9, 3-4 Atlantic 10) has gone through a roller coaster season of losses and small gains that would seemingly eliminate them from any kind of post-season competition. Well this ride has one more turn and if the Minutewomen succeed in defeating conference foes Temple (8-8, 3-4 A-10) and St. Joseph's (4-8-1, 1-5-1 A-10) this weekend they can position themselves nicely among the A-10 elite.

The Minutewomen will be playing this weekend series at home with their first challenge against long time A-10 cellar dweller Temple. The Owls have put together one of their better sides in years and are very similar to the Maroon and White in overall standings – both stand at a mediocre 3-4. Along with the similar record, they have also shared the same success against similar teams. Both the Owls and the Minutewomen defeated Duquesne and Fordham, but similarly suffered a loss St. Bonnaventure.

"They are a scrappy team…they will beat you by battling, challenging, and pushing," UMass Head Coach Jim Rudy said of Temple's style of play.

Giving an extra push to this scrapping squad are sisters Samantha and Stephanie Vitery who are the top two scorers for the Owls. Each has exhibited that they can put one past the keeper at any time as Samantha has put in seven, while her sister has put five in the net. Another player the Minutewomen will have to keep an eye out for is 6-foot Lisa Jakubowicz who has a definite presence around the goal.

St. Joseph's has been at the bottom of the A-10 for most of the season and is basically eliminated from postseason play.

"They are a lot like Temple, a very scrappy team, but not as fast," Coach Rudy said of St. Joseph's. They have played a tough schedule and play most of their games very tough, only losing a handful of games by more than two goals.

A major cause for St. Joseph's defensive success has been the outstanding play of goalkeeper Christy Ganc. Even though she is on the perennial worst team in the conference, she only has a 1.85 goals against average, which is good for any team. The Maroon and White will have to do a better job of attacking the goal if it hopes to slip more than one by Ganc. Rudy hopes that his team attacking from the outside will alleviate some of the pressure put on his center forwards, possibly opening up more opportunities.

The scoring for St. Joseph's has been spread out and on the most part the forwards lack a true star for the defense to focus on. Rudy mentioned that he would be keeping an eye out for Katie Watson who is second on the team with three goals.

"She opens things up for them whenever she is on the field," Rudy said in regards to the fundamentally sound Watson. At this point in the season, it seems that St. Joseph's is simply playing for pride and looking toward the future. The Minutewomen should be wary not to underestimate this very defensive squad or they may end up like Temple, which dropped its contest against St. Joseph's losing 2-1.

UMass is looking at its last realistic chance to get itself into the postseason. Last year at this time the Minutewomen were 7-0 going into this weekend and dropped all of the vital games needed. Now there is no option – the Minutewomen will need to play some of their best soccer and do something they have not done yet, play consistently. The defense has proved itself while the Maroon and White finds itself again looking for some scoring support up front.

"We want to attack the flankers, we have to create options from the outside," Rudy said.

Once again, the Minutewomen will be playing on the comfort of Rudd Field, which has been proclaimed one of the best fields in the A-10 by Rudy himself. The Maroon and White needs to sweep this weekend in order for postseason hopes to still be alive. They cannot find themselves in a hole against either of these impressive defensive squads. If they split or lose both games there is a good chance that the Minutewomen will have to get off this roller coaster of a season a little early.

GERALD FINOCCHIARO

Junior Erin Lilly and the Minutewomen will play two of their last four games on the season this weekend at Rudd Field. All four contests are A-10 matchups.

LA BOHÈME HITS HIGH NOTES
ARTS PAGE 5
GUEST
STATUES OR PROFESSORS?
ED/OP PAGE 4
SLAMMING
SPORTS PAGE

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE THIRTY EIGHT ☆☆☆☆☆ 10.28.02

SGA won't extend no confidence vote

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Student Government Association (SGA) said Wednesday that it has not felt the need to join University of Massachusetts unions at this time in extending a vote of no confidence for University President William Bulger, but would take it under consideration if the need arose.

"We as the SGA completely agree with funding the union contracts and we would take drastic measures if something was well articulated, but we haven't heard of such things yet," SGA Senate Speaker Dan Saunders said. "This is the strongest message that you can send and it's something that we would need to think long and hard about doing. It has not come down to us to call for a vote of no confidence, but if it does then well see."

Protests, rallies and debate over the recent Massachusetts state legislature's decision to break its union pay-increase contracts with workers across the state have caused concerns to many groups at the University. The recent announcement of a vote of no confidence came in direct response to University President William Bulger's lack of support.

The vote of no confidence also came shortly after acting Gov. Jane Swift allocated a $1.5 million budget cut for the coming fiscal year. After a $20 million budget cut last year, members of the SGA have again voiced their concerns and reactions to the continuing cuts and lack of support for UMass.

Members have stressed Bulger's lack of leadership as well as inability to stand up to the state on behalf of the University that he represents.

"We've been cut $42 million in the past two years by [Gov. Jane] Swift without any questions by President Bulger," Saunders said. "There was also a recent article written that claimed that President Bulger has never been a better example of leadership towards our campus.

"I think that's a bunch of crap, and I heard that they've extended his contract another five years, so lucky us. As far as I'm concerned he's a waste and not doing anything for us," he said.

The SGA has also been discussing Swift's actions and how to make changes for the future.

With a gubernatorial election on Nov. 5, members of the SGA Senate passed a motion expressing the SGA's disapproval with Swift and stating that the SGA hopes the newly elected governor will have a greater fiscal commitment to the University.

The motion also said that the SGA would like to prevent further cuts within the academic departments, financial aid, public safety and support services.

"Gov. Swift won't be in her position next year, and we are now trying to focus our energy toward the next governor and let her know that we have been paying attention to what is going within the state and that we want changes," Saunders said. "We want to be able to invite the new governor to our campus and to show the state that we have a lot to be given back and a lot to lose without their support."

Members however did express concerns regarding the motion, specifically parts involving accusations towards Swift. The motion passed last Wednesday has been submitted to the administration for final approvals.

Aside from recent budget cuts and a call for a vote of no confidence, members of the SGA have been dealing with issues surrounding the UMass Transit Services and putting together the final details within the newly formed Select Committee on Public Safety.

A recent announcement by UMass Transit Services stated that they would no longer be picking up students past 11 p.m. on Thursday through Saturday nights on Fraternity Row or N. Pleasant Street. The announcement has caused much concern within the SGA, with members stressing the already lacking public safety.

"We're supposed to be safe and this is a bunch of crap," Saunders said. "I want to work out an arrangement to get some of my money back that I pay them. What if someone gets assaulted? What if someone falls and breaks their finger? I'm holding them liable for it and I'm pissed about this. I think safety is more important than being good neighbors."

The Select Committee on Public Safety is continuing to accept applications throughout the week. Any students interested (whether involved in the SGA or not) are encouraged to take out papers. More information is available in the SGA office located on the second floor of the Student Union.

The next formal SGA meeting is this Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Theater hostages released

Survivors provide few clues to nature of deadly nerve gas

DMITRY LOVETSKY/ASSOCIATED PRESS

A FATHER AND MOTHER WITH THEIR DAUGHTER, A FREED HOSTAGE, CENTER, LEAVE THE HOSPITAL IN MOSCOW. DOCTORS BEGAN RELEASING SOME OF THE HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE TREATED AFTER THE MOSCOW THEATER HOSTAGE CRISIS YESTERDAY.

By David McHugh
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW (AP) – Doctors said Sunday they still hadn't been told exactly what was in a mysterious knockout gas that killed 116 hostages after Russian special forces stormed a Moscow theater to free them from Chechen terrorists.

The chief Moscow city doctor says more than 150 hostages remained in critical condition after the operation, which at first had been seen as a triumphant rescue mission.

The physician in charge of the city's poison unit said troops did not tell medical authorities they had gassed the auditorium until the 750 hostages were brought out, most of them unconscious.

"But we didn't know the character of the gas," said Yevgeny Luzhnikov, head of the city health service Department of Severe Poisoning. The substance was described as akin to compounds used in surgical anesthesia.

Andrei Seltsovsky, the chief city physician, explained that the gas affected hearts and lungs. He said he had no information when asked about reports that the compound could cause vomiting that would choke unconscious victims.

"In standard situations, the compound...does not act as aggressively as it turned out to do," Seltsovsky said. "But it was used on people who were in a specific (extreme) situation for more than 50 hours.... All of this naturally made the situation more difficult."

The approximately 800 hostages were taken Wednesday night when an estimated 50 Chechen rebels stormed the theater during a popular musical. They demanded that Russia end its war in Chechnya.

The few dozen hostages who were well enough to be released Sunday could provide few clues as the nature of the gas.

"We knew something serious was going to happen" when the gas started seeping into the hot auditorium that reeked of excrement, said Mark Podlesny as he walked out of Veterans Hospital No. 1 near the theater.

The gas mystery tainted the rescue mission, overlaying it with an aura of confusion and callousness. The impression was bolstered by scenes outside hospitals where the hostages were taken for treatment. Friends and family crowded the gates in futile efforts to learn if relatives or loved ones were inside. Authorities gave out little information on hostages' identities, what hospital they were in or how they had fared through the ordeal.

Even diplomats had trouble finding information about the estimated 70 foreign citizens who were among the captives. U.S. consular officials searched the city's hospitals for one of the two American citizens known to have been in the theater. A second American was found recuperating in a city clinic. Two foreign women – one Dutch and one Austrian – were known to have died.

Only on Sunday afternoon, more than 24 hours after the hostages were freed, did hospitals post complete or even partial lists of whom they were holding. Visits still were prohibited. Some people outside the gates saw their relatives waving to them from windows.

"They are hostages again," one visitor shouted to the armed guards at Hospital 13, where about half the captives were taken.

Most of those who left the hospitals hugged those meeting them, then hurried to get out of the chilling rain and avoid a pulsing crowd of reporters and TV cameras.

Podlesny questioned Russian television footage that showed the captors' corpses in the theater amid liquor bottles and syringes. "They didn't drink, didn't smoke,

Turn to MOSCOW, page 3

JOHN KOLESIDAS/COLLEGIAN

Tour de UMass

RIDERS RACE BY FIELD AND GRAYSON DORMITORIES IN ORCHARD HILL YESTERDAY AS A PART OF THE CYCLE-SMART AMHERST INTERNATIONAL CYCLO CROSS. THE EVENT DREW ABOUT 400 CYCLISTS TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Hampshire Halloween to up security measures

By Bonnie Obremski
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Rumor has it that Rolling Stone magazine once rated Hampshire Halloween as one of the top party scenes in the country.

True or not, this year Hampshire College is calling the gig, which kicks off Friday at 4:30 p.m., the "biggest Halloween extravaganza in the Valley," and is encouraging partygoers to "bring the fear and the fun."

Guests from other campuses will face a new invite-only policy this year, however, as Hampshire is reinstating the old policy in the name of security.

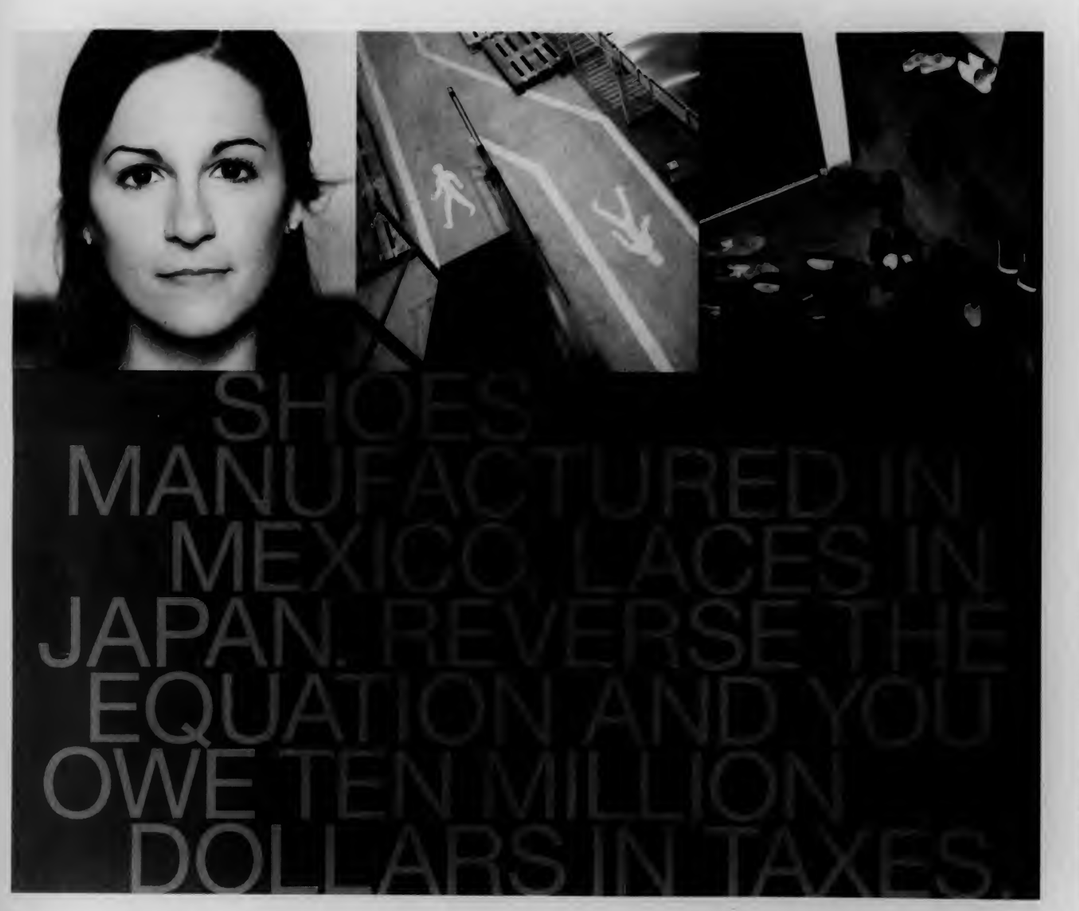
"Hampshire Halloween was the biggest party on campus in the late 70s when I was a student here," recalls Assistant Dean of Students for Residential Life, Renee Freedman. "[but] back then it was strictly Hampshire, tickets were five to 10 dollars, and it was held in the dining commons."

Today, students are not charged admittance and the festivities can be found in several areas around campus. For instance, last year's party featured a giant inflatable slide outside of the library, dancing in the "Airport Lounge" and breakfast with President Greg Prince at 3 a.m. in the dining commons.

"Hampshire Halloween is a time when people take lots of risks," Freedman said. "People get hurt whether through physical sexual assault or...emotional [harm]."

Illegal substances and too much alcohol lead to these injuries, contributing to Hampshire Halloween's infamous subtitle: "Trip-or-Treat."

The event has also been associated with an increase in the number of thefts on campus. One first-year student last fall had her robe and her room keys stolen when unidentified partygoers wandered into the bathroom and took the items off of the stall door while she was showering.



"Last year there were three medical traumas. None of whom had Hampshire connections," Freedman said. "It seemed we were providing a party for people completely unassociated with Hampshire."

While administrators have expressed concern over unruly off-campus partiers detracting from the safety of Hampshire community members, students have also voiced complaints against these strangers. Students have said that they feel "ogled" and "unsafe" around people who have no connection with Hampshire College, but still attend Hampshire Halloween.

Turn to HALLOWEEN, page 3

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

VOTED #1 IDEAL EMPLOYER BY BUSINESS STUDENTS, UNIVERSUM UNDERGRADUATE STUDY, 2002

Help us help companies determine how import taxes, manufacturing costs and labor will affect their profits, and we'll help you build a career.

For opportunities and information go to:
www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere

Look beyond the numbers.

Scholar to lecture on psychology

Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Professor Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi will speak today and tomorrow at the University of Massachusetts on psychology and his concept, "flow."

Csikszentmihalyi developed Positive Psychology, which counters psychology's traditional focus on pathology. The theory includes concepts such as hope, courage, joy, and gratitude.

According to Csikszentmihalyi, "flow" is a rare mental state associated with feelings of optimal satisfaction and fulfillment.

He will give his first talk, "Flow – The Psychology of Optimal Experience," today at 4 p.m. in Herter 227. He will also speak again tomorrow on the "Dawn of Positive Psychology" at 4:30 p.m. in the Campus Center 163C. The lecture is sponsored by the UMass chapter of Psi Chi, the National Honor Society in Psychology.

Csikszentmihalyi is the director of the Quality of Life Research Center. According to its website, the Center "is a non-profit research institute that studies 'positive psychology;' that is, human strengths such as optimism, creativity, intrinsic motivation, and responsibility."

He is also the C.S. and D.J. Davidson Professor of Psychology at the Drucker Graduate School of Management and the emeritus of human development at the University of Chicago, where he taught from 1970 to 1999.

Among Csikszentmihalyi's published works are Flow: The Psychology of Optimal Experience, The Evolving Self, Finding Flow: The Psychology of Engagement with Everyday Life, Creativity and Good Business: Leadership, Flow, and the Making of Meaning.

The Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program sponsors visits of at least 12 distinguished scholars who visit 100 colleges and universities. The purpose of the program is to contribute to the intellectual life of the institution by allowing an exchange of ideas between the Visiting Scholars and resident faculty and students.

Each scholar spends two days on each campus, meeting informally with students and faculty members, taking part in classroom discussions, and giving a public lecture open to the entire academic community.

— Courtney Charles

Sky high

UMass student Brett Constantine puts on his juggling act for onlookers near the Student Union steps

■ Halloween

continued from page 1

"The invite-only policy is only meant to prevent people unassociated with Hampshire away from campus," Freedman said. "It's not about limiting the number of friends that a student can bring to the party...that is why the number of guests allowed per student is high."

Hampshire students will be allowed to invite up to 10 guests of his of her choosing.

During the 1980s and 1990s, the people working in the Dean of Students offices applied a similar policy to the one issued this year. The policy has not been in effect for the past decade because the risk to students had dropped and retaining the policy would have created the illusion that a risk still remained.

"What we usually do is use the relationship we have with the host to communicate with the guest who has caused us to issue disciplinary action," Freedman said.

In terms of maintaining disciplinary order, Freedman said, "Things are not suddenly going to be okay, it will not be okay to have a keg on the quad. There will be no difference to how we respond during Hampshire Halloween to how we respond to situations ordinarily."

Anyone getting off of the bus or entering the main drive of Hampshire will be requested to show ID, give the first and last name of his or her host and be able to present an official Hampshire Halloween invitation. All bus stops and entrances aside from the one located at the main drive will be closed off after faculty and students are given a chance to commute back to their homes at 4:30 p.m. Temporary public safety officers will be called in to manage the entering location and reinforce campus security.

"I have become very sensitive to Hampshire's reputation as a druggie, slacker school, and Halloween doesn't help," Freedman said.

■ Moscow

continued from page 1

didn't swear. They were very disciplined," he said.

Both Podlesny and Georgy Vasilyev, the producer of Nord-Ost, disputed Russian officials' statement that the gunmen had begun shooting hostages before dawn and prompting the special forces' to start their assault.

A total of 118 hostages where known to have died since the Chechens stormed the theater – 116 from the effects of the gas, one young woman shot and killed early in the standoff, and one hostage shot Saturday morning shortly before the rescue raid.

President Vladimir Putin visited the special forces troops Sunday to congratulate them on the mission and declared Monday a national day of mourning. As troops that had surrounded the theater building began to withdraw, Muscovites placed flowers at the perimeter.

Many of the 50 assailants killed in the hostage-rescue mission died after being shot in the head, apparently while unconscious from the gas. The Federal Security Service said three other gunmen were captured, and authorities searched the city for accomplices or gunmen who may have escaped.

The chief Moscow prosecutor, Mikhail Avdyukov, said Sunday that three people had been arrested in Moscow on suspicion of helping organize and carry out the raid, the Interfax news agency reported.

COMMUNITY BULLETIN

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

Monday Oct. 28, 2002

The Hampshire County chapter of the Red Cross will hold a blood drive in Campus Center Room 174 from 10:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Author David Rees will speak at Food for Thought Books in Amherst at 7 p.m. to promote his book Get Your War On and raise awareness about landmine relief in Afghanistan.

The Odyssey bookshop will hold an open mic poetry night beginning at 6:30 p.m. Local poet Sean Vernon will host the event. Readers are limited to five minutes.

The film series Shadows and Sojourners: Images of Jews and Antifacism in East German Film presents "The Axe of Wandsbek" in Herter Hall room 227, at 6 p.m. and then again at 8 p.m. to all interested viewers. The film, directed by Falk Harnack in 1951, considers the role of common citizens in nazi crimes. Free to all; handicap accessible.

Tuesday Oct. 29, 2002

The American Red Cross Hampshire County chapter will continue its blood drive at Smith College in the Davis Center from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Smith College will hold a public lecture honoring retiring Professor Thomas Dyer (a 40 year veteran of Smith) at 4:30 p.m. in the Nelson Library Browning Room. William F. May, founder of the Department of Religious Studies at Indiana University and a colleague of Derr's, lectures on "The Shift in Political Anxieties in the West: From the 'Russians Are Coming' to the Coming Anarchy" in his honor. The event is free and open to the public.

The Sahaja Yoga Meditation classes continue at Smith College in the Bodman Lounge, Helen Hills Chapel at 7 p.m. Free.

Henry Berger, Smith College's Kennedy Professor in the Renaissance, will hold his fourth and final lecture on "Iago's Speech Acts: How to do things with Othello and Desdemona." The presentation will be held in Graham Hall, Hillyer, Brown Fine Arts Center on the Smith campus at 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday Oct. 30, 2002:

The American Red Cross Hampshire County chapter will continue its blood drive at Smith College in the Davis Center from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Multilingual Action Coalition and the Office of ALANA Affairs will hold a Rally to Save Bilingual Education at 12:30 p.m. on the Student Union Steps (South Side, facing the campus pond). The rally will feature a variety of speakers who will address Question 2 on the voter's ballot.

Later in the evening, an open forum entitled, "Confused About Question 2? The Bilingual Education Ballot Question" will be held in room 903 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. Speakers at the forum include Teresa Austin, Agustin Lao-Montes, Mari Castaneda Paredes, Karina Bautista, and Luis Roldan. Following their presentations there will be time for a dialogue between panelists and audience.

Both events are free and open to the public.

The University Orchestra in conjunction with Lanfranco Marcelletti presents "A Trip to 18th Century Vienna" in the Fine Arts Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Concert tickets are $10, and $5 for students.

Thursday Oct. 31, 2002:

The Cuban Cinema Festival presents the film Vampires in Havana in Herter Hall room 209 at 7 p.m. The film, produced in 1986, is an animated cartoon that takes place in Havana in 1933 during Machado's dictatorship. It centers on a young vampire who is the grandson of Count Dracula.

Sunday Nov. 3, 2002:

Mount Holyoke College's Glee Club will present a Choral Concert at Abbey Chapel at 2:30 p.m. For more information call 538-2306.

Coverage of the anti-war rally covered by The Collegian on Friday was incorrect. Ryan Coughlin, who served as Master of Ceremonies for the event, did not organize the protest; it was organized by the Anti-War Coalition. The Collegian regrets this error.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1992 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stumm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com

POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
549-RENT
OOPS!
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks • SUV's
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route)

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Bacon'n'Cheese Skins $3.75 4.48
Fried Shrimp Tempura 7.25 3.63
Sweet Potato Fries 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
OCMP Welcome Here
Judie's
Closed on Mondays
www.judiesrestaurant.com
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

GREAT Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass
2 A great place to get contact lenses
3 FREE sample start-up contact lens solutions
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases
5 Contact lenses mailed directly to your home or office
6 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames
SPECIAL OFFER: 10 PERCENT STUDENT DISCOUNT ON ALL FRAMES AND EYEGLASS LENSES!*
* Cannot be combined with other insurance discounts.
"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services"
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services
For appointments or questions, call 577-5244
UHS EYE CARE SERVICES

MCMURPHY'S
HALLOWEEN
T-Shirts, Prizes, & Games
Custume Optional

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

The Campus Center

needs to include our stations

Nobel laureate John Nash came to speak on campus last Thursday.

Nash won the Nobel prize in economics and was portrayed in the 2001 Oscar winning film, A Beautiful Mind. Thousands of students crowded the Student Union Ballroom to see Nash, overflowing the ballroom and into the hallway. While most students stood outside in frustration trying to get in, others went downstairs to watch the speech on television outside of the Hatch. The student-run television station, UVC-TV 19 was broadcasting the speech live over the Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN). Hundreds of students crowded the television and some eventually went back to their dormitories to watch.

Many others went in search of other televisions, the next most viable option being the large-screen television in the Bluewall Cafe and the televisions in the Campus Center Basement. Unfortunately, because the Lincoln Campus Center is not operated by the University, it only carries AT & T Cable, and not HSCN. Students in the Campus Center could not see Nash's speech on any of the Campus Center televisions.

Undoubtedly, the Economics department, in partnership with the University should have planned for this event more carefully. A speaker with Nash's prestige was bound to bring in many students and people from the five-college area. A place that could accommodate more people would probably have been a better option. The Mullins Center would have probably been able to handle the entire crowd. Then again, the Mullins Center is also owned by a private company.

However, the televisions on campus were another means to accommodate the throngs of people who came to the lecture and one of the campus television stations rose to the occasion by broadcasting it live. The campus center and student union complex are at the heart of student life and should carry UVC-TV 19 and UMATV-15, run by AIMs. This is especially important because of the Campus Center hotel. Guests in the hotel come from a wide variety of places and for different reasons and should have a chance to see some of the great things students and faculty members at UMass do, via their own televisions. Both channels broadcast lectures, special events on campus, and documentaries that should be available to students at any time of the day and to guests in the hotel. Many of these lectures are given by UMass professors and some of the documentaries are produced by students and faculty members.

One can understand why the Campus Center provides AT&T cable for its hotel guests, since it carries more channels than HSCN and is not run directly by the University. However, it's still a building on campus and a center for student life at that. There is no excuse for our campus stations to not be included. Our newspaper and WMUA 91.1 FM are media that can be picked up almost any where in this area, while our television stations cannot. It's a shame that guests to the campus and students in the campus center don't have a chance to see those stations. Any medium, that we have to show the good aspects of this campus are a valuable resource to have.

Unsigned editorials are the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Victim 17

DAN YAGUDIN

For a long time, no one knew the identity of Victim 17.

Victim 17 was a laborer on his way to work. Perhaps a father on his way home. It could be that he was a boyfriend going to a date, or maybe a student thinking about his term paper. He could have been a member of any of those things, or maybe a break from religion and those things out for himself.

You would hope that he had lived a fulfilling life – that he found some answers to the world's mysteries. That he had been loved, was loved in return. That he had smelled the roses, and saw the sunset. That he had seen the Pyramids.

Victim 17 probably knew the rules. Report suspicious packages, avoid large gatherings. When in coffee houses, sit near the door in case a suicide bomber comes in. Most importantly, never ride the buses. Chances are, Victim 17 knew these rules, which come with living in Israel for a long time.

Victim 17 died on June 18th of this year.

Maybe he got his car to somebody who didn't take the bus. Or maybe the car was seen and was in the shop for repairs. Perhaps he couldn't afford a car and had to rely on the public transportation system. Or maybe he felt that the relative safety wouldn't been a bus bombing in Israel for almost two years could help him beat the odds. Just this once.

The fact that killed Victim 17 was so strong that his condition was identifiable. Among the 16 others that met their end at the attack on bus line 32A were men and women, young and old, Muslim, Jew and Christian alike. There was a policeman who strongly believed in peace. There was an engineer. There was a student at Tel Aviv University. There was a high school student, an archeologist, a girl that was going to a nearby elementary school to teach several young adults in their late twenties. Like Victim 17, they were normal people.

The attack on bus line 32A in Jerusalem was not the work of a madman or a psychopath. The perpetrator was a 25-year-old student studying for his master's degree. He had enough brains to realize that what he was doing was wrong. He, like the 118 suicide bombers that came before him (and the dozens that came after), are working toward concrete political goals. And he used terrorism to achieve them.

Planning an attack like the one that ended Victim 17's life takes a lot of time, planning and money. Targets must be picked and potential suicide bombers prepared for their mission. Explosives must be purchased. The bombs themselves have to be made in laboratories and transported, safe houses must be provided, someone has to drive the suicide bomber to his or her target, and the list goes on. People who claim these attacks happen out of spontaneous desperation discount the incredible complexity that goes into planning and executing them. A person doesn't get up in the morning, strap on a bomb and blow himself up. An infrastructure must exist to allow him to do so. That infrastructure, and the men and women working for it, don't do it because of desperation. They work for it because they agree with its goals – in this attack's case, the destruction of the Israeli state.

> "A person doesn't get up in the morning, strap on a bomb, and blow himself up. An infrastructure must exist to allow him to do so."

This technique, used against Israel since 1948, seems to be spreading. This month Australia, a nation far removed from the center of the world's calamities, tasted the bitterness of terrorism when hundreds of its citizens were killed in a bombing on the island of Bali. This past week, Russia got its "9-11" when over 700 hostages were held by Chechen terrorists inside a theater in Moscow (at the time of writing, an estimated 90 hostages were killed in the rescue operation). The attacks are also becoming international in nature; the attack in Bali was on Indonesian soil, but the victims were mostly Australians. The hostages in Moscow included dozens of foreign nationals.

Despite the increased recognition of the threats of terrorism to the free world, some people are willing to reward it; to suggest that the people who blew up the discos in Bali or the World Trade Center had legitimate grievances. Unhappy with something about the world? Go take some hostages. Don't like government policy? Go blow up a bus. We have to empathize with the world's less fortunate people, but at the same time make it clear that terrorism is not a way to achieve political goals. If governments start giving in, the next casualty, like Victim 17, could be anyone. And it could happen anywhere.

Are we vulnerable? To blow up an Israeli restaurant you most likely would have to go through at least one set of armed guards. To blow up Antonio's in Amherst would probably not be as difficult. The Palestinian terrorists in Israel are testing a methodology, wherein suicide bombings are used to try to get concessions from the government and people of Israel (Sept. 11 was the export of such tactics to the United States). These terrorists also know the value of the world's media, and stage their attacks from inside areas densely populated by Palestinians. When Israel comes to foil the next bus attack, or restaurant attack, or to stop the next set of gunmen from attacking a wedding, innocent Palestinians get killed. The result? Calls to stop supporting Israel. These are unacceptable accusations, given that we, as citizens of the free world, should continue to support a Democratic nation that is in the front line in the fight against the spread of international terrorism. We must punish governments, like the Palestinian Authority, that actively support terrorism and harm their own people.

Would you rather support those who are fighting to protect your rights as a free human being, or those who want to turn you into the next Victim 17?

Dan Yagudin is a Collegian Columnist.

Rise of the Minuteman

CAREY

I woke up early, staggered out of bed, and swabbed my roommate's antibacterial drops in my eyes. I thought this would hattle the pinkeye I thought I had, but which later turned out to be a fabricated by-product of my hypochondria. With my roommate still asleep, and the shades down, I fumbled around for my books. Upon finding them, I scurried down the hill towards the library. It was early, too early, but this was my punishment for the previous night of slothfulness. Still half asleep I crunched my breakfast sandwich, as I walked, like a squirrel with an acorn in his hands. I was suddenly distracted from my mobile breakfast when something caught my half open bloodshot eye. I looked up and there he was. An eight-foot anti-imperialist soldier made entirely of bronze, standing on a granite platform 15 feet in the air. The sculptor had paid careful attention to historical detail in making this fomentious rebel, his haversack had holes, the musket's flint was sharp, and his head was cocked to the West. This was a fine monument.

It didn't occur to me until later that day as I attempted to crowd surf into a packed classroom, that maybe the money on that statue, was in some way, misspent. The money dropped on this 10-ton pigeon toilet could have gone to hire a teacher, create a few classes, or pay to find the damn "contracts" (I'm still unsure what exactly these signs are referring to). I sat in class and recalled the words chiseled in large black on the side of the monument: "A Donation From the Class of 1950." I did the crude mathematics in my head and estimated that a number of the elderly in their mid-70s were dipping deep into retirement funds, or had left handsome sums in their wills, in order to build – "The Minuteman." What's next? If I were lucky maybe the alumni can get Bill Cosby and that female astronaut, to fork over cash to have busts sculpted of themselves outside the Whitmore Administration building.

Does a donation to the UMass Alumni Association come with a campus tour or at least one of those magazines that discusses recent events? The only reason why I wonder is that anyone who took even a cursory glance at this campus wouldn't say, "You know, what this place really needs now? A big statue right in the middle of campus that reflects both national and school pride." Don't get me wrong, this thing will surely cause many warm pride-filled tears to stream down my face in my remaining three semesters, but I worry these tears might turn to ones of regret if there's a fourth. Most UMass departments are doing the best they can to tighten their belts in the recent money crisis. However, the alumni seem unable to hear the whines of pain coming from many sectors of campus.

> "What's next? If I were lucky maybe the alumni can get Bill Cosby and that female astronaut, to fork over cash to have busts sculpted of themselves outside the Whitmore Administration building."

However, I do understand, in principle that the donors, many of whom are close to death, might want to leave something that's going to outlast their time. Therefore the argument can be made: why should these people donate money to a new teacher that might quit next semester, or a course or program that could serve useless after a few years. Still better alternatives could have easily been found for that money. For instance, with the rise in recent criminal activity on campus, why not use that money for better lighting along walkways. There could even be 8-foot cast iron lamps, resting on huge granite slabs, with all of the donor's names chiseled in big letters for all I care. At least then, it wouldn't be a complete gaudy slap in the face. I would have no indignations whatsoever if they had spent the money any other way. For instance, they could have restarted the escort service, or used the money towards little things like employing a disposal truck to remove the dead squirrel across the street from the Morrill Science lab, which has begun to molt.

Our campus has many current issues that deserve serious financial attention. To have any UMass affiliated organization spend money on something so frivolous in such a time is remarkably insensitive. And while the students of 1950 like their dandy little statue, the contemporary students that I have talked to, find it to be tacky, out of place and all too ostentatious.

In my experience, when giving gifts its important to have some understanding of what that person might want or need. With 22,000 students crying for more classes, and the crumbling squatter village, we so affectionately call Southwest (rumored to be on the verge of being condemned for questionable structural integrity) the Class of 1950 has left UMass with a gift that smacks of self-praise and thoughtlessness.

Write for ed/op

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

I first would like to congratulate Eduardo Busamante on his article "Path to Peace" that ran on Oct. 25. I found it to be interesting and quite thought provoking. On the other hand, I have to be thankful that Busamante has no substantial influence within the American government.

Peace is a word often used by Busamante in his article. Actually, when engaging in a discussion regarding the American government and Iraq, peace becomes the fabric of all defenses and objections. How to obtain peace becomes the question, the subject of debate. Thus, the idea of peace lies at the core of all American foreign military actions.

Busamante uses the words of the great Albert Einstein to echo his view, "Peace cannot be kept by force. It can only be maintained through understanding." This quote is misused. Peace cannot be maintained if it does not exist. Most will agree peace is a goal not a reality, an ideal all sane people can identify with, whether American or not. Thus, human civilization, or America must spend its remaining time fighting for an unlikely end, world peace.

America is the dominant state in the world, a world of chaos, death, and war. It is a nation founded by the freethinking man. It fails to identify itself within any religious or cultural class. It is the clear-headed leader of an otherwise hazy, insecure world, where nations fall into two categories, enemies and allies. It is the duty of the American government to protect the world from these so-called enemies, nations which contribute to the absence of peace.

President George W. Bush supports military action in an attempt to disarm the hostile nation of Iraq, the current enemy of America. Iraq is a threat to the ongoing quest for peace, harboring weapons of mass destruction controlled by a merciless tyrant. Iraq supports terrorists and produces chemical and biological weapons, which have the capability to kill millions of people. Iraq has blatantly disregarded the truce, which ended the Gulf War. If left alone Iraq remains a threat to the world, it's people and way of life. America must not wait to act on Iraq; it must prevent the worst from occurring. While President Bush certainly hopes for re-election, and I would assume yearns for American economic stability, world and American well-being remains a priority.

Although, as Busamante points out, we maintain a large amount of nuclear, biological, and chemical warfare, we do so merely to disarm hostile nations such as Iraq. What would you suggest, destroy all current nuclear weapons, begin a Gandhi-like quest for peace, and lead by example? Would you feel safe if all American police officials were forced to disarm in an attempt to lead by example? My guess would be no. If we acted on the suggestion of Busamante and ridded our nation of all nuclear, biological, and chemical warfare Iraq and other hostile nations would conquer the world. I certainly wish obtaining peace required no violence or death, but while hoping for the best one must prepare for the worst. Iraq does not have weapons in fear of an American invasion, but because it wishes to kill American people.

To discuss Busamante's next point of the United Nations I will point to the position of the American government, world leader and protector. Although I admittedly don't know much about the UN, I recognize it's importance in world order. On the other hand, I am weary to trust other nations in a decision, which affects the lives of American citizens. If I had to choose between American lives and UN support I wouldn't hesitate to disregard the view of the UN. Sometimes leaders must act alone, in contrast to popular opinion; and this is certainly one of those times.

A third suggestion of Busamante was to "take the $2 trillion we plan to spend on destruction and put it towards understanding and growth." First, America is not destroying anything but rather trying to protect something. The American government is trying to preserve the well-being and lifestyle of all its people, and ironically with much criticism. Second, the stripping of military funds would be a great and potentially disastrous mistake.

Busamante's article illustrates a common view of the American government, a bullying nation that irresponsibly contributes money to the military. While I agree money could be used to improve American social conditions, I believe the American military merits the investment. We cannot expect to improve our nation's social environment unless we can trust our nation's safety. Money is owed to those who serve our country, those who lay their life on the line to protect our freedom. The way to keep our soldiers out of harms way is not by pulling them from combat but by providing the funds necessary to appropriately arm and train themselves. Although a military altercation with Iraq may prove costly to American soldiers, Iraq civilians, and the common taxpayer, to overlook Iraq would cost the lives of all, and end our quest for peace.

Timothy Vautour
UMass student

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Ronny Credi's "Letter to the Editor" that appeared in last week's Collegian. The events of World War II turned out to be a despicable way to show the world that the Jewish people needed a homeland. Whether to say the establishment of the state of Israel was a direct result of the Holocaust, one can most definitely agree that the Jews – a people who have experienced continuous persecution throughout the ages – needed a place where they could be free from persecution. In 1947, The U.N. saw this need, which resulted in the eventual establishment of the state of Israel.

Many people fall into the mistake of claiming Israel is not a democracy because only Jews are allowed immediate citizenship. These people don't realize that there are levels to a democracy – that is, different kinds of democracies. We Americans tend to think that our democracy is "total democracy." Yet many don't see that our two-party government system falls far short of Israel's 31 party government system because here Americans can either votes democratic or republican. In Israel, over thirty-one parties exist in the parliament including "The New Arab Party, United Arab List Party and Israel Our Home Party," where there is much debate, tension, coalitions, yelling, and voting – ideals that make up a democracy.

Before 1948, Jews in many places around the world were not given full rights. Russian Jews were constantly accused of being spies and were persecuted during the pogroms. German Jews were third class citizens. Ethiopian Jews were not allowed to live freely. Israel arose as a Jewish state because the world saw that these people needed a homeland – a place where they could feel safe and not oppressed. To de-legitimize the Jewish state and calling her "racist" when anyone of any religion can live in Israel, to be free to be who he or she is and practice what religion they wish, is purely naive. The Ba'hai have found safe haven in Israel, as one of their main populations is in Haifa. Bedouin live in Israel, as do Druze and Arabs.

To de-legitimize the state of Israel because America gives 3 billion dollars a year is a mere disgust. What America chooses to do as a democracy is its decision. The fact remains that Jews are no longer persecuted in the world because they are free to live in a homeland. And yes, Ronny, if you want to move to Israel and live freely, become a citizen and serve in the army, you are able to. And if someone living in Israel doesn't like the national anthem, then thank God that they have the freedom to move.

Many people make the mistake of looking at America and expect every other democracy to mimic this country. Well, Ronny, no other democracy in the world mimics America. And until you have evidence that people in Israel do not live freely, then you have no right to de-legitimize the establishment, government and democracy of the state of Israel.

Doron Korlnow
UMass Student

www.dailycollegian.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 10.28.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Russian opera company dazzles packed house

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

By the time Conductor Volf Gorelik warmly embraced the petite and slender Irina Arkadieva, a lead actress in the opera La Bohème, the entire audience of the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall stood applauding members of the Stanislavsky Opera Company for their well-deserved, two-hour performance.

This Russian company, established in 1918, currently tours the nation with Giacomo Puccini's classic, La Bohème, and last Saturday night, it brought upbeat scenes of humor, echoing lyrics of passion and gripping music unleashing raw emotions of heartbreak to the Pioneer Valley during its 8 p.m. performance at the University of Massachusetts.

"It's a very special night to perform a full opera like this in Amherst," said Joyce E. Smar, Fine Arts Center Director of Programming, to those sitting in the vast auditorium, most of its 1,981 green-valor-cushioned seats taken. Her words thanking sponsors echoed about the concrete-walled room, its stratified catwalks entangled high above on par with the fifth and narrow balcony row suspended in the air, as the manually-operated golden curtain furnished as her backdrop.

There's no clock prominently displayed in this concert hall, which is fitting, considering it's a space where time seemingly stops as performers on the 41-foot deep stage and musicians in the pit below transport onlookers to another time and place. Saturday's journey took viewers to Paris, one humble Christmas Eve circa 1930, to meet six very relatable, bohemian characters.

La Bohème's openings proved as one of the opera's strongest points, luring spectators in with a dramatic punctuation. Point in case, the character Rodolfo (Mikhail Urusov) – a poor bohemian poet living with his good friend, painter Marcello (Alexey Shishbasov), in a one-room apartment in which the two regularly charm their landlord with alcohol and confusing dialogue to keep from paying rent – opens the opera in his cluttered room by blowing a noticeable cloud of dust off a script he's written. Simultaneously, the music swells and erupts into its first playful score that introduces the mischievously delightful friendships between Rodolfo, Marcello, philosopher Colline (Dmitry Elianov) and musician Schaunard (Dmitry Stepanovich). Similarly, the opera's opening after intermission begins with a hard, powerful, bass-laden "ba dum," alerting the audience to the changes in emotional tone between Rodolfo and his love interest, seamstress Mimi (Arkadieva).

While Rodolfo and Mimi each shower one another with lovely musical numbers sharing information about their lives while at the same time expressing their instant feelings for each other (the two neighbors meet that Christmas Eve and instantaneously form a closeness), the most musically enchanting melody in the opera centers around Marcello's love interest, Musetta (Irina Vashchenkot). During the colorfully crowded restaurant scene during Act II, Musetta and Marcello make clear neither fancy their recent breakup. Accordingly, Musetta

Turn to LA BOHÈME page 6

LA BOHÈME SERENADED A PACKED HOUSE AT THE FAC THIS PAST SATURDAY WITH ITS COMPELLING STORYLINE AND POWERFUL VOCALS.

Igby Goes Down goes up

By Justin Poirier
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Igby Goes Down.
Written and Directed by Burr Steers
Starring Kieran Culkin,
Claire Danes, Jeff Goldblum,
Amanda Peet, Ryan Phillipe,
Bill Pullman and Susan Sarandon
Playing at the Academy of Music in Northampton

It's a shame that so many great films slip under the radar in theaters and don't achieve much success until a video release. So I'm calling it right now, Igby Goes Down is one of those films. It will achieve cult popularity and be the kind of film that people tell their friends about rather than the movie they saw. No commercials for on television. If Hollywood is awake, this movie will also garner some awards and take its rightful place among other great films.

Kieran Culkin stars as Igby, the irreverent rich kid who intentionally flunks himself out of every school his mother Mimi (Susan Sarandon) weasels him into. This movie has breakout success for Culkin written all over it. He's had smaller roles previously but does an amazing job with this one. Culkin seems to be avoiding the pitfall of a Home Alone like his older brother Macauley, who he'll inevitably be compared to at every turn. Igby Goes Down is a great film but at the same time it won't forever peg Culkin as one character.

Igby goes on the run after getting kicked out of military school, finding a place to stay with his Godfather D.H.'s (Jeff Goldblum) mistress of sorts, Rachel (Amanda Peet) and her friend Russell (Jared Harris), whom Igby describes as, "a dancer who doesn't dance and a painter who doesn't paint."

Igby manages to complicate his relationship with Rachel by sleeping with her and soon after, meets Sookie (Claire Danes) and establishes an at least slightly more meaningful relationship with her, until his brother Oliver (Ryan Phillippe) comes around.

Having a bevy of Hollywood stars in a relatively unknown film from a first time writer/director speaks pretty well about their confidence in the script, and rightfully so. This movie is a clever, witty, beautifully paced, character driven, dialogue-focused, dark comedy that works on every level. While that seems like a mouthful, it's all true. The only people for whom it is foreseeable not enjoying the film are the "I don't get it" or "Why aren't there any explosions?" crowds. While the only criticism one could fathom would be that it's almost too clever, but it's a movie, and if you aren't able to suspend reality a bit to allow everyone to be extremely witty, then stop watching movies.

The prevalent tone of Igby Goes Down is half-detached wonder and half-hilarious insanity. While each character seems to admit there's some sort of real world out there, they seem content to skirt along the edge of it. One warning is that nothing in this film is revolutionary, but it executes everything so humorously that I couldn't bring myself to care. The tone recalls High Fidelity with a bit of a lighter toned dab of Fight Club or American Beauty thrown in. Igby himself was perhaps best characterized when Sookie (Claire Danes) says to him "Why don't you get a job?" to which he quickly replies without giving it a bit of thought, "Oh please!" The movie's tagline, "Insanity is relative" describes every character in the film, as they each have some type of insanity worn on their sleeve shamelessly.

This movie is a black comedy without punch lines and is often most funny because it is at once ludicrous and ultra-realistic. It never seems like it's trying too hard, and all the characters seem to have been given parts that perfectly fit them without seeming like the famous people we know they are. Goldblum and Danes turned in especially strong performances as characters that definitely didn't recall other parts they've previously played. The movie managed to make me simultaneously love and hate every character.

I simply loved this film and look forward to seeing what writer/director Burr Steers has for us in his very bright seeming future. Igby Goes Down is at once sarcastic, biting and beautiful. If Burr Steers puts out more like this in the future, I'll be thrilled.

Rating: A+

Chevelle brings musicianship back to popular rock on Wonder

By Kathleen Nestor
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

CHEVELLE
Wonder What's Next
Epic Records

Rock is back. Chevelle's sophomore adventure Wonder What's Next is kicking ass and taking some names with their album that debuted Oct. 8 at number 14 on the Billboard 200. Few might have been aware of their presence earlier this year, but after an October appearance in Rolling Stone and heavy rotation of their video, "The Red" on MTV2, they are quickly becoming a household name. In a time where most rock is being converted into heavy metal and just screaming into a microphone, Chevelle is becoming a standout rock band for their thick layering of impressive guitar riffs, thumping drums, melodic harmonies and intense lyrics.

The band, composed of three 20-something brothers from Chicago, is fronted by lead vocalist/guitarist/lyricist Pete Loeffler. Sam, the oldest of the trio, goes to town on the drums, while the baby of the Loeffler family, Joe, rocks out on the bass and adds support to the vocals. Upon listening to Wonder, an inevitable comparison to Tool could easily be and frankly, who wouldn't want to be included in the same company as such a great band? However, don't write them off as Tool copycats, for only one song truly employs Tool's distinct style of rhythmic bass under an interplay of fluctuating soft and loud vocals. The rest of the tracks on the album are an eclectic assortment of various forms of pain, loss and regret being packaged into a beautifully crafted song, and that's where the true genius of this band lies.

It's due to these haunting lyrics that I have been known to play the entire album repeatedly at night while doing home work—and I mean the entire album, no skipping or programming, which I admit is an accomplishment in its own! One of the best tracks is "Closure," whose chorus is easy for anyone whose has ever been in relationships to relate to: "Closure has come to me, myself, you will never belong to me." Other thought provoking, complex lyrics are found in "Forfeit," "Lonely Visitor," and "Send the Pain Below." All the songs have a thread of similarity in their unforgettable repetitive nature, whose sound encompasses into a tidal wave of emotions that comes crashing down upon you and sucks you back into its 'undertow' (and yes, that pun was intended!) Most tracks clearly seem to point at feelings of loneliness, questions of self-worth, distrust and the normal angst of any person of college age. These raw and emotional songs aren't just new additions to this year's evolution of rock, they are personal anthems.

Chevelle is a band not to be forgotten in the onslaught of new releases this fall. Having toured this past year with such seasoned veterans as Sevendust, Filter, Powerman 5000 and Kittie, the Loeffler brothers have proven their worth of our attention. They are currently on tour with bands Sirch and Stone Sour (Slipknot's Corey Taylor and Jim Root's new band), along with making many appearances on MTV2 and L.A. radio station KROQ. I was recently given the opportunity to hang out with these busy guys and see them perform at their Connecticut show, but sadly Chevelle's bus broke down and was unable to make it to Hartford. However, I did score a CD and a poster out of the deal so all was not lost! Ask around and you'll see why you should make a point to add Wonder What's Next to your CD collection, it's an album well worth the money.

On the Net: http://www.chevelleus.com/

By Melissa Hammel and Lizzy Nielsen

RUNNING with scissors

Episode 3: Halloween Fun

Hey kids, it's us again, the wonderful women of Running with Scissors. It's cold out, flattened jack 'o' lanterns can be found on Sunday mornings on the streets of major apartment complexes in Amherst, and little strands of orange lights can be seen in the windows of retail stores. It's Halloween, and we're sure that some people are still struggling with what to dress up as. This week we're gearing this column towards everyone, not just men, and counting down the top five costumes for each gender that we believe are guaranteed to turn heads this spooky season. Now, beginning with the dudes.

Number 5: Pirate

Pirates are just so stinkin' cute. The best pirate costume consists of an oversized white shirt, black tights and a little eye patch. We saw one of these this weekend and cheesy as it sounds, it so works. Just make sure you have room to breathe in the tights, and no stains on your shirt. No makeup is necessary for this simple, yet hot costume. It's rather inexpensive to put together too, and you get to carry around a sword. Fun stuff.

Number 4: Superheroes

Superheroes are awesome. Spiderman, Superman and especially Batman are hot getups that make you look like you didn't try especially hard, but that you managed to put together a phat costume. It can run a little expensive, as it is difficult to put together a superhero costume without actually having the particular logos that you absolutely have to buy to be a legit superhero. Never the less, it's a quick get up, requires no makeup and has a high comfort level for bouncing around between Halloween parties.

Number 3: Dracula/Vampire

It doesn't matter who you are. Guys look really hot in black. A costume that requires an all black getup is guaranteed to garner some attention. Something like a Dracula or vampire is a great idea for a Halloween costume, as it doesn't require much time or money. You can get a cheap cape, and hopefully you would already own black pants, shoes and shirt. The only problem would be is makeup. To make Dracula or a vampire work, it is definitely necessary to wear a little makeup. And if you're feeling really adventurous, fake teeth. Fake teeth are tough as they are hard to drink with and most just end up taking them out, but they make a hot addition to either of these costumes.

Number 2: Decade icons

Decade icons are awesome, and they are so easy and cheap to put together. We saw one of these this weekend as well, as he was rockin' a Poison tee and a pair of hot, tight, tapered jeans. He looked sexy, and it definitely worked and was amusing at the same time. It's a cheap outfit to concoct, and it shows creativity and requires very little time and effort.

Number 1: Men in uniform

Men in uniform are by law unbelievably hot. Whether it's a navy uniform or a policeman's getup, any kind of uniform takes the hotness level to new heights. They can run kind of expensive, but this also require no makeup, and if you dress up as a cop, you can carry around a fake gun and a nightstick, which is pretty cool. It's guaranteed to attract tons of attention from the ladies, and its comfortable enough for partying.

Women actually have it considerably easier when

Turn to SCISSORS page 6

■ Scissors

continue from page 5

in comes to Halloween costumes in our opinion. We can make a great deal of styles look cute and sexy but there are particular costumes that work better than others for the holidays sorts!

Number 5: The Hula Girl

This costume gives a cute, yet sexy air to it. It is fairly simple to put together all you really need is a grass skirt and a set of coconut shells for your top. It is recommended by the women of Running with Scissors that you wear a bikini top under said shells so that this Halloween doesn't turn into an event in which you inadvertently flash total strangers. The Hawaiian lei is also a key element to this costume. Why is it one of the best? What is better than being able to say that you "had" an entire Halloween party? Furthermore, if you are cheap or lazy you can modify this costume to simply be a tank girl and throw on a pair of shorts and some flip flops. Call it get any easier?

Number 4: A fairy or princess costume

Both quintessentially cute yet simple, anyone can pull off a decent fairy on relatively short notice. It doesn't really take much if you want to be a fairy all you really need is a wand and a set of wings both of which you can buy at CVS for more than five dollars or if you are extremely crafty, make your own. Fairy costume is the best because it really easy yet it creates as much creative. Also as a rule it makes everyone who wears it look relatively cute and cuddly. So apply some glitter and join the realm of the supernatural and super cute.

Number 3: The Devil

This is an excellent costume for a woman that doesn't work as well on men. The sexy devil is both eye-catching and sexy. All you need is a great deal of red clothes so if you are a person who loves red this is the costume for you. Try pairing a red dress with a pair of red fishnets and a pitchfork. A set of horns also goes a long way to adding some charm to this costume. It falls ridiculously flat for anyone of the male persuasion unless they are willing to don red tights and red face paint. And face paint falls into the category of green and blue hair spray: both should be forgotten after age 10.

Number 2: The Witch

Since the beginning of time and of Halloween costumes, the witch has been a favorite among women looking for a classic get up. This is a tried your own wardrobe type of look that can be achieved by throwing on a black dress and buying one of those three dollar witches' hat at any Halloween store in the vicinity. Green makeup and a fake nose have been done as additions to the costume as well as ratty black wigs but neither of these are recommended by the women of Running with Scissors.

Number 1: Cleopatra

We might be biased but Cleopatra is by far the coolest costume one can wear to a Halloween party. Rarely pulled off correctly, it can include such elements as a white dress and a pair of sandals. If you are a blond you might want to invest in a dark wig however. Also in this realm are the genie costumes, which are always a popular party choice.

Hopefully these costumes ideas will help you to get your groove on at a Halloween party near you. Tune in next week when Running with Scissors tackles the issue of different types of fashion.

Melissa Hummel and Lizzy Nielsen are Collegian Columnists.

■ La Bohéme

continue from page 5

another song about always [illegible] for the tall, slim [illegible] beauty she is and her desire to once again obtain Marcello's entire attention. The [illegible] as a high soprano waltz [illegible] the number spectators [illegible] theater humming its repertoire. Rhoads' hands wind and weave through the mind not only succeed [illegible] capturing Marcello's interest [illegible] bringing the lovers back together, but also enchanting audiences [illegible] the closing curtain.

While, La Bohème was sung [illegible] in its traditional Italian superstar provided by the San Francisco Opera Association provided with a screen-centered high above the stage translated each [illegible] into English. While such words cleared up plot points for the largely Italian illiterate audience, the finger-actors on stage conveyed through tone of voice and body language strong emotion streaming flawlessly through the language barrier.

Although much of the opera deals with sad and often everyday aspects of life (including romantic breakups, jealousy, betrayal of trust and, above all, death), it is not with out its lighthearted moments. As such, Rodolfo, frostbitten in his unheated apartment, speaks of making use of his dusty script for Marcello and tosses it into the furnace. "Let's hear another act," he exclaims and throws a few more pages onto the blaze. The funniest comic relief, however, enters when the dynamic duo of Schaunard and Colline prance about the stage. From Schaunard's outrageously rainbow-colored, wild-patterned coat to Colline's downright goofy game of catch with one of Marcello's sculpted bust-s of art, the two lit up the stage at every chance provided.

The set design and lighting, too, furthered the audience's journey into this bohemian realm, as a total of five scenery-painted screens, staggered in depth on stage, created wonderfully befitting mood-changing effects. The start of Act III, for example, includes Mimi's confession to Marcello that her relationship with Rodolfo is crumbling. Perfectly appropriate, the lighting is dreary and one of the screens set in front of the performers gives the scene a depressing look, almost as if the picture had been weathered and tear stained. In stark contrast, the gala scene in the Latin Quarter on Christmas Eve, one marking Mimi and Rodolfo's first outing together, incorporates bright lighting and colorful costumes, scenery and props to signify the unique grandeur of the evening.

By the time the Stanislavsky Opera Company reached its curtain calls and Conductor Yoll Gorelik made his way on stage to absorb the thundering applause echoing about that tall auditorium, one knew La Bohème's showing in Amherst marked success. A tale of friendship, love and loss told through enchanting operatic symphonies, La Bohème struck at the heart of those lured in by its artistic splendor.

Minutemen lose in OT

UNO captain scores two goals

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

For 60 minutes, the Massachusetts hockey team skated stride for stride with Central Collegiate Hockey Association stalwart Nebraska-Omaha. Unfortunately, for the next 18 seconds, the Minutemen failed to do the same.

Captain David Brisson scored a goal just 18 seconds into overtime to give UNO a 3-2 victory over the Maroon and White. It was the senior's second point of the night, and juniors Aaron Smith (2g) and Andrew Wong (2a) also posted two-point nights for the Mavericks (3-3-0). Dan Ellis turned aside 21 of 23 Minuteman shots, including all 10 during a second period where UNO killed off all three UMass power plays.

UNO	3
UMass	2

The overtime started with the two teams skating four-on-four due to matching minors assessed to Smith for hooking and to UMass' Jeff Lang for diving. Andrew Wong knocked down an attempted clear out of the zone by Matt Fetzer and fed the puck to Brisson, who beat his defender and put the puck high past UMass' Gabe Winer.

"It was pretty nice because I had taken a couple breakaways against the goalie and he stopped me twice," said Brisson, who added to his totals as UNO's all-time points leader. "When I got the puck I didn't want to go five hole because I tried five hole twice during the game so I just tried a little chip top shelf. Andrew Wong did a great job on the boards beating two guys and he just gave me a great pass. He pretty much did all the work on that one."

The Minutemen (1-2-0) the five-on-five play for much of the contest, outshooting the Mavericks 23-21. But it was special teams that did Massachusetts in, as it went just one-for-five on the power play and failed to kill off either Maverick man-advantage.

"That was a big boost for our power play," Maverick coach Mike Kemp said. "In six years as a program we've historically struggled as a power play. To see our power play finishing is really encouraging because that's one of the areas that we felt we needed to address if we were going to improve as a hockey team. Our penalty killing has always been among the leaders in the conference and in the country, but our power play has been woefully lacking and having five power play goals on the weekend is a plus."

The game was a mixed bag for the Minutemen, as they played side by side with a nationally recognized opponent for all of regulation, but a lapse in overtime meant the Maroon and White added to its total in the loss column.

"It was a really good game for us," UMass Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "We're going to play teams that like to get on the offensive side of it all year. It was a really good exercise for us. I'm happy with the progress as a team, but there are still areas that are glaring weaknesses for us."

Massachusetts' highly publicized freshmen class was instrumental in the game, as two of its most prized names – Stephen Werner and Matt Anderson – both posted their first career goals in the contest.

"It's always a relief to get your first of the season," Werner said.

"I was just happy to get a power play goal since we've been having trouble on the power play," Anderson said.

The most obvious aspect of the game though, was the number of mental lapses on the part of both teams, as they combined for 12 penalties and 32 minutes in the sin bin.

"I thought from our part we showed a recurring instance where our discipline was a little bit lacking," Kemp said. "We took some really bad penalties in situations – we had three penalties after the whistle – so obviously to me, that's not playing the way we want to play."

The Minutemen twice negated power plays by committing penalties of their own – both resulting in Maverick tallies with a man advantage. The first such instance was a too many men call on which Massachusetts had no fewer than seven men on the sheet next to the bench.

"We weren't really sharp with the change up," Cahoon said. "We have a young team and there's not enough communication on the bench."

But the penalties that may have had the greatest effect on the outcome of the game were the matching minors near the end of regulation. With extra room to work with on the four-on-four, Brisson found an opening that much more easily.

"I don't think they call enough diving in our league," Cahoon said. "I'll have to look at the tape to see if Jeff dived."

"That's an issue for our conference called regulation," Kemp said. "It's one of the points of emphasis for our officials. That was one of the issues that didn't surprise me at all."

Despite the loss, a strong, thorough performance and a third period comeback for the Maroon and White gave it something to take away from the game.

"It's a confidence boost," said captain Tim Turner, who assisted on both goals for UMass. "Anytime you're down and come back, it tells you that you can come back in any game."

Nebraska-Omaha captain David Brisson is stopped by UMass goalie Gabe Winer on a breakaway. He later scored the game-winning goal in OT en route to the Mavericks 3-2 victory.

American Red Cross

When you give blood, you give another birthday party,
Another wedding anniversary,
Another day at the beach,
Another night under the stars,
Another talk with a friend,
Another laugh,
Another hug,
ANOTHER CHANCE

Please Give Blood.

TODAY!
10:30 AM - 4:30 PM
Campus Center
Room 174

To donate blood:
- Be in good general health
- You must weigh 110 pounds
- Have not donated in the past 56 days

Come enjoy donuts, pizza, and the feeling of knowing that you just saved a life.

 Sponsored by Alpha Chi Omega

UMass blood donations have greatly declined since the start of the semester. Every 2 seconds a patient needs blood and only 5 percent of the American population give blood.
Please consider donating today. If you don't, who will?

If you have any questions, please call 1-800-462-2229, or visit our website @ www.newenglandblood.org

Matchmaker, Matchmaker...
Make me a match!
SINGLE SEARCH West & Central Mass
Can Help You Find Your Soulmate!
- Designed by a marriage counselor
- Easy and affordable
- Safe and respectable
- Unique two-way compatibility matching system

Contact us for a FREE Consultation & Brochure
www.massingles.com
massingles@aol.com
413-665-3218
Single Search welcomes people from all lifestyles and backgrounds

READ COLLEGIAN SPORTS.
OR CHECK US OUT AT
www.dailycollegian.com

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
— The Pizza Alternative™ —
256-1616

2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616

2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616

D.P. Dough = Great Calzones + Fast Delivery + Low Prices

Dream it. Do it. Disney.®

We're recruiting on campus!

7:00 pm
Wednesday, October 30, 2002
Herter 231

Mark your calendars — All majors and all college levels invited.
This is your chance to go inside this world-famous resort, build your resume, network with Disney leaders and meet students from around the world.

Check out a Walt Disney World® College Program paid internship.
24-hour secured housing is offered. College credit opportunities may be available.
Visit our website at wdwcollegeprogram.com and then come to the presentation. Attendance is required to interview.

Walt Disney World COLLEGE PROGRAM
wdwcollegeprogram.com

EOE • Drawing Creativity from Diversity • © Disney

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Jostens Ring Day Sale, University Store. Fri 11/1 10-4PM, Sat 11/2 10-6PM www.jostens.com 800-854-7464

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Kappa welcomes the new members of Fall 2002- Lisa Ackroyd, Jen Arnold, Jillian Bennett, Meaghan Carr, Lindsay Clark, Christina Eramo, Danielle Feder, Liz Fredericks, Erin Giroux, Ashlee Gordon, Caitlin Gould, Allison Gray, Joanna Grigas, Lynne Herrington, Sonia Karam, Susie Kreisberg, Amy Moreau, Emily Ogden, Katrina Skurka, and Sydney Szmonko!

AUTO FOR SALE

1988 Honda Civic Good condition 3-door hatchback, 4-speed. Well-maintained. Reliable and fun! $1400 or best offer. 545-6614, leave message.

90 Honda Accord 4DR Red 127K At $3,000 549-4088 Dereck

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR SALE

Two Turntables and Mixer Gemini 2000 and Gemini PS676 $500 Call Eric 546-7277

Massaversity of Unichusetts clothing massaversity.com

FOR SALE

Tori Amos Tickets for sale. Nov. 19. TSongas Arena. Good seats. Best offer. Call Kevin 546-4640.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-warres.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

Room available now through remainder of fall semester $300.00 a month. On Bus Route. Next to Amherst College utilities included. 508-776-9523

In the Brook Townhouses 425/ NEG. On Bus line Patio Basement Washer/ Dryer No down payment NEC. – Just rent Call 413-896-6946

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

2-3 bedroom apartment on Kellogg St.– Great location– uptown. Newly renovated. Front and back porch- Fall option. Call Schuyleroat 253-4643.

Large 4 bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

Sunderland 2 Bedroom Corner Unit ON BUS ROUTE $820 Utilities included available immediately 397-9912

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement. UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN

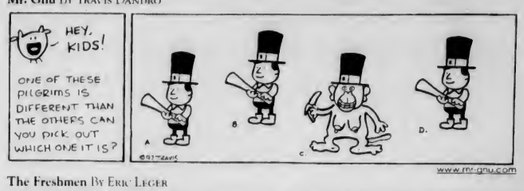
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS / 3
3	NESN
4	Fox Sports Network
5	PBS / 57
6	HSCN Cinema
7	WB / 20
8	UPN 38
9	TV Guide Channel
10	ROX / 61
11	ABC / 40
12	NBC / 22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN Info Channel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN 2
18	UVC-19
19	ESPN Classic
20	Travel-n-Good
21	CNN
22	CNN HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	Discovery Channel
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NASA
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	CNBC
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	CMT
38	USA
39	TNN
40	MTV
41	MTV 2
42	VH-1
43	TNT
44	TBS
45	E! Entertainment
46	Sci-Fi Channel
47	Court TV
48	Nick at Nite
49	Comedy Central
50	Cartoon Network
51	Game Show Network
52	TV Land
53	FOX Family
54	Univision
55	Galavision
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
59	C-SPAN2
60	CTN

TV Listings coming soon...

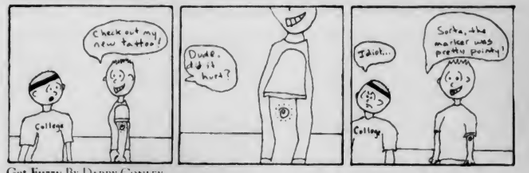
to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Fang Shy By Blake



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

The Freshmen By Eric Leger

Valley of the Squirrels By Conrad X

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Quote of the Day

"I've probably burned truckloads of your things but I still can't remember to forget you."

-Memento

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 51 LOW: 27	HIGH: 47 LOW: 25	HIGH: 45 LOW: 32

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Save money today. If you don't, you won't be able to go to the movies on Tuesday night.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Don't eat at the DC today. That is all.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Make sure to be extra nice today. It will pay off in the end, trust me.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is the dawning of the age.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – The stars say you are beautiful and wonderful. Everything will work out for you and don't forget to watch Buffy this week. Don't break the yoke, and beware of giant grapes.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Look out for falling bricks. That means don't go to the library. And look out for the fox.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Everything you want to happen this week will happen. You will pass your exams, and go on a date. Sleep is for the weak.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Listen to New Found Glory today. Wear pink, and play hockey. And take really good notes, because you, or someone else might need them.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Look straight ahead, and nothing will keep you from your goals today. But have a little fun.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Blow off your classes today. Your GPA can handle it.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – That stupid thing you did this weekend doesn't matter. Forget about it. All is fine.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Start a band. And make sure you hit the right chords. It'll be worth it.

geoduck By WJS

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Garden Vegetable Soup

Cavatelli Supreme

Battered Fish

California Chili Nachos (vegan)

DINNER

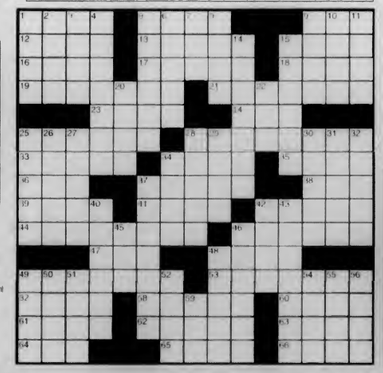
Garden Vegetable Soup

Chicken Mamou

Southern Fried Steak

Thai Seitan (vegan)

Vegan Cutlets with Applesauce



THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Voted Best new Bar/Club in The Valley 2002
MON
All-U-Can-Eat $5.95
8:30-11pm
TUES
TEAM PUB TRIVIA
Put your education to real use!
Win money and prizes
9pm call for details
161 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst
548-6900
"Start Your Own Tradition"

ACROSS
1 Left out
5 911 responders
9 Head warmer
12 Love to Claudius
13 Nothing
15 Frito's abode
16 Calf-length
17 Benefactor
18 Famous volcano
19 Not COD
21 Refuse to buy
23 Comply
24 Warm fire bench
25 Hidden
28 Tuffs
33 Moon's path
34 Get dirty
35 Wild West revolver
36 Anger
37 Polar explorer
38 Deadlock
39 Stiff metal
41 One in a million
42 Tool for digging
44 Feet commanders
46 Did KP work
47 Earth's star
48 Screams and shout
49 A, B or C
50 Fielder's need
57 Aroma
58 Sheater of old films
60 Dole in the Senate
61 Tower over
62 Ulc to Pogo
63 Branch off
64 Lodge member
65 'N-a-Age singer
66 Bithet

DOWN
1 Shoe part
2 Abu Dhabi leader
3 Bump or knot
4 Qaddafi's capital
5 Swirled around
6 Melancholy
7 — Pan Alley
8 Haughty one
9 "Elder statesman
10 Reunion attendee
11 11th grade exam
14 Extremely
15 Too busy
20 Be an accomplice
22 Kennel sound
25 Three, to Pierre
26 Fouled up
27 Steel girder shape
28 Thunders
29 Gold republic
30 Demolish
31 Skip a syllable
32 Hero's horse
34 Ice floe dweller
37 Pecan confection
40 Deprive of weapons
42 Put in the mail
43 Scare silly
45 PC acronym
46 Yellow fruit
48 Card game
49 Mouse cousin
50 Rock star say
51 Stole
52 Opposite of all
54 Lotion ingredient
55 Plant with fronds
56 Clucking sounds
59 Stimpy's pal

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-28-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Melissa Hammel
Photo Editor	Gerald H. Ling
Copy Editor	Jim Pignatiello
Production Staff	Pete Preston
Production Staff	Jennifer DiMeglio, Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

JUNIOR MICAH BRAND DISPLAYS HIS HIGH-FLYING SKILLS AS HE DUNKS THE BALL IN HIS FIRST ATTEMPT IN THE SECOND ROUND OF HEAD-TO-HEAD REVERSE SLAM IN THE MULLINS CENTER.

HEAD COACH STEVE LAPPAS AND HIS STAFF BOOTH ON TO THE MULLINS CENTER FLOOR IN A MINUTE BEFORE THE START OF THE 2002-03 MEN'S BASKETBALL SEASON.

Madness in Mullins

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Micah Brand and Jackie Rogers may be the captains of the 2002-03 Massachusetts men's basketball team, but Saturday night's Midnight Madness certainly reiterated that this is Head Coach Steve Lappas' team.

Before the current installment of the UMass team was introduced to the 5,000 or so in attendance, the large video screen showed a video portraying the opening "credits" of the team's movie that is the upcoming season. The credits run while a bus heads down the streets around Amherst.

Guess who was driving the bus.

The team is introduced amid smoke and fireworks. One by one, old and new faces came through the curtain to applause. Brand and reigning A-10 Rookie of the Year Anthony Anderson receive the loudest ovations. The UMass faithful gets a first look at UConn transfer Marcus Cox – who "switched over from the dark side," according to one fan in attendance, as well as Suffield, Conn. native Jeff Viggiano, Mike Lasme, Alassane Kouyate and Gabe Lee.

Then, when it was the coaches' turn for introductions, they drove up in a bright red Hummer. The assistants were introduced with some background information and fanfare.

Finally, Coach Lappas was introduced to the crowd. It took epic music and a few minutes of accolade reading before the fireworks and cheering took over.

No doubt, this is Lappas' team.

Lappas got a hold of the microphone and made a deal with the 5,000 or so students in attendance. After pointing out that the Minutemen used to have one of the best home court advantages in the NCAA, he claimed that his team can accomplish what its fans want them to, but "you have to come out and support us."

The students, who were enthusiastic all night long, seemed to agree to their end of that deal.

The five contestants for the evening's slam-dunk contest were then announced. Senior captains Jackie Rogers and Brand, junior Raheim Lamb, and freshmen Viggiano and Lasme were to put on the display.

It was Lasme, who touched his ankle on a reverse before driving the ball through the net, that drew the majority of ooh's and aah's from the crowd, but some stiff judging from Chancellor John Lombardi, who gave him just a six because he missed his first attempt, kept the Ivory Coast native out of the finals.

Brand (sky-high, one-handed power jam), Viggiano (nice one-handed cradle) and Lamb (a powerful two-handed windmill) reached the finals, which Lamb won after jumping over a crouching Anderson, who bounced the ball for him, before slamming it home.

But it wasn't Lamb's dunks that the crowd went home gushing over.

Coach Lappas appealed to the "powers that be" to allow Lasme to attempt a few more dunks just for the heck of it.

Needless to say, Lasme was immediately back on the court to woo the crowd some more. After all, this is Lappas' team.

No. 1 proceeded to throw down the two best dunks of the night, starting with a tremendous overhand windmill and following up with a fluid up-and-under reverse.

Obviously, Lappas wanted the UMass crowd to see what they had in store over the next four years and, as usual, his hunch was right on.

Over the next several years, both will likely be viewed as having a piece of ownership on the Mullins Center court.

LASME CONTINUED TO DAZZLE THE MULLINS CENTER CROWD WITH AN EMPHATIC RIM-ROCKING WINDMILL DUNK.

No. 16 Minutemen dodge upset

Late fumble by JMU secures UMass win

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HARRISONBURG, Va. – For the second time in a row the Massachusetts football team came within seconds of blowing a game-long lead only to come up with a clutch play to preserve the victory and avoid second-ticked-off the clock.

Quarterback Matt Ezzotte (10) held a 14-7 lead over James Madison with 35 seconds remaining in Saturday's matchup. The Dukes had the ball at the Maroon and White 27-yard line on third-down and goal. JMU Head Coach Mickey Matthews went for a trick play – calling a hook and ladder.

James Madison quarterback Jaason Cooke tossed the ball to wide-out No. 1 Colby Gilman on pattern. Gilman then pitched the ball to running back Brandon Coutu, who had yard-ed darkness and headed for the right corner of the endzone. But UMass safety Anton McKenzie ran No. 5 down at the one-yard line.

"Great play by Anton," UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple said of McKenzie, who was last week's hero with a game-saving field goal block. "He's a really good player."

On fourth down with 26 seconds left, the Dukes went for a QB sneak as Cooke tried to push through the left side of his offensive line. But the right side of the UMass defense held strong and Cooke, who tried to pitch the ball once the defense had him wrapped up, fumbled the ball. Freshman safety Shannon James recovered, giving the Maroon and White its sixth win of the year.

"He got hit and spun off," James said. "He tried to pitch the ball at the last second and it came out. I just tried to scoop it up and score. When I knew I couldn't, I just fell on it and preserved the win."

The Minutemen had great success holding the Dukes down in the red zone all afternoon, allowing just one touchdown in the five possessions that reached the 20-yard line. The Dukes racked up 415 yards of total offense against the Maroon and White, but had little to show for it.

"Our defense was tremendous," Whipple said. "You give up one touchdown you should win the game. Our defense was tremendous down inside the five-yard line."

After an offense-free first half that ended with the score knotted at zero, Whipple reached into his bag of tricks on UMass' first drive of the second half.

On fourth-and-four at the JMU 48, Whipple sent out his punt team. The ball was snapped to Corey Potter, who was lined up between the center and the punter. The senior captain pivoted left and pitched the ball to James, who was headed in the opposite direction. James broke to the outside and had just one Madison player to beat down the sideline. No. 34 won the footrace and broke the scoreless tie, giving UMass a 7-0 lead.

"For us to score a touchdown on special teams is huge," said UMass quarterback Jeff Krohn, who completed 15-of-22 pass attempts for 128 yards. "That got us going and we came out on the next possession and got a touchdown."

The Minutemen doubled their lead to 14-0 on their very next possession as freshman Rasmy Rosario pounded the ball for 31 yards on the drive, including a five-yard bullying into paydirt. Junior fullback Terrence Glover caught two passes for 34 yards on the drive.

JMU answered immediately, however, as quarterback Matt Ezzotte hit sophomore wideout Mark Higgins for a 72-yard gain. Sophomore tailback Randell Bradley went off-tackle on the next play for the score.

According to Whipple, it was clear that his players were not mentally ready for the contest before they even got on the plane for Virginia.

"I knew [Friday] morning when we had 11 guys late for breakfast that we would be very lucky to win today," said Whipple, who kept starting running back R.J. Cobbs and wide receiver Joe Bruce out for the entire first quarter for the policy violation.

"When you've got guys that get on the bus 10 minutes early to go to Richmond and North Carolina State and then you've got to wake up guys in bed, then you know you have a problem," Whipple said.

The Brown alum didn't think that it was the specific team thes were playing that led to the problem.

"I don't think it was JMU," Whipple said. "I think it wouldn't have mattered who we played. The problem that you have is that all the sudden you beat two teams at home that are supposedly great and you buy all the answers."

With a team he felt was lacking focus and a quarterback that suffered a concussion the week before, Whipple was just happy to get out of Harrisonburg with a win.

"We were very fortunate to win," Whipple said. "They hit harder, they tackled better, they came to play."

FRESHMAN SAFETY SHANNON JAMES RECOVERED A JMU FUMBLE INSIDE THE UMASS 20-YARD LINE LATE IN THE GAME TO PRESERVE THE MINUTEMAN WIN.

Turnovers in red zone bury Dukes

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HARRISONBURG, Va. – For the majority of Saturday's 14-7 victory, the Massachusetts football team was dominated by James Madison in the middle 60 yards of the field on both sides of the ball.

Unfortunately for the Dukes, most points are scored within the red zones, an area where they were outright pathetic.

JMU converted just one of five trips inside the 20 into points, and ended both halves unable to convert plays from the one-yard line into any points. The Dukes' final play of the game was a microcosm of the rest of the contest, as quarterback Jason Cooke tried to scramble to the outside from the one-inch line on fourth and goal. He ran into a wall of Maroon and White defenders, and attempted a desperation lateral that was fumbled and recovered by UMass' Shannon James to seal the victory for the Minutemen.

The day was just that bad in the red zone for JMU, as the fumble was one of two turnovers in the fourth quarter that it committed within 20 yards of pay dirt. Amidst a 15-play drive that ate up nearly nine minutes of the clock, starting QB Matt LeZotte was faced with third and goal from the 12. Under pressure, LeZotte rolled out to his right and, finding nothing ahead of him, threw back across the field and his body, lofting a pass right into the hands of UMass linebacker Mark Kimener, who downed the ball for a touchback. On the preceding play, the Dukes almost found the endzone as well, but a beautiful jumping break up by James kept the ball out of Mike Connelly's hands.

As disappointing as the end of the game must have been for Head Coach Mickey Mathews and his squad, the end of the first half was equally aggravating. Following a Cortez Thompson interception that gave JMU the ball at the UMass 23 with less than a minute to go in the half, the Dukes got a first and goal from inside the one-yard line on a pair of rushes.

LeZotte failed a sneak on first down and JMU was forced to take its final timeout. The next play was a loft to Alan Harrison on the right side that was broken up when Steve Costello jumped over his adversary and knocked the ball down. With eight seconds left in the half, Mathews and his staff decided to take a risk, but a Chris Iorio draw wound up short of the goal line. With no way to stop the clock, the half ticked away and the Dukes came away with no points, as the teams went into the locker room scoreless.

That questionable call could have been brought about by a deserved lack of confidence in the special teams. On Madison's second drive of the game, it brought the ball 48 yards in nine plays down to the UMass six. Back-to-back failed runs and an incomplete pass made it fourth and goal, and the Dukes brought on Burke George to try a 23-yard field goal. His attempt clanged off the left upright and bounced back to nearly the 10-yard line, and the Minutemen took possession.

The Maroon and White defense did allow one red zone touchdown, set up by a long bomb to Mark Higgins that went for 72. However, for the most part it was bend-but-don't-break for the Minutemen, as they saved most of their big plays for the outer 40 yards of the field. And with a staggering offense, the red zone 'D' brought UMass one-step closer to the conference title.

CLOSE-KNIT SHIP NEEDS BAILING OUT
A&E'S PAGE 5.
ETIQUETTE LESSONS FOR UMASS
ED. OP PAGE 4
SOCCER SWEEPS AGAIN
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE THIRTY-NINE ☆☆☆☆☆ 10.29.02

SGA discusses campus safety

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A bar in the Blue Wall, Walking Escort Service information cards for students on campus and a Registered Student Organization newsletter are topping members of the Student Government Association's Executive Cabinet's to-do list.

Members of the SGA Executive Cabinet gathered last night in an effort to go over planning of events for the remaining fall semester. Issues surrounding safety, transportation and the Graduate Student Organization's call for a vote of no confidence were also discussed.

The Executive Cabinet, composed of six members under President Dave Carr, have been working alongside the SGA Senate as well as on issues directly involving campus administration and student life. Members of the cabinet have been meeting weekly with administrators in an effort to directly serve on committees. They have also been trying to deal with specific criteria among the administration in correlation to efforts made by the Senate.

With the announcement of a vote of no confidence towards President William Bulger by the Graduate Student Organization, members of the Executive Cabinet expressed their own thoughts on the matter. Members agreed unanimously that the Executive Cabinet along with the SGA Senate would not support nor voice a vote of no confidence towards Bulger.

"We're going to stay out of the vote of no confidence and we don't want to have any part in it, especially with things going as well as they are with the administration. We don't want them turning their backs on us," Carr said. "There is no way in hell that the State Senate is going to open back up for a special session to vote on this and it would just make us look bad."

Carr further explained his thoughts on accusations made towards Bulger by stating that people may have issues with him, but it is the SGA's job to attempt to work with him despite a lack of participation on his behalf.

"We cannot like him, we can hate him, but we need to try and keep attempting to work with him," Carr said.

Members further discussed issues surrounding public safety and announced that business cards with the phone number to the University of Massachusetts Walking Escort Service will be printed on behalf of the SGA and distributed campus wide. Members discussed various distribution points such as residential dormitories, the Campus Center and sororities on campus.

"Walking Escort Service cards with their numbers on them are being printed up and we're going to take them to the sororities, dorms, bus stops, and the Blue Wall and tell individuals they are coming from the SGA," Carr said. "We'll have them in the next week and be able to begin distributing them shortly after."

An RSO newsletter is also in the making and ready for distribution. The newsletter includes information regarding RSO's on campus, events planning and information as well as current information regarding the SGA.

"It's been a rough couple of weeks but we've got the RSO newsletter done and now we're just working with getting it printed up and ready for distribution," Secretary of Public Policy and Relations Tom Fleenor said. "It's good because not only is it getting the SGA's name out, but people will know what's going on with other RSOs."

Another top priority being looked into by the Executive Cabinet is the idea of a bar being brought back to the Blue Wall in the Campus Center. A bar was previously located there in the past, but was shut down. Carr explained that having a bar on campus would bring the students back to the center of campus as well as increase student life.

"Back in the day there was a bar in the Blue Wall and it would be a great way to get the community back on campus," Carr said. "Chancellor John Lombardi thinks it's a great idea as well. He hates driving by up-town and seeing 10,000 students on the sidewalks when they could be doing something like that on campus if we had the resources. So I'm going to be looking further into getting that going."

Members discussed a possible referendum survey to be presented in December of this year to get a student response to the bar in the Blue Wall proposal as well as on a variety of other issues.

Members of the Executive Cabinet will be further addressing these issues and others on Wednesday at the SGA Senate meeting that will be located in the Campus Center.

Students protest in D.C. rally

APPROXIMATELY 100 UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS STUDENTS MARCHED IN A WASHINGTON D.C. RALLY ON SATURDAY. OVER 100,000 ATTENDED THE RALLY, WHICH WAS CONSIDERED THE BIGGEST PROTEST SINCE THE VIETNAM WAR.

By Kelly Farrell
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

About 100 University of Massachusetts students joined over 100,000 people rallying in Washington, D.C. Saturday to peacefully demonstrate their opposition for an upcoming war with Iraq.

Approximately 400 protesters from all over Western Massachusetts attended the rally. Five College students and Valley community residents packed into buses, vans, and carpools Friday night in various designated meeting areas such as parking lots in Northampton, Amherst and Springfield.

UMass students gathered at the Visitor's Center at midnight on Friday crowding into five vans and numerous carpools organized by students Ryan Coughlin, Lisa DePiano, Eric Lin, Mike Morin, and Natalya Weinstein-Roberts from the Anti-War Coalition. Soon after midnight, 500 protesters from the area were setting out for the all-night, seven-hour trip to the capital in the pouring rain.

Weinstein-Roberts said she was really impressed with how well students worked together to make everything happen, especially considering how busy the students' schedules are.

"Everyone put a lot of energy into this and I was really pleased to see how many [students] realized how significant this [war protest] was," she said.

After driving through the night, organizers sloshed around in the mud Saturday morning at the Constitution Gardens. Protesters held signs with slogans such as "Drop Bush Not Bombs" and "No Blood for Oil." Two 10-foot long banners joined the crowds representing local people who oppose the war, with one displayed "UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST" and the other saying "WESTERN MASS."

Protesters from each group followed behind, bobbing and waving signs with creative slogans such as "If Bush = President, then War = Peace." They chanted "This-is-what-Democracy-looks-like."

Late in the morning an announcement was made by a member of International ANSWER, a coalition of antiwar groups that coordinated the demonstration: "We are currently a group of 100,000 people and growing...more buses are still rolling in from across the country."

Shortly after the announcement, the sun broke through and the fog cleared, allowing protesters and on-lookers a full view of the Washington Monument behind the shoulder-to-shoulder crowd.

After staying up all night and driving several hundred miles, UMass senior and Social Thought and Political Economy major Karen Ammann said, "I think the change in weather was what really kept people going."

Police estimated that the rally was the largest war protest in D.C. since the Vietnam War. Several Vietnam War veterans compared it with one in 1969 that had at least twice as many protesters.

What struck police and enthused many protesters was the difference between this protest and those of the past. Last Saturday there were over 100,000 citizens opposing the war before the war actually started. In contrast, it was not until the height of the Persian Gulf War in 1991 that about 75,000 people protested. Many people felt that this early highly attended protest indicated that there will be an enormous public outcry if Bush declares war.

Although many of the protesters were students organized by the Radical Student Union and the Anti-War Coalition from UMass, there were many families and non-student, non-radical groups involved as well. Several speakers said that there were many different reasons for making their trek to D.C., but as one said, "like you, I'm here to be counted."

Vietnam and Gulf War veterans spoke at the rally as well as a diverse group of well-known speakers, including Reverend Jesse Jackson, actress Susan Sarandon, singer Patti Smith and former Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

"We can go a better way," Jackson said. "Saddam Hussein should be held accountable for his crimes... but if we perform a preemptive strike on Iraq, we lose all moral authority."

Sarandon echoed the sentiments of many other protesters when she declared: "We are here to take back democracy."

Morin agreed with Sarandon: "To have an active democracy, this [protesting] is what you have to do. It's what democracy is all about, and there's nothing un-American about this."

Another UMass student, English major Carrie Joyce said, "I wanted to join other people who feel the same way...I felt voiceless ...I didn't feel represented at all. It was amazing to finally be around so many people who felt the same. That was really powerful."

Ammann also enjoyed the sense of unification. "I felt really united with people of all ages and focus groups. People really banded together," she said.

Groups present included college and high school student groups, Christian groups, Muslims, labor unions, members of the California Police Department, and a wide variety of left wing political groups. There were also thousands

Turn to PROTEST, page 3

PROFESSOR MIHALY CSIKSZENTMIHALYI, VISITING SCHOLAR FROM CLAREMONT UNIVERSITY, SPOKE MONDAY TO A GROUP OF ABOUT 100 PEOPLE. HIS LECTURE WAS ENTITLED "FLOW – THE PSYCHOLOGY OF THE OPTIMAL EXPERIENCE."

ESTHER DANZIG/COLLEGIAN

Visiting psychology professor speaks on attaining the mental state of flow

By Courtney Charles
COLLEGIAN STAFF

To experience the mental state of flow is to create ecstasy over actions, said Professor Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, of Claremont Graduate University who spoke to an audience of 100 in Herter Hall yesterday afternoon. Csikszentmihalyi is the Phi Beta Kappa Honor Society's Visiting Scholar. His speech was entitled: "Flow-The Psychology of Optimal Experience."

"By studying psychology I could study not so much what went wrong in the past, but what could go better in the future," said Csikszentmihalyi. "There must be a better way of living than what people have created for themselves."

"You don't think of yourself [because] you are so involved in what you are doing," said Csikszentmihalyi in describing flow.

Csikszentmihalyi said he and his students conducted interviews of musicians, composers, writers, poets, and figure skaters to determine aspects of flow. Csikszentmihalyi described the seven aspects to how it feels to be in flow:

Being completely involved in what you are doing – focused, concentrated; a sense of ecstasy-of being outside everyday reality; great Inner clarity – knowing what needs to be done, and how well we are doing; knowing that the activity is doable – that our skills are adequate to the task; a sense of serenity – no worries about oneself, and a feeling of growing beyond the boundaries of the ego; timelessness – thoroughly focused on the present, hours seem to pass by in minutes; intrinsic motivation – whatever produces flow becomes its own reward.

"The goal has to come from the inside, and nobody can tell you whether it was the right goal," Csikszentmihalyi said.

For these reasons it is rare for kids in school and some adults at work to experience flow, according to Csikszentmihalyi. He described it as people's minds being independent from their bodies. People process what they hear, but most of the time their minds are somewhere else.

"Flow makes everyday experiences seem more like a work of art or a game," he said.

There are eight channels of the human experience and each channel corresponds with an associated activity, according to Csikszentmihalyi. Flow is achieved when a person is participating in an activity that they particularly enjoy or feel content in. Some examples of this are the following: arousal with learning; control with driving and work; relaxation with reading; eating and conversation. The are also negative states of flow which are the following: boredom with work and household chores; apathy with loneliness and watching television; worry with family problems and anxiety with sudden threats and work stress.

Flow has applications for increasing worker productivity and education, according to Csikszentmihalyi.

"Flow lets you feel like some part of the larger universe," he said.

People attending the discussion found it informative.

"It's nice to see they're making new ways to make class exciting and school enjoyable," said Kestina Gray, 19, a sophomore Psychology major.

"I enjoyed his discussion on flow because it really made a point of connection between arousal and control," said Molly Menzie, 18, a freshman Spanish major. "I think I've had flow when I'm snowboarding because it's a rush and I feel the arousal but not always the control."

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Monday, Oct. 21, 2002

10:16 a.m.: A trophy case in the new Graduate building was broken and a Distinguished Teaching Award was reported stolen. Police are investigating.

4:47 p.m.: A backpack was reported stolen from the Fine Arts Center on Presidents Drive. A wallet containing an ATM card and a cell phone was part of the theft.

7:07 p.m.: Medical emergency was reported in the W.E.B. DuBois Library on Hicks Way. An ambulance was responded.

11:43 p.m.: A domestic disturbance was investigated by Patrolman Mark Connor on Sunset Avenue. Arrested were Ray Peck, 18, of 147 Hill D, on Leeding Hills Drive, Amherst, and charged with disturbing the peace and resisting arrest.

Tuesday, Oct. 22, 2002

1:11 a.m.: Police responded to a report of vandalism to the driver's side mirror of a vehicle in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

3:03 p.m.: A caller reported that an individual verbally threatened him. The subject was provided with copies of statements and was advised to call UMPD and the dean of students with any further incidents.

11:34 p.m.: A suspicious person was reported in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive. Police arrested Thomas L. Ham, 21, of 248 Amherst Rd. in Sunderland, Mass., on a previous warrant.

Thursday, Oct. 24, 2002

1:24 a.m.: A caller to McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane reported that someone shot a BB gun and struck the glass in the window.

1:36 p.m.: A fire alarm was reported coming from the Textbook Annex and the Physical Plant. AFD and Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) were dispatched. It was determined that workmen cutting through the cement wall activated the alarm at the Textbook Annex.

3:03 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Student Union on Campus Center Way. The ambulance on the scene took on person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Friday, Oct. 25, 2002

9:14 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported at Bartlett Hall on Hicks Way. One person was transported to Cooley Dickinson.

10:20 a.m.: A domestic disturbance was reported on John Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street. Police responded to the scene.

12:15 p.m.: Students working in the evening/weekend have said someone has been around the area posing as a security guard. The caller was advised to have the students call UMPD for identification if the person appeared again.

4:15 p.m.: A caller reported a missing laptop from the caller's room in Coolidge Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue. The stolen laptop is a Toshiba satellite laptop 1800.

4:21 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported at North Village Apartments on N. Pleasant St. An ambulance responded to the scene.

4:45 p.m.: A party reported a tuba stolen from the Fine Arts Center on Presidents Drive.

7:25 p.m.: A caller in Washington Dormitory on Fearing Street reported that her credit card had been stolen and that $683 of bills have been added to it.

8:27 p.m.: A suspicious person was found in Lot 64 on Hicks Way. Christopher S. Schiavone, 18, of 131 Old County Rd. in Windsor Locks, Conn., was arrested and charged with possession of Class B and D substances and transportation/possession of liquor while being under the age of 21.

9:56 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Mullins Center on Commonwealth Avenue during the Tool concert. EMTs responded to the men's bathroom on the west side of the building to an unresponsive male in a stall. The subject received medical care.

10:50 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Mullins Center during the Tool concert. A team administered first aid to a subject between sections T and U.

10:40 p.m.: A Mullins Center staff member reported a fight in the CC section of the arena during the Tool concert. A team reported that the individuals involved in the fight had been evicted.

11:08 p.m.: A disturbance was reported in the Mullins Center during the Tool concert. A team responded and arrested Jason Matson, 18, of 189 Taft Ln. in Windsor Locks, Conn., and charged him with disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Saturday, Oct. 26, 2002

12:07 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Pierpont Dormitory on Fearing Street. The AFD transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

12:29 a.m.: The Mullins Center made a request for an officer to do a drive by because there was a crowd around the buses outside following the Tool concert. The officer responding reported that the crowd was leaving.

1:39 a.m.: The AFD responded to the report of a medical emergency in McNamara Dormitory. The responding officer reported that one person was en route to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

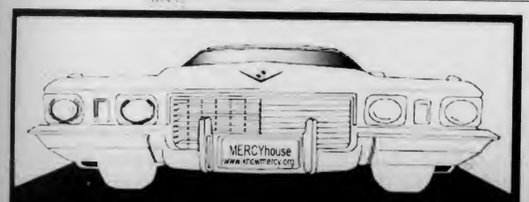
2:44 a.m.: A caller reported that a resident showed a stun gun in Patterson Dormitory on Sunset Avenue. The officer responding said that the subject was found with a stun gun in his room.

7:51 p.m.: A female resident in John Quincy Adams Dormitory reported a man watching her in the shower. An area check turned up negative.

Sunday Oct. 27, 2002

1:28 a.m.: Police investigated a report of two males inappropriately touching a woman in Coolidge Dormitory. The caller stated that she got away and went to her room and locked the door.

9:30 a.m.: Vandalism to a car in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive was reported. A trash can was thrown through the van window. The officer on the scene reported that the front and rear windows were broken, the side mirrors were broken and baked beans were covering the vehicle.



11:52 a.m.: Vandalism was reported on five cars in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive. Both driver side windows were smashed on a Jeep, the driver's side window was smashed on a Honda Accord, the driver side windows were broken and the front end was damaged on a Chevy Lumina, the bumper was damaged on a Jeep Cherokee, and a Mercury Tracer sustained a broken passenger mirror and scratches to the right side and hood. Bottle rockets were found in and around the vehicles and are the likely cause of the damage.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulik Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Nobody Rides For Free UNTIL NOW...

Streets too spooky?
In no condition to drive?
Don't want to walk home in the cold?

FREE RIDES ON HALLOWEEN
Halloween Night 10pm-4am
Call 374-7532

Sponsored by MERCYHOUSE
www.knowmercy.org

PUSH

NOT ALL AIR FORCE ROTC STUDENTS FLY PLANES. GETTING THEIR TUITION PAID BY THE AIR FORCE IS THRILL ENOUGH.

Your pulse quickens. Your heart races. And that's just when you're in line at the bursar's office. Fact is, picking up a full or partial scholarship is just one of many experiences you can have in Air Force ROTC. Get some hands-on training through one of our summer internship programs. Hone your competitive edge at a leadership seminar. Then enjoy some serious downtime with up to $400 extra spending money in your pocket every month. Not to mention graduating with a guaranteed job and no student loans to pay back. Push your dreams, your life, your limits, your mind. Apply for a scholarship today by visiting the Air Force ROTC Web site or calling our toll-free number.

U.S. AIR FORCE ROTC

AFROTC.COM
1-866-423-7682

Dean's List reception to be held to honor students

By Jen Hodson
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts will be holding its first annual Dean's List Reception tonight from 6 to 8 p.m. in the UMass Campus Center Auditorium.

It is the first Dean's List Reception organized by students for students, and is in honor of juniors and seniors who have earned a place on the Dean's List which requires a grade point average of 3.5 or higher. The reception is sponsored by the Alumni Association, the Student Government Association, and Commonwealth College.

During a time when the University of Massachusetts has been suffering severe budget cuts, the reception is hoping to increase student pride and a sense of community at the UMass campus. The event is a way for students, administrators, faculty and other members involved with the University to come together as a community and focus on something positive.

There will be signs indicating an area of where students are to meet with their college, in which they will be able to talk with other students and UMass members concerning their interests. People are also welcome to explore the entire auditorium to get a look at the different colleges as well.

The reception will feature an address by the Chancellor Lombardi and other student entertainment. Voter registration forms will be there and students are encouraged to be fill them out. Students will also be asked to contact their representatives and senators to advocate for UMass. Members of the Massachusetts Joint Committee of Ways and Means were invited to the reception to get students involved with visiting and learning more about the University and to give students an opportunity to interact with their legislators.

The event is formal and requires business attire (no jeans, sneakers, flip-flops or T-shirts), and will feature such menu items as stuffed mushrooms, scallops wrapped in bacon, baked brie, cheese and fruit trays. All students who have been invited are encouraged to attend.

Career Services hosts fair

By Bridget Henry
Collegian Staff

On Wednesday, the Career Services Office will host the annual Graduate and Professional School Information Day at the University of Massachusetts. The event will take place between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Over 150 graduate, medical, dental, law and other professional schools will be represented, along with schools of social work, theology, international relations, education, library science and a range of other post-baccalaureate options from across the continental United States and abroad. Information about the various entrance requirements, financial aid, housing and other arrangements will be available.

There will also be representatives from Kaplan Services and the Princeton Review to answer questions about graduate program entrance exams. The atmosphere will be relaxed and dress is expected to be casual. All students from the Five-College area are encouraged to attend.

Some of the professional schools and organizations that will be represented include the Boston Graduate School of Psychoanalysis, the Boston University Communications Program, the Columbia University School of Journalism, the Fordham University Social Service department, Harvard University, the Massachusetts School of Law, the New York Institute of Technology, Savannah College of Art and Design, Teach For America, Tufts University, and Yale Law School.

For a complete list of participating institutions, students may consult the Career Services web page at www-ccn.acad.umass.edu and click on "Events Calendar."

Write for news!

Come down to the Collegian located in the Campus Center basement and talk to Dan or Amy protest

continued from page 1

of people who were not a part of such organized groups, but who did not support the war as Bush has proposed it.

Protesters came to D.C. from all over the country, particularly from the Midwest and East Coast. Many West Coast residents joined a similar rally organized by International ANSWER in San Francisco.

Bush had a small amount of support at the rally, with a counter protest of less than 100 people. A man carried his baby while pushing a stroller that contained a poster reading: "Fight now if we have to or my baby will have to fight or die later."

A sign on the baby's back read "I'm a target for a homicide bomber." Other counter-protesters gathered at 17th Street and Constitution Avenue and included a couple of activists from the national group Free Republic, as well as a group of about 20 Iraqi exiles chanting slogans against Saddam Hussein.

Police said there was a dispute between the peace activists and the counter protesters that led to two out of the three total arrests at the march. The other arrest reported by police was of a man carried away after arguing with police about writing on a building with chalk. As the man was being dragged away with his baggie full of chalk, protesters chanted, "Let him go." The group soon quieted down and continued its peaceful march around the White House.

Despite the arrests, police said this was a remarkably peaceful protest. Police said it was common for such large protests to have as many as 100 arrests.

UMass students and Western Massachusetts residents all returned home safely and without incident. Students reported that they were glad they went.

"I wish people in Iraq could hear about [the protest] and know some of us are informed, and we don't all totally back Bush," Joyce said.

DAN BOYD/COLLEGIAN

Fall cleaning

A PILE OF LEAVES AWAITS CLEANING UP BETWEEN LEIBRIE GRADUATE RESEARCH CENTER AND THE CAMPUS CENTER ON A SUNNY FALL DAY.

An article on the anti-war rally in last Friday's paper quoted speaker Eric Lin as saying, "Sanctions against Iraq kill four million Iraqi children every year."
It should have read, "Sanctions against Iraq kill four thousand Iraqi children every month."

The Daily Collegian* regrets this error.

Say No to War on Iraq

Sign the Iraq Peace Pledge: afsc.org/peacepledge

Students have often led the way in social justice movements, help us lead the way.

To learn about local organizing and events contact:
AFSC-Western Massachusetts Program • Phone: 413-584-8975
Email: afsc@crocker.com • Web: http://users.crocker.com/~afsc/
Learn about the issues at: afsc.org/iraq

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE
85 Years Working for Peace, Justice & Human Dignity

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Every vote counts in governor's race

Shannon O'Brien needs to gain ground among independents and suburban voters. Statewide, Republican gubernatorial candidate Mitt Romney holds a lead (45 to 26 percent) among these voters, a group that both O'Brien and Romney hope to bring around to their respective camps.

O'Brien and Romney are both relying on independent voters, and it has been said that it is the independents that are going to pull the election.

This past week O'Brien and Romney made public appearances. O'Brien at a "town meeting" and Romney outside of Staples, rallying with workers. This was designed to aid their campaigns among suburban voters.

Both candidates have focused their attention on the last few stakeholders in the 2002 campaign for governor, and there are no easily obtained results in this race that will likely end in a photo-finish.

For Shannon O'Brien, she needs to build a stronger stance in the statewide independent counts. She needs to establish a reason for voters to choose her over Romney. Two weeks ago O'Brien held the independent votes, and has only recently lost numbers to Romney.

Romney has been trying to defeat his outsider status since the start of his campaign. The success of this will only be known next week.

Both candidates have come under attack for negative campaign strategies. Debates have come under fire as superficial and circumventing the issues people are most concerned with.

There are necessary repairs that need to be done by both camps. Candidates looking to make a last ditch effort to gain the pivotal independents need to attach their names to an item or an individual that already holds some import to the voter.

Local interests are hard to tap from a statewide level. However, local candidates are more adept and in tune with their constituencies. By networking with local candidates, campaigns can appeal to more voters. Appearances, however minor, chosen by the candidates in their respective districts, can be useful tools for both gubernatorial candidates to consider.

Face time for a gubernatorial candidate is important as campaigns wrap up and make individual issues more real to voters. By focusing on the issues that contain areas find important, Romney and O'Brien can steer discussions towards these areas and the candidate in that district or area.

In such a contested race this is a good campaign tool for both the local candidate and the gubernatorial hopefuls.

It allows a more distinct focus to come from the campaigns. Both major candidates have been criticized for avoiding the major issues at debates and in their campaigns so far. By getting a state seat candidate to say this candidate "supports your issues, or understands your concerns," the hopefuls can take away the damage from this criticism.

It is the remaining votes, the unaffiliated and the unconvinced, that Romney and O'Brien need to gain. With Libertarian Carla Howell and Green Jill Stein pulling single digits in the polls, the competition lies in the hands of voters.

Unsigned editorials represent a majority opinion of The Collegian Editorial Board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Students need etiquette lessons and need to learn respect

LINDSEY ELDER

As much as I love college and the lifestyle of being surrounded by swarms of students my own age and during this stage in my life at the same time it kills me. College students, supposedly the more sophisticated, refined and mature representatives of our age group, in so many ways give new meaning to the words lazy and disrespectful. And, although I have met many people here who impressed me to a great extent, the number of unmannered and ignorant individuals that I cross paths with each and every day vastly supercedes the amount of those that impress me.

Lesson 1: Leave your cell phone off during class. Now, I don't mean to burst anyone's bubble, but in all honesty unless you are a member of the CIA or FBI merely posing as a UMass student then there is no student on this entire campus important enough that it's crucial for you to have your cell phone on at all times. I don't think I've gone one day in my three previous years here that I haven't had a class interrupted by the ringing or playing of a show tune from some idiot's cell phone. It is extremely rude and distracting to the people around you and the professor. It's also unnecessary, seeing as once it starts to ring, you just shut it off on the caller anyway. Although, I must admit I've also had experiences where students obviously felt they were the only ones that mattered in the room. They not only answered the call in the middle of lecture but went on to continue a conversation for five minutes about how he was afraid he'd left the seller's calculus book in the room of "da-ketchs chick I was wit last night." Turning off your phones has an added bonus for all of us. I can get through my classes without being interrupted by a chorus from "The Entertainer" buzzing in the row in front of me. And as you walk to your next class, you get something to focus on other than walking and chewing gum at the same time, checking for voicemails you most likely didn't receive anyway.

Lesson 2: UMass employees are not your mother, so clean up after yourself. I don't know if it's a huge problem at the other dining halls on campus but I know living in Southwest the last two years I've noticed that taking one's tray to the waste bin often seems to be too much to ask of a lot of people. Athletes in particular (sorry guys, but when you wear nothing but sweats every day of the week ringing it out loud and clear, its pretty easy to pick out who's responsible) will leave their trays. They'll also leave a big mess since they obviously feel they're above such tedious tasks as cleaning up, and instead then leave it for someone else to worry about.

News flash: It doesn't matter what team you're on, where you're from, your grade level, anything. No one is so supreme that they can't walk 10 feet to dispose of their dinner. The Dining Commons staff is not compiled of waiters and waitresses – if they were – you would be giving them extra compensation for what they do. Nice and easy: if YOU select it – if YOU eat it – then YOU chuck it.

Lesson 3: Use the breakdown lane for stopping. Everybody has places to go, people to see and objectives in mind as they race through the concourse of the Campus Center day after day. Yet, some people with more time on their hands and no classes to go to can afford the luxury of hanging around for a bit. Hanging around and talking to friends you cross paths with is great. Who doesn't like to catch up on old times, but is it really necessary that you stop to talk in a jumble right in the middle of the walk way? I know you all know what I'm talking about: that pile of "Oh My God!" and "yeah, so that party last night." in front of the elevator bay that we all have to "excuse me" and force our ways through to reach the finish line. There are tables set up that people stop for information from, that we have to make room for as well as the swarms of people whizzing through in the gaps between classes. If you want to have a chit-chat, see those pretty maroon couches? They're calling your name. Keep the side conversations as just that – on the side.

"Who doesn't like to catch up on old times, but is it really necessary that you stop to talk in a jumble right in the middle of the walk way?"

Lesson 4: If you like yelling that much, than be a cheerleader. Being that the average age of a UMass student is in the late teens or early twenties, it's alarming how many students are suffering from hearing loss. I mean they must be, since they feel the need to scream at one another when they're two feet apart. It's great that you're enthusiastic about your stories and recaps of the weekend events, but when you're screaming and bouncing in your seats to someone who is but an arms length away, you have to know that it's disruptive and uncivilized. We're glad that you're happy, but aside from the person you're talking to, nobody else cares to hear what you're talking about.

Lesson 5: Doo-doo the right thing. As a fellow Collegian Columnist reflected on recently, the bathroom behavior of the student body is appalling. However, in my experience as an RA in a tower, I know it goes way beyond people not flushing the toilets. Yes, flushing is a must, but there are some more extreme activities of the potty persuasion that occur that are unthinkable. For instance, it's not that uncommon at UMass for students to go to the bathroom in the hallway of dorms, and yes I'm talking about #2. The hallway. Aside from "what-the-hell-is-wrong-with-you?" being my first question, I would also have to ask how could you even feel comfortable enough to do that in a public space like that in the first place? Also, students have created a new trend in some dorms: instead of going up or downstairs to use the bathroom if they don't live on the floor with their gender's, they simply take the trash barrel from the bathroom and pee in it in the laundry room instead. And although it's easy to point the finger directly at males, evidence points to females doing it just as much.

These lessons are by far not the solution to ignorance, but they are some of the easiest to solve simply by everyone being aware of the fact that they are not the only people that exist on this campus. Etiquette in so many ways is just using your common sense to show respect – for yourself as well as for others. One of the easiest lessons in life to follow is to do unto others as you would have them do unto you. And from what I can see, it's a lesson I think more people need to be taking seriously.

Lindsey Elder is a Collegian Columnist.

Church still struggling with responsibilities

LAMOTHE

At the standing-room-only Boston Globe Editor Martin Baron's lecture last week in Memorial Hall, I watched a sequence unfold with a calamitous combination of amazement and disbelief.

One of the last people to ask Baron questions was a priest. As the man asked question after question, he grew more and more heated with Baron – dismissively answering each. He continued to pick on the topic of investigative reporting, and a report on incidences in the Catholic Church one that students had shown up in public records as accounts. He thought that the priests deserved more privacy than The Globe had given them, regardless of any trends affecting normal American people.

I watched the priest get ruder and ruder as Baron kept firm in his arguments one at a time. My amazement probably was higher than that of everyone else in the room because I recognized the priest. I recognized him because when I was five he was the priest in my home parish. My amusement increased. The longer he asked questions, the less and less he looked like the well-disciplined priest from my childhood and the more he looked like an angry, bitter old man.

The transformation of that priest mirrors the transformation of the Catholic Church. When there were no scandals to deal with and everything was swept under a rug, the Church was a pillar of stability. People trusted the Church and sought it for its dependability.

Then it all came crumbling down when the lying and cover-ups caught up, and the Catholic Church hierarchy became an angry, bitter old man. Since that time, the Church has continued to ignore many of the problems and to be confrontational when the problems are exposed.

The Church, obviously, should have faced up to their problems long ago – long before courts documents had to be unsealed or lawsuits had to be filed.

On the highest levels they still haven't. The Vatican recently shot down a proposal that United States bishops had approved to address sexual abuses within the Church. In a letter made available on Thursday, church leaders in Rome objected to the U.S. bishops' plan mainly because it eliminated a statute of limitations to charges and because it required that accusations be turned over to police immediately.

Many expected the resolution to fail at the Vatican, but that still does not solve the problem. Instead of fixing a problem or making changes to the resolution as it was, the Vatican scrapped a plan that had some teeth to it and started over. Where the Pope could have used the initiative taken by American bishops in June at their conference in Dallas and used it as a positive step towards solving a disastrous problem, he and other leaders continue to waffle on policy matters, rather than fixing the problem.

According to CNN.com, the Pope is hung up on several parts of the bishops' resolution that are "difficult to reconcile with the universal law of the church."

This is unfortunate because it gives the Catholic Church the same bad rap that it has always had – that it's out of touch, left behind in a changing world. The Pope has approved the formation of a joint commission of Vatican officials and Catholic bishops to formulate policy to deal with American Catholic priests accused of sexual abuses. But will the new policy that they develop have the same kind of muscle to it that the one formed in June did?

It's doubtful. The conflicts that the Pope sees with the policy already developed are in his "universal law" argument, an argument that will most likely sabotage the next policy of any kind of strength.

The original policy gave people hope because it demanded accountability and because it made it where abusers could not hide behind who they were. Pedophiles should be held accountable. Legitimate accusations should be forwarded to police forces immediately and the accusations should be investigated for merit. The original resolution drafted by American bishops addressed these concerns.

The only hope for the Church now is that the joint commission realizes this when they hash out their disagreements and formulate a policy. A Band-aid will not work – the solution needs to be something more drastic.

If "universal law" must be satisfied, so must the common good of the common people involved. There is no other way to solve the problem in a responsible manner that is quick enough to prevent pedophiles from striking other unsuspecting children.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

© The State. Dist. by UFS and NEA Inc.

WRITE FOR ED/OP

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

One of the few critical flaws in our bi-partisan political system is that the checks and balances of dueling ideologies can be overrun by nationalistic fervor and propaganda. I am afraid that Congressional approval of unilateral military action against Iraq is an example of the Democrats yielding to this fervor. It would be in the best interest of our nation – and the world – if the Democrats had stood united against the forces of the President and Republican Party.

Any able-minded individual can see the political motivation behind a pre-emptive attack on Iraq, and it is the political responsibility of the democratically controlled senate to block such blatant partisanship.

Instead, we witnessed an ill-advised split in the Democratic Party, aimed to win voter favor on Nov. 5, but more likely to backfire by creating a war that will be a political victory only for George W. Bush.

It was the thinking of Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., that by backing the resolution to give the president powers of war in Iraq, the Democrats could then shift the agenda to the failing economy in time for the November elections. Unfortunately, Daschle did not realize that the Congressional resolution is only the first step in a series of war-drum-beating moves by the GOP. With Congress on board, the media will now shift its attention to a possible U.N. resolution, and after that, the impending war.

Instead of gaining political clout by looking like they are protecting America, the Democrats have split themselves virtually in half. Daschle, the Senate majority leader and possible Democratic presidential candidate, has only proven his readiness to sell himself out for potential political gain and his inability to control the other Senate Democrats.

Continuing their passiveness in the name of "national security" and acting as if there is an "imminent danger" from Iraq is only validating GOP nonsense. I can only hope that the Democrats have not lost their last chance. If the GOP is given control over the House and Senate in November, George Bush will have a blank check to impose on the world his conservative agenda that is currently tempered by the Democratic majority.

Mike Conlow
UMass student

To the editor:

In response to Yousef Munayyer's recent columns advocating divestment in Israel: Economic pressure is useful in clear cut cases of right and wrong, such as the South Africa campaign years ago. However, the Israeli-Palestinian crises is entirely too complicated to simply blame Israel as Mr. Munayyer suggests.

I have followed his articles, and while he claims that "ignorance is one of the greatest evils that need to be confronted when discussing the conflict in Palestine," he has repeatedly ignored some of the most crucial issues in his case against Israel. Before supporting divestment, I think we must consider the following:

In regards to his complaints of Israel's un-democratic practices, remember that Israel was originally a true democracy, and offered full citizenship to its Arab/Islamic population. However the only reason for the loss of rights is because of the ongoing terrorist attacks. As we Americans have compromised our First and Fourth Amendment freedoms since 9/11, the Israelis have it exponentially worse. The nation is practically in a state of martial law not because of blind hatred, but because the terrorists have exploited the nations freedoms to such an extent. Mr. Munayyer can write however many articles he likes about how un-democratic Israel is, but it won't change the fact that Israel is still light years ahead of any Arab nation in human rights, government participation, and standard of living.

He has also stresses the need for an identity and national home for those in the Gaza and West Bank, but forgets that there is already a Palestinian state, Jordan. Palestine is technically a synonym for the British mandate of the collapsed Ottoman Empire Post WWI (what is now Israel, the territories, and Jordan), but Jordan's and Israel's independence and common use has changed the meaning of the word. The Arabs living in Israel and the occupied territories share an identical culture, religion, and history to the residents of Jordan.

Yousef is perhaps the first to criticize Israel's tactics, but ignores that the Palestinian militants target civilians. They're not using legitimate guerilla warfare or even kamikaze attacking military targets; they're murdering women and children. The Israeli army raids the occupied territories in response, perhaps brutally, but their objective is military targets; the civilians are collateral damage. That's quite a big difference.

Finally, we need to remember why Israel occupied the Gaza and West bank to begin with. Could it be because they were attacked repeatedly by Arab coalitions, and took the land to reduce their vulnerability? The reason why they haven't been returned yet is because of terrorist attacks. It is global policy not to negotiate with them, and Israel simply returning the land now would send a dangerous message around the world.

So back to divestment: Is the U.S. position out of line? It doesn't seem like it to me. The U.S. is not only the biggest supporter of Israel; it's also the largest financial contributor in the world to Palestine. So if the U.S. supports its ally, funds the refugees, criticizes human rights violations, and mediates peace conferences, do we really have the wrong approach?

So unless Mr. Munayyer can somehow disprove the above facts with more than just dogmatic speeches on oppression and irrelevant comparisons to other nations, I don't see any reason not to support Israel 100 percent.

Kyle Anderson
UMass student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 10.29.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Latest horror flick near sinking

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

GHOST SHIP
Directed by Steve Beck
Starring Julianna Margulies & Gabriel Byrne
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Ghost Ship opens with an inspired bit of Grand Guignol black comedy. As the opening credits, as pink and curly as anything from a Doris Day movie, unspool over 60s "Love Boat"-esque theme music, a luxury ocean liner floats through the icy waters of the Northern Atlantic. Revelers, all glam and elegant in tuxedoes and evening gowns, dance and toast champagne on the deck. An anonymous hand yanks down a level and a large steel cable goes slicing across the deck, pulling taut while dripping a viscous red fluid. The high society partiers stand stock still, gazes of shock plastered on their faces. Then they all crumble to the ground – in pieces. Arms, torsos, heads – they all slowly tumble to the ground until the entire deck resembles a gory 3-D waiting to be assembled.

That's a nifty (if gruesome) prologue to kick off a horror movie, but Ghost Ship never lives up to the promise of its opener. The movie is a joyless, mechanical, proficiently made slice of Halloween-season hokum. It would be a great lie to say the movie is horrible, but it never rises above the limited area of its conventions. Ghost Ship is a generic shipload of cliches that never builds tension and, as a result, never generates any actual fear.

The crew of the ship Arctic Warrior, led by Gabriel Byrne's Capt. Murphy and co-owned by the salty, Sigourney Weaver-style heroine Epps (ex-"ER" star

Turn to GHOST SHIP, page 6

grade C

Jack-o-lantern display extended three days

PROVIDENCE, R.I. – The Wetlands Lake at the Roger Williams Park Zoo makes for a nice woodland area. Come autumn, the trees around it have turned their bright colors of oranges, reds and golds. The still waters of the lake itself stretch into the horizon, trimmed on the opposite bank, again, by more fall foliage. When darkness falls, however, the lake and its surroundings too blacken, and it becomes an painter's dark, blank canvas, waiting for that one special time each year when artists will incorporate its natural beauty with the splendor of lighting, music and, above all, jack-o-lanterns.

Yes, jack-o-lanterns – about 20 of them setting on posts stuck into the lake floor and reaching towards the clear sky above – for the Wetlands Lake serves as one of the initial impressive scenes set up at the annual Jack-o-lantern Spectacular, held for its second year on the zoo's grounds. Enormous trees lined with small sugar pumpkins, hillsides filled with ablaze jack-o-lanterns and gigantic Big Mack and Atlantic Giant pumpkins (20 of them exceeding 500 lbs.) intractably designed make up some of the other speckles lining this three-acre woodland trail.

With 80,000 guests coming to view these hollowed-out gourds last year and crowds this year looking to exceed even those numbers, the event has now been extended for three extra days (through Sunday, Nov. 3) to incorporate a bonus weekend featuring a newly designed Veteran's Day tribute area. To appease some of the event's popularity, organizers – including John Reckner, a mailman from Oxford, Mass, whose preliminary vision it was to host such an event and who began the spectacular 14 years ago in his hometown – plan also to expand upon the scenes of "Endangered Species," "The Wild West" and "The Laughing Place" for these extra days, making the spectacular house more jack-o-lanterns at one time than it has ever done before.

The spectacular is open from 6 to 11 p.m. nightly, with its last entry at 10 p.m. Admission costs $10 for adults, $7 for children ages three to 12 and $8 for seniors. Children under three are free. The event's proceeds benefit the Roger Williams Park Zoo, owned and operated by the City of Providence and supported by the Rhode Island Zoological Society and set approximately an hour's drive from Boston.

– Jennifer Eastwood

COURTESY ROGER WILLIAMS PARK ZOO

THE WETLANDS LAKE AT THE ROGER WILLIAMS PARK ZOO SHOWCASES SOME OF THE CARVED PUMPKINS OF THE JACK-O-LANTERN SPECTACULAR.

Enchanting melodies charm the FAC

Small audience treated to UMass Wind Ensemble

By Gretchen Keller
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The University of Massachusetts Wind Ensemble deserved a better audience than the one attending the concert this past Wednesday. Many of the seats were filled with ensemble players as they shuffled back and forth from audience to stage when the pieces changed. The entire night felt more like a dress rehearsal than a concert, except for the excellent performance occurring onstage.

The concert began with Shostakovich's Festival Overture Op. 96, conducted by Steven Dennis Bodner, the director of bands at UMass. This piece was originally scheduled for Lawrence Harper, who instead conducted Richard Wagner's (1813-1883) Huldigungsmarsch (1864), written for King Ludwig II of Bavaria.

The Festival Overture is a fast-paced piece in which small mistakes could easily snowball into disaster. As the winds scurried along with the notes and the horns punched out sounds at well-timed intervals, the Ensemble as a whole played a tight piece. The recapitulation was a well-controlled transition, and in an instant, the audience experienced a change from hurry to grandeur. All of the instruments sang out, in tune, to the theme of the beginning of the piece.

Carl Orff's Carmina Burana was next on the list and proved an ambitious piece, conducted by guest conductor Lawrence Harper from Carroll College in Waukesha, Wis. The opening movement, O Fortuna, was a brilliant blast of sound, and the Ensemble was able to show off its dynamic abilities. However, while dynamic abilities were impressive, the rhythm in many of the movements became mottled and unclear. A noticeable tension between sections became apparent, as the tempo often turned into a source of conflict. The piece still held together nicely under the direction of Harper, but not without spectators noticing it was work to do so.

Harper arrived a week before the concert to work with the Ensemble, which had been prepped by Holmes and Bodner. He remarked at the "high standard of performance" and that the Ensemble was "prepared as you would expect a professional ensemble to be and were able to adapt to new ideas very quickly." Although Harper has not been invited to return at this time, he expressed an eager willingness to do so if asked to conduct again.

The transcription of the piece fit well with the Wind Ensemble. Carmina Burana is a work originally written for chorus and orchestra, but the Ensemble was able to capture the music without the need of strings or voices.

There were some program changes. Jeffrey Holmes, who was planning on conducting William Schuman's George Washington Bridge, changed the schedule and conducted Sea Songs by Ralph Vaughan Williams. Williams was a British composer who lived from 1872 to 1958. The piece is a typical English maritime piece, likened to his contemporary, Peter Warlock's Capriol Suite. Wagner's Huldigungsmarsch and Williams' Sea Songs fit well together in the evolved program. Huldigungsmarsch was unsurprisingly very march-like, and both pieces well suited the wind ensemble.

The excitement of the evening was Jeffrey Holmes' piece, Passage, which was commissioned in 1988 by the Lynnfield, Mass. Arts Council in honor of deceased teacher and friend Bob Ayasse.

Passage was a unique combination of classical sound with jazz, and Holmes shaped the music to accompany memories he had of his friend, Ayasse. The piece began with the Ensemble playing smooth, swelling, mournful notes that gave way to a sextet strategically clumped on the left side of the stage. The sextet, a soprano saxophone, euphonium, piano, upright bass, vibes and drums, sauntered in with a swinging tune amidst the occasional support by the rest of the Ensemble. Holmes said the piece has not yet been recorded for public distribution, yet it was recorded on Wednesday night.

The concert ended with another surprise, "Jupiter" from Holst's The Planets. The piece was played sweetly, when appropriate, but the bringer of jollity was lacking enthusiasm and a more engaging tempo. Toward the end, the Ensemble did pick up the pace, as well as the dynamic level, to end the piece with force.

COURTESY MASS DEPARTMENT PIC

STUDENTS WERE AMONG THE PERFORMERS AT THE WIND ENSEMBLE & SYMPHONY BAND CONCERT HELD ON WEDNESDAY IN THE FINE ARTS CENTER.

Concert ticket prices steadily on the rise, leaving those to question, "Just who's scalping who?"

Easily one of the most pleasurable experiences for any music fan is basking in the joy of a great concert.

Unfortunately, affording concert tickets as of late has been an increasing struggle for consumers.

According to trade industry concert bible Pollstar, the Top 50 tours in North America grossed $538.2 million during the first half of 2002. That is up $30 million, or about 17 percent, over 2001's $508.8 million for the same period. While the jump is substantial, the total is still well below the record $579.3 million generated in the first half of 2000.

Sounding Off with Nick Markantonatos

These statistics indicate a terrible pattern: the disconcerting trend of grossing more moles from fewer people continues. The Top 50 tours sold a combined 10.6 million tickets. That's down 300,000 seats or about 3 percent, from last year and way below 2000's figure of 12.9 million tickets.

This is all due to the skyrocketing prices of concert tickets. The average ticket price for the Top 50 Tours was a steep $50.81, which is up $4.12 or about 11.3 percent over last mid-year's figure of $46.69. According to Pollstar, concert prices have more than doubled since 1991.

Paul McCartney earned this mid-year's top tour with a $52.8 million gross that was aided by an average ticket price of nearly $150. That was the highest of any act in the Top 50, not counting the handful of dates done by classical superstar Andrea Bocelli and his $132 average ticket. Last year's top price, the Elton John/Billy Joel package, finished second at $44.4 million with an average ticket price of inflated $104.

It is certainly worth noting the No. 7 ranked tour by Green Day/blink 182 sold by far the most tickets of any act in the Top 50. Their total of $622,950 was generated with just 43 shows and an average ticket price of $31.56, the lowest of any act in the Top 10.

These figures show a sad, sad tale, rising ticket prices are playing a major factor in pushing a growing number of consumers away from the concert business. A substantial army of fans will still pay the rate for great seats to see their superstar idols. But one has to wonder where the millions of ticket buyers the industry lost since 2000 have gone. Record labels blame online piracy for the drop in CD prices, but

Turn to SOUNDING OFF page 7

Viennese symphony music to reach Fine Arts Center

By Gretchen Keller
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Take a trip to 18th Century Vienna with the University of Massachusetts Orchestra, directed by Lanfranco Marcelletti, Jr. The first orchestra concert of the school year will play this Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

Marcelletti is a visiting associate professor in the UMass Music department. Arriving from Amherst College in 2001 to direct the orchestra, he is a graduate from the Yale School of Music, an assistant conductor for the Glimmerglass Opera Festival, director of the Francesean Chamber Orchestra and a first prize-winner in the 1998 Conducting Competition of Latin-American Conductors. Marcelletti has conducted in Chile, Argentina and Brazil and was the former conductor of the Yale and Norwalk Symphonies before he went to Amherst College. Under his direction up at Amherst, the orchestra doubled in size and its funding increased considerably.

The orchestra will play Beethoven's Symphony #1, Ironical, Glinka's overture to Russian and Ludmilla and Mozart's Sinfonia Concert ante K297B. Beethoven (1770-1827) wrote his third symphony in 1803 in honor of Napoleon Bonaparte, who he admired for destroying royalty in France. He would have named the symphony the "Bonaparte Symphony" had Napoleon not crowned himself Emperor in 1804, which infuriated Beethoven. The force and power of the Eroica Symphony, unheard at the time, is said to be one of the first pieces of the Romantic Period.

Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka (1804-1857) was a Russian composer who wrote the opera Russia and Ludmilla in 1842. This opera, with a happy ending, is the musical form of the fairy-tale poem written by the Russian poet, Aleksander Pushkin. Wednesday night's concert contains only the opera's overture.

Mozart's Sinfonia Concert ante K297B (1778) will feature four faculty members from the Department of Music: Laura Klock will play French horn, Michael Sussman will play the clarinet, Stephen Walt will play the bassoon and Fredric Cohen will play the oboe.

Tickets cost $5 for students, children under 18 and senior citizens, and $10 for the general public. Call the Fine Arts Center box office at 413-545-2511 for more information.

■ Ghost Ship

continued from page 5

Julianna Margulies) is approached by strangely grim weather pilot Ferriman (Desmond Herrington, laying on the stone-faced exactitude a little too thickly) to help find a mysterious boat that has been drifting off the coast of Alaska, in the Bering Strait, for a few days. According to international maritime law, anything floating in international waters can be seized by whoever finds it. The crew goes off on a mission to collect its new bounty.

They board the rusted, hulking remains of the Antonia Grazza, an ocean liner that disappeared mysteriously in 1962. Every salvager has been looking for the Holy Grail of salvages, and now Murphy and his team have now found it. They never once stop the question how a ship that disappeared from the North Atlantic and has reappeared, all these years later, in the waters of the North Pacific.

It's no surprise bad things will happen to the crew, in inverse order to how the cast is billed. And it's no surprise the cast is comprised of a multiethnic, one-dimensional crew of types, rather than people. Each crewmember is supposed to be tempted by what they desire most, but Ghost Ship never has the foresight to actually set up these temptations clearly. When Greer (Isaiah Washington), the first mate, is tempted by the spirit of a seductive Italian chanteuse, we never believe it for a moment. After all, Greer talked about his impending marriage earlier in the movie and is the first one to get freaked out by the ship - why would he be so quickly seduced by a ghost?

So it goes throughout the movie. The introduction of crates of gold bars is nothing but a ploy of the plot, but then the characters are nothing but vessels for the plot. Since this is a Warner/Dark Castle co-production, the set design has a certain morbid majesty. The rotting walls have the disquieting, eerie effect of placing in a world that seems to have been adrift for 40 years. Gale Tattersall's cinematography captures the dank, dark, rotten feel of the boat. The Dark Castle movies (including the cool B-movie horrors of House on Haunted Hill and the jackhammer-edited Thirteen Ghosts) have always had great technical effects; what they never had were truly good scripts (that was so true of Thirteen Ghosts, with its spectacular set and make-up effects and its horrid screenplay.)

Ghost Ship is almost too willing to sail through the waters of cliche. There is never any attempt on the part of screenwriters Mark Hanlon and John Pogue (whose credits include, quite disturbingly, Rollerball and The Skulls) and director Steve Beck to transcend the inherent staleness of the material. Beck tones down the migraine-inducing editing he employed for Thirteen Ghosts, and (despite the ghastly, ghoulish, witty cold open) the gore. But except for the prologue and a violent montage telling the story of what happened to the ship backed with a sleek techno tune, nothing on this ship is very memorable.

Byrne lends Murphy some nice, weary gravitas, but the role peters out far too quickly. Beck gets some nice work from young Emily Browning as the ghost of a little girl trying to help the salvagers. The remainder of the cast and crew is technically fine, but they lack feeling for the material. Ghost Ship is limp, a slack genre exercise designed to ring a few bucks out for Halloween weekend. It's not wise to steer a big boat through such shallow waters. C (Warner Bros; rated R for strong violence/gore, language and sexuality; 89 min.)

Classic Hepburn film remade

New version short on character development

By Lindsay Lisenby
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE TRUTH ABOUT CHARLIE
Directed by Jonathan Demme
Starring Thandie Newton and Mark Wahlberg
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

What happens when Hollywood runs out of new and interesting ways to get people packed into movie theaters? They remount an old classic, of course. In this particular case, Jonathan Demme, popular for his own contemporary classics such as The Silence of the Lambs and Philadelphia, directs a cast of characters not quite ready for Jill Andrea Hepburn and Cary Grant's romantic and comedic shoes, despite their lack of effort.

In the first half hour of the film, the plot dances around the basic "shady, foreign, rich man with a secret gets thrown off a train and everyone wants his money" routine where everyone's a suspect, everyone has his or her own agenda, and no one is who they seem. This can be a very successful formula if there are some early car chases, a few suspenseful encounters or at least some witty dialogue between the romantic leads, but yet I found myself waiting for it to pick up the pace and get better.

Fortunately for everyone involved, it did, right about the time when a hypochondriac in a blue bathrobe administers himself acupuncture while checking his blood pressure. From that point on, it seemed as though the energy energized, the comedy and mystery worked together and the plot twists centered to bring a very interesting and potentially good film that by the closing credits, had broken free from all serious genre cliches. One could compare the ending more to a punch line than a conclusion, and for that alone it was worth the trip.

The downfalls came with the characters, namely the leads played by Thandie Newton and Mark Wahlberg. Unfortunately for Demme and his crew, the actors never quite lift their characters off the ground. Regina Lambert, the trophy wife turned widow turned suspect turned heroine is played by Newton, a virtual newcomer who first worked with Demme in his 1998 film Beloved. She plays the role with some grace but little charm and is looked upon to carry the entire film with no help from Wahlberg, who gives a performance more like The Big Hit than it is Three Kings or Boogie Nights.

I've seen wet napkins with more range of expression than Wahlberg provides for his character Josh Peters. His attempts at boy smile and contrasting devilishly pointed eyebrows do nothing to win over an audience. Because every time he opens his mouth, his game is completely unconvincing. Newton had more chemistry with the female French Commandant and the evasive soldier Lola than she ever did with Wahlberg. When Josh finally gets around to professing his love for "Reggie" spectators are left thinking, "Yeah right, buddy, sure you love her."

As for the rest of the cast, they are an

ACTORS LEADING AS The Truth About Charlie DO NOT DO JUSTICE TO THE ORIGINAL ROLES OF AUDREY HEPBURN AND CARY GRANT IN Charade

all their eccentric glory, an unexpected delight. Where Newton and Wahlberg make an effort to be a serious and failed, this band of brigands and thieves know their role of oddity and play it well. From the scarred, ex-military lesbian to the monotonic expressionless American agent played by Tim Robbins, the idiosyncrasies rarely given to supporting characters are brought to life. Too bad they aren't given enough power to range over the entire film.

Those who can deal with a sophisticated, old-school meets new wave mystery with lots of quirks, but no soul will find The Truth About Charlie just right. Those who can get past the motion sickness (as the film was shot entirely with a hand held camera) will love it - right down to the 360-degree rotations and bumps running sequences. Most of all, those who love all the fun things Demme Does Paris has to offer - deception, secret international agencies no one has ever heard of, stolen money, cigarette smoking investigators, unnecessary black berets, random French subtitles, crazy long lost mothers, Ana Karina cameos and happy endings for everyone - will find it the perfect film to rent. C+
(Universal Studios; rated PG-13 for some violence and sexual content/nudity.)

grade C+

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily

and
OCMP
The Off-Campus Meal Plan
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants

■ Sounding Off

continued from page 5

what is their excuse for the sharp drop in concert-goers?

It's no big secret the big bucks in the music industry are made on tour. But charging hundreds of dollars for a front row seat to see even a legend is asking for a bit much.

The watershed year in which the bass concert-pricing model changed may have been 1994. That was the year top acts like Pink Floyd and the Rolling Stones started charging top prices for premium "gold circle" seats, a policy that had previously been confined to the likes of Frank Sinatra.

Top Floyd tickets rose to a then unheard-of $65; that same year the Eagles became the first rock act to charge more than $100.

This year, Aerosmith are asking fans to shell out $134.50 for front row seats, and The Rolling Stones are charging whopping $350. In the past few years, even ticket prices for 'N Sync shows have passed the $100 mark.

It should be noted too, that ticket prices aren't the only price offenders. Interact, TicketBastard and delivery service fees can add 25 percent or more to the base price.

Accelerating the process is the concert promotion scene, also changing and consolidating in fewer and fewer hands.

The Texas-based promotion company Clear Channel Entertainment (formerly SFX), which also operates radio stations and venues, now owns an estimated 80 to 85 percent of the U.S. concert market.

Often, Clear Channel will buy up whole tours, dangling big-money bait in front of artists who know the costs will have to be passed on to consumers.

Another major problem in the concert business also lingers. Many of the concert industry's most bankable acts are rapidly nearing retirement age, and one of the greatest concerns for talent buys is who will replace them. Far too many of the acts that broke big in the 80s and 90s have already faded from the scene.

But all is not bad news. For the first time in quite a while, a handful of new acts appear to have the talent to be career-artists that could still be touring forces in a decade.

A whole new generation of singer-songwriters has burst on the scene. John Mayer, Alicia Keys, Norah Jones, Michelle Branch and Ryan Adams are a few of the acts that have shown a growing ability to sell tickets amid gushing media attention.

And with acts like The Strokes, The Hives, The White Stripes, Andrew W.K. and Avril Lavigne creating a buzz, the rock world hasn't been shaken this way in quite some time.

But who's to say any of these acts aren't passe in a few years, or even in one? A boatload of positive press doesn't always translate into multi-platinum sales. If they do indeed fade, the concert stage will be an empty one. After all, the Stones can't keep on rolling forever.

Nikolas Markantonatos is a Collegian Columnist.

Making people look good since 1984
Patrick & Company
DISTINCTIVE HAIR STYLING FOR MEN AND WOMEN
104 Russell Street, Route 9, Elmwood Shops, Hadley, MA APPOINTMENTS or WALK-IN 413.586.7477

STUDENT TRAVEL
punk rock

(Find your rhythm.)
44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> ON THE STREET

Announcing Our New Amherst Site!
27 Pray Street - off Triangle Street
Now Open!
Tapestry Health provides:
• Emergency Contraception
• Pregnancy Testing
• HIV/STI Testing
• Breast Exams
• Birth Control
• Pap Tests
TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential Family Planning Services Since 1973
8 Locations in Western Massachusetts
1-800-696-7752 www.tapestryhealth.org

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888

Former Sox catcher named head of Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) – The Cleveland Indians will make Eric Wedge the youngest manager in the majors, a team source told The Associated Press on Monday.

The 34-year-old Wedge, who managed Cleveland's Triple-A team in Buffalo the past two seasons, will be introduced at a news conference Tuesday at Jacobs Field, said the source, speaking on the condition of anonymity.

Wedge was chosen over Joel Skinner, the club's former third-base coach who managed the Indians for 76 games last season after Charlie Manuel was fired.

Wedge will be younger than two of his players: Ellis Burks (38) and Omar Vizquel (35). Pittsburgh's Lloyd McClendon, who is 43, had been the youngest manager in the majors.

FOOTBALL

IRVING, Texas (AP) – Emmitt Smith had a season-high 109 yards on 24 carries to set the NFL career rushing record with 16,743 yards, passing the late Walter Payton.

He extended his NFL record for rushing touchdowns to 150 in Dallas' 17-14 loss to Seattle.

IRVING, Texas (AP) – Seattle quarterback Trent Dilfer will miss the rest of the season after tearing his right Achilles' tendon during the 17-14 win over Dallas. He will have surgery Monday.

Meanwhile, Tampa Bay defensive end Anthony McFarland broke his right wrist in an on-field collision, and Tennessee cornerback Dainon Sidney broke his left forearm.

GOLF

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) – Jonathan Byrd had a 9-under 63 to win the Buick Challenge and become the 17th first-time winner on the PGA Tour this year. He finished at 27-under 261.

David Toms missed an 18-foot birdie putt on the final hole to force a playoff, shot a 65 and ended a shot behind. Phil Mickelson closed with a 63 to finish third at 265.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) – Tom Watson shot a 5-under 67 and beat Gil Morgan by two strokes to win the Senior Tour Championship, his first victory of the year on the Senior PGA Tour.

Hale Irwin had a 71 and was fourth, seven strokes behind Watson, but he became the first senior golfer to win $3 million in one season.

AUTO RACING

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) – Kurt Busch outran the competition and the weather, grabbing his second straight Winston Cup victory in the rain-shortened NAPA 500.

The race, scheduled for 325 laps at Atlanta Motor Speedway, ended under a yellow flag on lap 248.

Tony Stewart was fourth, and increased his lead in the championship battle to 146 points over Mark Martin with only three races remaining.

SURFERS PARADISE, Australia (AP) – Rookie Mario Dominguez won the rain-shortened Honda Indy 300, which started with a major crash that sent two drivers to the hospital.

The event was stopped on the 40th lap because of a two-hour time limit. Patrick Carpentier was second.

After the starting line accident, Adrian Fernandez broke two vertebrae, and Tora Takagi had a broken pelvis and bruised hip. Both were released from the hospital.

SOCCER

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) – Aly Wagner and Cindy Parlow scored in the first half, leading the United States to a 3-0 victory over Mexico in the first round of the Women's Gold Cup.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

NEW YORK (AP) – Undefeated Notre Dame rose two spots to No. 4 in The Associated Press Top 25 and got its first No. 1 vote since 1997.

The top three teams didn't change: No. 1 Miami (7-0), No. 2 Oklahoma (7-0) and No. 3 Virginia Tech (8-0).

Compiled by The Associated Press.

■ Game Seven

continued from page 10

close to winning its first title. Bonds went 1-for-3 with a walk to close out one of the most dominant Series performances ever, yet it wasn't enough.

When it ended, Bonds walked down the dugout and picked up his glove. He walked back, tapped his son on the back and walked down the runway as the Angels celebrated on the field.

Lackey wasn't even with the Angels, stuck in Triple-A, when they went 6-14 for the worst start in team history. But with both staffs worn down, the 24-year-old righty gave Anaheim exactly what it needed with five innings of one-run ball.

Anderson, finally due to get the recognition he's always deserved, hit a three-run double off Livan Hernandez in the third for a 4-1 lead. The monkey mascot made a brief, early appearance on the video board to celebrate the moment, then sat back and let the sellout crowd of 44,598 bang their ThunderStix like crazy.

"Well, I just wanted to get into a situation where I'd be able to hit my pitch, not do too much," Anderson said.

Brendan Donnelly, Francisco Rodriguez and Troy Percival closed it for manager Mike Scioscia's bunch. Percival escaped a two-on, one-out jam for his third save of the Series.

"Unbelievable for us, for our fans," Percival said. "This team has worked as hard as any team ever. We deserve it."

And when it was over, Southern California, the land of celluloid stars, had just added a whole teamful of them while Hollywood luminaries Pierce Brosnan and John Travolta watched from the stands.

Before this year, the Angels were known mostly for heartbreak. Beloved owner Gene Autry never saw his team get this far before passing away, and it didn't look like these guys would do it, either, especially after finishing 41 games out of first place last season.

Somehow, the Angels pulled it together. They led the majors in hitting, overwhelmed the New York Yankees and Minnesota in the AL playoffs and then knocked out Bonds and Co.

"Somewhere here, Gene Autry is smiling right now," commissioner Bud Selig said as he presented the trophy.

Owned by The Walt Disney Co., the Angels are still for sale. Before then, though, they can certainly travel the three miles or so to Disneyland to enjoy this most improbable championship.

Bonds wound up 8-for-17 (.471) with four homers, a .700 on-base percentage and 1.294 slugging percentage.

Anaheim and the Giants combined for a record 85 runs and 21 homers.

The game might have been the last for San Francisco manager Dusty Baker in the Bay. There are growing indications he'll soon leave, possibly to take over the Chicago Cubs or Seattle.

Tears streamed down the face of Darren Baker, the 3-year-old bat boy son of the Giants' manager, as he was carried from the dugout by his father.

Anderson doubled in the third to make it 4-1, and Angels fans went wild. A little too much, maybe.

David Eckstein made up for a rare baserunning mistake in the first by leading off the third with a single and Darin Erstad also singled. Tim Salmon came up and Hernandez lost himself, hitting the Angels star in the right hand.

No outs, bases loaded. The at-bat of a lifetime for Anderson, drafted by the California Angels in 1990 and out of the postseason until this year.

Unsung despite a stellar career, Anderson got the hit that will put him in highlight reels for a long time, sending a line drive into the right-field corner that easily scored all three runners.

As Reggie Sanders tried to corral the ball along the low wall, an Anaheim fan got into the act, bopping the right fielder on the back with a pair of red ThunderSticks. There was no interference called, properly, although two security guards were soon standing in the area when Hernandez, who lost for the second time in the Series, was pulled.

Hernandez seemed uncomfortable from the start, constantly pawing at the mound while trying to find his control. He looked nothing like the MVP of the 1997 World Series for Florida and instead resembled the pitcher who tied for the NL lead in losses this season, which he did with 16.

A surprising lapse by Eckstein, who took off on Anderson's liner to center field and was doubled off, enabled Hernandez to overcome two walks in the first.

Hernandez was not so lucky the next inning when he walked Scott Spiezio with two outs and Benjie Molina followed with a double that tied it at one.

Molina added another double, and the hits were his way of honoring his father who was far away. Earlier Sunday, former amateur outfielder Benjamin Molina Santana was in Puerto Rico, where he was inducted into the island's hall of fame.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the second on singles by Benito Santiago and J.T. Snow and a sacrifice fly by Sanders.

ANAHEIM ANGELS' TROY GLAUS, LEFT, AND SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS' BENITO SANTIAGO WATCH GLAUS'S TWO-RUN DOUBLE DURING THE EIGHTH INNING OF GAME 6 OF THE WORLD SERIES.

GERALDINE LINDSEY/COLLEGIAN

SARAH BOHONOWICZ'S GOAL WAS NOT ENOUGH FOR UMASS TO TRUMP TEMPLE ON SUNDAY.

■ split

continued from page 10

In the opening game of the weekend, Monaco lent a helping hand in the first goal as well. Monaco and senior Sue Jackson set up the corner for senior Sarah Bohonowicz, who found the back of the cage. Bohonowicz's goal at 6:01 gave UMass the early 1-0 lead. Monaco and Jackson picked up assists on the play.

The score remained the same until the second half, when the Hawks came through with an answer. At the 46:56 mark, senior Kathy Sokalski scored from right in front of the cage to tie it up, 1-1.

With less than eight minutes to go, Monaco had a chance to win the game. With a smooth, soft hit, Monaco rolled the ball toward the net before it was redirected off two SJU defenders. The ball slipped by Hawk netminder Courtney Huff, for the decision-maker and the 2-1 win.

As for the goaltenders, Ashley Egland recorded four saves and gave up one goal. Huff had eight saves, but gave up one goal too many.

The Temple game was the same type of game, but with a different outcome.

With the contest tied 1-1 at the half, the Owl offense outscored the Minutewomen 2-1 in the second frame, giving the host a 3-2 win.

Egland had a stellar performance with nine saves defending the cage. For the offense, senior captain Erika Whiston and Monaco each had a goal in the match. Senior captain Stacey Blue and Jackson dished out assists Sunday.

"We didn't play particularly well," Shea said. "We are a great team when we keep it simple, but when we start to think we can dribble or do something, that's when we put ourselves in trouble."

Any trouble again this Saturday could cost them the season.

■ Lilly

continued from page 10

Blyler's fourth assist of the game tied a single-game record for assists, held jointly by Carolyn Micheel and Kristen Bowsher.

With the three points tied up, Coach Rudy rang the changes and with nine minutes remaining Conver and Bellini combined to set up freshman Kelly Summerhayes for her first career score.

Although pleased with the outcome, Coach Jim Rudy was not completely satisfied.

"The defense took too many touches at the back," he said. "Against a team [like Temple] who likes to pressurize to create strips, it put us into trouble."

The job was only half done and the 6-1 victory would have meant nothing if the Minutewomen had then slipped up against St. Joseph's on Sunday.

The Maroon and White dominated the game from the start and although it was a game that the Minutewomen were in charge of once Rayney Meisel had put them in front as early as the fifth minute, it was also a game that for long periods they didn't seem to want to win.

Bellini, Meisel and Lilly were combining effectively down the right flank and they carved out three good chances for Lilly in the opening 15 minutes, all of which were kept out by the Hawks goalie, senior Christy Ganc.

Although UMass was on top, it was not until the 44th minute that it could muster another effort on goal, when Blyler connected with a corner, but her tame header was straight at Ganc.

For the opening 15 minutes of the second half, the Hawks were on top and should have gotten back on level terms.

In the 51st minute, junior forward Michelle Ford found space on the edge of the box and looped a shot which beat Nigh, but hit the crossbar and went over.

From the resulting goal kick, UMass lost the ball and Nigh couldn't hold a tame shot from Ford, but luckily the ball spilled out of Nigh's arms for a corner and not into the net.

For all the possession UMass had enjoyed in the first half, it scored the second goal against the run of play. In the 61st minute a Hawks attack was broken up and Martha Conover burst down the right wing and floated a cross to the back post, where Meisel had time to control the ball before firing past Ganc for her second goal of the game.

The rest of the game followed a pattern similar to that of the first half, with UMass dominating but not being able to create clear-cut chances.

Lilly did score her fifth goal of the weekend with nine minutes remaining, as Blyler and Bellini combined on the left-hand edge of the Hawks' box and Bellini fed a diagonal ball left to right to Lilly who slotted the ball into the bottom left hand corner of the net.

Coach Rudy was obviously pleased with the two victories.

"Our goal this weekend was to get two wins so we had the chance to compete next weekend," Rudy said. "Now it's meaningful."

www.dailycollegian.com

ENERGY SAVING SPECIALS
NEW MODELS
MAXLITE energy
Money Isn't All You're Saving
Mini-Bulb
15 watt and 20 watt models to replace your 60 watt or 75 watt incandescent bulbs. Protective cover provides a traditional look. 101730, 101731
99¢
3-Way Spiral
15,20,23 watt spiral replaces 50,75,100 watt incandescent bulb. Lasts 9,000 hours! 101732
$1.49
Mini Spiral
2 - Pack
11 watt sprial replaces 40 watt incandescent bulb. 101735
$1.99
MicroMax-Quad
2 - Pack
15 watt quad replaces 60 watt incandescent bulb. 101734
$1.99
New Classic Lamps
Comes complete with 26 watt bulb to replace 100 watt incandescent fixture. Available in antique brass or satin nickel. 101737 101736
In partnership with:
Western Massachusetts Electric
The Northeast Utilities System
Just $9.99
AUBUCHON HARDWARE
Sale is effective at 5 convenient locations:
Easthampton, MA Greenfield, MA Turners Falls, MA
Hadley, MA Shelburne Falls, MA

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Josten's Ring Day Sale, University Store Fri 11/1 10-4PM, Sat11/2 10-6PM www.jostens.com 800-854-7404

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Easy $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888)923-[illegible] or visit [illegible]

AUTO FOR SALE

[illegible] Dodge Stratus [illegible] Hatchback [illegible] Condition [illegible] or BO 413-[illegible]

[illegible] Honda Civic [illegible] condition [illegible] hatchback.

AUTO FOR SALE

4-speed, Well-maintained. Reliable and fun! $1400 or best offer. 545-6614, leave message.

90 Honda Accord 4DR Red 127K At $3,000 549-4088 Dereck

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Aerobics Instructors wanted for on campus. Experience necessary. CPR [illegible]

[illegible] Make up to $500 /shift No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-2082 ext. [illegible]

EMPLOYMENT

1525

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR SALE

Massaversity of Untchusetts clothing mass-saversity.com

Tori Amos Tickets for sale. Nov. 19. TSongas Arena. Good seats. Best offer. Call Kevin 546-4640.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/ security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOM FOR RENT

In the Brook Townhouses 425/ NEG. On Bus line Patio Basement Washer/ Dryer No down payment NEC. – Just rent Call 413-896-6946

ROOM TO RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

2-3 bedroom apartment on Kellogg St.– Great location- uptown. Newly renovated. Front and back porch- Fall option. Call Schuyleroat 253-4643.

Large 4 bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

Sunderland 2 Bedroom Corner Unit ON BUS ROUTE $820

SUBLET

Utilities included available immediately 397-9912

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group- Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Save 50% off over 2 thousand hotel resorts Call Conard 584-5198

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

m 1-800-426-7710

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco,

TRAVEL

Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS / 3
3	NBSN
4	Fox Sports Network
5	PBS / 57
6	HSCN Cinema
7	WB / 20
8	UPN 38
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX / 61
11	ABC / 40
12	NBC / 22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN InfoChannel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN 2
18	LIVE-19
19	ESPN Classic
20	Travel-n-Living
21	CNN
22	CNN HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	Discovery Channel
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NASA
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	CNBC
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	CMT
38	USA
39	TNN
40	MTV
41	MTV2
42	VH-1
43	TNT
44	TBS
45	E! Entertainment
46	Sci-Fi Channel
47	Court TV
48	Nick at Nite
49	Comedy Central
50	Cartoon Network
51	Game Show Network
52	TV Land
53	FOX Family
54	Univision
55	Galavision
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
59	C-SPAN2
60	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days_____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open: 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents word per day - Non-student rate: 50 cents word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

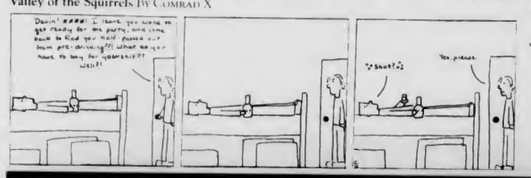
to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Fang Shy By Blake

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"Taking my time / I'm trying to leave the memories of you behind / I'm gonna be fine / As soon as I get your picture right out of my mind"

-Simple Plan

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 28	HIGH: 47 LOW: 21	HIGH: 44 LOW: 25

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) – You would prefer to be left to your own devices today. Unfortunately, a gap-toothed international man of mystery won't let you play with your "laser."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – An early start today will enable you to get more done – but much of it will be in a personal vein. Specifically, the pulmonary one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – You may have some trouble as the day opens gathering your forces. Later on, however, you're likely to enjoy more support than you need from unlikely sources. Let the homeless guy give you a "hand up" not a "hand out."

AQUARIUS (Jan 20. – Feb. 18) – You mustn't fool yourself into thinking that you deserve anything today. You're worthless. Seriously, you're pathetic.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – You're anticipating something that isn't likely to happen – but you can't win if you don't play. Quick pick me, my good man.

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) – You're likely to get what you want today – and then some. You sly dog, you.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – You're not likely to agree with many people today. But that's cause everyone's a moron except you and me. Don't worry; it'll be our little secret.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) – A disagreement between friends is no reason for the relationship to end. Now, catching your best friend in bed with your beta fish – that's a reason to end a friendship.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) – The only way you can show others exactly what you're after and what you expect is to show them. You sly dog, you.

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — You may be tempted to do something out of character today with the sole intent of attracting a new kind of attention. And you'll get plenty of it. Heh heh. If you know what I mean. Heh heh. And I think you do. Heh heh.

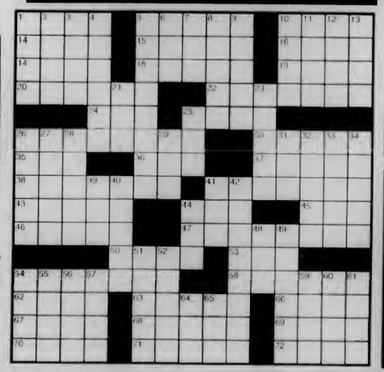
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) – You may feel as though you're "on the spot." But you missed it. The spot's about two feet to the left. That's it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) – You may find yourself caught between two conflicting desires today. On the one hand, you have your uncontrollable love for reading. On the other, your strange compulsion to gouge out your eyes.

www DOT daily collegian DOT com

ACROSS

1 Thespian's need
5 Gather
10 Lickety-split
14 Soldering tools
15 Pullman amenity
16 Earthen jar
17 Natural eyewash
18 Church table
19 "It's — move"
20 Astrology chart
22 Spring a leak
24 PC "brain"
25 Beseech
26 Gets a move on
30 Food hopping
35 Mouths, in zoology
36 Perino or Gabor
37 Hooded snake
38 To the point
41 Teahouse hostesses
43 From Bangkok
44 Nurses org.
45 Keats work
46 Show off
47 Fosters
50 Mope
53 Pond maker
54 Driving force
58 Gets soft
62 Intense rage
63 Kind of jacket
66 Think-tank output
67 Ice sheet
68 Diary product
69 Teases
70 Evergreen shrubs
71 Mountain curves
72 To be, to Henri



DOWN

1 Famous hotelier
2 Two-piece cookie
3 Tamper with dice
4 Caruso of opera
5 Counting devices
6 "Mad Max" Gibson
7 Museum contents
8 Beatle Ringo —
9 Shoulder gesture
10 Indy winner A.J. —
11 Felipe — of baseball
12 Mumble
13 Weight deduction
21 Gil's address
23 "My Cousin Vinny" star
25 Olympics chant
26 Out loud
27 Came up
28 Obsession
29 First lady?
31 — Gatos, Cal.
32 Dislike very much
33 Exchange
34 Paves the way
39 Cleveland NBAer
40 Klutzy
41 Veldt grazer
42 Tympanums
44 Aardvark prey
48 — de chuan
49 Referee's kin
51 Pound diversion
52 Exploiters
54 Up in the air
55 Obstinate one
56 Figurehead site
57 Needle holes
59 Blue-pencil
60 Corn Belt st.
61 Business-letter end
64 '— So Shy
65 Actress — Dawn Chong

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-30-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Macaroni & Cheese (vegetarian)

Chicken Nuggets

Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods (vegan)

Vegan Nuggets

DINNER

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Honey Garlic Roast Pork

Baked Stuffed Fish

Red Thai Tofu Steak (vegan)

Jamaican 3-Beans (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Andy Vogt
Photo Technician	Esther Dansig
Copy Editor	Glen Straub
Production Supervisor	Scott Ciruso
Production Staff	Sarah Lloyd, Elizabeth Bishop

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Hurricane Lilly

Four-goal outing kickstarts UMass

By Nick Wright
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts women's soccer team went into last weekend's games knowing they had to win both games just to have a shot at making the Atlantic 10 playoffs.

UMass	6
Temple	1
UMass	3
St. Joseph's	0

Back to back victories over Temple by a 6-1 score Friday and a 3-0 shutout of St. Joseph's on Sunday have given the Minutewomen more than just a shot – arguably the destiny of their season is now back in their own hands.

The Maroon and White sits just three points behind fourth place George Washington, who it hosts on Friday at 4 p.m. at Rudd Field. A victory over the Colonials and a similar result against Richmond on Sunday will see the Minutewomen sneak into fourth place and into the 2002 A-10 Championships.

Ironically, the 6-1 victory over Temple was the harder of the weekend's two games. It was the Owls who started brighter and it was no surprise when in the seventh minute they took the lead.

UMass goalie Kelly Nigh could only punch a corner to the edge of the penalty box and Temple smartly worked the ball round the back of the Minutewoman defense, and although Nigh managed to save the first shot from sophomore Christina McInaw, she could not hold it and the ball dropped to fellow sophomore forward Melissa Foles who calmly stroked the ball into the net.

The real story of the afternoon was about to unfold. In the 10th minute freshman Adan Bixler put Erin Lilly through on goal with a first time volleyed pass. Lilly struck the ball from 18 yards into the top left hand corner of the net giving Temple goalie Jackie Mauro no chance.

This was Lilly's first goal of the season and the first of four he would score that afternoon. This feat has earned her this week's Atlantic 10 Player of the Week. Similarly, this would prove to be the first of four assists that Bixler would contribute against the Owls.

Lilly's pace had been causing the Owls defense problems all afternoon and in the 32nd minute the Owls offside trap was caught out as Bixler and Lilly again combined for a goal. A carbon copy of the move which led to the first UMass goal ended with Lilly curling the ball into the bottom right hand corner from 20 yards.

Ten minutes later Lilly should have had her hat trick. A defensive error allowed an innocuous though ball from Bellini to reach her 20 yards from goal but she curled the ball inches wide of the right hand upright.

UMass came out the blocks quicker in the second half and it was only two minutes old when sophomore Erica Wideberg slammed a volley against the post after good work from freshman Tiffany Hamill and Lilly down the right wing.

The next ten minutes though belonged to Temple. Nigh's heroics in goal during this period would prompt Lilly to say, "Kelly came up huge to keep us up 2-1."

In the 55th minute, Nigh produced the first of two wonder saves. Samantha Verity worked the ball to her sister and fellow freshman Stephanie who hit a fierce shot, which looked like it was going to rocket into the bottom left hand corner, until Nigh stuck out a hand and pushed it away for a corner. Two minutes later, Nigh produced another great save, this time from the other Verity sister. The forward cut inside junior Michelle Luttati, but Nigh, this time diving to her left, kept the Minutewomen's lead intact.

This contribution from Nigh was all the more crucial considering UMass was about to start a scoring spree which would yield four goals in a little under 20 minutes.

In the 82nd minute, Bixler and Lilly both chased a long ball towards the Owls' penalty box. Their presence forced the Owls into a hurried clearance which struck Bixler and invitingly dropped to Lilly, who ran the ball into the penalty area unopposed and unceremoniously crashed the ball past a helpless Mauro to complete her hat trick.

Seven minutes later the Minutewomen put the game beyond doubt. Bellini chipped the ball forward to Bixler, who had the presence of mind and pace to accelerate away from her marker and toe-poke the ball past an outrushing Mauro to make the score 4-1.

With 15 minutes to go, Conver and Bixler combined to set up Lilly, who scored her fourth goal of the game to tie the school record, set by Nancy Feldman against Cortland on Oct. 11, 1980. With eight points, Lilly also tied Feldman's record for most points in a game.

Turn to LILLY, page 7

ERIN LILLY SCORED HER FIRST GOAL OF THE YEAR ON FRIDAY. SHE ALSO TALLIED HER NEXT THREE LATER IN THE GAME FOR A UMASS RECORD FOR GOALS IN A CONTEST.

Monaco leads UM in split

By Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Every team needs a clutch performer from time to time. When the games are on the line, this is the player expected by the team to come through in crunch time. Players like Larry Bird and Carlton Fisk became legends through their play in times of need. The Massachusetts field hockey team's Adrianne Monaco, a sophomore forward/midfielder, has started her own reputation as a clutch performer.

UMass	2
St. Joseph's	1
Temple	3
UMass	2

"I'm really excited for Adrianne having battled back from a knee injury, and for her to play like this is amazing," sophomore cageminder Christine Tocco said. "For her to have a huge impact on our winning record is just amazing. It's great for her."

Against St. Joseph's Saturday, Monaco came through with the game winning goal for the Minutewomen (5-15, 3-2 A-10). Her game winner in Philadelphia was her second in the last four games. In fact, two of the three goals in her career have vaulted the Maroon and White to victory.

"[The winning goal] was great." Head Coach Patty Shea said. "That was a big play in a huge game. Adrianne has taken advantage of her scoring opportunities, and she's starting to come into her own. She's worked hard to come back to where she is."

St. Joe's wasn't the only test in Philly for the Minutewomen this weekend. The Maroon and White traveled to the City of Brotherly Love for two crucial A-10 contests against the Hawks and Temple. UMass had a split for the weekend with a 2-1 victory over the Hawks in the opening game and a 3-2 loss to the Owls in the concluding game.

Despite a sub-par overall record, the Minutewomen's A-10 performance still could keep their season alive. The season depends on the outcome in their A-10 season finale against Rhode Island and how the rest of conference fares in its last few games.

"The Rhode Island game is the biggest one of our season now. If we took care of Temple on Sunday, we would have been in the driver's seat. Though, I think there are positives for us to play games that are crucial with potential going into the A-10 Tournament. We are putting something on the line just like in the tournament."

Turn to SPLIT, page 7

Minutemen take over first

By Mike Marzelli
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This weekend marked the beginning of a two-week hiatus from the friendly confines of Rudd Field for the Massachusetts men's soccer team, and the Minutemen couldn't have gotten off to a better start.

UMass	3
St. Joseph's	1
UMass	3
Temple	0

The Maroon and White swept through the Philadelphia area with a pair of impressive defensive efforts which resulted in a 3-1 victory over St. Joseph's on Sunday, and a 3-0 blanking of Temple on Friday, the latter of which extended UMass' winning streak to a school record 11 games.

More importantly, however, is that the pair of conference victories, coupled with Rhode Island's pair of weekend losses to the same clubs, propels Head Coach Sam Koch's squad to the top of the Atlantic 10 standings.

"It was a big weekend for us," Koch said. "We're continuing to play well in the league and I thought our defensive efforts were good. It's important to take these two games knowing we have to go on the road again next weekend."

The Minutemen wasted little time in grabbing the early lead against the Hawks on Sunday as senior tri-captain Derek Rhodes tallied his second goal of the year on a 40-yard rocket off a free kick that found the back of the net at the 15:37 mark.

"I can't say enough about what Derek means to us defensively," Koch said. "He's such an important part of this team, and to have him scoring [goals] is just an added bonus."

UMass doubled its lead at 34:49 off the foot of another tri-captain, yet for this rare instance it would not be all-everything forward Jeff Deren. Yuri Morales, still in search of the one assist that will make him the University's all-time leader in that category, took a pass from junior Ptah Myers and slipped a shot past the St. Joe's keeper, putting the Minutemen up 2-0.

"[Yuri] really makes things happen on offense, he knows what he's doing out there," Koch said.

After the Hawks cut the UMass lead in half with an unassisted goal from Matt James, Deren would indeed join his fellow captains on the score sheet. The reigning A-10 Player of the Year received a feed from junior Dan Colwell and beat the Hawks keeper, putting UMass up for good at 3-1. For Deren, his 17th goal of the season would add to his already impressive list of accolades as it tied the school's best-ever single-season mark.

Also impressive in the win was the play of senior keeper Enzo Altomare. He turned away six Hawk shots and allowed only the one goal in pacing an impressive defensive effort from the Minutemen.

"[Enzo] has been doing the job for us these last few weeks," Koch said. "He knows his limitations and plays within them, and he's getting results."

Friday's 3-0 shutout of Temple marked another fine defensive effort from the Maroon and White as they kept their opponent out of the net for the fourth time since beginning conference play.

On the offensive side, Deren became the first player in school history to record 100 points in a career when he broke away from the pack off of a beautiful feed from Colwell and buried a shot in the top corner at 19:20. After having their top gun begin the scoring, the Minutemen would receive their second goal from a less likely source, as freshman Jason Scudamore set up senior Andrew Eicher, who blasted a shot from 10 yards out past the Owl goalie at 38:27. Myers capped the scoring at the 86:00 mark as he broke in past the out-of-position Temple keeper and easily found the open net.

"Deren is a pure goal-scorer," Koch said. "He benefits from the players around him. [Ptah] is just so quick and advances the ball so well. All our guys just feed off each other."

Having his offense again provide him with a comfortable lead, Altomare would record a career-high seven saves in recording his fifth shutout of the season. For the weekend, the senior stopped 13 of 14 shots in being named Atlantic 10 Co-Player of the Week. It marked the third time in the last four weeks that a Minuteman has won the award. For Altomare, he is now undefeated in conference play and 10-1-1 on the season, with his lone loss coming back on Sept. 6 at Boston University.

"Going on the road two weeks in a row is never easy," Koch said. "We still have things we can improve upon and we will need to in order to accomplish what we want to."

The Minutemen are now 11-4-1 overall, but more importantly they moved to 7-0-1 in conference play. They are ranked third in the Adidas/NSCAA New England Regional poll and 28th nationally in the College Soccer News Top 30. They are now one and a half games ahead of Rhode Island for first place in the A-10, and will continue their road trip this weekend as they travel south for matchups with Richmond and George Washington. Friday's game is a 2 p.m. contest in our nation's capital followed by the short jaunt down I-95 for Sunday's 1 p.m. clash with the Spiders.

SENIOR ANDREW EICHER TALLIED A GOAL IN UMASS' 3-0 VICTORY OVER TEMPLE.

Angels hold off Giants in Game Seven

By Ben Walker
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ANAHEIM, Calif. – This is definitely movie material – and the stars are the never-say-die Anaheim Angels.

They came out of nowhere to reach their first World Series, rallying past every team in their way.

Their rookie pitcher wins Game 7.

And the best hitter in the world watches from the losers' dugout, knowing he was once just six outs away from winning the only title he has ever wanted.

Angels	4
Giants	1

John Lackey, Garret Anderson and the Angels made it all come true, beating Barry Bonds and the San Francisco Giants 4-1 Sunday night for the franchise's first championship in 42 years.

Plus the most amazing thing – the Angels didn't even need to rely on their Rally Monkey. Anaheim third baseman Troy Glaus was voted MVP after hitting .385 with three home runs and eight RBIs.

"I can't believe it, man," Anderson said. "It's been a long year – a testament to the guys who never gave up."

Still, the highest-scoring Series in history came down to pitching, as it always seems to do in October. Behind Lackey and the bullpen, Anaheim had too much to win baseball's first all wild-card matchup.

The Angels became the eighth straight home team to win Game 7 of the World Series. History was on their side from the start and so was an omen – a skywriting plane put a gigantic halo over Edison Field before the first pitch.

A day after it blew a 5-0 lead in the seventh inning, San Francisco never got

Turn to GAME SEVEN, page 7

25 BEST HORROR FLICKS
ARTS PAGE 7
NO ON QUESTION 3
ED. OP PAGE 4
SAM THE REVAMPED MAN
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY ☆☆☆☆☆ 10.30.02

Three U of A professors killed Monday

By Arthur H. Rotstein
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) – A student flunking out of the University of Arizona nursing school shot three of his professors to death Monday, then killed himself as dozens of terrified students rushed to get away.

Police said Robert Flores Jr., 41, specifically targeted the instructors, killing one in her office on the second floor and shooting the others in a fourth-floor classroom as students dove for cover.

Flores walked to the front of the classroom and shot the first victim several times, then went to the back of the room and killed the second victim, police said.

Senior Julie Raymond said she was taking an exam when the gunman came in.

"We just thought that he was late for the test," Raymond said. "Then he started talking to instructors and fired shots. All of us ducked under the tables and then ran out of the room. At first, I thought it was a joke and realized it wasn't when I heard the shots."

Flores told students in the room to leave. He was later found dead by officers searching the school.

University Vice Provost Elizabeth Irvin said Flores had failed a pediatric nursing class and was struggling in a critical care class.

Bomb squad members were called in after a backpack or package was found underneath the gunman's body. The suspect had threatened to blow up the building, though it was unclear when the threat was made, police said. The college and nearby buildings were evacuated.

Authorities continued to check for explosives into the evening.

The victims – Robin Rogers, 50, Barbara Monroe, 45, and Cheryl McGuffin, 44 all were Flores' instructors, Police Chief Richard Miranda said. "It's too soon to say why he committed this terrible deed," Miranda said. "We have determined that there are many issues in Mr. Flores' life, all of which are a factor."

Flores, a Gulf War veteran, worked until September at the Southern Arizona Veterans' Administration Health Care System as a licensed practical nurse, and was studying to become a registered nurse, officials said. It wasn't clear in which branch of the military he served.

Anu Nigam, a 29-year-old graduate student, said she and her husband were outside waiting for a shuttle bus when a woman came out of the building with a cell phone, trying to dial and screaming that there was a man with a gun in the building. Police were at the scene within seconds.

"A group of people were crying and running desperately to get out of the building," Nigam said. "They were crying, tripping over one another, falling down."

Student Lori Schenkel said she had several classes with Flores and he told classmates about a year ago that he had gotten a concealed weapon permit.

"He was just a very aggravated student, a rude, obnoxious type of person," she said. "He came across as very aggressive and mean, and seemed to have a lot of issues with being angry."

Nurse William Gordon, who worked with Flores at the VA hospital and knew

Turn to SHOOTING, page 2

STUDENTS AND FACULTY GATHER NEAR THE SCENE OF A SHOOTING THAT LEFT FOUR PEOPLE DEAD YESTERDAY MORNING IN THE COLLEGE OF NURSING, UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA. THE GUNMAN, A STRUGGLING NURSING STUDENT, SHOT AND KILLED THREE PROFESSORS BEFORE TURNING THE GUN ON HIMSELF.

UMass volunteers assist in Connecticut River cleanup

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This past Saturday volunteers from the Massachusetts Community Water Watch worked together to clean the banks of the Connecticut River. The group was comprised of student volunteers who braved the rainy weather to take part in Make a Difference Day, a National Day of Service.

"The banks were really muddy but ultimately we did it, and the folks who came with us did the best they could," said Nate Frye, coordinator of the MassPIRG/Community Water Watch event. "There was a real feeling of community as volunteers persevered...they were willing to sacrifice comfort to spend the day making a difference."

The group focused on ridding the Connecticut riverbed of waste, specifically the shores just below the bridge between Hadley and Northampton. Frye explained that the area where the land meets the water serves as both a filter for waste and a corridor for wildlife to pass in an out of the river. Because of this, it is imperative to hold clean-up projects on the shoreline as well as in the water.

The volunteers were amazed at the objects that just a day's worth of cleaning could yield. A couple hours into the cleanup, volunteers were already joking about who could find the weirdest things in the riverbed, and analyzing all the random objects they uncovered. Plastic bags, bottles, discarded paper and boxes were just the beginning of the waste removed from the riverbed. Stranger items included a motorcycle, a television, a closet full of clothing, used tires, a case full of unopened oil bottles and a Xerox machine.

Steven Parker, a student volunteer and Environmental Science major came to the realization that the area where the waste was being dumped was directly related to the resources nearby.

"There is a cornfield over here where you get your food, and there is the river where you get the water...unfortunately, it seems like everyone dumps what's left in the middle," Parker said.

Overall, the team's efforts made a huge difference to the quality of the river's water.

"It's amazing that such a small group of people can accomplish so much in one day," remarked Frye. "I think everyone involved began to question why more people don't do this every weekend."

The Massachusetts Community Water Watch is currently working with the Hitchcock Center for the Environment on a program geared towards raising awareness with elementary school kids about water quality. Through the program, UMass students volunteer at area elementary schools to help teachers facilitate environmental education. The Community Water Watch also coordinates stream monitoring and clean-ups such as the one that took place this weekend. In the future, the group hopes to hold a forum on water quality issues with the Mill River Lake Warner Watershed this December.

COURTESY PHOTO

WITH THE SUPPORT OF MASSPIRG, A VARIETY OF VOLUNTEERS GATHERED THIS WEEKEND TO CLEAN VARIOUS ITEMS FROM THE BANKS OF THE CONNECTICUT RIVER.

State Treasury candidate speaks of his platform

By Mark Ostroff
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

After a day of campaigning, State Treasury candidate James O'Keefe, of the Massachusetts Green Party, spoke about his potential plans for the state if elected.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts Amherst, O'Keefe received a degree in History in 1990 and from there he went on to receive his Master's degree in Economics from Boston University in 1996. He also served as the Co-Chairman as well as the Treasurer of the Massachusetts Green Party from 1998 to 2001.

O'Keefe discussed his party's campaign funding and emphasized his platform on keeping the Clean Elections Law, a question on this years ballot. A Clean Elections candidate, O'Keefe's campaign is run on public financing and small contributions from individual supporters. Clean Election funding requires candidates to receive 3000 contributions of $100, agree to limitations on spending, in order to be eligible for $400,000 of state-financed support.

According to O'Keefe, 60 percent of Mass. districts had uncontested representative candidates, this year, but keeping Clean Elections would allow more competitive elections, with more politicians getting involved.

"Clean Elections would revise our political system back to true competition," O'Keefe said.

O'Keefe added that the state spends roughly $600 million every year on subsidies and tax cuts to wealthy entities. He maintained that with Clean Elections, politicians would no longer have to rely on the support of wealthy lobbyists, making them less obliged to support them. Clean Elections annually costs state taxpayers about $10 million, but according to O'Keefe, the state would save much more in eliminating allocations to corporations.

"Implementing Clean Elections is an opportunity to get rid of corporate welfare," said O'Keefe. "It's a simple money issue."

O'Keefe also talked about the state income tax referendum question. Referendum question #2 asks whether or not the state should eliminate the income tax after July 2003.

According to O'Keefe, the elimination of the income tax is not necessary, but instead he said he supports a "progressive," tax program, which would tax wealthier people with higher rates, and would raise the exemption for people in lower income brackets. Adding to the Green Party's commitment to ecology, he believes that a new tax structure could ensure corporate responsibility to the environment.

GREEN PARTY CANDIDATE JAMES O'KEEFE TALKED ABOUT HIS IDEAS OF "OPEN GOVERNMENT," ON MONDAY, IN THE BLUE WALL.

"We could change the tax structure to tax things we don't like," O'Keefe said. "And it would give incentives to not pollute."

Casinos in Massachusetts were another topic he talked about. O'Keefe, arguing against casinos, believes that they would do nothing more than create low-wage jobs, and take away from small businesses, like bars and restaurants, without contributing anything new to the community.

"The benefit isn't much. There are no new technologies, no new business. There is only development in the low-wage sector. In terms of economic development, it doesn't pay off," he said.

"Casinos would also allow interests to come in and put money in the pockets of state representatives," he added.

Last year, from what O'Keefe considers to be mismanagement, $8 million was lost from investments on the state pension fund, from the unstable market as well as circumstances like the collapse of Enron. O'Keefe felt that the problem was mainly the cause of risky ventures of past investments. He feels that a new plan of local investment will bring more revenue to the state pension fund. While borrowing money from the state pension fund, local investment would develop communities to better save money and generate revenue; something he feels will keep Massachusetts more stable economically.

Afterward, O'Keefe was asked about his being new to the state politics. He believes that his educational background and experience make him the right candidate for the job, and added that because this is his first time running for the office, his experience would come from a purely economic standpoint.

"I am not beholden to political party interests," O'Keefe said. "Independence would make me a true watchdog over people's money."

FBI pushes for death penalty in sniper case

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that the federal government has filed death penalty charges in the Washington-area sniper case, the focus shifts to who will be the first to try the suspects.

The federal complaint filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Maryland gives the U.S. government an advantage in ultimately determining whether the widest range will be held prior to federal cases or state courts in Maryland or Virginia.

Attorney General John Ashcroft said the Justice Department will decide soon if it will formally request the death penalty in cases brought against the two suspects. He said indictments have already been handed down in nine federal cases that could result in capital charges.

Ashcroft said the federal government has a "very great influence over that decision."

"I believe there is a great opportunity for us cooperate to get the right results here, and I believe it will happen," Ashcroft said.

The complaint lists 20 firearms, extortion and interstate commerce counts against Muhammad. Malvo was not publicly charged because he is a juvenile. Ashcroft said a court must first certify that he should be treated as an adult within the federal system before authorities can even discuss his case.

Muhammad may be charged with capital crimes in federal court but cannot be executed.

Ashcroft said the complaint makes clear that U.S. officials seek the most serious penalties for the three-week spate of shootings in Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C., that left 10 dead and three seriously injured.

"I believe the ultimate sanction ought to be available here," Ashcroft said. "I consider the matters charged to be atrocities."

Because of that, Virginia may be the leading candidate to try the suspects first. Virginia allows the death penalty for 17-year-olds and since 1976 it has executed 86 people, more than any state but Texas. Virginia authorities filed capital murder charges Monday.

Despite Virginia's apparent advantages in trying death penalty cases, a senior Justice Department official cautioned that a final decision on where to hold the first trial would be based on other factors as well. These include the strength of the evidence and which laws, state or federal, provide the best chances for a conviction, said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Maryland, Montgomery County prosecutor Doug Gansler has been insisting that he be allowed to go first because six of the murders occurred in that county.

But federal officials have repeatedly said that Maryland's death penalty laws, which require one of 10 aggravating circumstances for capital punishment to apply, make it highly unlikely the first trial would occur there. Maryland also has suspended executions and does not allow capital punishment for juveniles.

While Ashcroft said representatives of the different jurisdictions are talking about how to proceed, Gansler said he has not spoken with federal prosecutors since last week.

"We don't know when or if we will ever be able to bring this case to justice in Montgomery County. We don't know when we will learn from the Department of Justice," he said. "They hold all the cards."

In another nod to Virginia, the federal complaint does not cite any of the Virginia shootings in the counts. Those charges could be added later, however.

A senior Justice Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Virginia cases were omitted "out of an abundance of caution" so Virginia could file its charges first.

If Virginia had not filed charges before the federal government, the official said the prosecutions could have run afoul of Virginia's unique double jeopardy laws; that is, being tried twice for the same crime.

Meanwhile, prosecutors in Montgomery, Ala., have filed capital murder charges against the pair for a shooting during a robbery last month outside a liquor store.

Authorities in Washington state say they have linked Muhammad and Malvo to the shooting death of a woman whose aunt once worked for Muhammad. They also said they believed the two fired shots at a synagogue there, but no charges have been filed in either case.

On the Net: Justice Department, http://www.usdoj.gov

Dean's List event honors students

By Jen Hodsco

Dr. Geri Lamar Dean's List Reception was held last night in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event attracted a group of parents including students' family, administrators, Chancellor John V. Lombardi and President John Kane to the University.

The reception was held in order to recognize students getting all-grade point averages during Fall 2001 and Spring 2002 semesters. Chancellor Lombardi, Provost Marcia Inhorn, Kane, and Student Government Association President Jen Stein, who spoke about the importance of getting funding for the University of Massachusetts. She explained the importance of students talking with their representatives and senators and let them know how they feel about issues that are affecting the UMass.

"I'm there [state House and people like] you know, know this University and think about it every chance I get," Stein said.

President of the Alumni Association also spoke at the event.

On behalf of the Alumni Association I would like to congratulate all of the academic achievers in the room," Kane said. "It got a chance to meet with them and talk to them and I was very impressed not only with their obvious intelligence but much more importantly about their integrity and about their ambition and desire to do well once they get out of this University.

"I think it's wonderful that the students have the initiative to put something like this together," Kane said. "I just want to say from the bottom of my heart, it makes me proud to be an Alumnus of this University when I meet students like I met tonight."

Chancellor Lombardi reflected on his thoughts of the event.

It's a terrific event and I think it recognizes a group of students who distinguished themselves academically," Lombardi said. "It also reflects the kind of student experience that characterizes this place: students that organized this and made it all happen and that's what makes it, it's just a terrific event."

The event attracted group of about 70 people and gave students a chance talk with faculty and with their peers about their interests as well as meet the new Chancellor of UMass.

Mattison explained her motives for coming up with the idea for such an event.

"Last year when I was a senator in the Student Government Association, I was on the University Policy Committee and I was on the academics' task force," Mattison explained. "I was thinking of a way I could do something for the University that was positive because there was a lot of negativity surrounding budget cuts."

She went on to explain that she decided to organize an event that would focus upon student achievement.

"I thought of this event to celebrate academic achievement, to bring people together, to get students to interact more with administrators, to build school pride and to mobilize students to become more politically active," Mattison said. "We're very pleased with how the event turned out and we look forward to collaborating with the administration and other members of the community again to make this an annual celebration."

■ shooting

Continued from page 1

him for three years, said he saw nothing that would foreshadow violence. He said Flores dropped out of a nursing ethics class last semester and seemed upset, but it wasn't an unusual reaction.

"I didn't pick up anything majorly confrontational with him regarding the instructor," Gordon said. "Nothing that would alarm you."

Students were grieving the loss of their professors.

Rogers, who taught pediatrics, was a "really great teacher," Ida Rosario said. "She always has her door open. If you need to see her, you just walk right in."

McGaffic taught classes on health care ethics, critical care and death and dying. She was also a volunteer chaplain at University Medical Center, where she helped comfort seriously ill patients and their families.

Jessica Odom, a 21-year-old student, recalled the one-on-one interactions McGaffic had with students in the death and dying course.

"We had a memorial for all our loved ones that died, and she sat and cried with us all as we talked about our loved ones," Odom said.

University President Peter Likins said there were no immediate plans to change security procedures at the 34,000 student university, which includes the 580-student nursing school.

Flores lived in an apartment complex a few miles from campus where many other students live. Complex manager Ike Brink said Flores had been there for more than a year and was "a model tenant."

Brink said Flores had two children who visited during the summer. Classmates said Flores talked of an ex-wife and two children.

On the Net: http://www.arizona.edu

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester, is entirely independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on commercial revenue generated by its advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It came into being as the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Fly Bowl. Collegian in 1916. The Daily Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a Broadsheet publication since January 1993. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamas Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Before YOU stuff yourself with candy scare the neighbors dress to spook . . .

MEET YOUR FRIENDS CLASSMATES AND CO-WORKERS FOR A DELIGHTFUL EVENING OF FUN, FOOD AND EXCITEMENT THIS ALL HALLOWS EVE

October 31st every Dining Common will be serving a special menu including:

Live Maine Lobsters served with clarified butter
Fresh clams in a lightly seasoned broth
A hearty Prime Rib of Beef au jus
Locally grown Stuffed Acorn Squash
Festive Oven Roasted Red Potatoes
Broccoli and Corn sides
A Decadent Halloween Cake from U-Mass Bakeshop
Crisp Apple Cider

And of course?
A variety of Candy treats

ALL OF THE ABOVE WILL BE SERVED IN A WARM SEASONAL ATMOSPHERE

Don't Miss Out!!!

Presented by

MAINE NEW-SHELL LOBSTER
TENDER SWEET EASY TO EAT

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Wednesday

A rally to save bilingual education will be held at the Student Union Steps (facing the Campus Pond) at 12:30 p.m.

The National Society of Black Engineers will be holding a general body meeting at 5:30 p.m. at the Gunness Student Center in Marcus Hall. Refreshments will be served.

A forum discussing the bilingual education ballot question will be held at 7 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Intro to Friday Night Part 2 will be held at Hillel House at 7 p.m. The event invites all to come learn and ask questions about the prayers and rituals of Friday night services

The Latinas Promoviendo Comunidad/ Lambda Pi Chi Sorority Incorporated, Iota Chapter will be hosting an Informational entitled Are You Safe? Think Again! at the Malcolm X Cultural Center at 7:30 p.m. Free food will be served.

Stonewall Center's monthly pizza night, BreakOut Night will be held from 5 p.m. – 8 p.m.

Thursday

The Cape Verdean Students Association will sponsor an informational meeting on time management skills and other tactics in dealing with stress related to midterm exams and papers. Refreshments will be served and the event will be held at the New Africa House Library from 5:30 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Friday

A Soul Revival, a collaborative effort on the part of the Women of Color Leadership Network, the Black Mass Communication Project and the Black Student Union, will be held at the top of the Campus Center, room 1009. The event is aimed at creating a new vibration on the UMass campus by way of a soulful night filled with music and dance honoring the genre's history and its impact on present day music. Admission is $2.

Conservative, Reform and Kehilat Hillel Haazinu Carlebach Minyan Shabbat services will be held at Hillel House starting at 6 p.m.

Free Shabbat dinner for UMass students will be held at Hillel House at 7:15 p.m., followed by a concert by Kolot, a UMass Jewish a cappella group at 8:30 p.m.

Saturday

The African Students Association presents the annual Harvest Night 2002 at the Campus Center Auditorium. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m. and the event will include dinner, dance and skit performances, a fashion show and guest speakers.

The Mount Holyoke College 2002 Black Alumnae Conference Committee presents a semi-formal event entitled An Enchanted Evening at Chapin Auditorium. The event will commence with dinner at 7 p.m. followed by performances at 8:15 p.m. including comedians Sherri Sinclair and Wil, MHC's Voices of Faith, UMass's Flava Unit and Bamidele Dancers and Drummers. The night will come to an end with an after party from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. at the Betty Shabazz House.

The Jewish Student Union Semi-Formal will be held at the top of the Campus Center, room 1009.

Morning services, including an interactive text study of the week's Torah portion led by Hillel's new assistant director, Susan Moser, will be held at 10:30 a.m. at Hillel House to be followed by a light lunch.

Renowned poet Sonia Sanchez will be at Mount Holyoke College's Gamble Auditorium from 5 p.m.-6:30 p.m. as part of the school's 2002 Black Alumnae Conference. The event is co-sponsored by the MHC President's Office as part of the Mary Lyon Lecture Series

Hillel will be holding GAP Wine and Cheese Evening for graduates and young professionals at Rebecca's in Easthampton from 5:30 p.m. until 7:30 p.m.

Sunday

From 4 p.m. until 6 p.m., the Hillel House Recreation Room will host a pizza party and a screening of a video on the life and times of Hank Greenberg, an American baseball legend.

Hillel House will host Israeli dancing from 7 p.m.-8 p.m. No experience is necessary.

Monday

The Asian American Studies Event Series presents Yellow Apparel: When the Coolie Becomes Cool, a presentation including a screening of a video exploring the appropriation of Asian Culture by white American society. The event is free, open to the public, includes free pizza and will be held in room 601 of Herter Hall from 6 p.m.-8 p.m. The discussion will be followed by an information session about the Asian and Asian American studies certificate program.

Kehilat Hillel Haazinu morning service will be held at 7:30 a.m. in Hillel House.

Tuesday

Rap duo Clipse will be performing at the Student Union Ballroom. Doors will open at 8 p.m. and will include radio personalities Damani and Clinton Sparks from HOT 93.7. Admission is $5 with college ID and $10 for general public.

The Jewish Women's Collective will be holding Rosh Chodesh for Women at Hillel House at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome to take part in a night of ritual, learning, food, celebration of the month of Kislev and learning about Jewish heroines throughout the ages.

News meeting tomorrow at 4:00 p.m. in the Campus Center basement for all interested and current writers

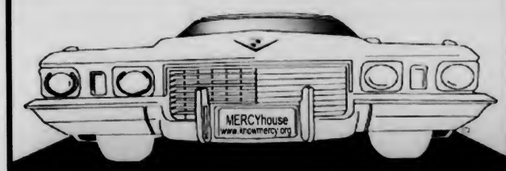
Write for News!

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT
PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2003

The Writing Program Placement Test
will be offered on:
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4 &
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7
@ 7 PM.
IN BARTLETT 61

(This test may be taken only once)

Students should pre-register for ENGLWP before pre-registration ends.
Students do not need to register for the test.



McMurphy's
welcomes
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

GET PAID TO
GO TO SCHOOL.
TALK ABOUT
ROLE REVERSAL.

The U.S. Air Force will pay for you to continue your education while you serve your country as a nurse. Through selection into the Air Force Institute of Technology program, you could earn your advanced degree in as little as two years and get paid to do it. You'll be part of an elite team of medical professionals who have chosen to serve their country in this proud institution. To learn more about Air Force Nursing, please visit airforce.com or call 1.800.423.USAF to request more information.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

Nobody Rides For Free UNTIL NOW...

Streets too spooky?
In no condition to drive?
Don't want to walk home in the cold?

FREE RIDES ON HALLOWEEN
Halloween Night 10pm-4am
Call 374-7532

Sponsored by MERCYHOUSE
www.knowmercy.org

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Bilingual education:
something to think about

This afternoon at 12:30 p.m. on the Student Union steps, opponents of Question 2 on the Massachusetts State ballot will rally together to raise awareness of the importance of bilingual education.

The Daily Collegian supports drawing awareness to Question 2 with rallies like this. We believe that elimination of bilingual education from the school curriculums in Massachusetts is a horrific idea that would harm generations of students to come.

The Collegian does not argue that there are flaws in the Massachusetts education system, particularly concerning bilingual education. But we also feel that eliminating the system that exists in favor of a one-year immersion program is akin to telling bilingual students to sink or swim. That's no answer. That's a prescription for failure.

Bilingual education has long been under fire. People complain that it's too expensive, that it's too complicated or that it doesn't work. All of these arguments have some merit. It is complicated. It is expensive. It doesn't always work.

That doesn't mean that the answer is to eliminate the program altogether.

Expecting students who do not speak English as their native tongue to learn the idiosyncracies of the language in a single year is narrow-minded, unrealistic and unfair.

The Question 2 initiative has strong backing from Ron Unz, a Silicon Valley millionaire. Unz has gone state-to-state pushing English immersion as a replacement for a bilingual education system, and has succeeded in getting initiatives similar to Massachusetts' Question 2 passed in California and Arizona.

Since its passage in 1998, the English immersion programs that Unz has pushed in California have failed miserably. According to information collected by the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) from the California Department of Education, the introduction of the immersion program there has failed to increase the rate at which bilingual students learn English. At the same time, the League said that a majority of bilingual students were also falling behind in their overall academics.

If it didn't work there, why should it here?

The Question 2 initiative also contains several provisions that make no sense in the large scheme of things. For one, if it passes, teachers will be severely restricted in the way that they teach students. The initiative would make it possible for teachers to be personally sued for helping students learn by speaking to them in their native language. Once students are through the one-year of immersion, all languages but English are off-limits in the classroom.

What kind of benefit would legislation like this possibly serve? If the initiative is going to tie the hands of the Commonwealth's public school teachers in the education of our youth, it serves no positive purpose.

A yes vote on Question 2 hurts all parties involved. It's blind to the realities of learning in the twenty-first century.

Voting yes on 2 makes no sense.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Another boring Thursday in October

M. KENDRY

National Teacher's Day is on May 19th. In June we get to celebrate both Juneteenth (June 19th) and Gay Pride Day (June 30th). Grandparents get their day on September 8th. December 1st doubles both as World AIDS Day and the Day Without Art. In addition to the basics such as Independence Day and Christmas, these are all great holidays that serve a purpose. There is one that I can do without though. It's tomorrow. I'm not a huge fan of our annual day of fright. To put it more bluntly: I hate Halloween.

It's not that I hate all the aspects of Halloween. There are certain things that I definitely enjoy. I have nothing against scary movies and the whole concepts of monsters and ghouls. They're a lot of fun. I mean what person wouldn't enjoy the thrill of watching a horror flick with your significant other and having them snuggle extra close to you at the most terrifying parts. Dracula, mummies, and werewolves are all great stories of lore. While we're on the subject of entertainment, one of the few saving graces of the end of October is the annual special episode of "The Simpsons". Since these episodes first began airing over a decade ago, they've provided some great parodies of classic scary stories as well as just all out hilarity.

So scary stories and the creatures that accompany them, those are good. Yet for all their enjoyment, they don't deserve a special day. Lots of people enjoy comedians and a full-blown laugh fest, but there's no Comedy Day. Why is Halloween different? Apparently the monsters have a better lobbying group in the political world of Holidays.

Since when is there a need for Halloween cards? Christmas, Mother's Day, Father's Day, and maybe Easter, are the only holidays that need cards. What reason does one give a Halloween card? To scare someone? Please! Halloween, like most other holidays, has no redeeming purpose deserving of a card. Though rumor has it that the owner of Hallmark and Frankenstein like to get freaky on the weekends, so that could explain a lot.

Where would Halloween be without its costumers? Perhaps a better thought though is who really gives a damn about costumes? I was a theatre person throughout junior high and high school and enjoy playing dress up to create a different persona. Halloween takes such a fun activity and ruins it by overdoing it. At least in performing, there's an audition to earn a spot in the cast. October 31st has no such limitations. Trust me, if you go out to some costume party, there's going to be some girl dressed as a princess, which every guy there knows is anything but true. I figure, why even put out the effort towards a special outfit. People who dress up are Halloween aren't creating any sort of new role. They aren't studying a character to better tell a story. They're simply getting dressed up so they can go make an ass of themselves, and any self-respecting college student will tell you that for that a costume is unnecessary.

Little kids get dressed up from the time they're less than a year old (The Disney Store makes sure of that). Why? They need to go trick-or-treating of course. I remember with some fondness the annual hunt for candy. It was the one time of year that all sorts of candy, that could be bought 365 days a year at Big Y by the way, was amassed at my house. Being one of four siblings, we even had a sorting system down. Chocolate and non-chocolate candy was separated into different bowls in the kitchen (just for you Sean).

Of course all this candy was great. Dr. Gonick can attest to my enjoyment of the candy by the amount of silver in my mouth. Again though, why is there one special day for all the candy? I can honestly say that there are some types of the sweet stuff that I have only had at Halloween time, and never actually by them the rest of the year. I'm not talking about candy corn either, one of the most nauseating substances on this earth. Every one of your parents bought just as much candy to give out as you came home with in your pillow case, if anyone does that anymore. So why not do away with the stupid act of trick-or-treating and just let each kid's parents go out to the store and buy the candy that they known junior will eat? There was nothing worse than getting home and finding out that you'd accumulated a dozen Three Musketeers bars that are just going to rot before you throw them away.

As one ages, they graduate from trick-or-treating to the Halloween party. This is just an excuse to gather all the dressed-up buffoons together in one place. Everyone stands around, telling stupid stories, eating even more candy, bobbing for apples (again I ask why?), and, after the age of 21, downing the alcohol. Take away the costumes and this is a typical Friday night here in Amherst. I've already established the insignificance of the costumes, so why expend all the time and money on some stupid piece of clothing that will be worn only once? The cash is better spent on more food and booze.

By the way, orange is such a revolting color. Neither pumpkin, nor it seeds, is something to eaten. Enjoy fruits like apples, pears, and assorted berries. Leave pumpkins out in the wilderness where they belong. I've also never met anyone who enjoys wearing orange aside from my friend Smitty, so let's just leave the orange clothes in the closet, back behind the dozen credit card t-shirts that you never don.

So if you choose to, go out and celebrate Halloween tomorrow night. Everyone is entitled to their opinion. Don't worry, I won't give you a hard time about take-ins in a meaningless holiday. I'll just keep my mouth shut and remind myself that after October 31st is finished, that there's only 54 more days until Christmas.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist

DON'T BE AFRAID... IT'S ONLY ED/OP!!!

The authorities dropped the ball

Twenty-three days of terror, murder, and desperation culminated not in a dramatic shoot-out or a high-speed car chase that ended in a trap.

Police found sniper suspects John Allen Muhammad and Lee Boyd Malvo asleep in their dark blue 1990 Chevrolet Caprice with a damaged back headlight at a rest stop after receiving a call from a truck driver who recognized the car from police alerts. The truck driver courageously blocked off the entrance to the highway with his rig so as not to allow them access to an escape route. Swarms of cruisers responded and the men were taken in without incident. The murder weapon, a .223-caliber rifle, was recovered as well as a global positioning system, a pair of twin radios, a laptop computer and a pair of bolt cutters. The car's trunk had two holes drilled into it that authorities believe the snipers used to shoot victims from inside the trunk.

So now everyone is breathing easier. People are carelessly pumping gas and buying groceries. Children are returning to the outdoors for sports practices. Policemen in and around D.C. are being celebrated as cheers turn upon seeing the cops and women in blue, people are honking their horns, waving and applauding.

Cookies, pizzas and flowers are being delivered by the truckload. Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Moose even has a website devoted to a collective forum of adoration.

Am I the only one who is a little confused here? Since when do we celebrate the senseless and preventable slayings of ten people? Granted these officers have been working double time since the sniper attacks began three weeks ago, but am I alone in feeling like they dropped the ball, repeatedly?

FRANCES CARR

What about the white truck everyone has been blathering about? I don't mean to say I told you so, but I knew it. The white van had no relevance. Why else would the descriptions change every few days? First they suspected it was a cataclan then they released a composite of a box truck, then it was an off-white Chevrolet Astro van. Did it ever occur to anyone that white trucks are common, everywhere, especially during the busy hours during which most of the shootings took place. Why didn't investigators pay an mind to Muhammad's Caprice, which was spotted 10 times this month alone, during his killing spree, once while he slept in it? Apparently they ran the plates, but came up empty, so they proceeded to let him on his merry was. Oops.

Why don't we get on the technological bus and update federal computer systems already? A fingerprint from the Montgomery, Alabama shootings sat undetected while innocent victims were gunned down. Had authorities been able to gain access to the FBI's records of Malvo's fingerprints, taken by the INS when he had a domestic dispute with his mother in Washington State, they could have identified him before any of the Washington area shootings transpired. Unfortunately, unless these records were connected, they would have no way of cross checking. It wasn't until the snipers themselves tipped off the authorities to look into the Alabama killing that they discovered the match.

Why didn't the FBI consider warnings offered by sources close to the snipers? A co-worker warned that the pair had talked openly about killing police and detonating bombs. A former friend of Muhammad reported that she had driven him out of town to an underground gunsmith to purchase a rifle silencer. The FBI claimed the reports didn't have enough "meat on their bones" and were never followed up.

How did Muhammad even get the rifle after being taken to court by his wife and issued a restraining order protecting her and their children against him? And where is the record of the transaction, traced to a Tacoma, Washington gun store, which is incidentally required by law? Apparently it's simple to obtain a vicious weapon, equivalent to the military's M-16, complete with bullets capable of exploding the insides of the victim.

So what exactly are we applauding? The gross neglect of numerous clues exemplified by investigators that lead to the murder of 10, the injurs of three and the rape of a sense of security of millions? I doubt that the families of James Martin, Sonny Buchanan, Prenkumar Walekar, Sarah Ramos, Lori Ann Lewis-Rivera, Pascal Charlot, Dean Harold Meyers, Kenneth H. Bridges, Linda Franklin, or Conrad Johnson are thanking authorities for their diligent police work.

I don't mean to disparage authorities or discount their efforts. I just don't feel like celebraing repeated instances of gaping holes in procedure and investigation.

Frances Carr is a Collegian Columnist

Israel: Liberal democracy or military dictatorship and apartheid?

There are two very different views that are being promoted about the state of Israel. Those who support Israel's actions, like Jewish and right-wing Christian groups in the United States, say that it's a shining beacon of democracy while critics, like Palestinian solidarity groups and the anti-apartheid South African Desmond Tutu, say it's a racist apartheid state. The issue is an important one for Americans in general and the UMass community in particular.

It's important for Americans because of the centrality of the Middle East and Israel in American foreign policy. Israel gets far more aid from the U.S. than any other country does – about $5 billion a year – more than all of black Africa combined. The U.S. also provides diplomatic support for Israel, for instance, America goes against the rest of the world and vetoes United Nations Security Council resolutions that Israel disapproves of, like those supporting the creation of a Palestinian state alongside Israel.

The issue of whether Israel is a democracy or an apartheid state is particularly important for the UMass community because the University has set a precedent for institutional political involvement in questions of apartheid: when it agreed in 1977 to sell off its investments in businesses that supported apartheid South Africa. At the time, the Board of Trustees inserted a clause in the university's investment guidelines stipulating that the University should not use its investments to support apartheid regimes. Currently, the University invests in businesses that support Israel, and it holds State of Israel bonds. So the issue of whether Israel is or is not an apartheid state is one that should concern us all.

URI STRAUSS

I believe that although Israel has certain democratic features, it is essentially an apartheid state. This is not a contradiction: the United States had features of a democracy when millions of blacks were slaves and the Indians were being exterminated. Israeli society is deeply committed to certain democratic values like individual rights, elections in which all adult citizens can vote, and an independent court system. On the basis of these values, certain supporters of Israel have managed to persuade the world that Israel is deep down a democracy. But Israeli society is also extremely racist, and its racist laws and practices determine the character of the state to a greater extent than its democratic values do. Because of this racism, the democratic features that I've named are constantly being undermined.

Here's one way to think about it: the supporters of Israel don't deny that Israel has a Jewish character. They say that it's both Jewish and democratic. In my mind, these two characterizations are contradictory. A state can either be democratic, or it can be Jewish, but not both. The contradiction can lay low and avoid being noticed, as long as there's an overwhelming Jewish majority in Israel. Right now, that's the case, because the majority of Palestinians living in Israel in 1948 were expelled and not allowed to return, and because of large-scale Jewish immigration, about 80-percent of Israeli citizens are Jewish. It's impossible for the 20-percent of citizens who are Palestinian to democratically form a government and to replace the racial regime with a true democracy, where all citizens are equal before the law.

In fact, the Palestinian minority has had a hard time using its votes to gain any real concessions, because the Jewish political parties have an informal agreement among themselves that no coalition government should be formed in which the Arab political parties hold the balance of power. That means that the Arab parties never have the power to cause the government to collapse, something that the small Jewish political parties often threaten to do in order to win concessions from the ruling coalition. Another strike against Arab parties is the law that empowers the government to disqualify the candidates of any party that opposes the Jewish character of the state. This law has been used to disqualify candidates for calling for a democratic state, in which all citizens have equal rights.

The true test of which set of values determine the character of the state of Israel is what would happen if Arabs were no longer a small minority, but became a majority. Considering the fact that Palestinians in Israel have a far higher birth rate than Jews, this is a real possibility. Anyone who is familiar with the Israeli political scene knows exactly which set of values would come to the fore: the apartheid ones, not the democratic ones. The leadership would come up with some way of disenfranchising Palestinians in order to prevent the emergence of a democratic majority.

Presently, Israel has no constitution that guarantees the rights of individuals. As a result, there are a number of laws that discriminate against Palestinians on the basis of race. For example, 93% of the land in Israel is, by law, under the trusteeship of the Jewish National Fund. By the JNF's constitution, this land is for the exclusive use of Jews – it may not be rented or leased by Palestinians. Probably the most revealing laws were the ones that were passed in Israel's early days in order to create its "Jewish character". One such law, passed after three quarters of the Palestinian population was expelled in 1948, stripped the refugees of the citizenship that they were entitled to (by international law) as rightful residents of the area that came under Israeli control, and facilitated the theft of their land.

All of this concerns just the situation within Israel. The racist character of the regime is actually far more obvious in the occupied Palestinian territories, where Arabs cannot vote in state elections as all and are subjected to arbitrary and brutal collective punishment, while Jews, who live in fortified Jewish-only towns connected by Jewish-only roads, have maximal rights and freedoms as they use resources stolen from Palestinians. It's basically a situation of liberal democracy for the Jews, military dictatorship for the Arabs. I encourage everybody to think about the situation and then to act on it.

Uri Strauss is a UMass graduate student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 10.30.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Do rock videos go unrecognized because they are horrible?

What happened to the good ol' fashioned rock music video? What happened to the hot and heavy days of Aerosmith videos featuring blonde bombshell Alicia Silverstone, or breakthrough rock videos such as Nirvana's "Smells Like Teen Spirit?"

It seems like the world of pop has dominated the music video scene, and rock is riding off into the sunset, but not by choice. Have rock videos just been really bad lately, or are they being suffocated by the "let's see how much skin we can expose" pop video theme?

I cringed when I saw the video to "Dirrty" by the newly turned thug from the streets of Beverly Hills, Christina Aguilera. But I almost felt like puking on the spot when I learned

ROCK'N OUT
With Samara Marblestone

"Dirrty" ranked number one in Launch's Top 100 Music Videos list. Is that considered a decent, well-made video? Does Aguilera's bare un-showered body, along with the un-cleansed bodies of about one hundred of her closest "thugs 4 life" friends, constitute a good video? I was even more disturbed as the second spot, held by Nelly and Kelly Rowland for "Dilemma." Can I say how incredibly boring that video is? Okay, let's watch Nelly and Kelly stand on a street and sing into the camera, as they repeat the chorus over, and over, and over well, you get the point? It makes me sick that these two videos are considered two of the best videos recently made.

Ms. rock 'n roll didn't appear on the chart until number 14 with the Red Hot Chili Pepper's "The Zephyr Song." Wow, um, that's good. Or is it?! I wouldn't even consider that an exceptional video, but apparently Launch thinks it's the perfect way to introduce rock into the chart. Rock kind of took a catnap until Linkin Park's never-ending hit single, "In the End," took over the number 25 spot. Please, man – rock can do better than that!

Maybe it's a combination of rock videos not doing so hot, and because of that, people would rather see a naked Aguilera than Weezer singing with the Muppet Babies. Whatever happened to addressing important social issues, like Pearl Jam did with their intense video for "Jeremy?" Even simple videos spoke loudly to rock fans, such as Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go My Way?" We need more controversial videos such as Nine Inch Nail's "Closer," and less videos that produce the same effects as taking sleeping pills (kind of like watching Our Lady Peace's "Somewhere Out There").

So, what's the solution to all of this? What makes recent pop videos so much more enticing than recent rock videos? I don't want to suggest that rockers should bare a little more skin in their videos, just like the pop artists. Rock videos haven't been worth watching lately, and you know why? It's because there's no more controversy. Rock n' roll started because it was controversial, and I don't want it to end because there's a lack thereof. Are rock videos lacking in creativity because the music itself has been as well? I'm digging here for excuses and conclusions, and it kills me to think that pop videos would have been having higher rating lately because the American public is dying to see a boob or two.

So, what do you think?

Are rock videos lacking in commercial success because they are ignored and in the shadows of Christina Aguilera's breasts, or is it because they are starting to suck in general? We need Mark Romanek badly right now, or even Spike Jonze. These well-known music video directors are the brains behind the rock controversies that once existed in rock 'n roll videos. As the late Jim Morrison wisely said, "Come on baby, light my fire." To the world of the rock music video: take Jim's advice. Now.

Samara Marblestone is a Collegian Columnist.

OUR LIST OF THE 25 BEST HORROR FLICKS INCLUDES THE SHINING (TOP LEFT), THE SIXTH SENSE (TOP RIGHT), THE EXORCIST (BOTTOM LEFT) AND JAWS (BOTTOM RIGHT).

ALIENS AND GHOSTS AND MONSTERS ... OH, MY!

The 25 best (and 10 worst) modern horror films to rent for Halloween

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Halloween is coming up and with the holiday comes the unending flow of horror movies. They're in the theaters, on the television and on the shelves of your local Blockbuster. But Halloween is not Halloween if you see the wrong horror movie. The genre is filled with many, many, many horrid, toxic examples of would-be scare flicks (Bats anyone?). For the people celebrating Halloween, here is a list of the 25 best modern horror films to rent for the Eve of All Saint's.

But before I get to the actual list you're probably wondering how I compiled this list. First of all, I limited it to any movie that was released after 1970, which is why proven classics like Psycho (1960), Rosemary's Baby (1968) and Nosferatu (1922) are not on the list. And the entrants were chosen for a variety of factors. Some were chosen, not by my own personal opinion, but by their importance and cultural significance – i.e. the way they have impacted popular culture in the years that have followed. Others were chosen, because they deserve to be discovered by a wider audience. And, yes, a few were chosen for my own personal preference. And, instead of igniting riots by declaring a best horror movie of all time, I opted to put the list into alphabetical order.

Alien (1979) Ridley Scott's seminal sci-fi/horror masterpiece created the first female action hero – Sigourney Weaver's Ripley – and spawned an entire subgenre of horror. But none of them ever lived up to the level of tension that Alien established.

An American Werewolf In London (1981) Many horror films combined humor with horror, but few did it as successfully as John Landis' Black comic werewolf tale. Griffin Dunne steals the show as a wisecracking cadaver.

Army of Darkness (1993) Sam Raimi's wild, warped second sequel to The Evil Dead is the best third entry in a horror trilogy ever.

Blade (1998) Wesley Snipes kicks rear as a half-human/half-vampire vamp hunter in this sleek adaptation of a Marvel comic.

The Blair Witch Project (1999) Three film students disappear in the Maryland woods while filming a documentary. I love it or loathe it, the most profitable film of all time is a masterpiece of marketing and filmmaking ingenuity.

Brotherhood of the Wolf (2002) Christophe Gans' French lycanthrope tale is a mad hodnoise of gory horror, whirling martial arts action, busty costume drama and more. Never once are you allowed to catch your breath over the course of its 130 minutes.

Candyman (1992) An urban legend comes to life in the best ever Clive Barker movie (and I haven't forgotten Hellraiser.) Tony Todd lends the titular character chilling grave menace.

Dawn of the Dead (1978) Zombies lay siege to a

Turn to HORROR, page 6

THE 10 WORST:

Child's Play 3 (1991)
Friday the 13th Part 7: The New Blood (1988)
Halloween: Resurrection (2002)
Lord of Illusions (1995)
Nightmare on Elm Street Part 2: Freddy's Revenge (1985)
Pet Sematary 2 (1992)
Soul Survivors (2001)
Tales from the Crypt Presents Bordello of Blood (1996)
Texas Chainsaw Massacre: The Next Generation (1997)
Village of the Damned (1995)
(Avoid these films at all cost. Not even alcohol will help.)

13-member Antibalas Orchestra brings the noise and the funk

By Chris Flouton-Barnes
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

ANTIBALAS AFROBEAT ORCHESTRA
Iron Horse
Oct. 25

NORTHAMPTON — Antibalas Afrobeat Orchestra led an energetic crowd through a wild sonic party in an early show Friday night at the Iron Horse in Northampton.

After a group huddle and rousing cheer, the band filed upstairs in a seemingly endless procession of musicians and instruments and somehow managed to fit the whole gang on stage. With 13 members this ensemble was a true spectacle in the intimate setting of the renowned dinner club.

Wasting no time, Antibalas kicked off their set with a multi-layered buildup from drums to rhythm guitar to a keyboard-driven melody. Their name roughly translates as "bullet-proof," and they were indeed heavily armored. With five guys on drums and percussion, the band propelled itself forward with a perpetual motor. Taking the first solo, Todd Simon coaxed a mellow, cool tone from his flugelhorn and strolled through a few choruses with a lyrical, playful approach. The four horns found room to flex their muscles, though, concluding the tune with a well-arranged chart that evoked the sound of a baroque brass fanfare. Duke Amayo left the bell and sticks to take the mic, with a "Say yeah, yeah!" that drew a tepid response from the crowd. Luckily this was a short-lived phenomenon, as the audience quickly warmed up to the band.

Things got even hotter when Amayo took over on vocals for a cover of "Excuse-O," a song released in 1976 by Fela Anikulapo-Kuti. With a monster hook and waves of crashing drums, this tune is an auditory machine gun and Amayo commanded the room with bravado and swagger that were entirely appropriate as a tribute to the late Nigerian master. The song faltered briefly with a miscued tenor solo by Stuart Bogie, but Antibalas regrouped easily.

Next was "In The Middle," featuring a change in personnel behind the drum kit and a funky intro. The groove was marred by a Western-style guitar solo that sounded entirely out of place, but a series of nasty percussion breaks rescued the tune.

Amayo continued to reign on the mic throughout the majority of the set, exuding charisma and energy that carried the party. He scatted and rhymed his way through each song, riffing and ranting on anti-materialism, war, and radical social movements. The modest dance floor was full from the get-go, and Amayo led the audience through cheers, call-and-response passages and even dance moves. In fact, a bigger venue would have been entirely appropriate for this event. The bouncing grooves and jubilant horn lines of Antibalas virtually demand that you get up and dance and Friday's audience was limited by the bounds of a cramped dance floor ringed by empty dinner tables.

The night's finale featured an up-tempo rave that climaxed with Bogie's pyrotechnics on tenor sax. Horn leader Aaron Johnson was consistent throughout with imaginative and forceful solos on trombone.

The New York-based outfit dedicated their performance to Sen. Paul Wellstone and his family and signified their opposition to military involvement in Iraq.

Despite their intriguing compositions and skillful, if somewhat meandering, improvisations Antibalas is not much more than a tribute to Fela Kuti. This is not a detriment by any means, as Kuti was both an electrifying musician and tireless crusader for human rights and global justice whose Afrobeat style sounds just as fresh today as it did thirty years ago. Hopefully from this foundation Antibalas will grow further into their own identity to forge a style of music and political philosophy unique to the new century, one that both honors the work of artists such as Fela and applies itself to the challenges of our own times. For the present, Antibalas is lighting the fuse of a musical and popular sea change and Friday night saw the sub-continental revolution come to New England.

Northampton school to perform 'Laramie Project'

NORTHAMPTON — The Williston Northampton School's theater group will be performing the award-winning play The Laramie Project on Oct. 31 to Nov. 2. All performances will begin at 7:30 p.m. In addition, the group will perform a matinee show on Nov. 1 at 3:30 p.m. Tickets for the performance are $5 and can be purchased by calling (413) 529-3000, ext. 4299.

Originally created by Moises Kaufman and his theater company, The Tectonic Theater Project, The Laramie Project was conceived of after the Oct. 12, 1998 beating death of Matthew Shepard in Laramie, Wyoming. Basing the play solely on interviews with the townspeople, and their reactions to Shepard's death, Kaufman and his theater group visited Laramie six times, and interviewed as many as 200 people.

David Nields, the director of the Williston Northampton School's theater group remarked, "everyone plays a real person in this play, and every word is a real word. You'll hear yourself up on the stage."

Susan Daniels, the artistic director of the Pioneer Valley Summer Theater has been hired as Guest Director of the performance. The play is, according to Nields, "about a community coming to grips with itself. It is ultimately a hopeful play, one that brings hope, change and understanding."

MATTHEW SHEPARD

Returning to her hometown of Easthampton to discuss the upcoming performances will be Leigh Fondakowski, of the Tectonic Theater group. Fondakowski will be speaking in the Reed Center of the Williston Northampton School about The Laramie Project Oct. 30 at 7 p.m. This event is free to the public.

—Melissa A. Thompson

■ horror

shopping mall in George Romero's meta-Night of the Living Dead sequel.

The Evil Dead (1982) Bruce Campbell's campy square-jaw heroism, Sam Raimi's maverick direction and a whole load of cheaply made forest horror flick sprang from this B-movie classic. Manages to be both loopy and scary.

The Exorcist (1973) Little Linda Blair is possessed by Satan in what many consider the scariest movie of all time.

Freddy vs. Jason (2003) You all know the deal...bwah-ah-ah! Now see the campfire classic that inspired nine sequels, most of them lousy. Not the greatest movie ever, for sure, but a must see for horror buffs.

Ginger Snaps (2001) How has this beast of werewolf tale been overlooked? Scary, dark and acted with amazing power especially by young newcomer Katharine Isabelle, this isn't just a teen horror flick, but one of the best looks at lycanthropy of all time. The emotional journey to Darcy Walton's screenplay matches the flashbacks backed out only a gifted editor.

Halloween (1978) John Carpenter's Babymark horror film is single-handedly responsible for spawning the entire slasher film genre.

In the Mouth of Madness (1995) Carpenter hits the first again with this twisted Lovecraftian tale of terror. Not quite as hell filmic like his first two films, but it wasn't supposed to be anything by Lovecraft.

Jaws (1975) If only because it created the summer movie and launched Steven Spielberg. Oh, and because it is very scary.

A Nightmare on Elm Street (1984) Wes Craven's career was launched by this movie, take on the burgeoning dream-world. Robert Englund played the iconic, gold-marked supernatural killer Freddy Krueger to perfection. Indeed, it is only this featured Johnny Depp didn't have a role.

Poltergeist (1982) The freaks little tale of a family house being haunted by pesky spirits is a Halloween week must-watch.

Ravenous (1999) This utterly unclassifiable cannibal Western flopped big time when it was released into theaters. But this gory period piece has deservedly found a cult following on video. Stars Guy Pearce, pre-Memento.

Scream (1996) Homage to the 80s slasher film, parody of 80s slasher film or just a new version of the 80s slasher film? Kevin Williamson's witty screenplay never gave us any doubt this clever satire is all three at once.

The Shining (1980) Many people consider Stanley Kubrick's adaptation of Stephen King's novel one of the scariest movies ever. Pretty damn creepy, but too bad it never actual follows Kings novel closely enough.

The Sixth Sense (1999) "I see dead people" was permanently added to the American lexicon with this tale of a boy who sees ghosts. M. Night Shyamalan's thriller was the first horror film in years to be nominated for a Best Picture Oscar, thanks to a terrific performance by young Haley Joel Osment.

Suspiria (1977) Dario Argento's creeps tale of mysterious goings-on at an Italian ballet school is a terrifying example of the genre called giallo.

The Texas Chainsaw Massacre (1974) Teens run into a family of backwoods cannibals in Tobe Hooper's frighteningly all-tension classic. Introduced the world to chainsaw-wielding Leatherface.

The Thing (1982) John Carpenter's remake of the 1951 classic, stayed closer to the original source material, and created a generation's worth of state-of-the-art gore effects. Effectively claustrophobic.

Wes Craven's New Nightmare (1994) Freddy Krueger invades the reel world and terrorizes actress Heather Langenkamp (played by Heather Langenkamp), the heroine from the original Nightmare film, in Craven's clever post-modern spin on the Krueger mythos.

Rappers create stale atmosphere at Pearl Street

By Eric Goodman
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ATMOSPHERE
Pearl Street
Oct. 27

NORTHAMPTON – Rap pioneer Rakim once rhymed, "To me, MC means move the crowd." Although these words were spoken some 15 years ago, the master of ceremonies is still expected to control a crowd from the moment they grab the mic. Unfortunately, most of the performers at the Atmosphere show on Sunday at Pearl Street didn't exemplify the true meaning of the title MC.

While there's no debate that all of the performers at the show were skilled rappers, it was very apparent that these men were lacking in the skill of being good MC's. Too often the term MC and rapper are taken to mean the same thing but, in reality, they are totally different. While a rapper might be able to make a story come alive with his words or drop a whole bunch of clever metaphors, an MC is able to grab a crowd and control their every movement until it is his time to get off the mic and pass it to the next MC. Sunday's show basically featured one live MC, Brother Ali and a whole bunch of talented rappers.

First up on the mic was the visibly angry Prime. Judging by his lyrics and emotional delivery, this man certainly has a lot of pent up aggression that he chooses to release via a microphone. It seemed that Prime's energy was derived from the dissatisfaction of the crowd as he encouraged the crowd to yell "F@*k you Prime, we don't like you Prime." Based on his highly angry performance, where he was all but cursing out his audience, Prime seems to be in need of some serious anger management courses.

The Oddjobs were the next group to take the mic. Backed by a variety of deep, bass driven instrumentals, it's safe to say that this group's album Drums is the one album, out of all the groups performing Sunday, that I would want to test out a new car stereo system with. Unfortunately, the Oddjobs were victims of bad sound management as the lead singer's microphone seemed to have never been turned on during most of their performance. The trio of rappers certainly had some nice rhyming skills but they failed to get the crowd to go crazy like true MC's should.

As Brother Ali took to the stage I could have sworn that he was just some roadie doing a sound check or something. The albino MC looked like no one you would expect to be attempting a career in the rap game. However, he disproved any skeptical feelings I had as he began to spit rhymes about his tough life growing up in Minneapolis. His ability to spit crowd cheering acapella rhymes meant that he was the liveliest MC amongst a collection of really skilled rappers.

Finally it was time for the headliners Atmosphere to represent on the microphone. Joined by Blueprint and the Living Legend's own Murs, Atmosphere gave a highly spirited performance during a variety of cuts off God Loves Ugly. Much like Prime, Atmosphere's Slug uses the stage as an outlet for his anger but it never translated into a performance that had the crowd in a fury.

Overall, the show played out more as a showcase of talented rappers than an actual real live hip-hop show.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN & OCMP
New England's Largest College Daily
Present
Dining Out
Coming Soon
Lunch and Sign up for Test Restaurants
November 7th

HALLOWEEN at THE HARP
LIVE MUSIC
N.B.I.B.
Costume Contest
Grand Prizes for Best Costumes
(every costume wins a small prize)
SPOOKTACKULAR SPECIALS ON BEER & DRINKS
Bring your carved Jack-o-lantern for a free drink prize!

WIRELESS SAVINGS!
SAVE $40.00
Introducing the Sony Ericsson T61C
The New Look of Reliability
$69.99 Regular Price
$30.00 Mail-in Rebate
$10.00 Instant Rebate
$29.99 Your Cost
With new 1 year agreement. Some restrictions apply.
• Personalize your phone with snap-on front and back color covers and customizable ring tones
• Keep in touch with two-way text messaging.
• Surf the web with the five-way joy stick and soft keys.
The T61C makes calling fun and easy!
4000 Night & Weekend Anytime Minutes when on the America's Choice Network
Plus
1000 Anytime Mobile To Mobile
Minutes to call any of our 30 million customers nationwide on our national mobile to mobile network.
AMERICA'S CHOICE
300 anytime minutes FOR $39.99 monthly access With 1 or 2 year agreement
Unlimited nationwide long distance. No roaming charges coast-to-coast.
All when calling on the America's Choice™ network.
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 99¢/min. CDMA tri-mode phone with updated software required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless
www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley 322 Russell St. 413.587.3248
Holyoke 50 Holyoke Mall 413.533.2500
verizon wireless
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri. 9:01pm-5:59am Sat. 12am-Sun. 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and Calling Plan. $35 activation fee applies. $175 early termination fee applies. Requires credit approval. Cannot be combined with other service promotions. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Minute to mobile calls depleted by calls made during night and weekend hours. Subject to taxes & other charges. Not available in all markets. Geographic and other restrictions apply. See brochure and sales representative for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless

the FRESH CUTS
Your alternative music source.
7.99 THURSDAY Five Stories Falling
7.99 JOEY MCINTYRE AND EMAN One Too Many
9.99 DANA GLOVER Runaway
9.99 BURNING BRIDES Fall Of The Hearts
10.99 SIS-SIS Kismet
11.99 CKY Infiltrate • Destroy • Rebuild
15.99 UNDERWORLD A Hundred Days Off
21.99 WOODSTOCK MUSIC FESTIVAL Various Artists
MEDIA PLAY
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Selection, pricing and special offers may vary by store and online.
Sale ends November 9, 2002. www.mediaplay.com

Smith sets record in loss

Emmitt Smith, who looked like he was running on empty in the first seven weeks of the season, seemed rejuvenated in Sunday's loss to Seattle that saw No. 22 break the most coveted record in football – career rushing yards gained.

Smith, who needed 93 yards coming into the contest, burst through the line of scrimmage Sunday like a 23-year-old, instead of the 33-year-old he is. Smith gained 109 yards on the afternoon against a terrible Seahawks run defense – not shocking that the words "terrible" and "Seahawks" are in the same sentence – but couldn't lead his equally terrible Dallas Cowboys to victory as Seattle nailed a last second field goal for the 17-14 win.

Smith, who rushed for every yard as a member of the Cowboys, wore a different jersey in each quarter. He would give one to the National Football League Hall of Fame, one to team owner Jerry Jones, one to a charity, and one for himself. This, of course, begs the question, what would Smith have done with the jersey if he hadn't made it to 93 yards Sunday? After all, very few experts expected him to accomplish the feat this week. Personally, I would have sold them to little people as nightgowns.

Just throw him the darn ball!

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers had no offense last year. Never really a true threat to win anything without being able to move the ball, the Bucs ownership decided to made a trade for Oakland Raiders Head Coach Jon Gruden, who was considered an offensive mastermind.

But the team has continued to struggle on offense this season, especially because the offense isn't getting the ball to receiver Keyshawn Johnson. The garrulous Johnson is the most underutilized receiver in the NFL this season, catching just 32 passes this season despite being one of the most talented players in the league.

On Sunday, the Bucs nearly lost to the lowly Carolina Panthers because of their terrible offense, but were bailed out by three long-range field goals (52 yards, 53 yards, 47 yards) by kicker Martin Gramatica in the fourth quarter for an all field goals 12-9 win. Johnson caught just two balls for 21 yards. If Gruden wants his team in the Super Bowl hunt this year, he has to get the ball to No. 19 much more often.

This would also help my fantasy team, by the way.

My fantasy team

Despite Johnson's refusal to catch passes this week and my supreme lack of tight ends, I stopped a four-game losing streak with a scrappy win over The Pesky Cats. Lonesome Sundays benefited from another strong day from Kansas City running back Priest Holmes, but it was Pittsburgh Steelers wide receiver Plaxico Burress who really stepped up. He scored a pair of touchdowns before being ejected in the second quarter. Maybe if he played the whole game, I would have been more comfortable with my lead heading into "Monday Night Football." But it worked out for the best anyway.

Cousin vs. Cousin

In what is probably an ESPN Instant Classic, Falcons quarterback Michael Vick beat his older cousin, quarterback Aaron Brooks, and the New Orleans Saints, 37-35 in a game that showcased the talents of each QB.

Vick led the Falcons 60 yards downfield on 11 plays in 2:20 to set up Jay Feeley's game-winning 47-yard field goal. No. 7 completed three passes for 37 yards and ran twice for 14 yards on the drive. He completed 16-of-24 pass attempts in the contest for 195 yards while running the ball 10 times for 91 yards, including two touchdown scores.

Brooks countered with 192 yards passing, two touchdown throws and 38 yards rushing on the day, but couldn't extend the fourth quarter lead beyond 35-34, allowing his younger cousin a chance for the comeback.

If this was college football...

Here is how my Top 10 would look:

1. San Diego (6-1) – The Chargers remain in the atop spot after their bye week. Expect their record to improve to 7-1 as they take on the terrible N.Y. Jets at home Sunday.

2. Green Bay (6-1) – The Pack stays at No. 2 after a bye week, but a win over No. 3 Miami at home this weekend could push them up to the top spot.

3. Miami (5-2) – Apparently, having a bye week is better than playing a game, as the Dolphins also had a bye this week. The Fins will debut newest free agent pickup Cris Carter on "Monday Night Football" next week against the Packers. Should be a great matchup in what may be an early preview of the Super Bowl.

4. Denver (6-2) – Denver followed up a solid win over KC with a win over the Super Bowl Champion New England Patriots in Foxboro this weekend. I'm not sure if this proves the Broncos' strength or just how bad the Pats have fallen.

5. Philadelphia (5-3) – A good, sound beating of the Giants on Monday and an amazing day by Donovan McNabb cement the Eagles as a true Super Bowl candidate.

6. New Orleans (6-2) – A tough, last-second 37-35 loss to the Atlanta Falcons hurts the Saints a bit, but they have a bye week to think about it and get the team back on track. In the meantime, holy cow, Deuce McAllister is an All-Pro!

7. San Francisco (5-2) – The Niners rebounded nicely from a tough loss to the Saints last week to beat the Arizona Cardinals 38-28 and take over sole possession of first place in the NFC West. I don't know about giving up 28 points to the Cards, though. That would have me worried if I was a Bay Area fan.

8. Tampa Bay (6-2) – I'll say the same thing I said in this spot last week: Throw it to Keyshawn! I don't understand why Gruden isn't having whichever Johnson is playing QB just throw the ball to No. 19. He is one of the few guys who can really just flat-out carry a team in the NFL. Johnson's terrible day almost cost the Bucs against the Carolina Panthers, for crying out loud.

9. Oakland (4-5) – God I hate the Raiders. It's nice to see the wheels coming off so early with this week's loss to the Chiefs. This weekend's game against Bay Area rival San Francisco will either help them bounce back or put a little more dirt on the pile. Let's all hope for the latter.

10. Kansas City (4-4) – They may not have a great record, but since no one deserves it and Priest Holmes is the man, I figured it was the Chiefs' turn for a week here. They are winning some shootouts and if the defense ever comes together, KC could make a run at the playoffs. Too bad they are the first team in the Top 10 from the AFC West. The AFC West: tough place to play.

U-Mass' own

Arizona tailback Marcel Shipp scored a pair of touchdowns in Arizona's 38-28 loss to the Niners Sunday. Shipp carried the ball six times for 27 yards, increasing his season total to 191 on the year.

Shipp became the all-time leading rusher in the Atlantic 10 while in the Massachusetts backfield with 6,250 yards in his four-year career. Shipp averaged 181.6 rushing yards per game in 1998 and scored 58 touchdowns over his career, both good for second all-time in the A-10.

0-fer watch

I was shaking this weekend, worried about the Bengals' game against Tennessee. With the Bengals (0-7) as the only team left in the 0-fer watch, I was quickly figuring out how to replace that piece of Pig's Skinny when Cincy held a 14-6 halftime lead.

Sills me.

The Bungals gave up 24 second half points to the Titans and lost 30-24 when running back Corey Dillon fell over a blocker just inches away from the go-ahead touchdown on fourth down.

And the clock ran out! Yes!

Cincy now faces its stiffest competition of the year in the expansion Houston Texans. Houston is just 2-5 with a rookie quarterback (David Carr) and a good defense.

I'll be holding my breath all week.

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist. Pig's Skinny runs every Wednesday.

Women's tennis season ends at ITA Championships

By Nick Wright
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts tennis team concluded the fall portion of its schedule this past weekend, when three of the squad's members competed in the regional ITA Championships held in Cambridge, Mass.

Sophomore Stephanie Price took part in the singles for the Minutewomen while junior captain Susan Hyams teamed up with sophomore Sasha Edelstein to play in the doubles part of the tournament.

Neither Price nor Hyams and Edelstein in the doubles could make the main draw. Despite early successes they could not make it through the qualifying rounds.

"We were hoping to get into the main draw," Hyams said. "It's [the] luck of the draw, sometimes you get a seed early on sometimes you don't."

The Minutewomen last played a competitive match on the Oct. 2, when they suffered a 5-2 loss to Connecticut. Subsequent games against Marist and St John's were rained out.

"I think it was unfortunate we had those two games cancelled, at the time everyone was healthy and playing well," Hyams said.

"The team is in pretty good shape."

This lack of competitive playing time was not initially evident as both Price in the singles and Hyams and Edelstein in the doubles started the tournament with impressive wins.

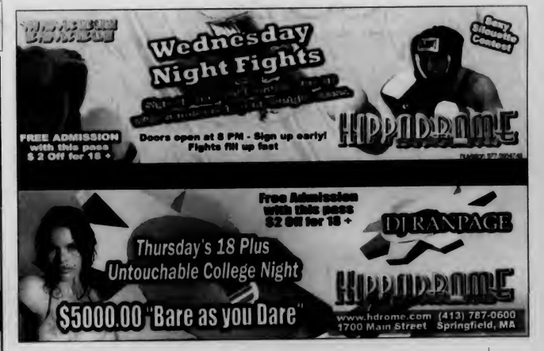
In the first round of qualifying, Price dropped only one game and defeated Caitlin Link of Rutgers 6-1, 6-0. Price, though, could not repeat this feat in the last 16, where she faced Rachael Williams of Brown. Price won a close first set 7-5 but lost the next two sets 6-3, 6-1 to crash out of the competition.

In the doubles, Hyams and Edelstein won their qualifying round of 16 match up by defeating the Dartmouth pairing of Ann Scott and Evelyn Steven, 8-3, but met stiffer opposition in the quarterfinals, and were defeated 8-5 by the Syracuse team of Daniela Kaluskova and Wei-Ming Leong.

The tournament marks the end of the fall season for the team and there have been some highlights along the way. In particular Stephanie Price winning the number two flight singles at the Eastern Collegiate women's tennis championships on Sept. 15. At the same championships Sasha Edelstein reached the final of the number one flight singles, only to lose the championship match.

The Minutewomen finished the fall season 1-1 in dual match play as scheduled contests against Marist and St John's were washed out due to rain.

Their spring schedule is much busier with, weather permitting, a scheduled 18 dual match contests to look forward to.



The Maroon and White return to action on Feb. 8 against Harvard.

www.dailycollegian.com

Sports@dailycollegian.com

If you're planning to attend Graduate School, or even thinking about it ...
Come to the
GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL INFORMATION DAY
TODAY!
Wednesday, October 30
11 am to 3 pm
Student Union Ballroom
Take advantage of this opportunity to meet one-on-one with representatives from over 130 graduate, medical, dental, law, social work, theology, international relations, education, library science programs and a range of other post-baccalaureate options from across the US and abroad.

Attend "Creating a Personal Statement" Workshop
Make your Grad School Application stand out!
at 10:30 am, 12:30 pm & 2:30 pm
Find out about the GRE, LSAT, GMAT and MCAS tests
Call 413-577-0417 for more information
See www-ccn.acad.umass.edu and click on "Events Calendar" for a list of attending schools/departments

Interested in a
Challenging and Exciting Career
that will put your Social Concerns into Action?
Consider a career in Clinical Social Work!
To find out more about an MSW or Ph.D. in social work, attend the Smith College School for Social Work.
INFORMATION DAY
Including small group discussions with faculty, students and alumni and information on course work, placement, financial aid and student life.
November 2, 2002
1:00 - 5:30 p.m.
Seelye Hall, Room 106, Smith College
For more information call (413) 585-7960
E-mail: ssw.admis@smith.edu
www.smith.edu/ssw
SMITH COLLEGE School for Social Work

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

LL3 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Jostens Ring Day Sale, University Store, Fri 11/1 10 4PM, Sat 11/2 10 6PM www.jostens.com 800-

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

91 Geo Storm Hatchback In Good Condition $700 or B/O 413-250-3713

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Aerobics Instructors wanted for on campus. Experience necessary, CPR required. Two to six classes per week. $18 per class. Call Judi 545-1962.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR SALE

R Pessoa Saddle in Exc. Condition. 16 1/2 in seat Reg Tree Leathers, Irons, & Girth Included. Color of saddle is Tobacco. Close contact/ All purpose. $900 OBO Call Tammy at 978-297-3431

Tori Amos Tickets for sale. Nov. 19. TSongas Arena. Good seats. Best offer. Call Kevin 546-4640.

GREAT FOOD, GREAT BOOKS

Sale sponsored by Eta Sigma Phi Herter Hall Lobby Wed & Thurs Oct 30-31, 9-2 Prices from $0.25 - $5

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.universitybartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwaresx.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

In the Brook Townhouses 425/ NEG. On Bus line Patio Basement Washer/ Dryer No down payment NEC. – Just rent Call 413-896-6946

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted. Gorgeous 2 bedroom uptown apartment, fully renovated. Huge bedroom with walk-in closet. Parking included. Fully furnished living room and kitchen. Available January. $462.50/ month plus utilities. Call Lindsay at 549-7235

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

2-3 bedroom apartment on Kellogg St.– Great location– uptown. Newly renovated. Front and back porch- Fall option. Call Schuyleroat 253-4643.

Large 4 bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

TRAVEL

Air Taxi, transportation in/ out of Northampton Airport to your destination. L&E Air Charter (401)-524-1697

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! www.intercampus.com or call 1-800-327-6013 Guaranteed Lowest Prices. Free Meals and Drinks! Cancun, Jamaica, Florida and Bahamas Party Cruise! Our Seventeenth Year! Reps Wanted!

Save 50% off over 2 thousand hotel resorts Call Conard 584-5198

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

TRAVEL

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

YOUR AD HERE

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS / 3
4	NBC / 22
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Cinema
8	WB / 30
9	UPN 38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN InfoChannel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Closed-to-Given
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Cinma Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement! UMass!

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

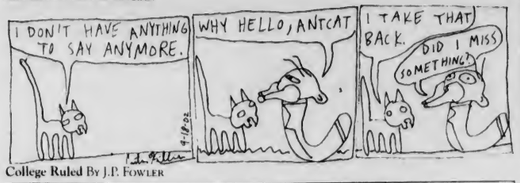
Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 413-545-3500



Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Fang Shy By Blake

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Mos Eisley spaceport. You will never find a more wretched hive of scum and villainy. We must be cautious."

-Obi Wan Kenobi

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 25	HIGH: 47 LOW: 31	HIGH: 43 LOW: 32

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – This is a good time to call in those outstanding debts.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Those in authority may have something over you today.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may be after a little more gusto from people you associate with today.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Your calm, positive approach will be well received and appreciated by those around you today.
PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – Your intuition is keen today, but you may become derailed if you allow your intellect to control your decision-making.
ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – You may be required to donate your soul to a meaningless cause.
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Memories will play a big part in how you think and act today.
GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – This is a good day to be thinking of love and romance.
CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – The overall tone of the day may be determined by a few minute decisions.
LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – A new and unusual opportunity may arise for you today.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – You may be standing on the brink of an unbelievable discovery today.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) –Others will seek you out today in order to share their opinions with you in an unrestricted fashion.

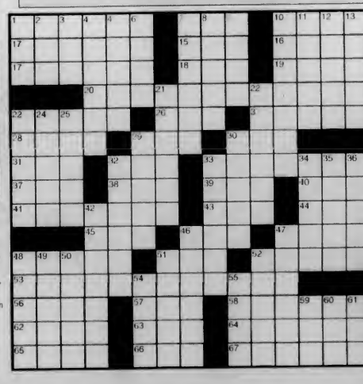
SUBMIT YOUR COMICS TO MATT DESPRES, 545-1762.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Cream of Spinach Soup
American Chop Suey
Cajun Lightning Chicken
Vegan Nuggets (vegan)
Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods (vegan)

DINNER
Cream of Spinach Soup
Turkey Cutlet
Roast Beef
Madras Tofu Curry (vegan)

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Wed: Reggae Night
Thurs: NBFB - Halloween party (Rock Rhythm & Blues)
Fri: Irish Seisiun
Sat: Valley Reggae All-Stars
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 Crestfallen
7 Health club
10 Far East nanny
14 Blackboard accessory
15 Gear tooth
16 Ramble around
17 Junes's sign
18 Guanabara Bay port
19 Plaid weavers
20 Porch furnishing (2 wds.)
23 Not our
26 Make a decision
27 In good time
28 — d'oeuvre
29 Denver his
30 "Rope-a-dope" boxer
31 Wayfarer's refuge
32 Sigh of content
33 Tow truck
37 "Vive le —!"
38 AAA suggestion
39 Tire filler
40 Rosie's st
41 Romantic
43 Set
44 Weeks per annum?
45 No gentleman
46 Subway opposites
47 Envelope abbr
48 Balked
51 — Paulo
52 Overgrown
53 Hockey or football
56 Sgt. Snorkel's dog
57 Feedbag morsel
58 Hesitated
62 Gull cousin
63 Sprawl
64 Give a complement
65 Gin flavoring
66 Hockey great Bobby —
67 Bobcats

DOWN
1 Eldest March girl
2 Untethered metal
3 Smash
4 Isaac beloved
5 Pedro's mister
6 Novelist — Ambler
7 Actor's lines
8 Pencil end
9 In a tizzy
10 Primitive
11 Wisdom tooth
12 Be of use
13 Tudor name
21 Proper
22 Tuna salad ingredient
23 Ring finger
24 Esteem
25 Baseballer — Banks
29 Alike, as socks
30 Met highlights
32 Fleet of ships
33 Smack
34 Chieftain's plaids
35 Mrs. Bunker
36 Damp
42 Cleaning fluid
46 Spring holiday
47 Fall
48 Highlanders
49 Monopoly buy
50 Preface, briefly
51 Ramp alternative
52 "The — Bunch"
54 Wyo. neighbor
55 Translucent gem
59 Half a dozen
60 Before, to Shakespeare
61 — Plaines, Ill.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	O	L	E		A	M	A	S	S		F	A	S	T
I	R	O	N		B	E	R	T	H		O	L	L	A
T	E	A	R		A	L	T	A	R		T	O	U	R
Z	O	D	I	A	C		R	U	P	T	U	R	E
			C	P	U		U	R	G	E
V	A	M	O	O	S	E	S		S	L	A	T	E
O	R	A		E	V	A			C	O	B	R	A
C	O	N	C	I	S	E		G	L	U	S	H	A	S
A	S	I	A	N		A	N	A		O	D	E
L	E	A	V	E		N	U	R	T	U	R	E	S
			P	O	U	T		D	A	M
I	M	P	E	N	E	T	R	A	B	L	E		R	I	P	E	N	S
F	U	R	Y		N	E	H	R	U		I	D	E	A
F	L	O	E		C	R	E	A	M		R	I	B	S
V	I	E	W	S		E	S	S	E	S		E	T	R	E

10-30-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Technician	Daniel Davies Jr.
Copy Editor	Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor	Shannon Farrington
Production Staff	Lizzy Nielsen, Scott Pihl

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

SAM THE MINUTEMAN MAY BE GETTING A FACELIFT AS THE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT LOOKS TO UPDATE ITS IDENTITY.

McCaw looks for new Sam

Athletics plans mascot retooling

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Is the Minuteman getting a makeover?

According to Massachusetts Athletic Director Ian McCaw, it is likely that the maroon-and-white-donned mascot may be in for a minor tweaking soon. The AD feels that UMass doesn't have enough strong, recognizable symbols and will likely bring in a consulting firm to help liven things up.

"We're looking at bringing in a professional firm to take a look at our whole identity," McCaw said. "The UMass script is our strongest identifier – but I think beyond that our other marks and logos are lacking a bit.

"The Minuteman is 25 years old."

Other than that UMass script, there are no logos that include the mascot that stand out for the school.

"We need to have a real strong graphic identifier of our logo, which we don't have," McCaw said.

A tweaking to the color schemes are also likely, as the school would like to finally settle and use one version of maroon for everything.

"We have a lot of inconsistencies with our colors," McCaw said. "We are all over the board [with] different reds and different maroons. We need to tighten that up."

The changes will allow for a more professional image to present to the public.

"We really want to have a strong, clean, high-quality image that we can portray to the public in all of our publications," McCaw said.

The change comes as McCaw's second major public move since taking over as AD in July.

McCaw debuted MinuteFAN Park Saturday, Oct. 12, at the football team's Homecoming game against Maine. He has described it as an "exciting carnival-like atmosphere for our fans and students." There is a kids zone that includes balloons and clowns. The Park includes live music, skill rides and much more.

The Park is open for two hours before every home game and has been met with a good degree of success despite some tough weather conditions in recent home games.

With the success of MinuteFAN Park at football games, McCaw and Bill Lockey, the Assistant Athletic Director in charge of Marketing and Promotions, will be featuring other attractions at this season's basketball games.

"We're going to try to do a lot of different things around the arena and around the game," McCaw said.

"We're going to have a contest for students at every home game," McCaw said. "There will be some type of a give-away, prize, or shooting contest for every game."

West Coast rivalry rejuvenates NBA

GLEN STRAUB

A football crowd enters the Staples Center arena in Los Angeles and like many L.A. crowds they stroll in late. Normally the seats for a L.A. Lakers game aren't filled up until the second quarter, but tonight is no Friday night preseason contest; the amount of people in the arena watching the match up between the three-time defending champ Lakers and the Sacramento Kings is comparable to a road at an Athletics High tennis match. But what the fans don't know is that just because it is a preseason game and although Shaquille O'Neal is dressed in a plaid shirt and pant suit on the bench, this game will turn out to be the kind of catapult necessary to startup the 2002-03 NBA regular season.

Within minutes of the opening tipoff, the marking of an old fashion sportsfinally ensues. It's the kind of rivalry that the NBA hasn't held in about four years. It's the kind of rivalry that displays a strong competitive force fueled by anger, jealousy and a benefit hatred for the other side.

Following last night's Lakers' Game Seven victory over the Kings in the Western Conference Finals, cerebral warfare began between the two clubs. The catalyst can be attributed to push-outs on the Kings part – originating about the officiating in the series. Vlade Divac feels that he will no longer the same calls that Shaq and Kobe caught. The refs feel bad that O'Neal is hacked all game long. Shaq and the Lakers refused to comment on this Kings complaints, but in training camp earlier this month, O'Neal proclaimed that he does not care what the Sacramento "Queens" have to say.

But Hell has been flowing between the two squads from the Golden State throughout the offseason and there won't am, better way for ESPN to kick off their NBA coverage this season than with a preseason primetime contest between the two infuriated clubs. ESPN got exactly what they wanted – something to be excited about in the up-and-coming season.

So with about eight minutes left in the first quarter, in front of the better late than never crowd of L.A., a scuffle between Lakers' forward Rick Fox and Kings guard Doug Christie ensued. The two were tangled heading down the court. Fox gave Christie a backhanded botch to his face and Christie nailed Vanessa Williams' husband with a beautiful left-hand uppercut it has been. The two players were ejected but that is only where the fun began.

Fox must have been so upset that someone actually put their hands on his misdemeanor mug that he greeted Christie in the locker room tunnel as the two were leaving the court. Fox landed a blow and Christie responded. All of a sudden the entire Kings bench and Shaq were in the tunnel breaking up a brawl.

Now the initial reaction by many is it's just a preseason game what is the point in fighting – it's just stupid. However, I see it as encouraging.

I say welcome back NBA, welcome back to the NBA of old. This is an NBA of players who care about what jersey they are wearing, not how much money they are making. It is an NBA in which rivalries are growing such as ones between the Nets and Celtics and the Lakers and Kings. The younger budding players are more talented than ever but a 40-year-old draped in a wizard's cape will lead his team to the playoffs except this time coming off the bench.

Yes, believe it or not Michael Jordan the greatest player ever, will spend his last season as a player as a sixth man. Head Coach Doug Collins made the adjustment and Jordan, has backed up his coach wishes. The surprising move is thanks in part to a brilliant offseason by the Washington Wizards.

Within a couple of weeks this summer, the Wizards went from a team looking from the outside in the playoff hunt to a team that is looking to go to the NBA Finals. In a steal of a trade, Washington acquired Jerry Stackhouse from Detroit for guard Richard Hamilton. Hamilton has potential but Jordan could not wait around any longer for the blossoming to occur. Now he has one of the best pure scorers in the league on his team – a perfect subject for Jordan to groom. The Wizards also picked up Larry Hughes and Brent Russell. Russell's worst moment in his career was maybe Jordan's best. The well-documented last shot of Jordan's career with Chicago to win the NBA Finals in 1998 was shot over Russell when he was on the Utah Jazz.

Now Washington is not the end all to the teams that will have success this season. The West is still the best. The title is determined in the Western Conference finals these days, not the NBA finals.

The Kings will come into the 2002-03 campaign like they did the year before as the most talented team in the league. They bolted up over the summer by acquiring the defensive gent – Keon Clark from Toronto. Once again they will give the Lakers a run for their money. This time though the drive to dethrone the champs is stronger than ever now that they are "Queens" in Shaq's eyes.

Looking to take the headlines away from the Kings and Lakers quietly is the San Antonio Spurs. Tim Duncan is a free agent after this year and historically professional athletes have improved their PAs dramatically in their free agent year. Will Duncan continue the trend? If he does the Spurs are the best team in the league.

***

After three straight years of west coast domination, the Eastern Conference teams this summer built their clubs around defeating the powers of the west. The Orlando Magic, will finally have the services of Grant Hill. Although a fallen superstar due to injury, his impact this year could put Orlando in high places.

New Jersey is the best-constructed club in the East. The acquisitions of Dikembe Mutumbo, Chris Childs, and Rodney Rogers were brilliant moves by President Rod Thorn and when the Nets surprisingly wins the title this year, he will repeat as Executive of the Year.

Celtic fans don't worry, I didn't forget about you. Boston's success relies squarely on the shoulders of its most significant pick-up this offseason – Vin Baker. If he plays well, the lack of a point guard will be forgotten.

Oh and Knicks fans, yesterdas another fantastic move was made by GM Scott Layden. He gave Head Coach Don Chaney a contract extension.

Glen Straub is a Collegian Columnist.

Tribe ascends ranks

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The round robin has begun.

Over a three week-stretch, the NCAA playoff picture will become much clearer as three Atlantic 10 powers – Villanova, William and Mary and Northeastern – play each of their competitors for what looks to be the third spot out of three, whereas that will make the postseason.

Give a hand one to William and Mary.

The Tribe was an unceremonious host to Northeastern as it upended its visitors from Boston, 30-13. Preseason All A-10 QB David Corley led the charge with 267 yards and two scores in the air while running for a third touchdown. Corley picked up his fifth career A-10 Offensive Player of the Week Award for his efforts and he took over the career record for passing touchdowns with 63.

Jonathan Smith pitched in 102 yards and a touchdown, while Rich Musinski – who has established himself as the top receiver in the conference – caught six balls for 132 yards and a pair of TDs.

The Tribe defense knocked out Husky quarterback Shawn Brady early in the game, and though Sean Cassidy performed admirably in relief, NU would amass just under 300 yards for the game.

William and Mary now takes on Nova on the road this week in the A-10's biggest game. Should the Tribe come out victorious, it will control its own destiny for the conference championship. Northeastern heads to Richmond this week for what might be its last chance at the playoffs, as three conference losses would likely have the Huskies at home after Thanksgiving.

MAINE'S JARE EATON (NO. 18) LED HIS TEAM TO A FOURTH QUARTER COMEBACK, AVOIDING A TRAGEDY AGAINST HOFSTRA.

MEADE STADIUM BECAME LAKE MEADE ON SATURDAY.

Avoiding the upset

Many fans feel that Maine is far from the team that it was before having two of its receivers suspended from the University. But the Black Bears still held the No. 6 spot in the nation coming into this week. Playing host to Hofstra this past weekend looked to be just a speed bump as Maine looked like the odds on favorite to win the A-10.

But Head Coach Jack Cosgrove's club was without its leading defender Stephen Cooper and was in a 17-0 halftime hole to the Pride. An uneventful third quarter saw the Black Bears within sight of a defeat, down 17-3.

Then along came Maine's MVP, Hofstra quarterback Andrew English.

English threw three interceptions in a span of less than four minutes to hand the game to Maine. Jarrod Gomes, Brian Mann and Rob Kierstead were the recipients of English's philanthropy. Jake Eaton successfully led the team to a pair of offensive touchdowns and ate up more than enough clock time to give the Bears a 24-17 victory.

The win extended Maine's home win streak to 11 games, and the Bears will try to extend it to 12 in two weeks when Delaware comes to town. Hofstra faces non-conference Elon College this weekend.

Does anybody know how to build an ark?

Many people could tell that the Rhode Island team that started last year was all washed up this season. What most didn't know is that they could also be all washed out.

Saturday's contest against Richmond was suspended at halftime after a monsoon struck Rhode Island. The field was completely under water – and I am completely serious here – as the benches began to float away. Construction on Meade Stadium is blamed at least partially for the flooding, and had the field not been in playing condition by noon on Sunday, the Rams would have been forced to forfeit.

Perhaps that would have been better for them.

Richmond added to a 6-0 lead by tacking on 20 points on Sunday. Kenny Dantzler scored a pair of touchdowns on the ground while Boyd Ouden caught two scores himself – including an 80-yard bomb from D'Arcy Wills, to keep the Spiders alive in the race for the postseason.

Ouden had just three catches, but those went for 116 yards, as Richmond completed just five passes in the game. The Spiders controlled the ball for most of the game, carrying the ball 57 times for 253 yards.

Richmond's defense allowed Rhody under 200 yards of total offense, but it was five turnovers that were the deciding factor in the game. URI fumbled the ball seven times, losing it thrice, as Jayson Davis threw two balls to his opponents.

Avoiding the upset, part two

Before Saturday's James Madison-Massachusetts game, many people were saying the same thing – that the game had all the makings of a letdown for the Minutemen, following consecutive weeks of home wins over top five opponents.

The prediction all but came true on Saturday, as the Maroon and White escaped Harrisonburg with a 14-7 victory, after JMU essentially ended both halves with the ball on the one-yard line.

Shannon James recovered a Jason Cooke fumble with 17 seconds to play to seal the victory for UMass, as the defense provided its second goal line stand of the game against the Dukes. James also got into the offensive action by bolting 48 yards on a fake punt to give the Minutemen their first score of the game.

Neither team played very effectively on offense, as the Minutemen could only muster 310 yards of total offense and JMU turned the ball over four times, with three of those coming inside UMass territory.

Raunny Rosario and R.J. Cobbs combined for 139 yards and Rosario added a five-yard TD plunge in the third quarter. Jeff Krohn went 13-of-22 under center while throwing a pair of interceptions. Krohn only had two days of practice due to a concussion suffered against Villanova.

Matt LeZotte went 12-of-23 for 220 yards, but also threw a pair of interceptions.

The Minutemen control their own destiny in terms of the playoffs. Should they win out, the No. 13 Maroon and White would undoubtedly make the I-AA playoffs. This week's contest with Delaware should be its biggest challenge. JMU will look to break a five-game losing streak when it heads to Kingston this weekend. Hopefully the Dukes bring their galoshes.

Hens can run

The snoozer of the week was held down in Newark, where Delaware toppled New Hampshire 21-9. The Blue Hens outgained UNH on the ground 312-89.

Andy Hall had his second consecutive 100-yard day, going for 157 and a touchdown on 20 carries. Mike Granieri was solid for the Wildcats, throwing for 236 yards on a 26-of-40 performance.

Delaware heads to Massachusetts this week, while UNH has the week off before hosting the Minutemen. Villanova was off this week, and plays host to William and Mary this weekend.

HALOWEEN ICONS Arts page 5. UMASS URBAN LEGENDS Ed Op page 4. BEERS & THE FRIEND Sports page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY ONE ☆☆☆☆☆ 10.31.02

Bilingual education?

JAMES SHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

STUDENTS ASSEMBLED OUTSIDE THE STUDENT UNION YESTERDAY TO PROTEST THE QUESTION 2 REFERENDUM THAT RESTRUCTURES AND ESSENTIALLY REMOVES THE CURRENT BILINGUAL EDUCATION SYSTEM IN MASSACHUSETTS PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

By Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"What is Question 2?" Question 2 is racist," said Isabel Espinal at a rally Wednesday.

Espinal spoke to about 75 supporters of bilingual education on the Student Union steps. The rally was part of a counter campaign to defeat Question 2 on next Tuesday's state ballot.

"[It] will allow everything to stay the same," said Porter. The former English as a Second Language (ESL) teacher said that this August's revisions offer no improvement. A criticism of Porter's is that the bilingual education doesn't include any accountability for instructors.

"The only thing that has brought accountability is MCAS," she said.

The Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) is a test for high school students. Passing the test is required for high school students across the commonwealth.

Accountability for English education in the Unz initiative goes too far, say opponents. Arguing that suing and firing teachers who speak any language other than English in the classroom is unfair, the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA) has united against the immersion program. Porter said that no lawsuits have been brought against teachers in California, or Arizona where the immersion program is also in place.

"You name the day and the MTA will provide you with a classroom," said USA/MTA representative Donna Johnson. Johnson directed her invite toward Unz, who she said has never served as a teacher.

Porter, a retired bilingual educator in the Springfield School district says that immersion is the best way to teach the English language to non-native speakers. "You've got to teach these kids English," she said. "We want to bring immigrants into the mainstream of society."

Porter said that jobs will not be lost, and instead, educators will be retrained to instruct immersion courses.

"This is not a jobs issue, this is not a money issue...it changes the skills that would be needed," said Porter, "It eliminates the least effective part of bilingual education."

Johnson said that Question 2 would further decrease education funds statewide. Opponents claim that a $5 million annual cost for the next decade is too large a price tag for a state that last spring experienced major budget cuts.

"Ronald Unz is from California. He is a multi-millionaire. Do we want him to tell us how to educate," said state representative Ellen Story. "There is no way that you can learn in one year enough to take all your other classes in it."

Story said that the Boston Herald showed 68 percent of voters in favor of question two.

The initiative is a binding question on the ballot. If it receives a majority of yes votes then the immersion program will be put in place. If a majority of no votes are placed then the bilingual education program will remain unchanged.

On the Net: http://www.state.ma.us/sec/ele/elebxq02/hq022.htm

Denmark arrests aide to Chechen leader

By Mara D. Bullaby
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSCOW (AP) – At the Kremlin's urging, Denmark arrested a key aide to Chechen leader Aslan Maskhadov in the deadly raid on a Moscow theater and other terror attacks – further evidence of Russia's success in isolating a rebel movement whose envoys were once received in capitals around the world, including Washington.

Russia also acknowledged for the first time Wednesday that the powerful opiate fentanyl was used in the rescue operation that killed at least 117 hostages.

Health Minister Yuri Shevchenko insisted the compound was an anesthetic that would not cause death under normal circumstances.

Most agree the decision to pump the sedating fumes into the theater early Saturday ended the crisis; it incapacitated the heavily armed Chechen hostage-takers, preventing them from setting off hundreds of pounds of explosives, and led to the safe rescue of more than 660 theater-goers.

But, Shevchenko acknowledged, it was likely fatal for many of the hostages, who were weakened after sitting in cramped quarters for 58 hours, deprived of food, dehydrated and under severe psychological stress.

"It is precisely these factors which led to a lethal outcome for some of the hostages," Shevchenko said.

Fentanyl is most often prescribed as a painkiller, and is usually administered by injection, with a lozenge that dissolves on the tongue, or through a skin patch. Higher doses can be fatal, drug literature warns, and doses must be adjusted according to the patient's size and their previous exposure to similar drugs.

The attackers stormed the theater on Oct. 23, taking an audience of about 800 people hostage and demanding that President Vladimir Putin pull troops out of Chechnya.

Russian officials accuse Maskhadov, the elected president of Chechnya's separatist administration, of being behind the attack, though they have not offered evidence and Maskhadov has denied any connection.

Maskhadov, once seen as key to any political settlement in Chechnya, has sent envoys to world capitals, including Washington. But he has been increasingly sidelined by the Kremlin, and the arrest of his envoy in Copenhagen further boosted Moscow's efforts to isolate the Chechen leadership.

Akhmed Zakayev, who has denied links to terrorism and expressed willingness to start unconditional peace talks with Russia, was detained at his hotel before dawn Wednesday after Danish authorities received documents from Russia via Interpol. He was in Denmark for a Chechen conference.

Zakayev is suspected of a series of terror attacks during the period 1996-1999 and is suspected of taking part in the planning of the hostage-taking crisis in Moscow," Danish police said in a statement.

Danish authorities ordered Zakayev jailed for up to two weeks, and said he may be extradited to Moscow – something the Kremlin has pursued for years. Also Wednesday, Russia asked Turkish authorities to close Chechen foundations in their country, saying they help finance the rebels and were in contact with them during the crisis at the theater. Turkey's Anatolia news agency reported.

Some 25,000 Chechens live in Istanbul and western Turkey, and as many as 5 million Turks trace their roots to the Caucasus region. Turkey has sought to distance itself from the rebels.

Meanwhile, Shevchenko's revelation about the drug used in the theater rescue was likely to win the Kremlin some relief from foreign governments, which had pressed for more details for days.

The U.S. Ambassador to Moscow, Alexander Vershbow, said Tuesday that "with a little more information at least a few more of the hostages may have survived."

Shevchenko defended the actions of medical workers, saying more than 1,000 doses of an antidote had been prepared to help the hostages. But some Russian doctors have said they were given very little information about the type of gas used.

Shevchenko did not name the antidote. Doctors say the effects of opiates like fentanyl can be countered by the drug naloxone.

The gas continued to claim lives, with two more hostages dying overnight, said Tyubov Zbotnova, a spokeswoman for the Moscow health committee.

As of late Wednesday, 132 rescued hostages remained hospitalized, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported, citing Moscow health authorities. A total of 501 patients had been released, but many would require further treatment, Interfax news agency reported.

Also Wednesday, friends crowded a small chapel in Moscow's Kalitnikovo cemetery to remember cellist Vladimir Zhulyov, who was in the orchestra pit when masked gunmen interrupted a performance of the musical "Nord-Ost." It had been Zhulyov's 46th birthday; he could have taken the day off, but he wanted to perform, colleagues said.

Doctors blamed the gas for his death. Across the city, weeping child actors from the musical buried two of their colleagues at the Vagankovo Cemetery: Kristina Kurbatova and Arseny Kurilenko, both 13.

Russians appeared to largely support the rescue operation, with many emphasizing that explosives rigged around the theater could have turned the theater into a tomb.

Both houses of the Russian parliament – a largely filled with pro-Putin factions – supported the Kremlin's actions Wednesday.

Russia's upper house unanimously adopted a resolution praising law enforcement agencies for the rescue, while noting "the hostages were liberated at a dear price."

The lower house, or the State Duma, unanimously passed a similar resolution.

Munayyer spurs debate

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A motion calling for Yousef Munayyer as the new Chancellor of Elections for the Student Government Association struck debate at Wednesday's Senate meeting.

Members questioned Munayyer and his ability to be impartial to the SGA and it's potential candidates in future elections. Senator Matt Progen called for the debate and presented previous articles published by The Massachusetts Daily Collegian and written by Munayyer in which he condemned the SGA.

"I do not think this potential candidate is the right person for the job," Progen said. "I don't think someone who trashes the Senate and the SGA is the person I want in charge of my elections in the spring."

Progen further explained that in another article written by Munayyer, he condemned public safety in stating that he was sick of hearing about rumors.

"The Chancellor of Elections puts referendum questions on the ballot that they feel strongly about and have an interest in," Progen said. "But in this article written he talks down about security stating that he's sick of rumors of attacks."

Munayyer spoke in his own defense claiming that having his own opinions of the SGA is his right and under the First Amendment he has the right to publish them.

"If you further read into the second article referring to rumors and individuals being attacked you would see that I don't want to see anyone else attacked," Munayyer said. "I explain extensively that a call to demand changes in security should be taken at the end of that particular article."

Munayyer further expressed his own opinions regarding fliers, which was presented by Progen as one of his primary complaints during SGA elections. Munayyer explained to the Senate that he felt excessive fliers with pictures of porn stars on them were offensive and he felt unnecessary in an election.

"The Chancellor of Elections in the past found fliers not offensive that I found offensive and inappropriate for an election," Munayyer said. "Last spring there was a poster with a porn star next to a candidate and I found that offensive. I assure you that I will look at fliers objectively and discuss them with my commissioners and together will decide what is tasteful and acceptable and in the same time being fair to the candidates."

With a close vote of 22 for Munayyer, 20 against and five abstentions, Munayyer was approved as Chancellor of Elections. Munayyer's term officially begins November 15.

The Senate also voted and passed unanimously seven Senators onto the Rules and Ethics sub-committee. The Rules and Ethics sub-committee is under the Public Policy and Relations committee and meets when necessary under Senate and committee request.

The Ways and Means committee proposed their guidelines and expectations for Registered Student Organizations requesting budgets for the 2004 fiscal year budget. The motion stated the RSO requirements to attain a budget and the expectations in which they must succeed in order to be considered for a budget. The motion requested the approval and support of the Senate on the Ways and Means committee's timelines and guidelines for the 2004 Fiscal Year Student Activities Trust Fund Budget. The motion passed unanimously by the Senate.

JAMES SHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

SGA SENATORS VOTE 22 YEA, 20 NAY, 5 ABSTAIN IN A MOTION TO APPOINT YOUSEF MUNAYYER THE CHANCELLOR OF ELECTIONS AT LAST NIGHTS MEETING IN THE CAMPUS CENTER.

Southern Methodist's May speaks at Smith

Mark Ostrolt

In honor of the retirement of Social Ethics Professor Thomas Siggel Dean of Smith College, Ethics Professor William F. May gave a speech Tuesday evening in Seelye Hall. Entitled, "Religious Arts Coming from the Coming Together of the Left and Right," Nielson Library Max and Elizabeth Stein Scholar in Methodist University, dedicated his speech to Siggel, and reflected on his years of friendship dating as far back as "almost a quarter century ago."

"I've had pleasure of many talks with [Siggel] over the years," he said. "Every success [Siggel] has had is well deserved and earned."

According to May, all civilizations have the possibility of [illegible] and [illegible]. He believed that [illegible] society is based on [illegible]. They have order which is [illegible] to the [illegible] a passage for order by a society could lead to an unjust tyrant. In the desire for a return of justice, a society could fall back into anarchy, losing all order again.

On the topic of the "Evil Empire" conception of the former Soviet Union, May suggested that many conservative Americans had taken a "dualistic" approach to the concept of evil, suggesting that Americans had perceived the Soviet Union as the fundamental evil, and perceived America to be the "kingdom against Satan." He argued, however, that this approach had grave fault.

"Dualists take Satan too seriously," he said. "They prefer attack but compromise. There will be no deal with Satan."

May argued that the conflict of American Capitalism and Soviet Communism made the fear of Russia attacking "metaphysically grim" for dualists.

However, with the fall of the Soviet Union, May believed that this was now the coming of a new fear of evil for America in the form of anarchy. According to May, there was a shift in society when perestroika and glasnost had emerged, bringing to Russia what he called "economic warlords." He also believed that the first President Bush had feared new chaos in the form of rogue states, in a world without the Soviet Union as a means of order.

May also discussed the new world of America after the attacks on the New York's World Trade Center, and the impending fear of chaos outside the nation's borders.

"The attacks had seemed to split time into two: before and after September 11," he started.

He had said that the attacks had provided an assurance to the fear of America's chaos by first, attacking the symbols of order: the Pentagon and World Trade Center and then giving the people of America the fear of random violence: something that is easily found in a state of anarchy. The attacks themselves, he believed, suggested a means to anarchy, in the way that the terrorists had shown their hostility to a new world order.

"The terrorist attacks don't seem to fit into the world political means and ends," he said. "They can't be understood as a political strategy, but serves more of a religious ecstasy."

Before he ended his speech, he touched on topics of domestic issues that he believes, also add to the fear of anarchy, including the possible emergence of a real anarchy, which would undermine, social order, in pursuit of social justice from what he calls America's "permanent proletariat." After suggesting factors like the unstable stock market, corporate corruption, the isolation of the rich from society, and the fallback of the lower classes as a result of large-scale corporate collapses, May left his audience with a sober warning.

"America will die by suicide, not by the murder of outside forces," he warned.

William F. May, professor emeritus at Southern Methodist University, speaks in Seelye Hall Tuesday evening.

News 40, Salvation Army team up for food drive

Springfield based WGGB News 40, in cooperation with the Salvation Army, is running a food drive. News 40 has agreed to provide turkeys, tolls and cider for over 500 needy families. They are asking for support in the form of food donations from the public that can be dropped off in the parking lot of the WGGB studios at the "Thanksgiving for All" trailer. The drive begins Monday Oct 28 and ends Friday Nov 22.

News 40 has been running this program for the last eight years, providing food to needy families according to a list of names compiled by the Salvation Army. The drive has been so successful in the past that News 40 has received more then enough food to feed the 500 families on the list. Derek Jarvis of WGGB News 40 explained.

"In the past years we have received donations far in excess, and we have been able to donate this to food pantries in the area, to distribute to other needy people in their areas." According to Lorraine Bernier of the Springfield Salvation Army, "The program has been extremely successful, in the past we have served 5 times the amount of people we had set out to feed."

The success of "Thanksgiving for all" in the past has inspired large amounts of community participation. "As the program has grown...several companies and schools in the area including Springfield College have had their own 'Thanksgiving for All' drives," said Jarvis. "They brought pick up trucks loaded with food down, it's more than just viewers now it's a real community project." Bernier does the screening to compile the list of needy individuals for the Salvation Army, whom the meals will be distributed to and depends on News 40 to get the word out and gather the actual donations.

"We couldn't do the drive without them they do the advertising, and they do all the bagging. News 40's own staff people are down in the trailer working."

WGGB News 40 has asked the public for help in the form of donations of canned vegetables, non-perishable desserts, cranberry sauce, and instant potatoes (please, no fresh potatoes). Donations are being accepted at 1300 Liberty Street, in Springfield, in the WGGB parking lot, any time between 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

- Ashley Dolan

NEWS MEETING
TODAY @ 4 PM

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published [illegible] during the University of Massachusetts [illegible] year, except during vacations and holidays. The paper was founded from the University of Massachusetts [illegible] in 1890 as the Index. It changed its name to the Collegian in 1914 and then to the Daily Collegian in 1970. The Collegian is a daily, Monday through Friday, newspaper [illegible] and has been a broadsheet publication since 1967. The Collegian is printed [illegible] and has a circulation of [illegible]. For more information, call (413) 545-3500.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

As an engineer in the U.S. Air Force,
there's no telling what you'll work on.
(Seriously, we can't tell you.)

United States Air Force applied technology is years ahead of what you'll touch in the private sector, and as a new engineer you'll likely be involved at the ground level of new and sometimes classified developments. You'll begin leading and managing within this highly respected group from day one. Find out what's waiting behind the scenes for you in the Air Force today. To request more information, call 1-800-423-USAF or log on to airforce.com.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

November '02

ARTS ON CAMPUS...

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Friday, November 1
Theater - Hamlet performed by the Theatre de la Jeune Lune. Fowler Auditorium at 8 pm with a matinee at 10 a.m. on 11/3 only. $45-2511. Through 11/3

Saturday, November 2
Cultural Night - Harvest Night Poetry, performance and more. Campus Center Auditorium at 6:30 p.m. $ 545-3600

Music - Choral Spectrum UMASS Chorale, Chamber Choir & Women's Chorus. Chorale, Chamber Choir of the Community Music School of Springfield and Longmeadow High School girls' jazz choir. Fine Arts Center Hall at 7:30 p.m. $ 545-2511

Tuesday, November 5
Dance - STOMP an explosive production that is indicated utterly unique show that appeals to audiences of all ages. Concert Hall at 7:30 p.m. $ 545-2511. Through 2511

Music - Clinton Sparks & Clipse Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. $ 545-1976

Theater - The Mineola Twins Pulitzer Prize winner Laura Vosler's comedy romp through the ripe 20th century, Kiana Theater at 8 p.m. 545-2511. $ 11/5 through 11/11, 14

Wednesday, November 6
Coffee House sponsored by the UMass Theater Guild. Open mic for college community and friends. Campus Center Auditorium at 7 p.m. 545-3600

Thursday, November 7
Film - Chunhuang (South Korea, 2000) explores meeting of a clap, an Tale of forbidden love. 7:30 p.m. Herter Rm 227. 545-1980

Music - First Light Jazz Residency the culminating event for a multi-day series of workshops featuring arrangements by both professional artists and students. Guest artist David Berkman with Jazz Ensemble I students, Jeffrey Holmes, director. Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. 545-2511

Music - United States Marine Band works by Franz von Suppe, Dana Mangold and John Philip Sousa's marches. Fine Art Center Concert Hall at 7:30 p.m. 545-2511

Theater - Playreading The Fair Maid of the West, Part II Reading conducted by members of the audience. Scripts provided. Reading Room at the Renaissance Center at 4 p.m. 577-3600

Theater - Love in Disguise a fun 18th-century soap opera with some bite. 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater. 545-2511. $ through 11/7, 11/9, 11/12-11/16 with 2 p.m. matinee 11/9 and 11/16

Friday, November 8
Dance - Sarina Jain Masala Dance Party Fundraiser Masala Bhangra, a fun workout choreographed to dhinnak at 4 p.m. $ 545-2511.

Music - Music For Marimbas, Vibes, Chimes & Computers featuring 20th & 21st century works for mallet percussion. Faculty recital Eduardo Leandro, percussion. Fine Arts Center Room 36 at 8 p.m. Free/faculty recital. Eduardo Leandro, percussion. 545-2227

Wednesday, November 13
GRANT DEADLINE! Arts Council SPE Grant Deadline Call the Arts Council at 545-6202 for more information. Deadline is at noon today. M-TH 3-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm

Literary Arts - Marc Adams reads from his new book The Preacher's Son and other books. Campus Center Room 903 at 7 p.m. 545-4824

Theater - Marcasitas/Mixtures: An Evening of Three Solo Works Maga-zine explores themes of coming-of-age, mortality, and post-September 11th New York City using the power of solo performance. Rowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. $ 545-2511

Music - Music from Brazil by percussion duo Cuerilla & Stay. Fine Arts Center Room 44 at 8 p.m. 545-3227

Thursday, November 14
Dance - Fosse A journey in song and dance through the extraordinary career of showman Bob Fosse. PAC Concert Hall at 7:30 p.m. $ 545-2511

Saturday, November 16
Cultural Night - Cape Verdean Night Dance, music and more! Campus Center Auditorium at 7 p.m. $ 545-3600

Sunday, November 17
Music - University Chorale & Women's Choir Directed by E. Wayne Abercrombie & Danica Buckley with guest soloist Lynn Kuck. Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 4 p.m. $ 545-2511.

Music - Jazz Brunch 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. in the Hampshire Dining Commons 545-2511.

Wednesday, November 20
Music - Solos & Duos Series: Jazz Pianist Ran Blake Concert Hall stage at 8 p.m. $ 545-2511.

Thursday, November 21
Film - Suzhou River/ Suzhou He (China, 2000) Urban mystery set in contemporary Shanghai evokes Hitchcock's Vertigo. 7:30 p.m. at Herter Rm 331. 545-2511.

"Microphone Check" Share poetry, music, more at this open mic. Student Union Room 18A at 8 p.m. 545-3600 or 545-4824.

Music - Trombone Choir & UMass Lowerbrass Directed by David Sporny & John Manning. Fine Arts Center Room 44 at 8p.m. 545-2227

Sunday, November 24
Music - Musicians Wreathe Everywhere Chamber Choir directed by E. Wayne Abercrombie. Bowker Auditorium at 4 p.m. $ 545-2511.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House - 545-5177
M-TU 1-7 pm; W-F 1-5 pm
Islamic Art: Peace and Beauty Through November 22

CENTRAL GALLERY
Central Residential Area
Infirmary Way Wheeler House
545-0680
M-TH 3-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm
Stilled Through November 7
Julia Ferrari: New Work November 14 - December 8

HAMPDEN GALLERY
Southwest Residential Area - 545-0680
M-TH 12-5; SU 2-5 pm
Incubator Project Through December 8
Abstraction as Indicator Through November 7
David Henderson: New Work November 14 - December 8

HERTER ART GALLERY
125A Herter Hall - 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm; SA-SU 1-4 pm
Connie Fox: Recent Paintings Through December 1

STUDENT UNION GALLERY
Student Union Building - 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm; F 10-3 pm;SA-SU 1-4 pm
Senefer Stead Honors Thesis November 4-8
Adam Carullo November 12-15
Peter Baneau & Heather Lapen November 18-22

UNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center - 545-3670
TU-F 11-4:30 pm; SA-SU 2-5 pm
Private Eyes: Image and Identity Through December 13
Helmut Newton / Garry Winogrand Through December 13

Upcoming Arts Council Grant Deadlines:
February 5, 2003 (SPE Grant)
February 26, 2003 (Mini Grant)
March 12, 2003 (SPE Grant)
April 9, 2003 (Mini Grant)

Five College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events.
Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

11/02

UMass Arts Council·101 Hasbrouck Lab·545-0202
www.umass.edu/fac/artscouncil

MICHAEL COLE OF THE UMASS MINUTEMEN SCHOOL SPEAKS TO PROSPECTIVE STUDENTS AT WEDNESDAY'S GRADUATE SCHOOL FAIR IN THE STUDENT UNION BALLROOM.

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

UMass hosts grad school fair

By Amy O'Neill
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Graduate schools from across the country occupied the Student Union Ballroom Wednesday, offering information to all interested Five College area students in the annual Graduate and Professional School Information Day.

"They [students] can get a lot of info in one place from a lot different schools," said Tina Acker, Associate Director of Career Services, who also assisted in the planning of this event. "A lot of students didn't know, for example, that you don't have to take the GRE (Graduate Record Examination) to get into some graduate schools."

The Princeton Review and the Kaplan Center were also on hand to answer student questions about the application process and provide students with information on the workshops meant to help them with their Graduate School requirements, like the GRE.

The Campus Career Network, who puts on this annual event, began recruiting schools to attend as early as last school year and invitations were sent out to the schools in the summer. According to Acker, they even had schools that registered at 5 p.m. the night before.

"It takes a lot of hours [to organize] but it is well worth it," Acker said.

Participants of the over 130 schools in attendance seemed to agree.

"This event has always been done well here in the past," said Amy Killeen, Director of Student Services for Arts and Sciences at Northeastern University. "The student body gets a good education here."

"We have been to this event before and it has always been very successful for us," said Jacqui R. Cornshaw, Director of Admissions at the Yale University School of Medicine, Department of Epidemiology and Public Health.

In addition to traditional graduate schools, the U.S. Navy was in attendance to offer information to students about some different post-college options.

"We are here to promote some programs that we have," Brian Prouty, Medical Programs Recruiter, said. "We offer a lot of programs that students don't know about."

Students seemed to agree that the event was helpful for them to begin looking, or just get more information on their post-graduate options.

"I haven't started a graduate school search and I wanted some ideas of what to look into," Emily Snow, Mount Holyoke College junior majoring in Psychology and Sociology said. "It was definitely helpful."

Graduating senior of Legal Studies, Communication Disorders and Spanish, Leris Rosa, agreed.

"I'm graduating in February and I wanted some info on law schools to decide if I'm going to go for a job or apply to law school," Rosa said. "I think that it was helpful. I talked to a representative about deferring loans, and not getting a job and pursuing a masters because it will be more helpful to me later on."

Organizer of the event and the Assistant Director for Career Planning, Tommie Joyner Jr., felt that turnout this year was comparable to previous years.

"All of the reps are saying there was a good traffic flow all day. We have been fairly busy since it started."

For students interested in finding out more information and were unable to attend today's event, visit the Campus Career Network's website at http://www-ccn.acad.umass.edu and click on the events calendar.

write for news

 IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT ***
PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2003

The Writing Program Placement Test
will be offered on:
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4 &
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7
@ 7 P.M.
IN BARTLETT 61

(This test may be taken only once)

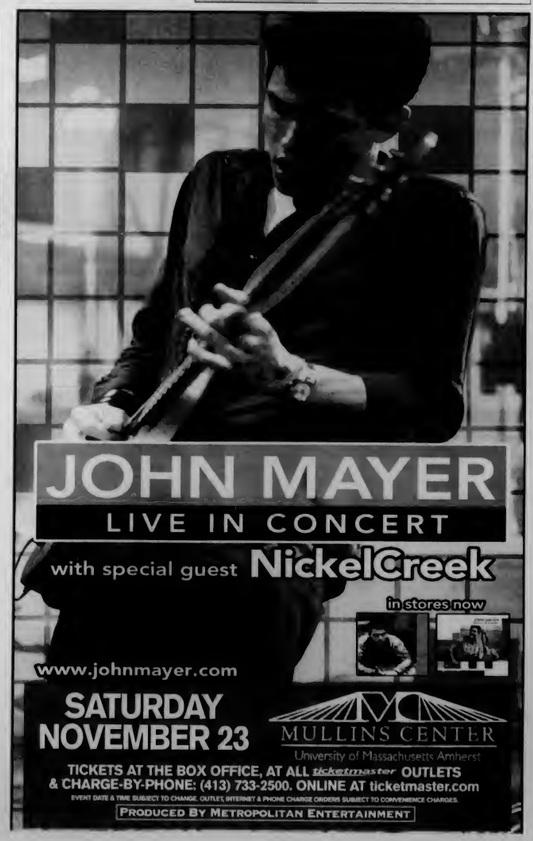
Students should pre-register for ENGLWP before pre-registration ends. Students do not need to register for the test.

POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
at North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM Starting at $79.95
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Companies
(One-Way Rates at Others)

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Busch 24 pack Bottles $9.99 + dep.
Keystone 30 pack $11.99 + dep.
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St Rt. 9 584-8174

jostens
RING DAY
University Store at the Campus Center
The Choice For Your Class Ring!
Friday, November 1st 10 to 4
Saturday, November 2nd 10 to 6
If you can't make the Ring Sale, Call Jostens at 800-854-7464 shop.jostens.com

DO YOU HAVE A FAVORITE ACADEMIC ADVISOR?
NOMINATE THEM FOR THE
OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC ADVISOR AWARD



The Nominating Committee for the 2002-2003 Outstanding Academic Advisor Award invites all students, faculty and staff to nominate academic advisors whose practices distinguish them form other advisors. The characteristics of an outstanding advisor include but are not limited to:

- Building strong relationships with students
- Monitoring students' progress toward academic and career goals
- Making appropriate referrals
- Knowing and understanding institutional regulations, policies an procedures

Nominations of faculty and staff who advise undergraduate students should be submitted to:

Outstanding Academic Advisor Award Committee
Office of the Provost
362 Whitmore Building

Nominations (in writing, by phone, or by e-mail to gjones@provost.umass.edu) should be recieved by Friday 11/15/02. For further information, call the Provost's Office at 545-2554.

JOHN MAYER
LIVE IN CONCERT
with special guest NickelCreek
in stores now
www.johnmayer.com
SATURDAY NOVEMBER 23
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AT THE BOX OFFICE, AT ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500. ONLINE AT ticketmaster.com
EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE. OUTLET, INTERNET & PHONE CHARGE ORDERS SUBJECT TO CONVENIENCE CHARGES.
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Courtroom or circus?

Lines between are blurred

With the debate of how to capture the suspects in the Virginia and Maryland sniper case resolved, after police took into custody two suspects last week, a new argument has rapidly taken its place as authorities move ahead with legal proceedings:

Who tries the "Beltway snipers" – John Muhammed and Lee Malvo – first?

The Justice Department and investigators have begun laying claim to which of the two states will have the first opportunity to prosecute the two individuals – a process that The New York Times opinion page dubbed yesterday a "capital-punishment bidding war, in which the case goes to the jurisdiction most likely to execute the defendants." The editorial goes on to say that it is Maryland, where the first and subsequent majority of the attacks occurred, that holds the strongest case to land the first legal shot upon Muhammed and Malvo.

Just as the search and investigation teetered on the brink of a media circus, with authorities imploring the media to exercise restraint for the sake of public safety, the legal atmosphere is now taking on the qualities of a three-ring event as well that has distorted the direction of the case and made light of the truly horrific events that resulted.

"This is one of the first times I've been involved in a prosecution where it makes no sense what's going on," said Douglas Gansler, the Montgomery County state's attorney. "This case should be initiated in Montgomery County. Our families were terrorized and paralyzed by these shootings, and were disproportionately affected by this. But our citizens may never get their day in court."

That such a concern even exists at this stage in the process is an injustice to all affected – the memories of the victims, their families, those residents of the communities in and around the vicinity of where the attacks took place.

This is, quite obviously, no time for the mishandling of a case that is relevant to numerous issues on a national stage. Human lives were lost, and with the potential for the death penalty (a decision that Attorney General John Ashcroft has, not surprisingly, dubbed "the ultimate sanction") to be introduced to a case involving an underage defendant, authorities must focus their attentions and concern on making the most appropriate decisions, and not staging a war of public relations that will deter from what is most important.

We have a way in this country of upstaging matters of importance in favor of matters of self-reference – a disagreeable process that runs against what our established laws, in theory, set out to accomplish. We at The Collegian hope that this matter of jurisdiction is settled rapidly and that the proceedings can move forward to an appropriate conclusion, as they should.

Information from The New York Times and The Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Russian roulette

MARK OSTROFF

In the events of last week, Russia and Chechnya have now made my list of outright political nightmares. I find this a sad dilemma to officially add Russia to this ever-expanding list and, anyone who knows me, knows how I feel about Russia and how reluctant I am to do this. The situation, I believe, is even worse than the Middle East conflict. In my book, at least, there is hope for Israel and Palestine, but from the actions of both Russia and Chechen rebels, I feel that they're beyond the point of compromise and negotiation. There may not be enough room in Central Asia for the both of them.

On one side, you have Russian aggression fueled by a sense of personal and nationalist vendetta, which is well represented in the actions of their security forces. In the rebel forces, you have aggression fueled by personal vendetta, a radical drive for sovereignty and a Jihad that makes bin Laden look like a pretty nice guy. Looking at this without an idea of the actual tension between the two, we can assume nothing more than a Slavic version of the Middle East conflict at first glance, but there is a lot more to the problem.

First of all, the Federal Security Bureau (FSB) has the 10-year standing tradition of individual corruption and lack of discipline within its ranks. Chechen separatists often brag that they find it ironic that they can buy guns from the very soldiers that are trying to kill them. Other reports claim that FSB patrolmen accept bribes to cover up for stolen oil, which is sold at dirt-cheap prices, funding rebel efforts.

In Moscow, the Ministry of Internal Affairs fights an uphill battle to add some degree of humaneness to the FSB efforts by incarcerating soldiers and officers for crimes against humanity, which have included rape, assault and the "disappearance" of innocent civilians in the region. Although I appreciate the effort to bring these people to justice, we all know that no form of punishment will ever undo a crime and it certainly won't erase it from the minds of eyewitnesses, many of which are young ethnic Chechens.

On the other side of the spectrum, the rebels have a historic reputation terror, which is said to include rape, slavery, torture, kidnapping, and mutilation of not only the FSB, but also civilians. At one point, the rebels had sent pictures of the tortures, killings and mutilations of Russian POWs to Moscow newspapers. Adding more fuel to the fire, the FSB recently discovered an abandoned rebel hideout claiming that they found the remains of dead women and children in various stages of decomposition in the cave, as well as messages written on the walls of the cave for the FSB to find. One of them became an infamous slogan in Moscow: "Allakh nad namil, a kosli pod namil," or "God is above us and the goats are below us." ("Goat," is a derogatory word to describe a man who has been raped in prison, or a man whose wife has been in the company of other men.)

A few days ago, the Chechen rebels got the upper hand when they came into Moscow, without any subtlety, and managed to make one of the most successful hostage-taking operations that both sides had ever seen.

To my surprise, the terrorists were not as brutal as history made them out to be, but on the other hand, the very action of arriving in Moscow, in numbers, may be the breaking point for Russia.

The fear now is that Russia will retaliate with even more brutality and thoughtlessness than they had in the past, giving the incentive for more brutality on the part of the rebels. As an example to this thoughtlessness, let's look at the theater situation. FSB officials had moved in and begun executing unconscious captors. However, the captors kept talking about the blood of their people being spilled. The radical act of taking 700 people hostage is not out of an attempt to stop the war, it was another radical attempt at retaliation, and the FSB didn't exactly help the situation by reacting with their emotions.

Russia's most natural reaction will obviously be one of rage and vengeance. There will be more bloodshed and more angry boys on the tank-ride down to the North Vietnam of the Caucasus. There will be more incentive to purge anyone they feel paranoid about, and there will definitely be more open brutality toward the rebels or anyone perceived as one. There will also be more foolish people, selling their weapons off for some quick party cash, and there will be more bloodthirsty incentives on the part of the rebels to rid their land of Russians, whether its by gunfire or the intense psychological warfare they're infamous for.

Furthermore, the Chechen rebels are not unified. They're a bunch of clans led by warlords, some who probably wouldn't stop with the FSB. Taking out these terrorists is like firing at bees with a six-shooter. And Russia? Well, their problem is that they are too centralized. Russia's economy and political system is like a Jenga tower: big, central, and very fragile. Fifty warlords, acting on their personal accord, can do a pretty effective job on Russia's economy, as it has already begun to do on President Putin's efforts.

Considering the idealistic notion of people entitled to their own national sovereignty, could Russia hand over a region, the size of New Jersey, to people that are bent on Russian bloodshed, ensuring more organized terror attacks from Chechen loose-cannons?

On the other hand, is Russia's drive to crush the rebellion, with an undisciplined FSB, committing suicide on social, political, and economic fronts?

Or, better yet, is there a light at the end of the tunnel for everyone?

Mark Ostroff is a Collegian Columnist.

Information for this column was taken from www.moscowtimes.ru and www.kavkaz.org.

UMass urban legends

JAMIE LOO

Have you ever been on campus late at night and got a chill looking at the Old Chapel? Maybe it happened in a stairway at Mary Lyon or walking up Orchard Hill? It's possible that you weren't alone.

One of the great Halloween traditions in New England is to tell ghost stories. UMass is over 100 years old and has its share of history and of course ghosts. Everyone has heard at least one UMass urban legend from a friend or has claimed to have a ghost encounter with something that wasn't quite right. But what is fact and what is fiction?

I decided to find out. I took a ghost tour on Monday night with the UMass History Club, a group that will be seeking RSO status later this year. Katie Flynn, Michael Goldman and Michael Franck, members of the club, were our tour guides on this journey in search of the living dead. The history club based their stories on research done in library and through Collegian archives.

We began our tour at the Old Chapel. Back when the Old Chapel was still open, students used to ring the bell before and during services. One day, one of the bell ringers was running late. He wasn't watching the road carefully and was struck by a car and died. On Hall's seven-night the bells can be heard ringing and they say you can see the silhouette of the young man setting up by the bells. A moaning and knocking noise can sometimes be heard coming from the crypt in the Old Chapel. It's fairly common knowledge that the Old Chapel used to house the University library. Could it be the ghost of librarian Henry Goodell? Urban legend. One of my friends had another Old Chapel story passed on from an upper classmen. He told me that a young woman had committed suicide in the bell tower and that you can see her hanging there on the anniversary of her death. There was also a young man who fell down the stairs and died. You can hear his spirit walking up and down the stairway. I was inside the Old Chapel two years ago when they put the time capsule into the crypt and can definitely remember those not feeling right in there. Perhaps it was just a shiver.

South College has an anniversary ghost. The building was a men's dormitory in 1867 but burned to the ground in 1895. There was a young man who lived in the upper floor of the dorm, and he didn't flee the fire but had just lost his fiance in a tragic accident the week before. All of his possessions were lost in the fire, including all of his savings, his mother's gold ring and a set of letters from his now deceased fiance. Witnesses have claimed that just after midnight on the anniversary of the fire, a flickering light can be seen in the southeast turret of South College. It is believed that it is the young man searching for the possessions that he lost in the fire.

Draper Hall, the building near the Campus Center and Goodell Hall, used to be a residential building. Apparently the ventilation system in the building was never very good so the kitchen in the basement was always really hot. One spring there was a heat wave outside and the kitchen was hotter than usual. Two of the cooks began arguing with each other until they began to push each other around. As tempers flared, one of the cooks snapped. He grabbed a kitchen knife and stabbed the other cook to death. Every year on the anniversary of the cook's death you can hear crazy noises coming from the old kitchen in Draper.

Mary Lyon is a building with a history that many people on campus know because its strongest spirit is its most recent resident. In the 1980s a freshman woman hung herself in one of the stairways of Mary Lyon. It's a stairway that is rarely used so no one found her body for a few days, which meant there was this awful stench in the stairwell. Supposedly you can still smell the odor of the corpse in Mary Lyon from time to time. A student on the tour said she lived in the building last year and some of her hall mates have seen the specter before. "I never detected an odor there but even before I knew the story. There's something kind of creepy about that hallway. It's foreboding; it just doesn't feel like a welcome place," she said.

Each dormitory used to have a house mother. The housemother in Greenough was a widow and had a small boy, whom all of the residents absolutely adored. One winter he fell very ill and died, which was devastating for his mother and the others in the dormitory. There was a resident assistant who used to hear this constant noise of residents playing ball in the hallway. Being a good RA, she opened the door to tell her residents to stop playing ball sports. No one was in the hallway. This happened on several occasions and then one night the RA came home really late. As she was coming down the hall, she saw a little boy bolding a red ball standing in the middle of the hallway. She walked towards him to see if she could help him but as she approached him he began to slowly disappear. Residents in Greenough supposedly still hear odd noises, especially sounds of someone playing ball, when there is no one there.

J.B. HOWARD

Stockbridge Hall (aka...Faculty Club) on campus also has its own resident ghost. In 1754, the richest man in Amherst, John Field lived in the house. Field was a farmer, innkeeper, town selectmen, and liquor retailer. During the American Revolution, he was imprisoned in the house along with other local Tories for their loyalty to England. After another losing endeavor, Shay's Rebellion, he was ruined financially by 1794. Field's ghost has been seen sitting in the maple outside of Stockbridge Hall and there have also been reported moaning sounds coming from the building. Field is most likely bemoaning the loss of his fortune.

I think one of the most chilling stories is that of John Brooks Howard Jr., because it hits close to home at the new-paper. Howard was born on November 20, 1908 and was from Reading, Massachusetts. He was the campus news editor at The Massachusetts Collegian (which was a weekly back then). Howard was affectionately called, "J.B.," "Gibbs," and "Johnnie," by his classmates and was voted most likely to succeed. He was a hockey major, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon and was secretary of the honor council. Howard was well-liked by his classmates, and was known as a "genial scholar surpassed by no one." In March of 1929 he was elected to the position of Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian.

On the morning of April 27, 1929 Howard and his friend John Andrew Jr. were climbing trees in the apple orchard on Orchard Hill in search of crows. Howard fell 70 feet from the tree, fracturing his leg. When Andrew went to check on him, Howard said he was fine but couldn't see, though his eyes were wide open. Andrew carried Howard on his back towards Northeast, where Health Services used to be. When they finally reached Health Services, Andrew said Howard was losing ground quickly and the doctors couldn't do anything.

"Everything was done that could be done. About twenty minutes after Gibby had entered the infirmary, he had crossed the Great Divide and entered into the Great Beyond," said Andrew.

Howard's ghost has been seen bobbling down the trail between Orchard Hill and Northeast. Creepy huh? Well, I suppose creepier for me since I'm one of a few editors that currently live on Orchard Hill. Howard was set to graduate in 1930, and seniors graduating this May are looking at graduation in the year '03. Strangely, two weeks prior to his death Howard had written a tribute column to a professor who had passed away. He was remembered in the May 2, 1929 edition of the Collegian as "noble," "sincere," and a devoted member of the Collegian staff. In a staff editorial of that same edition his colleagues memorialized his commitment to the paper: "His future plans for the publication were unlimited and new schemes for making a better paper were continually coming to light..."

Howard was editor-in-chief for a little under two months, at the time of his death. Is it possible the Collegian is his piece of unfinished business? Maybe, but from what I have learned about "J.B." he wouldn't want students wasting their time trying to figure that out or to go looking for his ghost or any others on campus. He would want us to live our lives, a life he didn't get to live. I leave you with his words. Two months to the date of his death, on February 27, 1929, J.B. wrote this in a staff editorial:

"...we in the student body need to pause a moment and reflect before it is too late...How many of us are going through college with eyes and ears shut to the things of beauty and interest about this wonderful campus, or passing through its buildings with never a thought as to their history?...We need to utilize a bit of the four years, not hours, we have at this institution, for an appreciation of what we are privileged to work with and move about in."

Rest in peace J.B. and don't worry, we're trying hard to take care of the newspaper.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

Myths about question No. 2

HEATHER COMTOIS

One of the focuses of this November's election is the question of bilingual education. You may have heard of the Unz Initiative, which will make the ballots as question two, or of politicians planning to "End the failure called bilingual education and teach kids English." Talking to friends and family I realize that most people have no idea what the Unz initiative is about. Many people will probably agree with it, because they have not been given the facts. In fact, that's what its proponents are counting on. So, although my opinion is only my opinion, I hope you will take a few minutes to consider what your vote on this question should be.

The plan of the initiative is to structure English Learning programs (if they can be called that) so that English language learners are first taught through a year of "structured English immersion." The plan dictates that during that year, students may receive little to no help in their native language. After that year, their native language must not be used at all. Unfortunately, there are absolutely no statistics that suggest a student can learn academic language in one year. They may become comfortable with the casual language they learn amongst their friends, but formal, academic language is a different story altogether.

The Unz Initiative's success is based on false beliefs that many uneducated people maintain. First of all, as is made quite clear by ads, the Unz Initiative's proponents think that students in bilingual programs do not learn English. Quite the contrary is true, however. In fact, the goal of bilingual education is just that, to learn English, and students in bilingual programs do better than English language learners who are not in bilingual programs.

Another myth that some people believe is that English language learners are somehow forced into bilingual education. In reality, parents can decide whether or not to place their children in bilingual programs. The Unz Initiative pretends to allow the same option to parents – putting waivers in place for those who would prefer their children do learn through bilingual education. I say, "pretend," because the waivers are merely decorative, to garnish support for the initiative and deflect opponents. In order to secure a waiver, though, the parent must go through a lengthy process that includes a written component. The requirements are quite extensive for any parent, but even more so for parents who are not native speakers of English. Putting in the forms, however, does not mean that the school district must provide bilingual education. In fact, doing so could put the school at risk.

You see, the Unz Initiative adds consequences to disobeying the English only rule. Parents can sue teachers if any native language instruction takes place, and the teacher's union cannot deflect punitive damages. It's all right out of the teacher's pocket. This right to sue is extended not only to those who want their kids in the English only program, but to those who get waiver as well. If a few years down the road a parent decides that bilingual education did not have the results he or she desired, he or she could sue the teachers that used native language instruction. This certainly does not provide school districts incentives to grant waivers.

What is presented, as an opportunity for choice, is really the opposite. Unz Initiative proponents would like you to believe the bilingual education is forced on parents. In fact, parents have every right to exercise control over their child's education. That control will be virtually eradicated under the Unz Initiative. They would like you to believe that students in bilingual programs do not learn English. In fact, students in bilingual programs outperform those English language learners who are not in bilingual programs. Also, no studies have shown that anyone can learn enough English in one year to survive in an academic setting.

Proponents of the Unz Initiative are relying on voter ignorance. They would prefer you didn't know the facts behind bilingual education. They would prefer that you didn't know that evidence has shown that bilingual education is the most effective method for helping students learn a second language. They would prefer you were unaware. I suggest you prove them wrong. You don't have to take my word for it, but do some research. Hopefully, enough people will learn the facts behind Question two.

Heather Comtois is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 10.31.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

A POPULAR CULTURE LOOK AT...

WITCHES

By Jennifer Eastwood
Collegian Staff

Film college.

Click. Glinda, the Good Witch of the East, tells the Wicked Witch of the West, "Be gone...before a house falls on you."

Click. Character Hermione Granger figures out the trick behind escaping Devil's Snare, saving fellow Hogwarts' students, Harry and Ron.

Click. Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer cluster in a kitchen, ensuring through voodoo that the devil in human form, played by the quick-talking Jack Nicholson, gets his comeuppance.

Click. The coy Anjelica Huston, clad in the latest special effects makeup from Jim Henson to complete the look of the Grand High Witch, cackles at a convention full of England's supreme ladies of darkness.

Click. Disney cartoon character Witch Hazel, speaking with the ever-memorable voice of June Foray, terrifies the grouchy Donald Duck, with nephews Huey, Dewey and Louie standing by as her accomplices.

Click. Warner Bros. cartoon character Witch Hazel, also voiced by June Foray, terrifies Bugs Bunny and thrills corporate executives as they realize rival Disney doesn't own the rights to the concept of a cartoon witch the name "Witch Hazel" or the

Turn to WITCHES, page 7

VAMPIRES

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

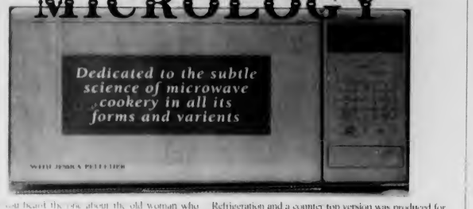
Fangs, capes, garlic and crosses; whatever way you describe them, the image of the vampire reins supreme in the eye of every horror movie fan. Let's face it: the image of the vampire either hooded and mysterious or dark and dangerous, has permeated our culture in television, film and literature and fallen comfortably into the category of a cultural icon.

The phenomenon of the vampire began in the typical way, with a legend steeped in oral tradition. It all started with a story about a prince who eventually became known as the infamous Count Dracula. Passed down from generation to generation was the story of Vlad Tepes, better known as Vlad the Impaler, a Romanian prince who lived in the early 1400s. He was famous for strange kinds of torture and for impaling victims on stakes and drinking their blood, whether or not this is true remains to be seen. However, he did pick up the nickname of Count Dracula translated in Romanian to be "the devil."

Dracula made his debut to the world through literature when Bram Stoker researched the Romanian legend and made it the subject of his aptly titled book, Dracula. After that, Dracula made his debut in the

Turn to VAMPIRES, page 6

MONSTERS, GHOSTS AND DEMONS



By Johnny Donaldson
Collegian Staff

Week in, week out, the cult hit television series "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" and its ilk - TV series such as "Haunted" and the "Buffy" spin-off "Angel" - display a hideous array of ghouls, ghosts, monsters and demons. They are scaly or slimy, or they have horns, multiple limbs, etc. But they aren't always real demons,

Turn to MONSTERS, page 6

MICROLOGY

Have you heard the one about the old woman who bathed her poodle and needed a quick way to dry the pooch off? Solution: Microwave. From urban legends to yon very newsworthy items the microwave has given us the power to re-create that "fresh baked" feeling in our cookies and an small pet, whatever your preference.

But have you ever stopped to wonder how this magnificent little box came to alter our culinary experiences in ways that make us go "ooh" and squishy inside? Let's jump back a mere one hundred years or so, when our jukebox-star was old.

In 1916 — since it's the right time, WWII was over and people were making babies like crazy rabbits. Dr. Percy Spencer decided he was just a wiggle his ass away from accomplishing Hitler's dream of his own Aryan race and accidentally put a chocolate bar in his pocket for after-lab research.

Work on a new application for vacuum tubes yielded some interesting results for the military, and some peculiar brown stains when he found that exposure to the tube had caused his snack to melt, once Dr. Seuss-ian his snazzy new Dockers.

The very next day, a delighted Spencer accompanied Spencer on his experiment. Arriving and in awe of the magnetron. Not long after exposure the egg began to tremble and the popcorn got himself a big ball of egg yolk. The colleagues restored their humor and Spencer's eyes lit up in excitement, and because in the latter.

Raytheon Corporation was the first to put to their new vacuum tube and gave it standard size. Think number, which was placed in Boston's refrigerator for food service use. The thick piece of machine contraption weighed a svelte 750 pounds and stood five and a half feet tall. The price was a little cheaper — the average consumer in would set you back $3000 (plus a small sum needed a home to cook lower the microwave energy evoked from the machine.

Twenty years later, Raytheon acquired Amana Refrigeration and a counter-top version was produced for the masses. The $500 models were more reliable and smaller than the average refrigerator unit. And come to think of it, I really think my grandmother still owns and operates that very model.

Just for the sake of digression, the owner's manual still sits nudged beside it. Yes, it is a little thicker than a TV. Guide, and, yes, my favorite part about it is the section that tells you "if the unit doesn't appear to be working, make sure the plug is firmly inserted into the electrical outlet." Question for the day: if you're standing there wondering why the appliance isn't working, and you haven't attempted to plug in the microwave in the first place, what are the odds you can read the manual?

Myths appeared in the 70s regarding the safety of cooking with microwave energy. These tangy from radiation poisoning to going blind, sterile, and/or impotent. Once people realized these were most probably the delusional fantasies of a childless, blind man without the ability to maintain an erection, fears subsided and microwave purchases began to climb steadily.

Back to Spencer. At the age of 76, he died as the senior consultant for Raytheon and was considered an expert in the field of microwave energy. He held over 150 patents in his lifetime and had absolutely no high school education (Which is no excuse for any of you to skip your 2:30 p.m. class in the enormous and enormously uncomfortable auditorium.)

On Sept. 18, 1984, Percy LaBaron Spencer was inducted into the National Inventor's Hall of Fame right next to Thomas Edison and the Wright Brothers. So whenever you decide to pop your next bag of popcorn or heat the need to warm a cinnamon roll to fully appreciate its gooey cinnamon flavor, take a moment to think of the man with the stained trousers and thank your lucky stars he needed a snack that fateful day in the mid-40s.

Jessica Pelletier is a Collegian Columnist.

■ vampires

Continued from page 6

including the classic Nosferatu and the more recent Francis Ford Coppola's version Bram Stoker's Dracula are still some of the films that perpetuate what has practically become an culture, if you prefer tuned to Dracula.

In film alone, the actor gained over the years from Bela Lugosi (turning out perhaps the most iconic Dracula) to Christopher Lee to Gary Oldman with numerous other actors in between. Dracula has also been the subject of animated theater productions across the world and dubbed to television. Although the Dracula legend gave us entertaining material (for real, contribution was worthy aspect), it never gave us the vampire.

So what is a vampire besides the obvious creating of the undead that sleeps in coffins and survives off of the blood of human beings? We know that you can injure us with fatal wounds with stakes to the heart or by cutting off their heads, with garlic as a repellent, but just like any other being movie, villains they just keep coming back for more.

Beyond the obvious blood-drinking creature of the undead, there are sects and movies that have had a significant impact on the vampire culture. Some of these few similarities between different portrayals of vampires. As Hollywood and television have progressed the image of the vampire is used more and more to a particular end rather than just as a creature to fear.

This is really true in Anne Rice's Vampire Chronicles, tales about vampires struggling with loneliness and immortality. Her books spawned both the 1995 Tom Cruise hit Interview with the Vampire, which is worth a rent from the video store if one is looking for a decent movie with a lot of good-looking vampires, and the third book from the series the Queen of the Damned, starring Aaliyah in her final role.

Vampires movies have just been plain old riffs as well, reaching back to 1980's teen horror classic The Lost Boys starring Kiefer Sutherland, Corey Feldman and Corey Haim as members of a California vampire gang and the Jim Carrey and Lauren Holton comedy Once Bitten, featuring a vampire desperately in search of the blood of a male virgin to give her eternal youth. Ironically, Jim Carrey isn't funny at all in this movie, however, if you are in the mood to see a vampire movie that has a significant impact on the vampire culture. Some of these few similarities between different portrayals of vampires. As Hollywood and television have progressed the image of the vampire is used more and more to a particular end rather than just as a creature to fear.

This is really true in Anne Rice's Vampire Chronicles, tales about vampires struggling with loneliness and immortality. Her books spawned both the 1995 Tom Cruise hit Interview with the Vampire, which is worth a rent from the video store if one is looking for a decent movie with a lot of good-looking vampires, and the third book from the series the Queen of the Damned, starring Aaliyah in her final role.

Vampires movies have just been plain old riffs as well, reaching back to 1980's teen horror classic The Lost Boys starring Kiefer Sutherland, Corey Feldman and Corey Haim as members of a California vampire gang and the Jim Carrey and Lauren Holton comedy Once Bitten, featuring a vampire desperately in search of the blood of a male virgin to give her eternal youth. Ironically, Jim Carrey isn't funny at all in this movie, however, if you are in the mood to see a vampire movie that has a significant impact on the vampire culture. Some of these few similarities between different portrayals of vampires. As Hollywood and television have progressed the image of the vampire is used more and more to a particular end rather than just as a creature to fear.

This is really true in Anne Rice's Vampire Chronicles, tales about vampires struggling with loneliness and immortality. Her books spawned both the 1995 Tom Cruise hit Interview with the Vampire, which is worth a rent from the video store if one is looking for a decent movie with a lot of good-looking vampires, and the third book from the series the Queen of the Damned, starring Aaliyah in her final role.

Vampires movies have just been plain old riffs as well, reaching back to 1980's teen horror classic The Lost Boys starring Kiefer Sutherland, Corey Feldman and Corey Haim as members of a California vampire gang and the Jim Carrey and Lauren Holton comedy Once Bitten, featuring a vampire desperately in search of the blood of a male virgin to give her eternal youth. Ironically, Jim Carrey isn't funny at all in this movie, however, if you are in the mood to see a

The musical "Buffy" episode

Whedon's musical creation hits stores

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ORIGINAL CAST RECORDING
Buffy the Vampire Slayer: "Once More, With Feeling"
Mutant Enemy/Rounder

There's a phenomenon in pop culture, applied mostly to television, called "jumping the shark." The term, derived from an episode of "Happy Days," is a shorthand way of saying a show has long passed its cultural relevance. Whenever a television series grows too old, or pulls a stunt that irrevocably alters the tone of the series, it jumps the shark and becomes too ludicrous to take seriously anymore.

"Buffy the Vampire Slayer" could have jumped the shark in an exceptionally grisly fashion last November. "Buffy" had survived numerous possible shark-jumping episodes in the past. However, the sweeps trick creator Joss Whedon came up with could've done the show in for good, for he wanted to do an episode completely styled as... a musical. Yes, a musical. A big song-and-dance filled, Broadway-styled musical. Sung by the cast, not professional singers.

The result could have been a train wreck. But Whedon is a wily young turk. The episode, titled "Once More, With Feeling" was a ballsh success, an instant favorite with "Buffy" fans that should have (but didn't) lead the show to a long-deserved Emmy nomination.

Now, Whedon has released the soundtrack for that wonderful episode. For "Buffy" fanatics, it is a must own piece of memorabilia. For non-loyalists, it may be a tad confusing in makes references to pivotal moments from the past episodes and a bit non-essential, but it holds up as a surprisingly strong piece of music.

The cast members are agreeable singers, though they probably do not have the greatest voices. Earning best, musically, are Amber Benson (who plays Wiccan lesbian Tara) singing the lovely ballad "Under Your Spell," Emma Caulfield (ex-vengeance demon Anya) and Anthony Stewart Head (father figure mentor Giles). Head also has professional musical experience.)

A flair right out of a 30s-style Warner Bros. film opens the album, and leads in to the Disney-esque "Going Through The Motions." Whedon's well-known wit pokes through in the oddest of places. Though nothing on the album will ever fit on the radio (with the exception of the rock-operatic "Rest in Piece", sung by James Marsters), "The Mustard" and "The Parking Ticket" are little bits about – well, exactly what their titles imply. They are plugged in between songs as goofy filler. Whedon finds the wit within in the songs, too. (At one point in a song, a barely audible line can be translated as "I think this fine's most fe filler.") Caulfield and Nicholas Brendan do a 30s Astaire-and-Rodgers number called "I'll Never Tell." There's a nice jazzy soft-shoe, an acoustic rock number and more. Once More, With Feeling is probably a better match for enthusiasts, but it could be enjoyed by anyone (with the possible exception any "Buffy" haters in existence.)

■ monsters

Continued from page 6

world. They are fictional creations of the series creator's, PG-lified to take the true fear away from them. But now I will take you on a guided tour of the scariest critters stalking the land and haunting us from another astral plane.

MONSTERS

The Jersey Devil – Toward the tail end of the 18th century, a New Jersey woman named Leeds gave birth to her 13th child, a monstrously deformed creature that killed her other children before escaping up the chimney. The monster now lives in the Pine Barrens area of Jersey and has been described thusly: it has a horse's head, big but like wings, cloven hooves, a carnivorous appetite and a fondness for mayhem. The size has varied from tiny to giant. And for the past 200 or so years, it has terrorized people stupid enough to wander into the woods. Even Joseph Bonaparte, Napoleon's brother, reported seeing it while visiting the area. Authorities repeatedly say that the Jersey Devil is a hoax, but people still see it to this day. However, a creature that can turn itself invisible and is impervious to most human weapons is too deadly to face on your own.

Wendigo – In the frozen wastelands of the upper Midwest (mostly Michigan and Wisconsin) is where these nasty creatures live. The Wendigo have vast supernatural powers and a taste for human flesh. They seek out lone travelers in the woods, and use strange noises to disorient them and get the travelers lost. They prey on the eerie sense of being watched. Or they can give you a fever that drives the sufferers insane. Wendigo are extremely intelligent. Know the woods more than you can know yourself and are allied with the animals of the forest. The older they are, the more powerful they are. Reportedly, the only way to defeat a Wendigo is to shatter its heart with a silver axe and bury the pieces of the heart in consecrated ground.

Chupacabra – Or "Goat Sucker." This native of Puerto Rico resembles a furry alien, but has the blood sucking tendencies of a vampire. It mostly feeds on livestock and house pets, bleeding them dry. But how long until it targets humans?

GHOSTS

Wraiths – This is, essentially, the ghost of a living person... even yourself. If you see your own wraith, then you know that you are doomed to die.

Poltergeists – For those who don't know what a poltergeist is, it is an angry spirit dedicated to disrupting lives. Sometimes it is as innocent as merely causing mischief. Other times it can be malicious and designed to hurt (and even kill) people. The scariest examples are the Amityville spirit and the Bell Witch.

Other names for ghosts include: night-hade, phantasm, phantom, shade, specter and spook.

DEMONS

Incubi and Succubi – These are, respectively, the male and female forms of the same kinds of demons. They are sexual predators who take the form of Adonis-like men or thoroughbred gorgeous women in order to tempt their victims. They are so sexually appealing that anyone they choose is likely to fall under their spell. Then they drain the life force from the victim. They arrive in the middle of the night and often turn into odd hags just before the victim expires.

Djinn – Otherwise known as the genie. These Arabic demons granted wishes, but they stole souls. Strangely, the less budget horror flick Wishmaster was truer to the myths than Disney's Aladdin Lilith – This demoness has biblical origins. She flies around at night looking for babies to steal and men to sleep with in order to have little demon children.

The Devil – The ultimate demon. The antithesis of God. The supreme evil being that sends his forces to Earth to tempt people to take them to Hell. He goes by many names: Satan, Lucifer, Beelzebub, the Prince of Darkness, the guy who programmed the Anna Nicole Smith show. According to the movie Devil's Advocate, his favorite vice is vanity. But he probably likes them all. He's also a big fan of fire, sulphur and eternal damnation. He's one bad dude, liking to be the one answering your questions as you play with that Ouija Board. Be careful what you say when you talk about how badly you want something. Because someone may show looking to make a deal...

THIS PHOTOSHOP ENHANCED IMAGE CREATES THE APPARENT LEGEND OF THE JERSEY DEVIL

Tool's unique performance still a solid show

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

TOOL
Mullins Center
Oct. 25

Amid a swirl of lights and colors, hard rockers Tool shook a full house at the Mullins Center for nearly two hours Friday night.

Tool came right out of the gates rocking, kicking off their show with outstanding versions of "Sober" and "The Grudge." A vicious pit opened early on and was in full force the majority of the night, with hundreds of fans on the floor thrashing back and forth.

As they moved through their set, Tool unleashed amazing renditions of "Stinkfist," "Parabola," "Aenema," "Lateralus" and "Schism" back-to-back. The band, above all things, succeeded on the strength of their unity, talent and cohesiveness as a musical group. Regardless of how weird they may be, how freaky their act may appear to the unsuspecting observer or how difficult they can be for the media and other groups to deal with, one things needs to be remembered: Tool can flat out play.

As the set progressed, fans were treated to all of the eccentricities and weirdness that make one of their concerts unlike any other. For one, the setup of Tool's stage is backwards from that of just about any other band a rock fan could encounter.

Vocalist Maynard James Keenan stood on a pedestal in the back of the stage, rather than fronting the band in the typical manner. Before "Lateralus" began, he stripped his clothes off, singing the rest of the way in a tight black pair of spandex-like shorts, barefoot. His vocals filled the center, clear and crisp and filled with all of the angst, anger and reflectiveness one would expect from a leading front man. After a short while, watching a nearly naked man sing no longer seemed out of place.

This is the essence of Tool: they take the weird and uncomfortable and make it their own. Listeners can take or leave it; the majority accepted it openly.

Tool's set and live show are hard to match. As the opening notes of "The Grudge" were struck, two large screens display freaky graphics of skulls with eyes in the forehead, skeletons and other images the band designed. An eyeless man wandering dominated the screens during "Stinkfist," seemingly on a journey to who knows where. Blues, greens and the occasional explosion of yellow in the lighting set a dark, eerie tone to match the music.

After the sixth song of the evening, "Aenema," Maynard stopped to preach his message to all those in attendance. "Think for yourself," a voice and face on the gigantic screens said. "Question authority."

They're age-old rock and roll adages, but with the ominous lighting and restless crowd, they took on new life.

At about the 75-minute mark, Tool finally started to drag a little. A fascinating drum solo with a guest appearance from opening act Messugah captivated at first, but dragged into a long instrumental with the entire band.

Six banners rolled down above the band, each displaying a seemingly scientific view of all of the body's organ systems. A large Star of David also slowly descended, hanging above center stage with a full backdrop filled with eyes behind it.

In the typical artsy, egotistical manner one could expect from a swaggering rock act, Maynard then addressed the audience again. "Take this feeling with you," he told a roaring audience. "Take it and create something positive."

Continuing a poor trend for Tool, opening band Messugah left much to be desired. A band with much muscle but little else, Messugah had the crowd numb within 10 minutes. You know a heavy metal band has lost its audience when the people on the floor where the pit would typically be blindly sway back and forth. "Thank God it's over," I heard one fan say.

While not as horrific as ballad-heavy Tomahawk during Tool's August show in Boston, Messugah was clearly not of a quality that belonged opening for Tool.

The fans will keep coming, though. As long as Tool is at their musical and eccentric best as they were Friday, the band will be packing in venues for years to come.

■ witches

continued from page 5

witch is an ever-familiar casting call, though not very representative of the Wiccan religion itself.

The most popular concept of a witch, however, centers on fairy tales – those mystical little stories passed down through word of mouth, later transcribed by such notables as the Brothers Grimm and much later Disney-fied through the corporate Mouse's magic of animation and music. The fairy tale concept of the witch has set the stage for many archetypes used in Hollywood today, yet even this figure has faced an evolving identity.

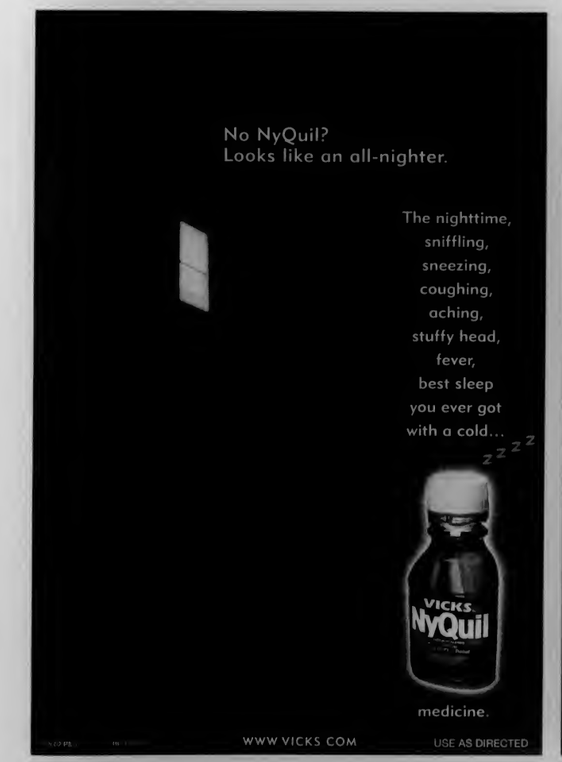
Worth noting is how rare the actual word "witch" was used in the earlier versions of tales like "Hansel and Gretel," "Snow White" and "Brier Rose." In the 1810 manuscript version of "Hansel and Gretel," for example, the Grimms never actually named the old women in the forest a "witch," yet she personified the contemporary Protestant concept of a witch as written in documents like the Malleus Maleficarum (a post-menopausal, nagging shrew jealous of children and with cannibalistic tendencies) to the fullest degree.

In an early version of "Snow White," the Grimms called Snow White's stepmother "proud and haughty," a "wicked queen" and lastly a "wicked woman," but the men never said, "witch," outright. However, this character too embodied many of the characteristics of the classic Protestant witch (displaying cannibalism desires in wanting to eat Snow White's lungs and liver and dressing as an old crone when she tricked the little princess).

This story, however, did come closer to blatant witch accusation by describing how the queen used "all the witchcraft at her command" when tempting the little princess' vanity with pretty combs. As such, the transition brought the Grimms a little closer to the terminology used in later editions, and by the fifth version of "Hansel and Gretel," the brothers had decided to bluntly make their point, finally combining "wicked" and "witchcraft" to use the now-infamous term, "wicked witch" in describing Hansel and Gretel's arch attacker. The storytellers also took it a step further, naming the woman a "godless witch," which now clearly pivoted the figure against Christianity – especially when considering how the children, her opponents, had prayed to God throughout the tale.

Finally in "Brier Rose," the idea of good magic versus bad magic came into play, yet even in this tale, the Grimms referred to the 13 magical females as "wise women" and not "witches." (This mild reference included even the one woman who actually cursed Sleeping Beauty.)

Of all the magical female characters in these mentioned fairy tales, these 13 women displayed the least amount of archetypes of the Protestant concept of a witch, for they were given no desire for cannibalism, and any so-deemed bad magic mentioned in the story (i.e. the curse) derived from provoked revenge.



Such a difference may be because the Grimms' "Brier Rose" was taken from the French version of "Sleeping Beauty" and adapted from there. Backing this theory is the German-based Grimms' tale concerning the sleeping princess that does fit into the model of the Protestant witch: the tale "The Mother-in-law," their sequel to "Brier Rose." Although, again, the mother-in-law in this story was never directly called a "witch" (only on ogress), the post-menopausal woman still maintained the jealousy of youth and desire for cannibalism.

The differences in these tales can thus be used to reference cultural differences in basic concepts of good and evil. The German-based stories maintained that wicked women would wreak havoc in their tales, while the French-based ones said some magic could just be – without any connotations of evil.

In the end, Hollywood has pulled out all these concepts to produce the familiar faces we now know as popular culture witches. While different from those who practice religions such as Wicca and also reference themselves as witches, these characters now inhibit the hearts and minds not only of fairs tale enthusiasts but also of general filmgoers. Love them or hate them, popular cultures witches are here to stay for quite some time.

THE WICKED QUEEN TRANSFORMS INTO THE WICKED WITCH IN DISNEY'S Snow White

New album releases bring sweet surprises to music fans

By Scott Enright
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Radio Zumbido agitates the senses by mixing radio clips with electronic beats

RADIO ZUMBIDO
Los Ultimos Dias Del Am
Palm Pictures Audio

Looking for some culture with a very strange twist? Radio Zumbido fuses Latin-American sounds with electronic beats in a new CD release entitled Los Ultimos Dias Del Am.

Distorted AM radio clips are mixed into each of the tracks on this new album that Juan Carlos Barrios has mixed from his home in Guatemala.

Layers of sounds build in their intensity during the progression of this album. The listener is taken on a voyage into the mind of a man who retreated to the rural countryside of Guatemala in order to write his music.

With AM radio as his only contact to the outside world, Barrios decided to blend those sounds from his radio with inspiration he received from rural Guatemala's natural sights and sounds.

A rainy day view is the inspiration for one song called "apatucion." Though the idea behind the song is very nice, its lack of originality is disturbing. The song sounds exactly like something Moby would and probably has made.

Radio Zumbido makes for some very interesting back-round noise and if three words could capture an image of its sound, "modern cafe ambiance" would be perfect.

Great for a new age/electronic/artistic audience, this CD is sure to embrace someone's attention.

A beautiful surprise, India Arie releases another album

INDIA ARIE
Voyage to India
Universal

Her words say "one shot to your heart without breaking your skin," and India Arie backs them up by getting deeply passionate in her new CD Voyage to India.

The penetrating lyrics of this album are about personal growth, healing and gratitude. They reflect the changes many people go through in a lifetime.

In the song "Good Man," Arie writes about falling in love with a man and having a baby with him. He tells her in the song that if anything should happen to him, for her to be strong. She replies:

"If the sun comes up and your not home, I'll be strong. If you're not beside me, I'll do my best to carry on. I'll tell the kids about you when they're old enough to understand. I'll tell them that their daddy was a good man."

Acoustic guitar mingles with Arie's voice and her songs are laced with some of the finest love poetry within the rhythm and blues area of music.

She does not hesitate to sing about God and openly displays her thoughts to a large audience.

This album is intoxicating, but the song "Can I Walk With You," is not pleasing. It seems very out of place next to the mellow flow that categorizes a majority of this CD.

Particular clues in the song "The One" show that Stevie Wonder may have been a big influence in her life. This song proves her ability to intertwine complicated melodies with rhythm, while still sounding good.

Arie delivers a very powerful message in a passive way, of playing. She shows that sometimes the strongest words need no pushing to be understood.

Celtics tripped up in season opener by youthful Bulls

BOSTON (AP) – Trenton Hassell scored eight points in the final three minutes, including a pair of 3-pointers to twice give Chicago the lead as the Bulls opened the season with a 89-86 victory over the Boston Celtics.

Hassell scored 14 and Jalen Rose had 21 points and 12 assists for the Bulls, who won despite familiar poor free throw shooting from rocks Ke'Willians down the stretch.

Paul Pierce scored 29 and Tom Delk had 23 for Boston. Antoine Walker had 14 points and 11 rebounds, but made just one field goal in the second half and shot 3-for-23 overall. [illegible]

Philadelphia 95, Milwaukee 93

PHILADELPHIA (AP) – Allen Iverson had 28 points, including a go-ahead jumper in the final minute, to lead the 76ers to their [illegible] victory over the Milwaukee Bucks on Wednesday night.

Aaron McKie had 18 points, Keith Van Horn added 16 and Todd MacCulloch had 10 points and a career-high 14 rebounds.

Indiana 91, Houston 82

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) – In a fitting start for soft-spoken Yao Ming, the 7-foot-6 Chinese rookie had a quiet first appearance.

Yao, the No. 1 overall pick in the June 26 draft, failed to score, had two rebounds, was whistled for three fouls and made little impact for the Houston Rockets in a 91-82 loss to the Indiana Pacers on Wednesday night.

Jermaine O'Neal scored 24 points and Ron Artest added 20 for Indiana, which overcame a career-high 39 points from Houston's Steve Francis.

Toronto 74, Washington 68

TORONTO (AP) – Morris Peterson scored 20 points and Michael Jordan went scoreless in the second half – and even missed a dunk – as the Toronto Raptors opened their season with a 74-68 victory over the Washington Wizards on Wednesday night.

Jordan, coming off the bench, scored just eight points in 25 minutes. After missing two free throws with 4:06 left, he missed a breakaway dunk as the ball clanged off the back rim. The crowd laughed at Jordan, who turns 40 in February.

Orlando 100, Miami 86

MIAMI (AP) – The Orlando Magic improved to 2-0 for the first time since 1993, taking advantage of Miami's sputtering offense and defensive breakdowns to spoil the Heat's season opener, 100-86 Wednesday night.

Tracy McGrady scored 24 points and Grant Hill added 17 for the Magic.

Travis Best scored 22 points. Caron Butler had 16 points and seven rebounds. Malik Allen added 22 points and seven rebounds.

New Jersey 105, Atlanta 94

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) – Jason Kidd had 16 points, 12 assists and eight rebounds as the New Jersey Nets opened the defense of their Eastern Conference championship with a 105-94 win over the Atlanta Hawks on Wednesday night.

Kidd also took over in the closing minutes after the Hawks cut a 17-point lead to 96-92, finding Kenyon Martin for a basket in the lane, hitting two baskets, including one after a steal.

■ Championships

continued from page 12

season, the 2002 Brother Paddy Doyle Meet of Champions in The Bronx, N.Y., the men managed to finish 21st out of 26 teams.

The young men's team would easily shake off this low placed finish, as it placed 14th out of 46 teams at the New England Meet of Champions in Boston's Franklin Park. The following meet provided grounds for an even better placing, as the men took fifth place out of 22 teams at their first run at the 36th Annual Albany Invitational.

Now, the goal is set to take the team to the next level as it heads to Pittsburgh for the A-10 Championships. Regardless of having a young team, Coach Ken O'Brien believes his boss will be ready.

"Colin Baugbman, Dave Hantman and Ed Breen are the guys who have really led this team," O'Brien said. "They have greatly improved for this year. I would also say that, for the younger guys, John Jacobson, Andy McCarron, and Mike Ahearn will be big this Saturday as well.

"The teams we need to get by are LaSalle, first last year and predicted to take first again, Saint Joe's, who took second last year and are also predicted to repeat and we edged out Duquesne for third place," he continued. "If we're going to take second or first, we're going to have to do it in the middle."

On the other side, the Minutewomen have been struggling for higher placement as they have a younger team than the men. The women started out the year much like the men, by taking fourth at the UNH meet. At their only home meet of the season, the women were forced yet again into last place. The Meet of Champions would show slight improvement, as the Minutewomen were able to reach 20th place out of 25 teams.

Then, at the New England Championships, the Maroon and White would show its strength as it pushed ahead to a 26th place finish out of 42. The women were able to go on to the Albany Invitational and take 11th place out of 19 teams.

Regardless of previous results, Head Coach Julie Lafreniere is hoping for her girls to show everyone what they're made of.

"This was a tough year for us," Lafreniere said. "I'm looking for the top five runners, who include senior captain Julie McGee, Tricia Silva, Alexis Anzelone, Emma Horton and Katie Knowles, to give us their best races. I also expect Kate Markopoulos to be an asset as well, but we really need the whole team to put out its best race and best effort.

"Last year's placing of fourth place was the worst in the team's history. Hopefully, the girls will be able to ignore the fact that they are inexperienced and give it their all."

The annual Championship is set to take place in Pittsburgh on Saturday, Nov. 2.

One of our job requirements includes [illegible]

How can you grow as an individual if you're being forced into a mold? At Ernst & Young, we empower you to push the boundaries. We offer the chance to generate creative ideas that really count. On our teams everyone has a role to play and something to contribute, so not only do you have a voice but you can make a difference with clients and co-workers alike. Break the mold.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

Collegian sports: With buses leaving daily for People's

High school group considers bat ban

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON – The ball flew off the aluminum bat and struck pitcher Billy Hughto on the left temple. His skull was damaged and blood leaked inside.

The high school sophomore was rushed to one hospital, airlifted to another and underwent surgery.

Hughto, hurt in May 2001, was back on the mound a year later as the top pitcher at Wellesley High School but didn't play on the football team because of headaches after contact with players.

On Thursday, the baseball committee of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association will consider banning aluminum bats from next year's state tournament.

Are aluminum bats more dangerous than wood bats?

"The proponents of wood bats will say, 'Yes, there are studies that say it does prove that.' And the opponents will say, 'Yes, there are studies and it doesn't prove that,'" MIAA deputy director Bill Gaine said.

Representatives of bat manufacturers are expected to argue that no studies show that aluminum bats cause more injuries than wood bats.

The safety question "has been answered," said Jim Darby, vice president of Easton Sports. "All of the national governing bodies along the way, from the NCAA to the National Federation of State High School Federations to the Consumer Products Safety Commission, have studied the issue."

He said standards for aluminum bats, first used in amateur baseball in the mid-1970s, require that they not propel a ball faster than bats made of the best wood.

Hughto's father, Rick Hughto, didn't need measurements to make up his mind.

Sitting in the stands at his son's games, he and other fans used to talk about how hard the ball came off aluminum bats. Then his son was hit in a game against Walpole High.

"Several of the doctors and nurses that worked on him said it was a miracle that he survived," Rick Hughto said.

He questions the tests cited by Darby that determine speed off the bat, saying balls were propelled at 60 mph toward the bat – slower than some of the pitches young players face.

"My son throws 85," he said. "I've seen a lot of testing data and the speed at which the ball comes off those things is faster than it comes off with wood."

He cited the "trampoline effect" when a ball hits a wood bat, the ball compresses, and when a ball hits an aluminum bat, the bat compresses and imparts more force to the ball, Rick Hughto said.

Another proposal would ban aluminum bats from all high school games in Massachusetts, not just tournaments. But the baseball committee can only make a recommendation on that to the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Council, which doesn't meet until next May.

The Bay State League in which Wellesley plays is one of several Massachusetts leagues that have banned aluminum bats in all games. No other state bans them, said Jerry Miles, executive director of the National High School Baseball Coaches Association, based in Arkansas. And Massachusetts players can use wood bats if they prefer.

Proponents of aluminum cite two major factors: cost and offensive production.

While an aluminum bat can cost $200-$300, about 10 times that of a wood bat, it doesn't break or need replacement nearly as often.

"If a little guy can hit better with an aluminum bat, that's good. We need to keep kids interested in participating in all sports, not just baseball," Miles said.

Last June, the NCAA announced that its Baseball Research Panel approved a change that is expected to make aluminum bats react more like those made of wood, in part to restrict offense.

A batting-cage study by the National Institute for Sports Science and Safety in Providence, R.I., showed that balls come off some, but not all, aluminum bats faster than off wood bats.

The co-author of the study, NISS Executive Director Rick Greenwald, said he's not aware of any studies showing aluminum bats cause more injuries but feels more research is needed.

While he sympathizes with the Hughtos, "it seems hard to make legislation or rules based on anecdotal evidence," Greenwald said. "We want science to rule the day."

Wellesley's athletic director Andy Levin said he supports the rule change. "Seeing it first hand what can happen, believe me, I'm all for wooden bats," Levin said.

The MIAA sports medicine committee adopted a proposal in April against aluminum bats. It met again five months later and rescinded that.

And the Massachusetts Baseball Coaches executive board voted 17-1 this month against the ban, said North Reading High School coach Frank Carey, a member of that board and the MIAA baseball committee.

■ Blue Hens

continued from page 12

said. "Some guys wouldn't have done anything. I think it's a harsh penalty probably, but I want to make sure that they know.

"With everything you just have to understand that this is not going to be easy for us to win this week against Delaware," Whipple continued. "We have to do everything right just to have a chance to win, and not take things for granted. It didn't take a loss, hopefully, to get the guys to understand how important this game is."

The offense particularly lacked cohesion against the Dukes, with only 310 yards in the contest and a pair of turnovers plaguing it. Jeff Krohn managed just 128 yards on 13-of-22 passes, an obvious side effect of only having two days of practice after recovering from a concussion suffered against Villanova.

The defense had its shakiest contest of the last four games, but it was bend-but-don't-break for the D, which held JMU to just one-of-five in red zone conversions.

"We hoped they would be [this good]," Whipple said. "I think this week is a bigger test for them because [Delaware] has high quality athletes everywhere. Overall, we hoped that they would turn the ball over, we've been better in the red zone and I think we've been a little more physical."

Coming home will be a welcome thing for the Minutemen, who have won 15 of 19 against A-10 foes at home under Whipple's direction.

"I just think it's home and home is always good," Whipple said. "The crowd is good. The Friday atmosphere is good. Having the band there is a good thing. I don't think it's one thing you put your thumb on. It's been a good atmosphere and a good place to play. I think one of the better ones in I-AA."

But the opponent, as well as the stadium, will be a key factor in psyching up the Minutemen for Saturday's contest.

"I think we're glad that we're home," the fifth-year coach said. "The way we played last week we've got something to prove and I think our guys will be ready to play and I think that has to do with it being Delaware."

A-10 Rookie of the Week Shannon James had his first career touchdown on a fake punt in last week's 14-7 win over JMU. He has been a key player for UMass' defense this year.

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

STUDENT TRAVEL
get hyped for spring break '03

Jamaica.....$729
Cancun.....$649
Amsterdam...$509
Paris.....$485
Includes air & accommodations from Boston. Prices are per person. Some taxes & fees not included. Other departure cities and destinations available.

44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> ON THE STREET

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor

Pabst 24 pack Bottles $11.49 + dep

Red Bull 3 for $5.00

Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St., Rt. 9 584-8174

SALE!
3 DAYS ONLY...FRI/SAT/SUN • NOV 1, 2, 3
25% off all Sweaters
Sweaters & Sweater Coats beautiful fall colors, many styles... wool, angora, chenille, plush knit, crochet, bouclé and more fashion • gift • home FACES main st., northampton

PARKING SERVICES
REGULATION REMINDER

Effective Monday, October 28, 2002 Due to the end of Daylight Savings Time, any vehicle with a valid UMass parking permit may park in any unrestricted, non-reserved space starting at 4:00 p.m. on weekdays instead of 5:00 p.m. Parking is still prohibited in tow zones, handicapped spaces, vendor spaces, state vehicle spaces and reserved vehicle spaces. Also excluded are lots which require 24-hour permits — 21, 22, 29, 44, 47, 49, 50, 54, 67, North Village Apartments and Lincoln Apartments. This parking policy will remain in effect through April 4, 2003. Parking meters will continue to be enforced for payment 9:00 am to 5:00 pm.

AURAIO
caring for hair & body

In Greek, Auraio means beautiful, and we at Auraio hope to help you feel beautiful in every way.

Come in to experience a new level of excellence in hair care and massage

413•253•6999
And, call for an appointment today!

31 Campus Plaza Rd.Hadley, MA 10135
(located near Stop & Shop in Hadley)

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Aerobics, classes on campus Step Kickboxing, muscle conditioning 2 classes per week Up to 5 weeks $15 per person Call Judy 545-1962 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Jostens Ring Day Sale, University Store. Fri 11/1 10-4PM, Sat11/2 10-6PM www.jostens.com 800-854-7464

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000 - $2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program. It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Part time $8.50/hr. Brandywine Apts. Needs cleaning person. Tues & Thurs Afternoon, Sat & Sun. Call 549-2600

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

GREAT FOOD, GREAT BOOKS

Sale sponsored by Eta Sigma Phi Herter Hall Lobby Wed & Thurs Oct 30-31, 9-2 Prices from $0.25 - $5

INSTRUCTION

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit@aol.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.universitybartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@guitarwires.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted. Gorgeous 2 bedroom uptown apartment, fully renovated. Huge bedroom with walk-in closet. Parking included. Fully furnished living room and kitchen. Available January. $462.50/ month plus utilities. Call Lindsay at 549-7235

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

2-3 bedroom apartment on Kellogg St.– Great location– uptown. Newly renovated. Front and back porch- Fall option. Call Schuyleroat 253-4643.

Large 4 bedroom Apt. Newly Renovated. In town and close to campus. On bus route. Please contact us at 253-6984.

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! or call 1-800-327-6013 Guaranteed Lowest Prices. Free Meals and Drinks! Cancun, Jamaica, Florida and Bahamas Party Cruise! Our Seventeenth Year! Reps Wanted!

Save 50% off over 2 thousand hotel resorts Call Conard 584-5198

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips.

TRAVEL

Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD COULD GO HERE! ADVERTISE TODAY! COME DOWN TO THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT!

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS/3
4	NBC/40
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS/57
7	UPN 38/Comcast
8	WB/22
9	CTN 16
10	Weather Channel
11	FOX/Cable Channel
12	ABC 6/ABC 40
13	NBC/22
14	Entertainment Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSN Interval Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN2
19	UVC/19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Cinemax/Movie Channel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Home & Garden
27	A & E
28	History Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

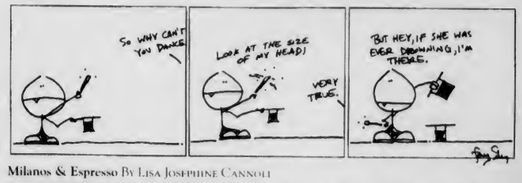
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Roommate Wanted
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

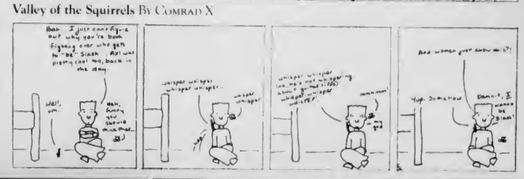


College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Fang Shy By Blake

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

> "And I am a reporter for a newspaper, on another planet, come to file a down-to-earth story of the What When Where How and Why of this astounding life down here and of the strange clowns in control of it..."
>
> -Lawrence Ferlinghetti "Uses of Poetry"

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 27	HIGH: 48 LOW: 25	HIGH: 40 LOW: 17

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You'll find yourself in a new if not unexpected situation today which requires you to solve routine problems in highly imaginative, creative way. That dream you had about forgetting to put pants on and going to class is really a way of telling you not to forget to wear pants to class.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're being a little too possessive today. Is it because you cannot admit that your emotions are getting the better of you? Yes it is. You really need to leave that stuffed animal at home.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone may be trying to keep you emotionally off-center today in order to further his or her own personal agenda. Keeps your wits about you and don't listen to that crazy guy in your biology class.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Both people and situations are likely to prove far more forgiving than you may expect. You won't have to be as defensive as you have been recently. But beware of that sketchy guy on your floor.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Don't look too far back today, or you'll find yourself getting lost in a fog of memories that do not directly relate to your present life. Remember when that boy who sat behind you in your third grade class pulled your hair? Let it go!
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Love is in the air – but very likely not in your heart! Someone may have a hard time getting you to respond in an amorous fashion today. But that's alright, because you have someone else in mind.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Someone in your inner circle may object to your methods or motives quite suddenly today. Does this promise that a major rift is on its way? Just throw him off the island. Survivor style.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – The closer you are to home today the stronger and more confident you will feel. If you find yourself far away, it's a good day for a phone call. Remember to call 1-800-collect!!!
CANCER (June 21-July 22-) – You will discover today that your interests are similar to the interests of someone you've been avoiding. The fact is, you may get along well! But you probably won't because you have hangover paranoia and won't get along with anyone today.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your warm and sensitive side is likely to be revealed today through a chain of unusual and unsuspected circumstances. It's because you obligated to be nice to the kid whose eyebrows you shaved off this weekend when he passed out drunk.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 21) – Despite what you have been saying all week-long, luck is indeed a factor today. You'll have a brush with destiny before the day is out. Don't fear the reaper.
LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 22) – Someone is likely to surprise you today by being right there for you, supplying your wants and needs in abundance. Take advantage of this!!!

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Rice Soup

Chicken Pesto Pasta

Philly Steak Sandwich
Oney Ga

3-Cheese Quesadilla (vegetarian)

Tofu Fricassee (vegan)

DINNER

Tomato Rice Soup

Trick or Treat

HAPPY HALLOWEEN!

Vampire Beef

Ghostly Seafood

Goblin Casserole (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matt Despres
Photo Technician	James Schaffer
Copy Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	Jolene Rousseau, Lizzy Nielsen

The Massachusetts DAILY COLLEGIAN & OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan Present Dining Out
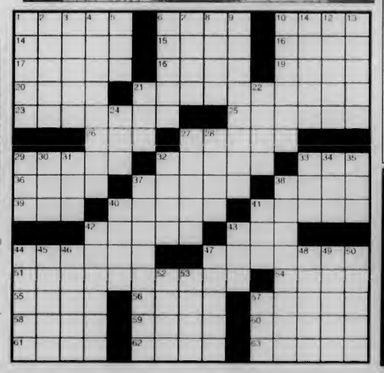
A guide and Map to Area Restaurants
COMING SOON!
November 7th



ACROSS
1 Mozzie cramp
6 Finished edges
10 Aussie rockers
14 Snert's mates
15 Pinatz
16 Grill steaks
17 Undersized pups
18 Too
19 Ineximost part
20 Mo. expense
21 Cookout treat
23 Flop
25 Most loyal
26 "Nightmare" street
27 Sting
29 Plenty
32 Shaggy animals
33 Taxi
36 Lectern's spot
37 Wading bird
38 Big pet
39 Mail code
40 Prop up
41 Get on the horn
42 Cut the cake
43 Herbal drink
44 Rises
47 Opera heroine often
51 House coat (2 wds.)
54 Cat's utterance
55 Inventory
56 This senora
57 Fake diamonds
58 With, to Henri
59 Luxury liner
60 Potential oak
61 Nope opposite
62 Playing cards
63 Keys in data

DOWN
1 Mole's cousin
2 Abdul or Zalin
3 "The Eve of St. —"
4 Brie classes
5 Bride's new title
6 Genuine warmth
7 Raines of 1940s films
8 Sail's place
9 Auto accessory (2 wds.)
10 Build, as assets
11 Picked
12 Scurries
13 Hilltop
21 Mooch
22 Frosted vases
24 Pamplona cry
27 Flirt with 28 Subside
29 Woodworking tool
30 — tai (rum drink)
31 Orange seed
32 — -a-brac
33 Murmur softly
34 Solhem or Blyth
35 Deli bread
37 Freshest
38 Prescription fillers
40 "Jeopardy!" host
41 Gusto
42 Rough drawing
43 Tricycle rider
44 Soothe
45 Forgo
46 Baffled (2 wds.)
47 Ginger cookies
48 Early moralist
49 Out in Tours
50 Country singer Buck —
52 Arthur — of tennis
53 "Don't rub —!"
57 Reassure
Rover

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	O	R	O	S	E		S	P	A		A	M	A	H
E	R	A	S	E	R		C	O	G		R	O	V	E
G	E	M	I	N	I		H	I	C		L	A	N
			R	O	C	K		N	O	C	H	A	I	R
T	H	E	I	R		O	P	T			E	A	R	L	Y
H	O	R	S			M	S	T			T	A	L	I
I	N	N		A	A	H		W	H	E	E	C	K	E	R
R	O	L		R	T	E		A	I	R		I	D	A
D	R	E	A	M	E	R		N	A	T		L	I	I
			C	A	B		E	L	S		A	T	T	N
S	H	I	E	L	D		S	A	D		B	U	S	H	Y
C	O	N	T	A	C	T	S	P	O	R	T
O	T	T	O		D	A		P	A	U	S	E	D
T	E	R	N		L	I	E		A	D	M	I	R	E
S	L	O	E		O	R	A		L	Y	N	X	E	S

1024-07 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Rival Hens march on McGuirk

[illegible] AND MAIKEL MIREL HAVE BEEN KEY [illegible] IMPRESSIVE GROUP SO FAR THIS SEASON.

Minutemen look to overcome history

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts football team has accomplished quite a bit this season – it has won on the road, defeated a pair of top five teams and performed amiably against an undefeated team from the ACC. But a conference title is still within grasp, and while four games remain in the regular season, this weekend's contest stands out in bright, bold letters.

Delaware.

The state that may be most well known for having been made fun of by Mike Myers and Dana Carvey in Wayne's World also plays host to one of the perennial powerhouses in Division I-AA football – a powerhouse that holds a 21-3 all-time record against the Maroon and White.

"The only times they beat us when our guys were around was when they had a really good team," Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "And they're a really good team now, but I thought they were good enough talent-wise to win the National Championship [in 2000]. Last year we didn't play well at all."

The Blue Hens (5-4, 3-3 Atlantic 10) have had moderate success this season, and according to Whipple "should be 7-2," with field goal woes leading to conference losses to Richmond and Rhode Island. A familiar face is missing from Newark this season, as longtime coach Tubby Raymond departed during the offseason. Replacing him is UDel alum K.C. Keeler, who started at linebacker for the Hens from 1978-80.

"They still have the same uniforms, same helmets," Whipple said. "Delaware is Delaware. They have good players, a good coach."

Also gone is the deception of the wing-T offense, which caused many a stress headache to opposing defensive coordinators. This year's offense uses a spread formation, which opens up the field for Georgia Tech transfer Andy Hall – an athletic quarterback who has thrown for 1,544 yards and run for nearly half that much so far this season.

"They're not running the wing-T, they're running more of a run and shoot, but they have good players, a good quarterback," Whipple said.

"[Hall] can do everything – he can run it, he can throw it. He breaks everybody down running-wise. He's really talented. He just makes plays in the running game and he throws the ball really well. He's their marquee player."

Keith Burnell has led the backfield charge, running for 763 yards and eight touchdowns, and has caught 14 balls out of the backfield this season. Hall's primary targets have been Justin Long and Brian Ingram this season. Long has caught 41 balls for four touchdowns, and Ingram, who will likely return this weekend after missing three games due to injury, has 27 catches of his own. The biggest offensive problem has certainly been Scott Collins, who has connected on just eight of 15 field goals and has missed his last five.

On defense, the Blue Hens are led by senior linebacker and Buck Buchanan Award candidate Dan Mulhern, who garnered his second A-10 Defensive Player of the Week Award following Saturday's win over New Hampshire. Whipple considers Mulhern "one of the best linebackers in the league."

The Minutemen are coming off a slim 14-7 victory over James Madison, who ended both halves of last week's game within a yard of the end zone but failed to come away with any points. Contributing to that was the fact that 11 players were late for breakfast on Friday morning, prompting Whipple to hold them out of the first quarter of the contest.

"To me, if we're going to have a great year and win a championship, we have to have discipline in that way," he

Turn to BLUE HENS, page 9

GERALD H. LINGO/COLLEGIAN

T. BROWER FLIPS THE BALL TO AN OFFICIAL AFTER RECOVERING A FUMBLE AGAINST MAINE. BROWER MADE 10 TACKLES, FORCED A FUMBLE AND MADE A KEY LEAD BLOCK AGAINST JAMES MADISON

A-10s on deck for CC squads

By Reid Davenport
[illegible]

Over the past two months, the Massachusetts men's and women's cross country teams have both shown great improvement for such young squads. Both teams will be shooting for more far they have come this Saturday when they go to the Atlantic 10 Championships in Pittsburgh, Pa. Last year, the men took third, while the women took fourth. Regardless of both teams being young, it's obvious they have both worked hard to improve for this meet.

The Minutemen started off the season by placing last out of four teams at a meet held at UNH. They then pushed their way up into a second place finish out of three teams at their only home meet of the season. In their first big meet of the

Turn to CHAMPIONSHIPS, page 8

GERALD H. LINGO/COLLEGIAN

THE MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY TEAM HOPES TO IMPROVE ON A SOLID SEASON AT THE A-10 CHAMPIONSHIPS THIS WEEKEND.

HE season hits high gear

Friars, Huskies on UM's weekend slate

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Historically, the Massachusetts hockey team has always fared better against certain schools. While squads like Boston University and Maine have traditionally had the Maroon and White's number, other schools like Providence and Northeastern have proven to be better matchups.

Still, with games against the latter two schools this weekend, don't expect Head Coach Don Cahoon's troops to bring any extra confidence into the weekend.

"Whether there's a subconscious state of mind, it shouldn't factor in because those teams can play against anybody," Cahoon said.

The Minutemen (1-2-0, 0-1-0 Hockey East) open up the bulk of their Hockey East schedule this Friday and Saturday with showdowns against the No. 11 Friars and Huskies, respectively. With all the struggles UMass endured last season, it was still able to muster solid efforts in its six games with the two teams. The Minutemen collected all three of their conference wins in 2001-02 against PC and NU, and their three defeats were all by a margin of a single goal.

But Cahoon doesn't really think the success enjoyed is anything more than a favorable matchup with the two teams.

"In terms of style of play, maybe we measure up better," the third-year coach said.

The Friars, despite not having played a powerhouse team so far this season, enter Friday's contest at the Mullins Center with an unblemished 5-0-0 record. PC has ganged up on such college hockey cupcakes as Union and MSU-Mankato, but has done so in impressive fashion. The Friars have outscored their opposition by a whopping margin of 32-11, including an 11-0 pasting of Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference doormat Iona. PC also faces its first matchup away from Schneider Arena when it travels to Amherst.

Providence's top trio of Devin Rask, Peter Fregoe and Jon DiSalvatore has combined for a stellar 15 goals and 23 assists alone in the Friars' first five games. At the other end of the ice, the goaltending tandem of freshman Bobby Goepfert and senior stalwart Nolan Schaefer has been rock-solid, posting a combined 2.17 GAA and .932 save percentage.

Saturday's trek to Matthews Arena to take on Northeastern marks the first time the Minutemen will be hitting the road, after opening with four consecutive Mullins Center dates. The Huskies (1-2-2, 0-0-1 HE) have been an interesting team to watch so far this season, as they have shown signs of a great team (with a blowout win against UConn and a tie with No. 1 New Hampshire) and signs of a struggling team (a 5-1 loss at home to Wisconsin).

GERALD H. LINGO/COLLEGIAN

FRESHMAN STEPHEN WERNER SCORED HIS FIRST GOAL OF THE SEASON AGAINST NEBRASKA-OMAHA. HE WILL BE A KEY ASSET TO THE UMASS OFFENSE IN THIS WEEKEND'S CONTESTS.

NU suffered a major loss on the blueline this offseason in the departure of Hobey Baker candidate Jim Fahey, but a few Huskies have stepped up to replace the scoring punch that Fahey provided. Sophomore forward Jason Guerriero has notched six points (2g, 4a) to lead the team so far, while freshman Mike Morris has made an immediate impact, tallying five points, good for second on the team. Last year's Hockey East rookie sensation Keni Gibson has started off the year strong as well, despite having not garnered a victory so far. Gibson enters the weekend with a 2.53 GAA and a .926 save percentage.

With such a young team, team unity is crucial in terms of building the bridge to success. In that respect, the Maroon and White's first away game of the year could be considered a blessing. But then again, with the Minutemen being a group as large as it is young, many of Cahoon's players will be missing the first opportunity outside of the home rink.

"We've got so many people in and out of the lineup, so not everyone's going out on the road," Cahoon said. "But a lot of the young guys are looking forward to going out and just seeing the rest of the league."

Special teams has proved to be quite a bit of a nuisance for the Minutemen this year, as their power play (7.7) and penalty kill (53.8) percentages have both been less than stellar. But despite the abysmal numbers, Cahoon has seen positives in both the man-advantage and disadvantage, and expects those numbers to dramatically improve.

"The penalty kill has been really good, except on the end," Cahoon said, adding that failure to clear the zone towards the end of the kill has caused the Minutemen to allow the high number of power-play goals. He also said that the power play has looked impressive in practice and added "practice and game situations are completely different."

Faceoff for both of this weekend's games is slated for 7 p.m.

NOVEMBER

2002

Weekend showcase
Arts page 5.

Cast your vote
Ed Op page 4.

Cats is created
Sports page 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION

FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY-TWO ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.01.02

State passes Baby Safe Haven law in House

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has given preliminary approval to the Baby Safe Haven/Newborn Protection bill. The bill will now move onto the Senate floor for further legislation, which has the possibility to hold it for as long as the next seven weeks of the current legislative session.

Currently, there are already two Baby Safe Haven bills stalled in the House Ways and Means Committee. If approved, Massachusetts would become the 42nd state to establish Baby Safe Haven laws in the United States.

The Baby Safe Haven/Newborn Protection laws give parents the ability to "drop off" their infant (within a decided time period, generally 72 hours following birth) off in a designated safe place such as a police station, hospital, or other state sanctioned facilities without fear of criminal prosecution.

Advocates of the laws say that they allow parents to separate themselves completely from the responsibility a child brings without becoming criminals in the eyes of the state. Upon relinquishment of the child, the parents give up their rights to the child in the future. According to the Center for Disease Control, babies on the day of their birth are within a group of 10 that are most likely to be murdered.

This probability increases dramatically, the Center says, if the child is born to an unwed mother who has given birth away from a hospital.

Currently, 41 states have approved and established Safe Haven programs, and Pennsylvania is making moves to be the 42nd. During his term as Governor of Texas, President George W. Bush signed into law the first of the Safe Haven bills in 1999. The state of Texas has also allocated further federal funds to publicize the laws and educate their citizens about them.

Similar laws are currently being debated by the remaining eight states unprotected by the laws. Although safe havens are legal in Connecticut and New York, they remain absent in Vermont and New Hampshire, Massachusetts' closest neighbors in the New England area.

Smaller states, and conservative Republican states were, according to Safe Haven advocates, the first states to issue the laws.

"It's much more of a conservatives' issue," said Safe Haven advocate Michael Morrisey. "Republican governors are much more likely to pass the bills. Sixty percent have been signed by Republican governors."

Also proponents of the bills are Pro-life groups, according to Morrisey. He has worked on promoting and getting Safe Haven bills passed since he and his wife, Jean, hurted abandoned baby Rebecca Mary in November of 2001. Morrisey explained that pro-life groups are interested in giving children, unborn and born, every chance they can get. Pro-life groups are as well proponents; however, according to Morrisey, they have not contributed as many core supporters and volunteers as the pro-life groups have.

Following the burial of Rebecca Mary, Morissey said that he was upset by the lack of action state legislators took following the case of Baby Rebecca Mary.

Turn to SAFE HAVEN, page 3

Dan Bovy/Collegian

James Dormitory was the site of an infant abandonment in a trash can last Spring.

Team explained at Fac Senate

Diversity and Social Justice group presents plan

Dan Bovy/Collegian

Anne Herrington (left), Diane Flaherty and Bailey Jackson (at podium) of the Academic Affairs Community's Diversity And Social Justice team detail their study examining the climate for minority faculty on campus at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting. Presiding Officer Jerry Mileur sits among them.

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

Members of the Academic Affairs Community's Diversity and Social Justice (CDSJ) Team presented a special report concerning the team's development yesterday at a Faculty Senate meeting.

"Our campus has a long history of crisis driven responses to diversity and social issues that involve only [the] parts of campus [involved in the issue]," Diane Flaherty, chair of the team, told Faculty Senate members.

The members outlined the steps they are taking towards fulfilling their mission to "improve the quality of the University of Massachusetts Amherst learning community through a systemic changes process focused on community, diversity and social justice."

The team presented the history, mission and function of CDSJ to the Faculty Senate at their bi-weekly meeting yesterday in Herter Hall.

Former Chancellor David Scott proposed the creation of a "Diversity Action Plan" from the already established Chancellor's Counsel on Community, Diversity and Social Justice (CDSJ) in October of 1998.

In his proposal Scott spoke to the issue of committing the University as a whole, and as the flagship campus, to removing barriers within the community.

"As the flagship, the University will continue its historic commitment to removing barriers; barriers to access; barriers between liberal and professional education and between different areas of knowledge; between different groups – faculty, students, staff, administrators...the University is integrative in all that it strives to do," Scott said in a 1996 statement, and repeated in his 1998 proposal.

Following approval from the Faculty Senate, the Counsel began work to generate the Plan by seeking out and incorporating input from campus groups and individuals.

In their 1998 report, "A New Approach to Promoting Community, Diversity and Social Justice" the Counsel concluded, according to their Web site, "what we [the University] are doing regarding CDSJ was fine, but how we were doing it needed to change."

The Counsel's key recommendation was to improve follow through on system and campus CDSJ vision statements by moving responsibility for the CDSJ down the hierarchy to the unit and departmental level.

A University CDSJ Team was appointed in December 1998 to guide and coordinate the changes suggested.

According to Flaherty and her colleagues on the Team, Anne Herrington and Bailey Jackson, the first task of the Team was to develop a set of operating principles for this effort to do this Executive Area Teams were appointed in 2000 and 2001 to continue the change process within the five administrative divisions of the campus; chancellor's area, administrative and finance, university advancement, student affairs, and academic affairs. Flaherty said the project became "decentralized...it is not top down."

The process with which the teams will be conducting their research includes sending out a University wide survey, which will be sent out to all community

Turn to SENATE, page 3

the weekend

celebrate arts & living spotlight

MC event

Paul Barman plus Whirlwind eat and Freddy and the Landlords at Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton on Nov. 2.

A Shakespearean weekend

"To be or not to be, that is the question."

Yes, the most famous and recognizable line from the 400-year-old famous tragedy Hamlet.

Theatre de la Jeune Lune will present their version of Shakespeare's Hamlet this coming Friday and Saturday night at 8 p.m. For nearly 24 years, Theatre de la Jeune Lune has grasped the attention of both national and international audiences with its brilliant and distinctive performance style.

Jeune Lune seeks to create an entirely new kind of theater that is immediate, high-spirited and visually spectacular. The members link a past heritage of popular performance traditions to modern world and present day audiences. This spring, Minneapolis's Theatre de la Jeune Lune, "Theatre of the New Moon," has tackled Hamlet with a pair of scissors, a pen and the idea of re-shaping Shakespeare's words.

Jeune Lune's credo states that "We are the theatre of directness, a theatre that speaks to its audiences, that listens and needs a response. We believe that the theatre is an event. We are a theatre of emotions – an immediate theatre – a theatre that excites and uses a direct language – a theatre of the imagination."

The famous tragedy of the Prince of Denmark has fascinated audiences like no other work has ever before. Hamlet is a work of a literary genius, combining love, madness, envy, hatred, betrayal, murder and mayhem.

Theatre de la Jeune Lune will be performing Hamlet Friday and Saturday Nov. 1 and 2 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are $15 for Five College Students and $15 to $35 for other audience members.

- Christine Papazidis

CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

By Dan Roy

"If convicted, should the underage sniper suspect be put to death?"

Ferron Salniker
Freshman
Undeclared

"You can't teach that killing is wrong by killing. I think my answer would be different if I were a relative of a victim."

Joshua Danny
Sophomore
Chinese

"I support the death penalty in certain situations. He knew what he was doing, so if any case deserves the death penalty this would be one of them."

Johnny Yong
Sophomore
Economics

"I don't believe in the death penalty. Maybe if he was more knowledgeable and was given more opportunities he wouldn't have chosen to kill."

Bryn Sinsimer
Freshman
Undeclared

"I think he should have to live with what he did. They should at least try to put him through rehabilitation."

Josh Kimball
Senior
BDIC - Sustainable Ag & Soc. Thought

"If people are reincarnated, then whatever caused him to do this needs to be resolved in this life. If we kill him, we ensure that the problem will come up for him again in his next incarnation."

Maura Guillet
Sophomore
Undeclared

"I don't believe in capital punishment, however I think a life sentence is appropriate."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic year. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded as the Index in 1890, the Massachusetts Collegian in 1911, the College Signal in 1911, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1938. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a member of the Associated Press since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500. Subscriptions are $ 80 a year and $ 50 fall or spring.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Eno Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Say No to War on Iraq

Sign the Iraq Peace Pledge: afsc.org/peacepledge

Students have often led the way in social justice movements, help us lead the way.

To learn about local organizing and events contact:
AFSC-Western Massachusetts Program • Phone: 413-584-8975
Email: afsc@crocker.com • Web: http://users.crocker.com/~afsc/
Learn about the issues at: afsc.org/iraq

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE
85 Years Working for Peace, Justice & Human Dignity

UMass theater and veterans to team for event

Local veterans, UMass theater students and staff will perform dramatic readings on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. from the best-selling book War Letters: Extraordinary Correspondence, as a part of the Twentieth Annual Veterans Day program put on by the Veterans Education Project (VEP).

"We've chosen letters and stories rich with life lessons that, in light of the current world situation and talk of war, are timely and most relevant," said Rob Wilson, VEP director. "Whether they deal with every day happenings, profess devotion to spouses, mourn lost comrades, display Incredible courage, denounce tyrants, or reveal the humanity of a once-hated enemy, these letters provide pure and eye-opening insights into the realities, sacrifices, and emotional costs of war."

Three VEP veteran speakers will also share brief stories about their experiences as a part of the evening.

The speakers are Fritz Schnaittacher, a German-born Jew who fled Hitler's army in 1933, George Williams, a Vietnam War veteran and Angela Atchison, a UMass alumnus who graduated from the UMass Army ROTC program and then served in Operation Desert Storm as an officer in charge of protecting chemical and biological weapons.

The event will be held in the Flavin Auditorium of the Isenberg School of Management. For more information, call 253-4947.

- Dan Lamothe

Museum to open at Hampshire

By Bonnie Obremski
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

"You can't flunk museum-going," said Nicholas Clark, director of the Eric Carle Museum of Picture Book Art at Hampshire College. The building was recently constructed on a southwest corner of the campus and is scheduled to open Nov. 22.

Until then, much of the project's philosophy lies untested upon empty rows of shelves and in stacks of artless picture frames. From the library to the art studio, Eric Carle's museum lies in quiet anticipation.

"People can be intimidated by museums...[but] this museum will serve to provide people with the confidence that the experience can be both meaningful and enjoyable," Clark said.

Eric Carle and his wife Barbara Carle first envisioned a museum space to house works, such as The Very Hungry Caterpillar, in 1995. The original size of that space would now easily fit within the dimensions of the smallest gallery in what the Picture Book Art museum has grown to be today.

"It wasn't until the foundation was poured that we realized just how big this museum was going to be," said Clark on the beginnings of the building, which now covers 40,000 square feet of land.

Keeping such a large structure environmentally friendly is no easy task. "The museum is 18 percent above minimum Green Standards," said Clark.

The gallery and storage areas of the building must constantly remain under temperature control, which "inhibits conservation practices," said Clark. Other aspects of the museum's architecture have been primed to be in tune with environmental concerns. For example, many of the floors are heated radiantly, letting heat rise from the floor instead of blasting downwards. Grills, which look like heavy-duty Venetian blinds, have the capability to be opened and closed in order to regulate the amount of sunlight that streams through the building's many windows.

Bright, colorful collages against a wide plane of white space characterize the illustrations of Eric Carle. The experience of visiting the Museum of Picture Book Art is, according to Clark, "almost like walking into a page of one of Eric's books."

The large white walls of the building create an environment that is "very sophisticated," said Clark, but by the use of equally large windows, which look out into the apple orchard and onto Holyoke range, "the austerity is softened by the out-of-doors."

Though much of the interior design of the Picture Book museum is geared for the young, the director of the museum hopes that the space will be seen as a genuine research facility for students. He hopes that when he and the administrators of each of the Five Colleges are able to find "a subject matter resonant to all of the students," people will be able to take advantage of the resources offered at the museum.

Until that happens, however, the museum is most interested in Five-College student participation in volunteering to fill various positions offered within the building.

■ senate

continued from page 1

members. Everyone who receives a survey is asked to complete it honestly and return it so that it may be included in the group's data collection and analysis.

"This is not just a faculty enterprise, it draws on all of us," said Herrington. "It is a chance while it is a time of change for the University to put some of these things in as positive changes."

Jackson concurred, saying that as a time passed the changes could be "built back into the fabric of institution" and each time the Team reassessed the situation it would become a "self-renewing process for the University."

Jackson asked that both friends and enemies of the agenda speak up to let the Team know how they feel about diversity and social justice at the University and what could be done to better the situation.

"We need your participation and your voice," he said, "Voices of friends and those who are not friends of the agenda, and why they are or are not."

Senator Roland Chilton asked the group if they could give a specific example of what their specific change strategies would be. Harrington's response made it clear that the group had none, and would not have examples of possible strategies until the study had been completed and their data collected and analyzed. It would be at that point that the group would know what problems there were and what needed to be changed.

"We have none yet. There is no overarching unified goal that will be forced upon groups on campus," she said.

DAN ROY/COLLEGIAN

Happy Halloween

The remains of a pumpkin sit on a 2001 Pontiac Grand Am with a windshield that was smashed last night. The damage occurred when the pumpkin was allegedly thrown on of a Dickinson Dormitory balcony at around 11 p.m. Police were on the scene investigating at press time.

■ safe haven

continued from page 1

"Not a single Massachusetts state official came forward in outrage in the fact that if Massachusetts had implemented a true 'Safe Haven' law with immunity and anonymity, then made the public aware of the law, we might have seen Baby Rebecca Mary about to have her first Christmas with a loving family," he said in a statement to the Boston Herald on Nov. 28, 2001.

There have been at least six reported cases of infant abandonment in Massachusetts since Sept. 1, 2001, according to Morrisey. One of these is the case involving former UMass student Jennifer Paluseo, 19, of Plymouth, Mass., who is currently charged with homicide and the improper disposal of human remains.

Paluseo was arraigned on June 20 after her nine pound, male newborn was found in a trash receptacle in James Dormitory on May 2. Then a freshman, Paluseo withdrew from the University before the conclusion of her spring semester and has since been living at home with her parents. According to Paluseo's court appointed lawyer, Terry Nagel, her family posted the $25,000 bail.

Morrissey believes that it is cases like Paluseo's, and the average two to six known newborn abandonment cases a year, that have prompted the House to approve the current bill.

jostens®

The Choice For Your Class Ring!

RING DAY
University Store at the Campus Center

Friday, November 1st 10-4
Saturday, November 2nd 10-6

If you can't make the Ring Sale,
Call Jostens at 800-854-7464
shop.jostens.com

Can GOD

MAKE A ROCK
~ SO LARGE ~
THAT HE HIMSELF
CANNOT LIFT IT ?

What would a professor say?

Why not ask one...

Meet a panel of UMass professors who enjoy engaging with thoughtful skeptics and think that Christianity still makes sense in the real world.....

and they will answer questions about what the Bible has to say about gender and sexuality,
stem-cell research, war and peace, science, evil, other religions, heaven, hell,
what to do about obnoxious roommates
and
really, really big rocks.

Wednesday Nov. 6th 3:00pm

Campus Center 163

www.umass.edu/christian/faithandreason

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Homosexual athletes:
Let them come out

Amongst the World Series, another New England Patriots' win, the start of the NBA season, and a thrilling college football race, another event in the sporting world took place this week that received somewhat less attention. For only the second time in history, a former NFL player came out and publicly declared his homosexuality.

Esera Tuaolo, former defensive linebacker for the Green Bay Packers, joined Dave Kopay as the only two former professional football players to be open about being gay. The information was leaked this past weekend in the media, with his first interview occurring on HBO's "Real Sports with Bryant Gumbel." Tuaolo, a native of Hawaii, was a standout in the Pacific Conference for the Oregon State Beavers before embarking on a nine year career in the NFL. A member of the 1991 NFL all-rookie team, Tuaolo received a fair amount of success on the field of play.

Off the field however, was a different story. Constantly burdened by his hidden secret, Tuaolo often turned to alcohol as an escape. The burden of his hidden homosexuality caused depression and even thoughts of suicide. Many times, when driving 100 miles per hour "I felt as if I could turn that wheel and end it all," Tuaolo said in his interview. This stress and depression led to his early retirement two years ago. Tuaolo gives credit to the first pioneer, Kopay, with helping him learn to love himself. He credits Kopay's book The Dave Kopay Story, with changing his life.

Now out and open about his lifestyle, Tuaolo says he's finally happy. He's working on a career in music, living with his partner Mitchell, and raising their two adopted daughters, Michelle and Mitchell.

While one can feel good for Tuaolo and his new found happiness, the real issue is still the stigma that is placed on gay athletes. Kopay and Tuaolo are the only two former NFL players who are out. Billy Bean remains the only known homosexual from Major League Baseball, and he too came out after retirement.

No player in any major sport in America has come out as being a homosexual. The closest thing to it are several members of the WNBA who are open about their sexuality. Players exist though. A big deal was made last year when the editor of Out declared that he was engaged in a relationship with a professional player on some east coast team. There was speculation about who the player could be, so much so that Mike Piazza at one point actually held a small press conference to rebut a recent news article that he was gay.

Players with animosity toward the issue abound in all sports as well. MLB players Julian Tavarez and John Rocker, NBA stars Allen Iverson and Jason Williams, and NFL players Marshall Faulk, Luke Petitgout, and Jeramy Shockey are all members of the list of professional athletes who have made comments against a professional athlete coming out of the closet.

This is a sad state of affairs, especially in the times we live in. Sports is a world in which racial diversity has been preached for a long time. Sexual diversity should be awarded the same respect.

It's a fact of life. There are gay professional athletes, just like there are gay athletes here at UMass and across the ranks of sports everywhere. Their teammates, must grow up, and deal with it.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

The importance of voting

SASHA SENDEROVICH

As a child growing up in the Soviet Union, I used to visit newspaper kiosks quarter-hourly to see if they were open/closed, as in addition to the usual newspapers, crowding information on the presence of milk, meat, other perishable goods. On May 8th, the election, I suggest, was considered the grandest holiday of the entire year.

Those elections were a farce. Every household, if a citizen of Russia managed to survive the ordeal, received their ballots in the mail. Registered at their current place of residence, I had to vote in person. Each citizen was given a ballot with a list of candidates, and a booth in which to mark it. Then, the ballot was placed in a box. Voting is perhaps the only forced act in which the population can participate in the governance of a country. There can be no comparable act. Despite their struggle, I was never met at people in the countryside who did not think highly of me and their votes, regardless. Each of us, participants would applaud the outcome of the election.

Many people would say that voting in elections is a privilege, that one may then shall not participate in such a process. But one thing is certain: voting is a privilege that many people around the world struggle for, and even die for. Many democracies in the world have requirements for minimum voter turnout of at least 50 percent in order to validate the elections.

Having spent the last few years in America I would never stop wondering about the reasons for a sheer apathy which voters display at this election. I don't even want to do the time of the Presidential elections, and through all elections since then would not do away with its mystery to understand how voter turnout can hover around 51 percent and often dramatically plunge from the historic highs. I don't claim to have the answer, certain groups of the population must include: women and African-Americans, fought long and hard for their enfranchisement. Their dissatisfaction with the system is understandable and justifiable. Many other democracies in the world have requirements for minimum voter turnout of at least 50 percent in order to validate the elections.

Many people would say that voting in elections is a privilege, that one may then shall not participate in such a process. But one thing is certain: voting is a privilege that many people around the world struggle for, and even die for. Many democracies in the world have requirements for minimum voter turnout of at least 50 percent in order to validate the elections.

Much like a child in the Soviet Union, I am still waiting for this election day to arrive. Yet, this time I will be able to head to the polling station alone and not in tow of my grandparents. My reasons for voting, too, will be quite different from theirs. I can only hope that most citizens of this country, including many UMass students, will do the same.

Sasha Senderovich is a UMass student.

Think you can draw better Ed/Op cartoons? Prove it! Come down and see Jamie and Regan, or e-mail editorial@dailycollegian.com

Living the good life

Hard facts to put in your pipe

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

You know it seems that people are making big mark when it comes to acknowledging the blatantly hypocritical and bigger supporting Israel. We all understand what the concept is exercise in. One side attacks and another side retaliates. This creates victims on some occasions people that are innocent bystanders on one side. My concern is in regarding support for Israel is that within this cycle it violates the rules are completely ignored. Israel's response to the Palestinians have no restraint. And when I say the rules are ripped to one side it because, it there does.

Between both 28 and Nov. 27 of the year 2000, 30 days I, the numbers say, 642 Palestinians were killed. 26 percent of which were under the age of 18 and 87.4 percent of which were civilians. In Gaza, 67 percent were children of whom 50 percent died from the attack.

Many people would say that voting in elections is a privilege, that one may then shall not participate in such a process. But one thing is certain: voting is a privilege that many people around the world struggle for, and even die for. Many democracies in the world have requirements for minimum voter turnout of at least 50 percent in order to validate the elections

The Mooney Suzuki full of raw energy

By Joe Wright
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

THE MOONEY SUZUKI
Pearl Street
Oct. 22

NORTHAMPTON – Pearl Street exploded last Tuesday night with amazing energy. Not energy from a candy bar or a soda pop, just a little "electric sweat" according to Mooney Suzuki guitarist and vocalist Sammy James.

New York's Lower East Side favorites the Mooney Suzuki took the stage with immeasurable power from start to finish, putting on a show that some bands only dream of. Guitarists leapt into the crowd showing both skill and stage presence.

The acrobatics of the lead guitarist Graham Tyler created a Jimi Hendrix-like image. Finishing their last song, Graham climbed atop the shoulder of Sammy, where he sat as they ran into the crowd performing simultaneous guitar solos. High points of the set were "Electric Sweat," "Young Man's Mind" and "Oh Sweet Sussana."

The Mooney's hail from New York City and earned a reputation all along the east coast shortly after their formation due to their live shows. Keep in mind that this was all done without a record label or promoter. Their "do it yourself" ethic showed through in their raw garage rock sound and determination to put on a great show. This tour follows the release of their amazing third album, Electric Sweat, and a significant progression for the band who has refined its sound and honed it into something truly distinct, just as is the case with the band's live performances.

The other band on the entire tour with the Mooney's is the Sahara Hotnights, an all female rock band with a punk edge straight out of Sweden. Following the release of their new album Jennie Bomb, Sahara Hotnights was also exceptional and blew me away. By far their best song live was "On Top of Your World," which they performed with such power that the tune is still stuck in my head.

The other two openers were the Flaming Sideburns and Cyclub, who appeared to be a local favorite. The Flaming Sideburns were the first band to play the night and started out with the singer babbling in Spanish only to finish off with "and we're the Flaming Sideburns." They put on a decent show in spite of the fact that the singer, who has clearly spent a lot of time studying the movements of Mick Jagger, seemed a little cliché at times. He moved as if he owned some sort of instructional video on Jagger.

They did, however, entertain the crowd and were a tight band. Their standout number was by far "Flowers." However, as good as they were they did not catch my full attention and, in the end, served up a mediocre performance.

Cyclub, who went on second, appeared to have a strong fan base that certainly supported the band at the show. The band was good and the energy of the fans gave the band a boost for those who have not seen them. The singer and guitarist was a short woman with a Bjork-like voice. The lead guitarist was an imposing male who appeared on the stage in a velvet bucket hat, a matching vintage smoking jacket and a skirt with sweatpants under it, so right from the start that caught my attention. Cyclub has an interesting sound, which appears to be heavily influenced by the Pixies as well as the rest of the Post-Punk movement. The difference was that Cyclub had a very experimental edge to them that did prove to be interesting in the end. The only problem was that at times the songs seemed slightly pretentious and it was hard to understand the vocals due to the high voice, but in the end they did catch my attention.

All together this was a wonderful show, and every band gave their all, and played until they collapsed onto the floor (in Mooney's case literally), and kept going. Stage shows can make or break a band, and with the groups in question, each one is on the rise.

PARKING SERVICES

Effective Monday, October 28, 2002 Due to the end of Daylight Savings Time, any vehicle with a valid UMass parking permit may park in any unrestricted, non-reserved space starting at 4:00 p.m. on weekdays instead of 5:00 p.m. Parking is still prohibited in tow zones, handicapped spaces, vendor spaces, state vehicle spaces and reserved vehicle spaces. Also excluded are lots which require 24-hour permits — 21, 22, 29, 44, 47, 49, 50, 54, 67, North Village Apartments and Lincoln Apartments. This parking policy will remain in effect through April 4, 2003. Parking meters will continue to be enforced for payment 9:00 am to 5:00 pm.

HEY!! LET'S GO BOWLING!
THURSDAY - College Night
Galactic lights and today's top music
9 p.m. to 12:00 a.m.
Unlimited Bowling
$13/person (includes shoes)
FRIDAY
Disco 10 p.m. to 1 a.m.
SATURDAY - Pop Rock'n Bowl
10 p.m. to 1 a.m.
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant St.
Northampton • 584-4830

DANSKO
COMFORT.
ZANNA
downtown
Amherst

He fought for 76 years to get the right to vote...
You just had to turn 18
Vote Tuesday November 5th

Where to Vote:
Central Area (NOT Van Meter): Wildwood School.....Strong St.
Orchard Hill (AND Van Meter): North Fire Station.....East Pleasent
Northeast/Sylvan: Immanuel Lutheran Church.....North Pleasent
Southwest (Melville, Moore, Pierpont, Cance, Emerson, James): Bangs Community Center.....Boltwood Walk
Southwest (Towers,Mackimmie, Patterson, Prince, Thoreau, Crampton): Hampden Dining Commons

Visit www.wheredoivotema.com for off-campus locations

Candidate Information:
(Rep) Romney - www.romney2002.com
(Dem) O'Brien - www.obriengabrieli.com
(Lib) Howell - www.carlahowell.org
(Green) Stein - www.jillwill.org
(Ind) Johnson - www.barbforgovernor.com
For Local State Reps/Senators - www.ma.gov
Ballot Questions - www.boston.com/politics/state

Sponsored by SCERA (Student Center for Education, Research, and Advocacy)
420 Student Union 545-0355
SCERA seeks to engage students in solution-oriented strategies as opposed to traditional problem solving through encouraging student participation in all aspects of university policy and decision-making. SCERA does the necessary research into the roots of a symptomatic problem, and empowers students with the necessary analytical skills to pose alternative solutions and advocate desirable changes.

DO YOU HAVE A FAVORITE ACADEMIC ADVISOR?
NOMINATE THEM FOR THE
OUTSTANDING ACADEMIC ADVISOR AWARD

The Nominating Committee for the 2002-2003 Outstanding Academic Advisor Award invites all students, faculty and staff to nominate academic advisors whose practices distinguish them form other advisors. The characteristics of an outstanding advisor include but are not limited to:

- Building strong relationships with students
- Monitoring students' progress toward academic and career goals
- Making appropriate referrals
- Knowing and understanding institutional regulations, policies an procedures

Nominations of faculty and staff who advise undergraduate students should be submitted to:

Outstanding Academic Advisor Award Committee
Office of the Provost
362 Whitmore Building

Nominations (in writing, by phone, or by e-mail to gjones@provost.umass.edu) should be recieved by Friday 11/15/02. For further information, call the Provost's Office at 545-2554.

SOUTH HADLEY – Singer/songwriter Lis Harvey, recently named "One to Watch" for 2002 by the nationally syndicated radio show, "Acoustic Cafe," performs Thursday, Nov. 7 from 8 to 10 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College. In recent weeks, Harvey has visited 30 states within 61 days. Now after a 10-day break, she makes her way back on the road to continue her acoustic music series.

Following Harvey will include a Five College open mic at 10 p.m., in which sign-ups for two-song slots will be taken at 8 p.m. in the Torrey Living Room.

The events are free to MHC Students, $3 to students with a Five College ID and $5 for the general public, with tickets only on sale at the door. Call (413) 538-2045 for more information.

SOUTH HADLEY – The Connecticut Opera, a renowned touring company presenting live opera for both young and adult audiences, arrives at Chapin Auditorium on Saturday, Nov. 9 in Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

Their first presentation, Three Little Pigs, begins at 11 a.m. with music by Mozart from The Magic Flute and Don Giovanni. The opera bills this popular children's classic as an unforgettable introduction to opera.

The second show, Opera Tunities, which includes a musical introduction to opera's greatest hits with popular arias (a solo vocal piece with instrumental accompaniment); duets and ensembles, begins at 2 p.m.

Tickets for MHC students cost $5 and are available at the door for each show. General public ticket information is available at the UMass Fine Arts Center box office at (413) 545-2511.

WILLIAMSTOWN – The Williams College Museum of Art presents, "HA! Cartoons, Caricatures, and Satire from the Williams College Museum of Art" on Nov. 9, addressing the definitions of such art by providing examples from each genre, totaling about 40 works (most from the permanent collection and on paper with some paintings and sculpture).

The highlighted event surrounds the collections of Rube Goldberg.

Thomas Nast and World War I posters. However, works by Andy Warhol, Cindy Sherman, William Hogarth, Francisco Goya, Honoré Daumier and Tony Oursler are also included.

The show will run through March 30, 2003.

UMASS – Artist David Henderson will present his exhibit "New Work" beginning Nov. 14 until Dec. 8 in the Hampden Gallery at Southwest residential area. While a special closing reception will be held on the exhibit's last day from 2 to 5 p.m., spectators may view the collection Mondays through Thursdays from noon to 6 p.m. and Sundays from 2-5 p.m. Call (413) 545-0680 for more information.

On the Net: http://www.finearts-center.com

UMASS – Asian Dance and Music Program hired presenter Kriya Yogo to bring life through a multimedia presentation of Power Point slides, video clips and a brief interactive practice session on Sunday, Nov. 17 at 3 p.m. The presentation, "An Interactive talk on Kriya Yoga: The Science of Health," by Dr. Bal Ram Singh at Memorial Hall will link yoga to scientific terms, illustrating ways the practice can deepen one's self understanding.

"Kriya Yogo is a concept that considers a holistic integration of body, mind and soul as a necessary concept for human beings to develop perfect understanding and intellectual attainment," Singh reported in a recent press release. Some of the discipline's techniques, Singh continued, have shown to lower blood pressure, blood cholesterol and diabetes while also increasing control of the mind, concentration abilities and a search for divinity.

Call (800) 999-UMAS or (413) 545-2511 for tickets, priced at $5.

Knock

continued from page 5

world of the Mafia, but it's a Mafia far removed from the glitz and brutal romanticism of The Godfather; it's a mob movie in which the Mafia isn't a lifestyle, but a business and a failing one at that. The modern world is encroaching on the turf of these men, honorable in their own ways and horrible in others. Psychotherapy, law crackdowns and emotional anxiety are mucking up a world that was once simple in its brutality.

Matty, looking for respect, begs his father, the notorious Benny Chains (Dennis Hopper) for a real job. Matty, at age 12, never had the guts to kill a snitch and now Benny is almost unwilling to test his boy out again. With the help of uncle Teddy (John Malkovich), Matty prevails in winning an easy, but important, assignment – the delivery of $300,000 from Seattle to New York.

Seizing leadership as soon he gets it, Matty makes his first mistake by asking his pilot friend, Johnny Marbles (Seth Green) to pick up the bag and deliver it. Marbles is a fluke just ten months off a coke addiction and when he lands for fuel in the tiny town of Wibaux, Montana, the money disappears.

Knockin'around Guys has been designed as a combination of comedy, crime thriller and character drama. It lacks the kind of [illegible] punch that, say, "The Sopranos" delivers on a weekly basis, but it's solidly built stuff. Matty, along with tough guy Taylor (newly minted heartthrob Vin Diesel) – perhaps the toughest guy to ever sport the Star of David as a tattoo – and lady's man Chris (Andrew Davoli), travels to the tiny town to reclaim the money, which has passed from the hands of two stoner punks to a corrupt sheriff (Tom Noonan.)

Skepticism was the first thing to cross my mind as I sat to watch Knockin'around Guys; when one first sees the trailer for a movie two years before it opens, it's highly unlikely that the movie will be any good. But co-writer/directors David Leven and Brian Koppelman do a deft job of establishing mood, character and plot. Pepper, with hair dyed jet black, makes for an engaging hero, playing the role with quiet grace and sympathy.

Diesel, the mountained-muscled actor destined to be the next Action Hero, who can be an actor of real force (Boiler Room, Pitch Black), gives what may be his last real performance before succumbing to action hero bluster, with line readings that suggest an underlying weariness and sadness to his tough guy role. Malkovich finds a right note between quirk, humor and dead seriousness.

Knockin'around Guys is not the best mob movie ever to be made. But, for a movie that was shelved for two years by its studio, it's an astonishingly strong piece of work, one that has more intelligence, depth and drama than its trailers suggest. B

A New Line; rated R for violence, language and some drug use; 94 mins.

Formula

continued from page 5

it to Liverpool to sell his formula for a new drug for $20 million dollars. Called POS 51, the drug – a shiny, little blue pill – is supposedly 51 times the potency of any illegal drug known to man. And the best part is that it's made entirely from legal, over-the-counter medicine.

Ever since Quentin Tarantino shocked and wowed audiences with Pulp Fiction, movies have endlessly ripped off his mode of quippy, pop-culture laden humor and breezy, bloody ultra-violence. But, nearly a decade later, can this style of action even be called fun? I wouldn't exactly call Formula 51 fun. It's an overly mannered violent quirkfest posing as a coherent narrative. In the opening minutes, an explosion rips apart the Lizard's lair, and bullets tear apart Elmo's first meeting with a British dealer. The British dealer, by the way, has an assistant who follows him around with an inflatable donut because the dealer has hemorrhoids. Stop me if you think that's hysterical.

In Liverpool, Elmo hooks up with a soccer-obsessed "fiver" named Felix (Robert Carlyle) who happens to be the ex of a hitwoman named Dakota (Emily Mortimer) who has been hired by the Lizard to kill everyone around Elmo and bring him back to the Lizard.

Formula 51 is the kind of movie in which it is automatically assumed that hilarity will form anytime someone yells out "bollocks." It makes Ritchie's graceless, boys-club attitude-sweepstakes comedies seem all the more sophisticated in their over-stylized music video glee. The comic highlights include skinheads swilling down a diarrhea-inducing cocktail, and a baddie blowing up – literally.

Jackson, with his cool-cat demeanor, has played this type of slick, smarter-than-the-room player far too many times in the past; he's still good here, but how long 'til it develops into an actor's tic? Carlyle and Mortimer steal the show by transcending the minimal development of their criminal-lovebird characters. The movie is idiocy, but it has been fast-paced, making the idiocy far more tolerable. Formula 51 has been designed as a daft, cheeky lark, but it ends giving the viewer a bad buzz. C

3/Screen Gems, rated R for strong violence, language, drug content and some sexuality; 92 min)

Sinner

continued from page 5

have been inspired by Barker's demented imagination. Acted with all the depth of a Saturday morning teen soap opera, and filled with special effects that seem like something that can be created on a computer, Saint Sinner is absolutely atrocious.

The movie opens at a monastery in the Pacific Northwest in 1815. Two monks – who happen to be brothers – sneak into the monastery's repository filled with evil artifacts and accidentally unleash two succubi from the chest that has been keeping them imprisoned. The demon girls rip the arm off one of the brothers before escaping into the Wheel of Time to make hell in the modern world. Tomas, the surviving brother (hunk-o'-driftwood Greg Serrano), the more rebellious of the two, follows the demons into the present day to destroy them with a special, magical dagger.

The succubi, Munkar (Mary Mara) and Nakir (Rebecca Harrell) are going around an unnamed metropolitan city sucking the life forces out of lonely male victims by posing as prostitutes. Tomas teams with a female cop (Gina Riveria) to find and kill the offending creatures before they claim new lives.

The succubi are meant to be frightening, powerful, seductive creatures, but they have all the sexual appeal of a five dollar crackwhore-prostitute. We're meant to believe that the "girls" can lure men to their gruesome demises, but the costume and make-up choices drain them of any kind of appeal. If these girls came on to me, I would run; apparently, guys in this movie are so desperate to have sex, that they would happily go to bed with a greasy, dirty girl who looks like she hasn't taken a shower in three months.

The lack of sex appeal takes a huge chunk of credibility out of Saint Sinner, a fatal error considering that the movie is pretty flimsy to begin with. The amateurish acting and special effects hardly help matters, and neither does that fact the movie feels like nothing. It's not scary, or creepy, or eerie, or even memorably gross (the ickiest make-up effects aren't anything we haven't seen on "The X-Files.") Director Joshua Butler ladles on the portentous gloom (every scene seems to be backed by some morbid string composition) and successfully takes the air out of every scene. The movie is a flat, uninspired bit of Catholic horror cheese filled with religious imagery and hand-handed big themes. The sight of Mara sucking the life out of a victim while Harrell continues to have sex with him is meant to be disturbing, but it comes off as laughable. It would have been better had the filmmakers had played this off as a Halloween weekend B-movie goof, a kind of TV movie that you could just sit back and enjoy.

Unfortunately, the movie is deadly serious. Anything that manages to be both solemn and laughable at the same time is never bound to be any good. D-

Burning

continued from page 5

"We already toured there once, and we might as well have been Nirvana," Coats joked to MTV.com. "They love American rock and roll. They'll eat it up and throw it on the cover of NME and call it the next big thing."

The Burning Brides have the power and conviction of their idols, who also used rock to fight the system of corporate music.

Don't expect to see these guys on MTV anytime soon, but believe they are the voice of a musical revolution.

AURAIO
caring for hair & body
In Greek, Auraio means beautiful, and we at Auraio hope to help you feel beautiful in every way.
Come in to experience a new level of excellence in hair care and massage
413•253•6999
And, call for an appointment today!
31 Campus Plaza Rd.Hadley, MA 10135
(located near Stop & Shop in Hadley)

Castaway Lounge
I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 685-8733
1-413-665-8733
will proudly present
ANOTHER AMATEUR NIGHT
◆ 1st prize $300
◆ 2nd prize $200
◆ 3rd prize $100
Ladies over 18 must apply in person
Our VIP Room is always availiable for Private Parties
Directions: west on Rt 116 make left at end of 116
1.5 miles on left side

Interested in a Challenging and Exciting Career that will put your Social Concerns into Action?
Consider a career in Clinical Social Work!
To find out more about an MSW or Ph.D. in social work, attend the Smith College School for Social Work.
INFORMATION DAY
Including small group discussions with faculty, students and alumni and information on course work, placement, financial aid and student life.
November 2, 2002
1:00 - 5:30 p.m.
Seeyle Hall, Room 106, Smith College
For more information call (413) 585-7960
E-mail: sswadmis@smith.edu
www.smith.edu/ssw
SMITH COLLEGE School for Social Work

Brian Walsh, Stacey Marzilli, & Pamela Notartomaso
Thank You for your hard work this summer!
You did a great job as Management Interns.
Have a great year - we miss you already!
Your friends at...

Enterprise rent-a-car

UMass BRIEFS:

Men's Basketball

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team will hold a Maroon and White intrasquad scrimmage in Curry Hicks Cage, Saturday, Nov. 2, at 4 p.m. The Cage, of course, was the longtime on-campus home of the Minutemen from the 1931-32 season until the Mullins Center opened its doors in 1993.

Saturday's scrimmage, which is free to all fans, will be conducted under game-type conditions, complete with officials.

"This will be a great opportunity for our fans to check out this year's team," said UMass coach Steve Lappas. "I've heard a lot of good things about the Cage, and I know many people have some great memories of it.

"Because we have so many new players on this year's team, we are going to treat this scrimmage as if it were a real game so that our players will understand our game-day routine from shoot-around to warm-up when the games start for real next week," he added.

Football/Women's Soccer

Junior forward Erin Lilly of the women's soccer team and senior linebacker Corey Potter of the Minuteman football team were named co-Dunn Brothers / UMass Athletes of the Week as announced by the UMass Sports Luncheon Committee Wednesday afternoon.

In last Saturday's 14-7 victory at James Madison, Potter led the team with 14 total tackles to tie his career high. He also recorded three tackles for loss and a sack for eight yards against the Dukes.

In Friday's 6-1 win over the Owls, Lilly scored four goals, including the game-winner. She tied the school's single-game goals record set by Nancy Feldman against Cortland on Oct. 11, 1980. Her eight points in the game also tied Feldman and Carolyn Michael for the most in a single game. Michael had two goals and four assists in a game against Keene State on Sept. 11, 1985.

On Sunday, Lilly assisted on the game-winning goal and scored another as the Minutewomen shut out Saint Joseph's, 3-0. She now leads the team with 15 points on five goals and five assists.

Lilly was selected as the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week on Monday as well.

Courtesy Media Relations

BOSTON FORWARD PAUL PIERCE, LEFT, SLAMS A DUNK AGAINST THE CHICAGO BULLS IN WEDNESDAY'S OPENER. THE CELTICS LOST TO THE WASHINGTON WIZARDS LAST NIGHT, 114-69. PIERCE SHOT 1-FOR-16 FROM THE FIELD ON THE EVENING.

Celtics suffer worst loss in franchise history

By Joseph White
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) – Michael Jordan and the Washington Wizards handed the Boston Celtics their worst defeat in franchise history.

Shaking off a rusty performance that made him look his age the night before, Jordan scored 21 points in 22 minutes as the Wizards beat the Celtics 114-69 Thursday night.

The 45-point loss topped Boston's previous worst of 42 points, a 128-84 loss at Portland on Jan. 4, 1977. It was the third-biggest margin of victory in Wizards history.

Jordan capped the first half with a flourish. He made his second free throw, raced to his right to steal the inbounds pass, pumped and made a 21-foot jump shot – complete with a little cancan kick – just before the halftime buzzer. He left the court with a big smile to thunderous applause.

Washington	114
Boston	69

In the second half, he helped Washington rub it in.

Jordan scored just eight points and missed a dunk in the second half of Wednesday's season-opening loss at Toronto, but he passed that tally in the second half alone against the Celtics. The 39-year-old guard shot 8-of-15 from the field and 5-of-5 from the free-throw line. He had four rebounds and five assists.

Kwame Brown, a disappointment as the No. 1 overall pick in the draft a year ago, had his second solid game in a row. He set the defensive tone with four blocks in the first quarter and finished with 20 points, six rebounds and six blocks.

The Celtics shot just 30 percent one night after they lost their opener at home to Chicago. Antoine Walker scored 12 points and was just 5-for-16 from the field, and Paul Pierce scored 12 points and was 3-for-16. Walker is 10-for-39 in two games.

The Wizards missed their first six shots and trailed by seven early, but it was the Celtics who couldn't hit a basket most of the game. After Brown's early dominance inside, Boston chucked long ones from outside and watched them clank off the iron.

Jordan entered midway through the first quarter and tied it with a 15-foot jumper. Later, he showed his still has some acceleration, blowing past Tony Delk on the right wing and drawing a foul as he approached the basket.

Jordan's four-point sequence at the end of the half put the Wizards ahead 58-40. The Celtics never threatened in the second half, when several of the big moments belonged to Brown.

The 20-year-old forward made a three-point play, dunked off a feed from Jordan and had a stellar sequence in which he blocked Walker at one end and made a jumper at the other to put the Wizards ahead by 20.

Jordan had one of his old flourishes at the end of the third quarter, making three straight tough jumpers in a 13-4 run. When Jordan was called for a foul during the run, he vehemently put up an argument that nearly drew a technical – even though the Wizards were leading by 27.

Notes: Brendan Haywood started at center for the Wizards, one night after playing just four minutes in the opener. ... A moment of silence was held before the game for Run-DMC rapper Jam Master Jay, who was shot to death in New York on Wednesday. Run-DMC had been scheduled to perform at halftime. ... With the game decided, the crowd broke in chants of "We want Juan!" early in the fourth quarter. Juan Dixon, a first-round draft pick from Maryland, entered to a standing ovation with 6:29 remaining. He scored six points.

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

GLASS TO GOLD
Offering more than just the most beautiful jewelry in the Valley.

Something For Everyone!
From glass to gold and diamonds to pearls, Silverscape Designs is more than just a jewelry store. It's a destination. Don't miss your next adventure in Amherst, or visit us at one of our other locations in Easthampton or Amherst. Visit Silverscape Designs. From glass to gold and diamonds to pearls, there's Silverscape Designs. We promise you'll love the results.
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS & GEM GALLERY
Easthampton • Northampton • Hadley
Amherst • Greenfield

Introducing
Natalee Prince
Ethnic Hairstylist
Hair, Skin & Natural Nails

Casimir Kocot
79 So. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
413.256.3440

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Embark on a new journey next semester...
STUDY ABROAD WITH SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

It's not too late .. Due date extended into November.
http://suabroad.syr.edu 1-800-235-3472
Madrid Florence Strasbourg London Hong Kong

Watroba's Liquors
Beer • Wine • Liquors
Kegs & Soda
Market & Deli
549-3737
• Green Mountain coffee
• Boar's Head Meat
Liquor Store Hours
Mon.-Sat. 11a.m -11p.m
Market Hours
Open Mon.-Fri. 7a.m-10p.m
Sat. 8a.m.-10p.m.
Sun. 8a.m.-7p.m.
80 Sunderland Rd
Amherst
(413)549 - 0933

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market ...where the apple is just the beginning!
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537
Looking For Something To Do?
Atkins Farms Has Something For Everyone!
Country Bakery
Farm Fresh Produce
Homemade Fudge
Meat Market
Deli & Lunches
Specialty Foods

Full Service Florist
Fruit & Gift Baskets
Gift Department
Take-Out Food
Ice Cream Bar
Specialty Cheeses
A unique country market nestled in one of the oldest apple orchards in New England. Just a five minute drive from UMass on Rt. 116 will give you a chance to sample some of New England favorite foods.
Attention Parents!!
Student Special Care Packages
Great idea for parents far away from their busy, hard working, and hungry college student.
Birthday Cakes
Flowers, Balloons
Snack Paks
Get Well Paks
Mix & Match Paks
& Much More

Call for our brochure
(413) 253-9528 or
1-800-594-9537
www.atkinsfarms.com
Deliveries Mon-Sat

Against the wall

By Bob McGovern
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

It has come down to the final weekend of reckoning for the Massachusetts women's soccer team. The Minutewomen (6-9, 3-4 Atlantic 10) have been a loss away from A-10 elimination for the last three weekends, holding on to contention by a slim margin. This weekend brings perhaps the biggest challenge of the season for the Maroon and White as they go up against George Washington (9-7, 6-3 A-10) and Richmond (10-4-2, 7-4 A-10), which are both producing very respectable years. If the Minutewomen lose one game they are essentially out of A-10 postseason contention.

First and foremost, UMass Head Coach Jim Rudy is looking at a very offensive Georgetown team that is lead by a barrage of skilled scoring weapons. First on the list is leading A-10 scorer Kim Warner, who has thirteen on the season.

"She's not visible for most of the game...she comes in at the right time," Rudy said. Warner played for the Canadian national team and had proven to be an offensive threat against any opposing defense. Her presence causes opportunities for other players, including senior Kim Sanders and freshman Ina Kaina.

Sanders has put in four goals and four assists on the season and is a good set up person on the flanks. Kaina has four goals and one assist on the season and has worked well with the George Washington offensive plan. The three girls have produced 21 out of the team's 29 goals on the season.

"The problem with them is they only have three speeds: fast, faster, and fastest," Rudy said of the high scoring offense.

Richmond has been one of the better teams in the conference coming at teams with a balanced scoring attack. They have not shown the same dominance as they did a year ago, but are still a force among the A-10 elite. Annette Isham leads the team in overall points with six goals and five assists on the season. With her balanced attack she has been involved in a large portion of the Spider's scoring chances. Complementing her are Whitney Sikes, who has six goals and three assists, and Molly Rettig and Jessica Marino, who both have four goals and four assists.

The Spiders are not to be looked over on the defensive side of the ball. This season Richmond's opponents have scored 18 goals against the Spider's 30. Goalie Meghan Cox has put together a good season and in her eight wins she has five shutouts.

Rudy feels that the Minutewomen are in their best shape of the year and hopes that will influence their performance this weekend.

"Some of the girls that didn't train over the summer are in their best shape again," Rudy said. It is going to take a combination of renewed athleticism with a more balanced attack that will push UMass in a positive direction.

The Maroon and White will have to play some of its best defense of the season to thwart this weekend of powerful offenses. On one hand there is an opportunity-making star that can strike at any time; on the other, a stable scoring front will have to be neutralized.

One thing the Minutewomen must do is "move the ball quickly, put together quick combinations," Rudy said. If newly energized offense puts together a weekend like the last there is a good chance that this weekend may prove for some drama.

"The playoffs start for us this weekend," Rudy said. "We can't lose another game.

Last year the Minutewomen were in the perfect situation to be a major player in the A-10 postseason, but were cut short at this very point in the season. Two of the key losses ousting the Maroon and White were against this weekend's opponents. That was a different team that looked very bright from the beginning but could not finish the process. This year's team started slowly, but has put together a new image and is in striking distance in the A-10. Like last year's team, it has come down to this weekend, and the challenge is no less than it was before.

GERALD ELLINGSON/COLLEGIAN

MARTHA CONOVER AND THE MINUTEWOMEN WILL LOOK FOR REVENGE AGAINST RICHMOND AND GW, TWO OF THE TEAMS THAT KNOCKED THEM OUT OF THE A-10 POSTSEASON LAST YEAR.

■ soccer

ported by sophomore Paul Kelly (4 g, 4 a) and freshman Chris Lahoud (3 g, 4 a). The triumvirate will be a new challenge for the Minuteman defense, which has seen mainly one- and two-man attacks this season.

"They're a good team defensively," Koch said, "and not as good a team offensively, even though I think we don't match up well against them in the back, because they're so big. They play three frontrunners, so we'll have to pull one of our midfielders back. That will be an interesting matchup."

The Minutemen attack, meanwhile, is among the cream of the A-10 crop. Led by senior headlinemaker Jeff Deren (17 g, 7 a), as well as seniors Yuri Morales (8 g, 8 a) and Ptah Myers (7 g, 5 a), UMass found the scoring touch that everyone – including the Minutemen – expected to be there this season once the conference schedule began.

Not that UMass has been one-dimensional. Rather, the Maroon and White have regained the top spot in the conference due to the efforts of many behind-the-scenes players.

Background faces like seniors Andrew Eicher and Jason Golesky, juniors Dan Colwell and Devlin Barnes, and sophomore Chris Camerota have been as much a reason for the Maroon and White's success this year as Deren's record-breaking goalscoring, or Altomare's award-winning netminding.

All of the names and records become meaningless, however, once the Minutemen take the field this weekend. Things like focus and determination are the center of attention for UMass this weekend.

"This is what we've tried to put ourselves in all year," Koch said, "to put ourselves in the situation where we're one game away from reaching the tournament. We're excited for this weekend. I think our guys are pretty good about realizing that they have to stay focused on what their jobs are on the team, to take it one game at a time. We're going to have to be playing our best soccer this weekend."

TERRA ELLINGSON/COLLEGIAN

SENIOR YURI MORALES IS SECOND ON THE MEN'S SOCCER TEAM IN SCORING WITH 24 POINTS IN 16 GAMES. NO. 16 LEADS THE SQUAD IN ASSISTS WITH EIGHT.

Goten of Japan
Cooking at your table
now accepting OCMP
New Hours
Mon Closed
Tues-Fri 5-10pm
early bird special 5-6
Sat 12-10pm
lunch special 12-3pm
2 for 1 special
Sun 4-9pm
On Rt 116 Sunderland / Call for reservations 413 665 3628

The Asian American Studies Event Series presents:
"Yellow Apparel: When the Coolie Becomes Cool"
Come attend a thought-provoking film screening and discussion, followed by a brief information session about the Asian and Asian American Studies Certificate Program.
Free Admission and Free Pizza!!
Monday, November 4th, 6-8pm in Herter 601
Sponsored by Asian and Asian American Studies
Please contact Nina Ha at nha@english.umass.edu for more information.

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
Amateur
NIGHT
CHILL
THURSDAY
NOVEMBER 7th
& NOVEMBER 21st
1st PLACE $500!!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND & 3RD
700 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
HADLEY - 413/532-3621
18+

ENERGY SAVING SPECIALS
NEW MODELS
MAXLITE
energy star
Money Isn't All You're Saving

Mini-Bulb
15 watt and 20 watt models to replace your 60 watt or 75 watt incandescent bulbs Protective cover provides a traditional look. 101730, 101731
99¢

3-Way Spiral
15,20,23 watt spiral replaces 50,75,100 watt incandescent bulb. Lasts 9,000 hours! 101732
$1.49

Mini Spiral
2 - Pack
11 watt sprial replaces 40 watt incandescent bulb. 101735
$1.99

MicroMax-Quad
2 - Pack
15 watt quad replaces 60 watt incandescent bulb. 101734
$1.99

New Classic Lamps
Comes complete with 26 watt bulb to replace 100 watt incandescent fixture. Available in antique brass or satin nickel. 101737, 101736

Just $9.99
In partnership with:
Western Massachusetts Electric
The Northeast Utilities System
AUBUCHON HARDWARE
Sale is effective at 5 convenient locations:
Easthampton, MA Greenfield, MA Turners Falls, MA
Hadley, MA Shelburne Falls, MA

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Aerobics, classes on campus Step Kickboxing, muscle conditioning 2 classes per week. Up to 5 weeks $15 per person Call Judy 545-1962 for more info.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Jostens Ring Day Sale, University Store. Fri 11/1 10-4PM, Sat11/2 10-6PM www.jostens.com 800-854-7464

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200/BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Part time. $8.50/hr. Brandywine Apts. Needs a leasing person. Tues & Thurs Afternoon, Sat & Sun. Call 549-0600

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit@aol.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDoc Love.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted. Gorgeous 2 bedroom uptown apartment, fully renovated. Huge bedroom with walk-in closet. Parking included. Fully furnished living room and kitchen. Available January $462.50 /month plus utilities. Call Lindsay at 549-7235

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! or call 1-800-327-6013 Guaranteed Lowest Prices. Free Meals and Drinks! Cancun, Jamaica, Florida and Bahamas Party Cruise! Our Seventeenth Year! Reps Wanted!

Save 50% off over 2 thousand hotel resorts Call Conard 584-5198

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuR-Rean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

YOUR AD HERE

HSCN
Hearing Services Cable Network

3	CBS 13
4	NBC 6
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS 57
7	HBO Cinema
8	WB 22
9	ESPN
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX 61
12	ABC 40
13	NBC 22
14	Showtime Channel
15	MTV
16	USA Network Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	LWL 19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Cleveland Gospel
22	CNN
23	CNN HD
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Discovery Channel
27	A & E
28	Universities Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	C-SPAN
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	AMT
39	USA
40	TBN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Home Shop Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Telefutura
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	GTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

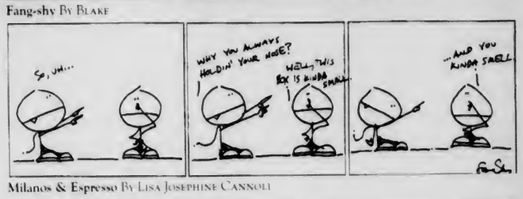
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

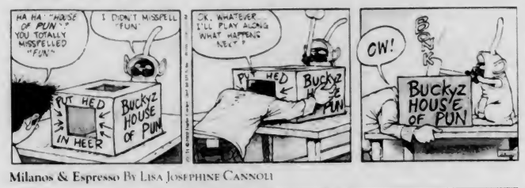
TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

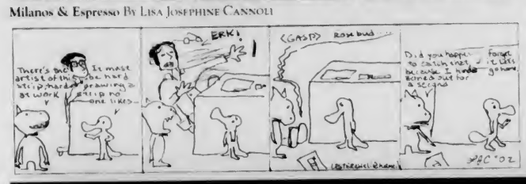


Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Fang-shy By Blake



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Milanos & Espresso By Lisa Josephine Cannoli

Valley of the Squirrels By Conrad X

Quote of the Day

"Size matters not. Look at me. Judge me by my size, do you? Hmm? Hmm. And well you should not. For my ally is the Force, and a powerful ally it is. Its energy surrounds us and binds us. Luminous beings are we, not this crude matter. You must feel the Force around you; between you, me, the tree, the rock, everywhere."
-Yoda

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 23	HIGH: 37 LOW: 24	HIGH: 43 LOW: 20

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may have a reason to regret a decision today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You needn't take things quite so seriously today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Don't lose sight of things you most want to attain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18) – Someone close to you is likely to want to get even closer today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – The more unusual it is the more you are going to like it today.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – The unlikely may well prove likely today – and vice versa.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – You may come in contact with someone who knows how to make sense of the issues.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – You will find yourself waiting around today. Do not be impatient.

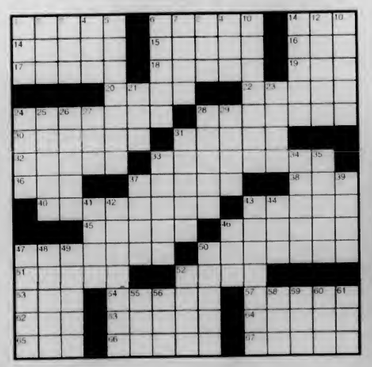
CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – Now is no time to neglect your family and friends and those who care for you.

LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – Take care that you are not living too much in your head at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – What begins with excitement is likely to end with sorrow today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – What you need to know can be found with some fine-tuning today. You just have to be willing to search.

The Collegian



fresh daily

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
New England Clam Chowder
Roast Turkey
Bacon-Onion Quiche
Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)
Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

DINNER
New England Clam Chowder
BBQ Salmon
Veal Madeline
Brazilian Black Beans (vegan)

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Jim Pignatiello
Photo Technician	Dan Roy
Copy Editor	Mathieu Despres
Production Assistant	Melissa Hammel
Production Assistant	Gerry Auger, Erika Earl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Cruising toward the A-10 Tournament

First place Minutemen head south for a pair

By Andrew Merritt

Here in the Pioneer Valley, all 10 regular games of the Northeast Atlantic Name have finished and the time to break out the field hockey sticks is now.

The Massachusetts men's soccer team (11-4-1, 7-0-1 A-10) is looking to keep the pedal to the metal for the last few weeks of the season.

The weekend the Minutemen will have the chance to do just that when they travel to Washington D.C. today to take on the Colonials of George Washington (4-9-1, 3-4-1 A-10) and Richmond, Va. to take on the Spiders (8-5-2, 5-1-1 A-10) on Sunday.

UMass currently sits atop the A-10 standings and will clinch a playoff spot with its next win. With their games coming on the Catholic school's calendar, a Minutemen victory would rather have the weekend off, a win would rather have the weekend off.

"We're in the same boat," Coach Sam Koch said. "These are two tough games and you're 2 points or six points, and what do we make of it, good things can these games, we can make a mistake, and we get a second chance. But we have to win two."

Sophomore Matt Reed (19) and the Minutemen look to clinch the A-10 regular season championship this weekend when they travel to Washington D.C. today to take on George Washington and Sunday to take on Richmond.

If the Maroon and White can manage to win two games this weekend, it will also clinch the top spot in the A-10 heading into tournament time. As far as trends go, the Minutemen are well on their way. They're undefeated in the last 10 games (9-0-1), and for the third time in four weeks, a member of the squad has been given an A-10 award.

Senior goalkeeper Dino Altomare was named co-Player of the Week along with fellow keeper Stash Graham, a sophomore from La Salle. Altomare has posted a 1.24 goals against average and a .754 save percentage, as well as earning his fourth shutout of the season, a 3-0 clean sheet against Temple, and moving to fifth on the all-time UMass single-season shutout list.

Making the semi-f success even more compelling is the fact that he was fighting for a job in the early part of the season and the UMass goaltending picture appeared to be a three-man race between Altomare, senior Dave Doucette and junior Colin Burns. However, once the conference slate opened up, Altomare distinguished himself among the elite in the A-10. Hurt from a keeper who had hadn't posted a shutout in his collegiate career until Sept. 28 of this year, a 6-0 thrashing at Hartford.

The Maroon and White also moved up to third in the National Soccer Coaches Association of America regional poll and 26th in the NSCAA's national Top 30 poll.

When the Minutemen take the pitch today, they'll be squaring off against one of the more dangerous breeds of team to get in the team clawing to hold onto a playoff spot. GWU, unable to hold the fourth spot in the A-10 standings, but by the slimmest of margins. The Colonials, along with Duquesne and La Salle, have each garnered 15 points, but GWU holds the lead over the Dukes by virtue of one more win and over La Salle only on the overall record tiebreaker.

"They are fighting to stay alive," Koch said. "They are definitely in good position. They have three tough games too, Richmond, Rhode Island, and [UMass]. So they're playing against three of the top four teams as well, so this is a huge weekend for them."

The Colonials are coming off of a tough loss to La Salle last weekend. GWU and the Explorers were knotted at one at the end of regulation, but La Salle scored in the 97th minute to snap the Colonials' five-game win streak.

GWU is led by two of the better forwards in the conference, Senior Matt Osborne (12 g, 9 a) and junior Amar Johannsson (5 g, 3 a) will be a challenge for the young Minutemen defense.

"[GWU is] very potent offensively," Koch said, "but not strong defensively, so I think we'll match up well in that regard. Defensively, we're going to really be tested by those two forwards."

Richmond is third in the Atlantic 10 standings with 16 points. The Spiders also hold a slim lead over the rest of the conference and by the end of the weekend, could find themselves anywhere from sitting pretty at second place, to just plain sitting out of the playoffs. They'll take on Rhode Island (11-6-0, 6-2-0 A-10) tonight.

The Spiders feature a three-man offensive attack, spearheaded by sophomore Stephen Douglas (5 g, 2 a), and sup-

[cont.] SOCCER, page 9

GERALDINE LYNCH/COLLEGIAN

Senior Jeff Deren has won two Atlantic 10 men's soccer Player of the Week awards this year. Deren leads the conference with 40 points and 17 goals in 16 games this season.

Crucial pair for field hockey

By Glen Strada

With the beginning of the past stretch of the season, the Minutewomen field hockey team has entered a new chapter. In the last few games the Minutewomen have gone 5-2 and, most importantly, picked up one game in their conference, the Atlantic 10.

By picking up two wins against La Salle and West Chester at home two weeks ago and then defeating St. Joseph's, 2-1, on the road last Saturday, UMass has placed itself in a position in which, potentially, the past will not matter. Because in the playoffs it's win or go home, and any squad can have its day in the sun.

Saturday, the Minutewomen travel to Newport, R.I., to duel with the Rhode Island Rams in their final regular season game. If UMass leaves the Ocean State with a victory, it will solidify a spot in this year's post-season A-10 Tournament.

"This game is extremely important," Shea said. "There are still a lot of games in the conference to be played and we need to take care of our business because you can't leave it up to anyone else."

Rhode Island is looking to shed some sort of light on its season, as all year long they have been the basement dwellers of the A-10. Coming into the contest with the Minutewomen, the Rams sit at dead last in the conference with a 1-4 A-10 mark. The rest of their schedule has gone just as poorly. Mimicking UMass, Rhode Island did not win a game in its out-of-conference schedule equaling a disastrous 1-13 overall mark.

URI is the youngest team in the A-10. One senior, co-captain Jess Weber, handles the leadership of the squad. Freshmen and sophomores round out the rest of the roster. Even the head coach is not that familiar with A-10 field hockey. Taking the job only a couple of weeks before the season, Stacey Bean, has struggled in her first season at Rhode Island.

"They are in a transition," Shea said. "They have a new coach and a new system. They are young but a very good team, they have been in at the end of every game they have played."

But Shea's main concern is not the players on the Rhode Island squad; it's the playing surface.

The Rams play on a grass surface, while the Minutewomen play their home games and most of their away games on turf. Shea says it is a big determining factor in how UMass is planning its strategy.

"Your game changes a little on grass," she said. "You cannot put yourself in trouble on the grass. It's a little less of a possession game and it's more of a game of getting the ball up field as soon as possible.

"You don't have the advantages of a smooth surface so we must limit our mistakes. We have speed in our front line to get to the ball so hopefully we can play well on the grass. Once they get into the 25-yard line they have to shoot because with the uneven surface you never know when you will get a lucky bounce."

A win over URI gives the Minutewomen a major boost in their playoff chances, but it is undetermined at this point what place they would finish in if they defeat the Rams. They could be as high as second behind a 6-0, first place Richmond squad or as low as fourth place, which means they would have to face the Spiders in the first round. Five teams are in the running for the three remaining spots. Temple (9-8, 2-2 A-10), West Chester (7-9, 2-2 A-10) and UMass hold the spots currently, but this weekend fourth-place La Salle (3-14, 1-3 A-10), fifth-place St. Joes (7-8, 1-3 A-10), Temple and West Chester all play two conference games while UMass only plays one. Shea does not want to worry about the other games until her squad's contest is done though.

"This is the only game we have control over so this is where our focus has to be," she said.

"Rhode Island is on its home grass surface, a disadvantage for us," Shea continued. "It's their last home game, it's senior day and family weekend plus they are also playing to knock UMass out of the A-10 tournament for the first time ever, so they have a lot going for them."

Although UMass is quite a different team from the one in 2001, if the last meeting between these two teams is any indication of the outcome this time around, it will surely favor the Maroon and White. The Minutewomen easily handled the Rams to a tune of 4-0 in the friendly confines of Richard F. Garber Field.

But, as the philosophy says, what has happened in the past stays in the past.

Freshman Patricia Borino has started seven games this season as a rookie. The field hockey team started slowly this season, but still has a shot at postseason play.

UMass Weekend Schedule

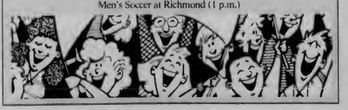
TIME HOME VISITORS

Friday, Nov. 1

Home
Women's Soccer vs. George Washington (2 p.m.)
Ice Hockey vs. Providence (7 p.m.)

Away
Men's Soccer at George Washington (2 p.m.)

Saturday, Nov. 2



Home
Football vs. Delaware (12 p.m.)
Men's Basketball Intrasquad Scrimmage (4 p.m.)
at Curry Hicks Cage (Free to all)

Away
Men's and Women's Cross Country at A-10 Championships in Pittsburgh, Pa. (10 a.m.)
Field Hockey at Rhode Island (12 p.m.)
Men's and Women's Swimming at Brown (1 p.m.)
Ice Hockey at Northeastern (7 p.m.)

Sunday, Nov. 3

Home
Women's Soccer vs. Richmond (1 p.m.)

Away
Men's Soccer at Richmond (1 p.m.)

Old classic brings star power
Arts page 5.
Are we diverse?
Ed/Op page 4.
Winning streak hits five
Sports page 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY THREE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.04.02

ELECTION 2002:

Referendums offer chance at change

who's who

Shannon O'Brien
DEMOCRATIC GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

Kerry Healey
LT. GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

Mitt Romney
REPUBLICAN GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

Citzens offered chance to repeal state income tax

QUESTION 1 By Courtney Charles, Collegian Staff

YES☐
NO☐

Question 1 on the Massachusetts ballot this year asks voters to address whether they believe that much of the state's income taxes should be repealed.

The question is binding and will become law if passed.

"Big government promotes irresponsibility," a portion of the official text of ballot Question 1 states. The proposal is offered by leaders of the Libertarian Party.

If enacted, the proposed law states that no financial gain received on or after July 1, 2003, will be subject to the state personal income tax.

According to arguments both for and against this law, the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Commonwealth are required to present both sides to the issue.

According to Carla Howell, Libertarian and Chair of the Committee for Small Government, a "yes" vote ending the state income tax means that 3,000,000 working people will each get back $3,000 each year to use how they seem fit.

According to Howell's written argument on Massachusetts' state government website, voting "yes" will create 300,000 to 500,000 new jobs in Massachusetts. These new jobs include jobs for graduates, said Howell.

A "no" vote would not change state tax laws. According to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation, voting "yes" means abolishing 60 percent of state taxes, causing chaos in the state budget.

This would also cause the state's bond rating to decline, according to the Foundation. A bond rat-

Turn to ONE, page 3

Future of bilingual education hangs in balance with vote

QUESTION 2 By Jillian L. Costa, Collegian Correspondent

YES☐
NO☐

The future of bilingual education in Massachusetts will be decided with Question 2 on the state election ballot tomorrow.

Neither the Senate nor the House of Representatives voted on the potential law before sessions closed. After the election, Massachusetts will either join several other states in teaching English learners through Immersion, rather than staying with the bilingual program already in place.

A yes vote supports English being taught by an immersion program. The immersion program would replace the current system of teaching English that is in Massachusetts's public schools.

A no vote would make no changes to the current system of teaching English in Massachusetts public schools.

Right now, "English learners" in Massachusetts public school systems are taught English in a transitional bilingual education program. If passed, the Question 2 initiative would replace the transitional bilingual program with a one-year immersion program. It would require public schools to teach every student English by teaching all subjects in English.

An "English learner" is a child who, "cannot do ordinary class work in English and who either does not speak English or whose native language is not English," according to a summary jointly written by the State Attorney General and the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

All books and almost all teaching would be in English, with teaching geared towards getting students learning English. Once able to do regular schoolwork in English, students would be moved into mainstream

Turn to TWO page 3

Input sought on Clean Elections Law question

QUESTION 3 By Kristen Millen, Collegian Correspondent

YES☐
NO☐

Voters this year will have the chance to let legislators know whether or not they are in favor of letting political candidates use their tax dollars to fund their campaign as the currently do under the Clean Elections Law.

The referendum, Question 3 on the ballot, is non-binding.

The Clean Elections Law is campaign finance reform designed to create competition for state offices, give voters more choices and reduce the amount of corporate contributions.

The law was approved by a two to one margin in 1998. Under the law, candidates that abide by the campaign spending and contribution limits receive a regulated amount of funding. Candidates that qualify have to show that they receive support from the average voter and receive a minimum amount of small donations.

One of the intentions of the Clean Elections Law is to put more pressure on incumbents, forcing them to compete for their jobs. It's supposed to make it easier for average citizens to run for office without the burden of raising large sums of money. The law is supposed to create more competition for the incumbent and hold them accountable with the voters.

The bill was approved by the Secretary of State and the Attorney General. House Speaker Tom Finneran and his constituents on Beacon Hill put the bill on the ballot for this election.

In August, a series of regulations were created to ensure that the law is implemented smoothly. Under the new regulations, if a candidate exceeds the dollar limit that he or she is allotted, the candidate must give a refund to the state and file declaration of intent.

Turn to THREE, page 3

who's who

Barbara Johnson
INDEPENDENT GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

Carla Howell
LIBERTARIAN GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

Jill Stein
GREEN PARTY GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

GERALDINE LYNCH/COLLEGIAN

UTower

The water tower between the Van Meter dormitory and Orchard Hill residential area is currently getting a facelift. A large UMass logo will adorn the tower when the project is complete.

GOP to make run at gaining majority

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – Four years ago, Bill Clinton and the Democrats defied history and gained House seats in midterm elections. Now it's time for George W. Bush and the Republicans to try.

Whatever their success, the midterm curse that afflicted both political parties over the past century is waning, weakened this year by congressional redistricting that accounts for population shifts, as well as the terrorist attacks and even Bush's no-coattails victory of 2000.

"We haven't beaten the curse yet," Rep. Tom Davis said, the Virginia Republican in charge of the House GOP campaign committee. "I remember working in the Nixon White House in the 1970s thinking we might pick up a handful of seats." It didn't happen.

But whether the GOP wins or loses seats Tuesday – or holds or surrenders control of the House – not even the most partisan Democrat is forecasting a midterm swing that approaches the 30-seat average of the past century.

Over that period, the only times the party in the White House gained House seats were 1902; Franklin Roosevelt's first midterm in 1934; and 1998, when voters rejected Republican efforts to turn the elections into a referendum on impeachment proceedings against Clinton.

The party in power has suffered in the Senate, as well, but not as severely or as often. There, the average loss is four seats, and the potential for a large shift is diminished because only one-third of the seats are on the ballot at a time. The party in power has gained Senate seats seven times at midterm since 1902.

From a historical perspective, the parties are much more at parity than they have been for some time. You have roughly a 50-50 country in which large swings are less likely," said Howard Wolfson, executive director of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Additionally, according to Wolfson, Davis and several strategists in both parties, incumbents in both parties used congressional redistricting to create hundreds of safe seats, reducing the likelihood of a large swing for the next decade.

"Redistricting has become such a computer-driven process and an incumbent-driven process," said Geoffrey Garin, a Democratic pollster. "And it has produced a situation where now a competitive district is very much more than exception than the rule."

Most of the party-financed campaign advertising has been conducted in 40 or so districts around the country, a signal that neither side ever thought a large swing of seats was possible.

In California, where Democrats gained five seats in the 2000 elections, redistricting produced one competitive race at most out of 53 seats. New York, a strongly Democratic state with 29 seats, has only one where a switch in party seems possible.

SCOTT MARTIN/DAILY TAMPA TRIBUNE

President Bush waves from the top step of Air Force One yesterday morning in Tampa, Fla., before flying to Minnesota. Bush was in Tampa campaigning for his brother, incumbent Governor Jeb Bush of Florida.

Redistricting resulted in the shift of seats to states more receptive to the GOP, providing a further cushion against a large midterm loss, according to Republican pollster Tony Fabrizio.

Bush has maintained high approval ratings, and the terrorist attacks and debate over possible war with Iraq have complicated Democratic efforts to turn the election into a referendum on economic issues.

"For several months after Sept. 11 we were essentially operating on a unity government, which doesn't favor the party out of power," said Wolfson.

"When you look back at a lot of those midterms, some were directly related to events that were going on nationally," Fabrizio said.

Thus, Republicans lost 48 seats in the Watergate year of 1974, when Richard M. Nixon sat in the White House. In the recession-plagued midterm of 1982, Ronald Reagan and Republicans lost 26 House seats. At Clinton's first midterm, 1994, Republicans gained 52 seats and control of the House in an election widely viewed as a referendum on tax increases and a plan for national health insurance.

In the House, Republicans have enjoyed a financial advantage in the campaign drawing to a close. In the campaign's final days, for example, they had the funds to launch advertising campaigns against Democrats in Utah, Kansas, California and Tennessee, possibly enabling them to claim a seat or two that once seemed out of their reach.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

NATURALLY, WE PUT GREAT VALUE IN NUMBERS. ESPECIALLY THE NUMBER ONE.

VOTED NUMBER ONE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

PricewaterhouseCoopers was voted the number one ideal employer in the 2002 Universum Undergraduate survey of more than 4,000 business students and the number one recruiter of the semester in the 2002 Emerson Company Campus Recruiting Survey.

www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere.

Look beyond the numbers.

one

continued from page 1

ing is used to determine what the risk is of loaning the state money.

If the rating goes down, interest rates the state will have to pay go up.

No one likes paying for taxes, the Foundation says, but people need to realize how necessary they are for schools, health care, fire protection and other human services.

Not a single member of the legislature, House or Senate, Democrat or Republican, voted to support it, according to the Foundatiaon. Neither the Republican nor Democratic candidate for governor supports it, the Foundation said.

"We should do away with the income tax. Taxes are bad. They are too high," said Olas Aprans, a junior food science major. "The government should be more fiscally responsible. They could easily find ways to cut spending."

"In the long run it would be great if we could cut taxes. But if we do away with them immediately, in the lag time the government takes to catch up, people will suffer," said Jennifer Nickerson senior history major. "We can't cut taxes until we know for sure the money is coming from somewhere."

two

continued from page 1

English classrooms.

The initiative would allow parents to decide if their children would be better off in a bilingual class, which is the type of English as a second language teaching that public schools use now, or in the immersion program.

Parents would be able to apply to get requirements of the new possible law waived to place their child in a bilingual program. In order to obtain a waiver, the school would have to decided that it was best way to get each individual child to learn in English in the quickest way.

The law would not affect any programs for special education for physically or mentally impaired students, or foreign language classes for children who already know English. Standardized tests of the children's English skills would be given from kindergarten on, with written tests from second grade on.

If Question 2 passes, the testing requirements would go into effect immediately. Other requirements would be initiated during the next full school year.

The controversial aspect of the law is summed up in just one paragraph. Question 2 on the Massachusetts ballot offers parents or guardians of English learners the opportunity to sue any school employee, school committee member or other elected official or administrator if they "willfully and repeatedly" refuse to implement the law outlined in Question 2.

The law allows a teacher to "use a minimal amount of a child's native language when necessary," to teach them, according to the summary of the question found on the website www.mass.gov.

The group that is against the law believes that Massachusetts's citizens will take advantage of teachers and school boards across the state to get money. Officially, the parents are allowed to sue to force implementation of the law, and if they win the case, they could potentially gain attorney's fees, costs of suing and compensatory money damages.

Tim Duncan, Chairman of the Committee for Fairness to Children and Teachers, is one opponent of the proposed law. He believes that teachers shouldn't have to worry about being sued for teaching the children in their classroom, but should be focusing on helping children to learn English.

English for the Children of Massachusetts wrote in favor argument for the ballot question. The results of the current method of teaching English is their proof that we need a new system.

They also argue that immigrant students and English learners have been denied life's opportunities for success that other children routinely take advantage of, and that immersion will teach English learners as quickly as possible and move them into mainstream classes, where they would continue to be challenged academically.

three

continued from page 1

A yes vote is in support of the Clean Elections Law. If the law stands, taxpayers will pay about one tenth of one percent, or four dollars per taxpayer to the campaign of each qualifying candidate.

"The first [purpose of it] is competition, where there is so little now. The second is that it will create a level playing field, by getting their names out, and helping with fundraising," people from the Common Cause, pro-self-representative government, said. "The third is that it will reduce the power of the incumbents."

Many more candidates had planned to run in this fall's election, including at least one gubernatorial candidate, according to Common Cause. However, the bill wasn't approved to be put into use until late summer, after the deadline for candidates to qualify for the system had passed. Because of this, there are three incumbents that will face re-election without opposition this election. Other states have decreased the amount of unchallenged elections successfully after the passage of similar bills. In Maine, fifteen percent of elections for legislative positions face no opposition. According to the Common Cause, that number is around 81 percent in Massachusetts.

A no vote on Question 3 is in favor of repealing the Clean Elections Law in favor of putting the money spent with towards better education, health care, public safety and other things.

"Taxpayer dollars should be spent on these services, not on a poorly constructed, costly plan for taxpayer-funded private political campaigns, that you as a taxpayer do not necessarily support or endorse," said Francis J. Larkin, author of the essay against Question 1 in The Official Massachusetts Information for Voters.

The Clean Elections Law is estimated to cost one hundred million dollars of public funding per four-year period. There are no safeguards to prevent fraud or misuse of the funds provided by the public. It is also illegal for a candidate to accept gifts or corporate contributions.

COMMUNITY BULLETIN

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

MONDAY NOV. 4

SMITH COLLEGE - Smith College presents lecturer Michael Omi to speak on "Counting in the Dark: The Census and the Concept of Race." The lecture is part of a series of events in observation of Otelia Cromwell Day. The event will be held in Wright Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE - Stephen Newcomb, director of the Indigenous Law Institute, will lecture at Smith College on "The Religious Discourse of Conquest" at 7:30 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing room. Newcomb will explain why specific aspects of the Old Testament serve as the conceptual foundation of U.S. federal Indian Law and how Old Testament religious notions of "chosen people" and "promised land" are traced directly to the 1823 Supreme Court decision "Johnson and Graham's Lessee vs. McIntosh."

TUESDAY NOV. 5

SMITH COLLEGE - Sahaja yoga meditation will be held at Smith College in the Bodman Lounge of the Chapel at 7 p.m. It is free and open to the public.

WEDNESDAY NOV. 6

SMITH COLLEGE - Smith students Merrill Baker and Lisa Beard will share their experiences at the United Nations World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg, South Africa, this past August. The teach-in will be held in the Browsing room of the Neilson Library at 4:15 p.m.

THURSDAY NOV. 7

UMASS - The University of Massachusetts Army R.O.T.C. Minuteman Battalion will conduct a Veteran's Day Vigil from Nov. 7 to Nov. 8. The vigil will begin at 3:30 p.m. on Thursday, with a ceremony at the front of Memorial Hall in front of the campus pond. See Friday's events for the vigil's concluding activities.

UMASS - The department of Afro-American Studies and the Office of Jewish Affairs will sponsor a lecture by Laurence Thomas, professor of Philosophy and Political Science at Syracuse University. The lecture, "Blacks and Jews: The Question of Group Autonomy and Narrative Identity," will be held at 4 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall.

FRIDAY NOV. 8

UMASS - The University's R.O.T.C. Minuteman Battalion will continue and conclude their Veteran's Day Vigil. The closing ceremony will begin at 3 p.m. and conclude at 3:30 p.m. with an "Artillery Salute" conducted by the First Battalion, 102nd Field Artillery Regiment. The Artillery Salute will be conducted using blanks and artillery guns. For further information, contact Major Gene Montague at 545-2321.

AMHERST - The Black Sheep Cafe in downtown Amherst will host a "The Song & Story Swap" night from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Singer/songwriter Molly Scott will be the guest performer. The event is free and open to the public.

SUNDAY NOV. 10

AMHERST COLLEGE - The Amherst College Theater and Dance department will host casting auditions for an April production of "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying." Auditions are open to five college students as well as mature performers from the community and will be held on Nov. 10 and Monday, Nov. 11. Call 542-2411 for appointments and additional information.

Note:
Information to be entered into the Community Bulletin can be sent to: thedailycollegian@yahoo.com

The deadline for each week's Bulletin is Sunday at noon.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1992 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

He fought for 76 years to get the right to vote...

You just had to turn 18

Vote Tomorrow November 5th

Where to Vote:

Central Area (NOT Van Meter)	Wildwood School.....Strong St.
Orchard Hill (AND Van Meter)	North Fire Station. ....East Pleasent
Northeast/Sylvan:	Immanuel Lutheran Church.....North Pleasent
Southwest (Melville, Moore, Pierpont, Cance, Emerson, James):	Bangs Community Center.....Boltwood Walk
Southwest (Towers,Mackimmie, Patterson, Prince, Thoreau, Crampton):	Hampden Dining Commons

Visit www.wheredoivotema.com for off-campus locations

Candidate Information:

(Rep) Romney www.romney2002.com	For Local State Reps/Senators - www.ma.gov
(Dem) O'Brien www.obriengabrieli.com
(Lib) Howell www.carlahowell.org
(Green) Stein www.jillwell.org	Ballot Questions - www.boston.com/politics/state
(Ind) Johnson www.barbforgovernor.com

Sponsored by SCERA (Student Center for Education, Research, and Advocacy)
420 Student Union 545-0355

SCERA seeks to engage students in solution-oriented strategies as opposed to traditional problem solving through encouraging student participation in all aspects of university policy and decision-making. SCERA does the necessary research into the roots of a symptomatic problem, and empowers students with the necessary analytical skills to pose alternative solutions and advocate desirable change.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
&
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan

Present

Dining Out

A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants

COMING SOON
November 7th

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Stop the fighting: candidates need to grow up

As the gubernatorial election looms on the horizon, the final days of campaign campaigning in Massachusetts have been getting even more ferocious? that is even possible.

The series of elections specifically has marked hostile comments and commercials. The political climate in Massachusetts has always been marked with political tensions. This is nothing new. It almost makes sense that this election in particular would be filled with mudslinging. Both Republican candidate Mitt Romney and Democratic candidate Shannon O'Brien seem like intelligent and articulate people. Neither seem to have any major scandals in their past that the press can dig up and both are vying for control of the state for their own reasons.

Romney needs to prove that following the markedly incompetent rule of acting governor Jane Swift that the Republican party still has something to offer what is decidedly a Democratic and liberal state. O'Brien is partially motivated by the fact that there hasn't been a democrat in office in at least ten years and there has never been a woman governor. This election is important to both candidates. That makes sense.

What doesn't make sense is forcing the voting public of Massachusetts to endure a bombardment of both visual and radio commentary about why the other candidate is incompetent. It is unprofessional to run advertisements complaining that the other candidate has made political mistakes. Of course they have. All people make mistakes both politically and otherwise and living your life under a microscope makes it even more obvious.

Why can't either candidate simply rely on their issues and their platforms? Do they think that vicious attacks on anything that they can find will draw out voters when it did the opposite during the last gubernatorial race?

The Massachusetts voting public wants someone who can deal with the issues of the state with new ideas and approaches and with energy and determination. They are not looking for someone who wants to spend time attacking others rather than addressing issues. Both O'Brien and Romney are proving that they can't even deal with each other, never mind the problems that Massachusetts faces and candidates such as Libertarian candidate Carla Howell, Independent candidate Barbara Johnson and Green party candidate Jill Stein simply cannot get the exposure necessary to compete in what has come down to a two-party state election.

An ideal situation would be if both candidates used their last remaining campaign hours to promote their positions and spread their ideas rather than taking last minute pot shots at each other. Unless they manage to clean up their acts when it comes to campaigning, the elected governor is going to have a hard time convincing the public that he or she is both mature and capable.

In the end on Tuesday it is the decision of voters across the state and they will vote for whom they think will be the better candidate, not the bigger bully.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

www.dailycollegian.com

Embracing diversity and other such lies

NOONE

I am Irish German and English. Many people reading this are African-American, Korean, Puerto Rican, Swedish or Italian. Does the presence of various types of people at UMass actually benefit our University? Or are we merely a diverse school for show? I was initially attracted to UMass because it is widely known as an accepting, open-minded and culturally diverse place to learn about the different perspectives that exist in society. Yet I do not feel that UMass is as diverse a campus as most outsiders think.

According to the Fiske Guide to Colleges, African-American and Hispanic students make up about nine percent of the UMass student body, and Asian-Americans make up six percent. The Encarta Dictionary states that diversity is "ethnic variety as well as socioeconomic and gender variety of a group, society or institution." Going by that definition, UMass-Amherst is a unique and diverse place to go to school and live. Yet in actuality, students at this University tend to group themselves into single cultural entities and socialize primarily with members of their own majority or minority groups, which defeats the purpose of having a diverse campus in the first place.

Is the University of Massachusetts-Amherst really segregated? I think so. An example of the separation on campus is seen on the list of Student Clubs and Organizations. A sampling of the 22 groups listed under cultural organizations include the Black Student Union, the Native American Association, the Japan America Club, the Korean Student Association and Hillel, the Jewish organization on campus. What is bothersome and peculiar to me is that there is not one multicultural club listed. Any racial awareness group that could bring all of these individual associations together at UMass, as the old civil rights segregation term says, was "separate but equal." My question is this: why be separate at all? This is a problem that calls for us to focus on what brings us together, work together and be more loving toward each other rather than focus on what separates us.

"This is a problem that calls for us to focus on what brings us together, work together, and be more loving toward each other rather than focus on what separates us."

Diversity is pointless unless varying groups of people actually interact on a personal level. Many people with almost a multicultural academic atmosphere like UMass without hesitation, but it is very unusual to see groups of friends that contain members of many racial groups. Although I am very aware of this issue and yearn for changes to be made, I often feel somewhat helpless in my attempt to expand my group of friends because of the segregation on campus. I understand that human nature causes people to crave belonging to some type of group or organization; that a sense of identity including racial identity is an important part of knowing who we are. This obsessive need to belong categorizes us as part of one group has many negative consequences. These consequences include racism, which is something that should not be present on a campus that supposedly promotes a loving community for all people.

UMass would be a much more interesting and engaging place if every student shared their background and beliefs with each other, rather than used race, sex, religion, and ethnicity to separate themselves. Some of you reading this may be thinking to yourself, "It is easy for her to say, she's a white, middle-class student of course she doesn't understand." My response to that is that I don't need to belong to the Irish-American organization on campus to be proud of my European heritage. I find it unnecessary to stare down members of other races, religions, and ethnic groups. More importantly, I hope that at some point throughout my four years here, I will begin to see more events aimed at joining all of the students, faculty, and staff together rather than just centers, clubs and organizations for single collections of people. After all, we are all here at UMass to challenge our own ideas and learn new things that we may never have even thought about before. What better opportunity than college is there to strike up a conversation with someone who has a completely different background and view of the world?

Kury Noone is a Collegian Columnist.

Sexuality shouldn't matter

JACQUET

When former defensive tackle Esera Tuaolo revealed on HBO's Real Sports that he was gay, he became one of the few retired athletes to admit his homosexuality. During his nine-year, five-team tenure in the NFL Tuaolo never told any of his teammates about his homosexuality.

Why did he keep it a secret for so long? Why didn't he feel comfortable telling people the truth about whom he was?

As enlightened as we think we are in America, this provides [illegible] we still have a long way to go. We can [illegible] graphically discusses raping and killing [illegible] to the top of the Billboard charts. [illegible] can athlete.

Even Bay Packers' teammate Sterling Sharpe [illegible] Tuaolo "would [illegible] if he had admit [illegible] he was still play[illegible] players would have [illegible] Tuaolo, a 290-[illegible] tackle.

[illegible] where we stand as a soci[illegible] to keep another to keep a secret or to watch [illegible] dreads the most [illegible]

[illegible] In his entire career, Tuaolo [illegible] berated gays. The discomfort he [illegible] in him that he considered su[illegible]

[illegible] where we claim to be so liberal [illegible] of us than feels so threatened by his [illegible] seems like a viable option. It's [illegible] gentlemen but we're not the [illegible] badlis want to be. This scenario is [illegible] America, not just in an NFL locker [illegible] and free and home of the brave. [illegible] Shepard, to beaten and dragged [illegible] a pickup truck. What motivated [illegible] Shepard had the audacity to be gay.

[illegible] ation is nowhere near as severe [illegible] happened to Shepard. I would never [illegible] because there is no comparison. Both [illegible] reveal a disturbing trend in America. [illegible] gays should not have to go to ridiculous lengths to [illegible] sexuality. People should not have to fear [illegible] expressions once their sexuality is known. [illegible] after Tuaolo says he "would make sure [illegible] now me kiss a woman just to throw off the [illegible]." Not only did Tuaolo feel uncomfort[illegible] his sexuality, he felt he had to fool his [illegible] into thinking he was Don Juan.

Why do some people think homosexuality is an offense worthy of ridicule, or even murder? Why do people view homosexuality as wrong at all? Why does a person's sexuality matter at all? And if it does matter, is it such a big deal that people have to go out of their way to harm gay people?

"Apparently, in the world of sports, homosexuality is a more grievous offense than vehicular assault."

I don't understand where our priorities lie. Professional sports welcomes back wife beaters, drug users, and accused murderers (hello Ray Lewis), but a gay man is taboo. Tuaolo, a father of two adopted children, is a target for the police blotter, yet he would have been a marked man in the NFL had he revealed his homosexuality earlier. Meanwhile, Vikings receiver Randy Moss is surrounded by love and support from his teammates despite drilling a Minneapolis traffic officer with his Mercedes. Apparently, in the world of sports, homosexuality is a more grievous offense than vehicular assault.

Sadly, a person's sexuality matters and if you're not the "right" one, you could be penalized for it. I don't understand why it makes any difference whether a person is gay or straight, but people want to know. This spring, New York Mets catcher Mike Piazza had to call a press conference to dismiss rumors that he was gay. Two questions: 1) What difference does it make if he is? and 2) Why is it so important for us to know?

Why is there this fascination with knowing who is gay? Is it that big a deal? If Piazza wants to come out of the closet, that's his decision and nobody else's. If he wants to keep his private life private, that's cool too. Piazza shouldn't have to deal with this tabloid sensation about his sexuality. Nobody should have to hold a press conference to tell the world he's straight. Similarly, nobody should have to hold a press conference to tell the world he's gay.

Listen, a person's sexuality is his or her own business. Who a person reveals their sexuality to is also their own business. A person should never feel like a prisoner to their sexuality, which is too often the case in our society. Lastly, no person should ever fear violence or ridicule based on his or her homosexuality.

I'd like to see an America where sexuality is an afterthought. Gay, straight, bi-sexual. None of it would matter. I'd like to see an America where somebody would feel entirely comfortable being openly gay. I'd like to never see a person murdered because they were gay. I'd like never to read about a person disguising who they really were because they were afraid of the possible consequences of coming clean.

Maybe I'm being a little naive. Maybe I'm being a little too idealistic. But are these goals entirely unreachable? In this bastion of tolerance we call America, is it possible that a person's sexuality can be a secondary consideration to their character? Will we ever reach the ideal to which we, as a society, claim to aspire? Maybe. But we're certainly not there yet.

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian Columnist.

Freedom from intimidation

As the debate over Israel-Palestine has heated up recently on campuses, questions concerning the right to free speech have taken center stage. For students of Middle Eastern descent, ourselves included, the Constitution's first amendment has not been our last line of defense both on and off campuses in the post-Sept. 11, 2001 climate.

Jewish students have no less of a stake in the matter. Across the country they have suffered a number of ugly incidents due to their religion and stance on Israel. At the University of Colorado, there were reports of swastikas painted at a booth set up by a Jewish student organization. At the University of California, a brick was thrown through a glass door at the Jewish Hillel center. Such actions are absolutely intolerable.

In this context, it is hardly surprising that 300 college presidents signed a letter drafted by the American Jewish Committee and published in The New York Times calling for "intimidation-free campuses." Who could possibly oppose the reaffirmation of our universities as safe-havens for open, free and critical debate? The shocking news was that over 1,700 college presidents who were asked to sign the letter opted against it and the reason for their abstention is a hopeful sign for those struggling to maintain the right to have a political voice on campus.

The letter had one central problem: it only mentioned Jewish students and "supporters of Israel" as potential targets of intimidation. Such one-sidedness is worrisome, particularly considering the extent of intimidation, hate crimes and loss of basic civil liberties experienced by those of Middle Eastern descent since the atrocities of the World Trade Center.

Thankfully, many college presidents recognize this reality. The University of North Carolina Chancellor, James Moeser, expressed this concern most plainly: "I am happy to sign this statement. However, in the wake of Sept. 11, there have also been acts of violence and intimidation directed at Muslim students and Arabs. I would be happier if this statement were more inclusive." Chancellor Moeser was not alone in his concern. From Boston College to Duke University, presidents from across the country filed their dissent. One of the original framers of the letter, Tufts President Lawrence S. Bacow, raised his hesitations about the letter's imbalance and eventually decided not to sign the final version because he said it was "cast too narrowly." William M. Chace, President of Emory University, also one of the letter's initial backers, withdrew his support after his requests to make the piece "more symmetrical" were denied.

We should not forget what happened after Sept. 11.

Within weeks after the horrible events at the World Trade Center, street attacks against Muslims and those of Middle Eastern descent reached such a level that even President Bush went racing to the nearest Mosque to call for an end to the violence. Two weeks after Sept. 11, Attorney General John Ashcroft already had 40 anti-Muslim hate crime cases sitting on his desk. Several mosques were firebombed. A Sikh gas station attendant in Arizona was shot for merely looking like an Arab. Some things have improved since then, but much has not. Last month, the Center for American Islamic Relations, one of the few organizations still tracking the situation, released its annual report revealing that in the last 12 months, the quantity of hate crimes nationally against Middle Easterners is quadruple the number from the previous year, with over 2,000 incidents reported to the police.

Campuses were not immune from the wave of backlashes and blatant intimidation. Only a week after the Sept. 11 attacks, two Muslim girls were beaten at Moraine Valley College in Palos Hills, Illinois. At the University of Connecticut, a female Muslim student had her hijab (Islamic head covering) torn off and then she was chased off campus.

Free speech for students of Middle Eastern descent has fared little better. This is especially true for those who dare to raise their voices on politically controversial issues. Only four months ago, a Harvard graduating senior, Zayed Yasin, was slated as one of the commencement speakers, but due to death threats he had to remove the word "jihad" from the title of his speech. Approved by University President Lawrence Summers, the speech was intended to reclaim the true meaning of the word "jihad" as the moral and personal struggle to better oneself and one's community. It was a critical and historicizing commentary, and one which Richard Hunt, a Harvard Dean who read the proposed draft, described as "healing" and "non-confrontational." Unfortunately, any such discussion, no matter how reflective, was censored.

Attempts to silence free speech have continued, and especially on matters concerning Israel and Palestine. In a particularly McCarthyist turn, a recently founded website called Campus Watch encourages students to report professors who criticize Israel. The emergent divestment movement which, hopes to pressure Israel to end its military occupation has met with similarly unfair tactics. As students on campuses across the country have called for universities to withdraw U.S. subsidies and corporate investments supporting the highly repressive policies of the Israeli government in the Occupied territories, these students have been called anti-Semites. This is the worst kind of slur. Student critics of Israeli policies are no more anti-Semitic than opponents of apartheid were anti-Afrikaner or advocates of Tibet are anti-Chinese. Criticizing the actions and laws of a country is very different from attacking people for their religion, nationality or ethnicity.

Many college officials are fully aware of the current political realities facing students of Middle Eastern descent. At the University of Arizona in Tucson, the Dean's office reported that since Sept. 11 at least 39 Arab students walked out of their courses, citing fear as a primary factor. The University of Colorado in Denver had 45 Arab students withdraw. Perhaps it's time for these college officials to draft a more honest, fair and inclusive anti-intimidation letter. Students of all political leanings and ethnic backgrounds would be the better for it.

Yousef Munayyer is a Collegian Columnist. Rita Hamad is an undergraduate at Harvard University. Shadi Hamid is an undergraduate at Georgetown University. Mitra Ebadolahi is an undergraduate at the University of California – Los Angeles. They wrote this piece in collaboration with Ian Urbina of the Middle East Research and Information Project (MERIP).

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.04.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Hamlet earns a round of applause at the Fine Arts Center

By Christine Papacidis
Collegian Staff

The stage was filled with sand. Two wells of water hugged each corner of the stage and set pieces. There were two torches of fire fastened onto the old brick background giving off an olden, eerie, Elizabethan feel. Projected on the scrim were a full moon, bare tree branches and what looked to be headstones. In the background, the howling of the wind could be heard. This is what set the mood for Theatre de la Jeune Lune's production of Shakespeare's famous tragedy, Hamlet.

The costumes were well created. Each of the characters' costumes went right along with the period of the tragedy, being old Elizabethan England, each being simple but flattering. In the beginning of the play, Hamlet wore green and maroon royal attire, but as the show went on and as Hamlet began to become insane, his costume got very simple. He wore a ripped white stained shirt and red pants. The king and queen were, of course, in royal red clothing. Ophelia wore a simple ivory dress, and the chorus wore masks and ivory cloaks all throughout the production.

Entrances were an interesting and different approach to this production. In reference to the main characters, the interpretation of this Hamlet made the characters' entrances a surprise to the audience. This did not happen all of the time, but within the changes of scenes, two to three of the chorus members would come out and hide the character under their huge cloak. With their movement, they would set the character down to their position and then continue with their fluid movements to exit the stage. With the unexpected reveal of each character, the audience was in a state of surprise.

This was a creative way to keep the company's intent a secret.

The mood throughout the whole production was very dark and depressing, typical of a staging of Hamlet. The lighting was kept at a dim setting, but often with a yellow or orange glow cast upon the stage. There was one moment where the audience was totally pulled out of the initial mood of the scene. It was during Hamlet's famous "To be or not to be..." monologue. Listening intently, the audience was curious to see how this specific actor, Steven Epp, would portray the speech. Then all of a sudden an actor dressed in red jumps out of stage left, completely ruining the moment. This led into a scene of total contrast with the previous scene. The "players" come out and put on a variety show to show them continue with their fluid movements to exit the stage. With the unexpected reveal of each character, the audience was in a state of surprise.

This was a creative way to keep the particular theatre company wanted to make such a harsh contrast of scenes.

There were a lot of changes in stage positions of the character. Hamlet at one point broke one major taboo of putting his back to the audience. This position made the interaction of characters much more interesting to watch. The perception of depth was another intriguing concept. At one point, Ophelia steps into the water, shallow water, but water. It was deeper by immediately falling to her knees.

Theatre de la Jeune Lune's adaptation of Hamlet, was not quite what portrayed, but also not what was advertised. The characters were not [illegible] ented, especially Hamlet. When Hamlet began to [illegible] could not take his [illegible] dering what was next.

A round of applause goes to the cast and crew of Theatre de la Jeune Lune's production of Hamlet.

Hamlet dazzled the Fine Arts Center this passed Saturday with beautiful costuming, a striking set and a talented cast.

The dramatic Shakespearean tale Hamlet received thunderous applause when it took over the Fine Arts Center this weekend. Hamlet made a two night stop in Amherst this weekend.

Preventing common diseases: Part 1-osteoporosis

What disease are college-aged individuals most concerned about? If you ask most, I doubt you will hear many people respond with osteoporosis. This disease, which mainly affects older individuals, relates to a weakening and thinning of bones due to a loss in calcium stores. Why should you be concerned if osteoporosis is a disease the effects mainly individuals over 50-years-old?

According to the National Institute of Health on Osteoporosis and Bone Related Disorders, in the U.S. today 10 million people are living with osteoporosis and another 18 million are at high risk due to low bone mass.

Approximately one in every two women and one in every eight men will have an osteoporosis related fracture at some point in their life. Men are less susceptible to developing osteoporosis because they generally have larger bones and achieve greater peak bone mass than women. Women also lose more bone mass as a result of hormonal changes associated with menopause. Family history of osteoporosis increases ones risk of the disease and Caucasian and Asian women are more likely to develop osteoporosis compared to African-American and Hispanic women.

One of the most important ways to prevent osteoporosis is making sure that normal peak bone mass is achieved by about 20 years of age. Although peak bone mass is mainly attained during the third decade of life, the amount of bone formed during your 20s to 50s is relatively small.

Bones are constantly breaking down and reforming. These two processes parallel each other until approximately 50 years of age when natural bone loss begins. Therefore, bones become progressively weaker and less dense as you age. Bone loss through aging is inevitable; however there are several ways to alleviate the rate at which this occurs. Many decisions you make now will determine your osteoporosis risk later in life. Current nutrition and exercise habits are two dynamics you must pay close attention to.

PREVENTING OSTEOPOROSIS THROUGH NUTRITION:

Studies have shown that teenage girls, young women, and adults over 65 years of age have calcium intakes below the RDA. Why is this a concern?

About 99 percent of your body's calcium is found in teeth and bones. Adequate calcium consumption is crucial to ensure that your bones have enough of the building blocks for formation. Also, calcium levels in the blood are under tight control, which aims to maintain a steady calcium level. When calcium levels are low, with inadequate intake for example, your bones will release calcium to maintain that steady state. If calcium intake is consistently low, then your bones must continuously give up their calcium, instead of using it for its own development, resulting in lower bone mineral content, and hence lower density. Depending on your age, average calcium consumption should be between 1000 mg-1500 mg each day. Calcium supplementation is rarely warranted because it is very easy to meet your daily requirements with food.

Vitamin D is a fat soluble vitamin that is needed in adequate amounts to ensure that calcium is absorbed. There are two ways in which we get the vitamin. First, the sun can provide a way of processing the vitamin on the skin, which is followed by absorption into the body. Secondly dietary intake can come from fortified milk, cod liver oil, and egg yolks, although in small amounts. Considering the region that we live in, conversion of vitamin D from the sun is not enough to provide adequate amounts, therefore dietary intake is needed. Interestingly, the major source of vitamin D in the American diet is from milk. Milk is also the major contributor of calcium. Therefore, it is to no surprise that inadequate calcium intake will also lead to inadequate vitamin D intakes. It is recommended that individuals receive about 400 IU – 800 IU of vitamin D each day through the diet.

Adequate calcium and vitamin D intake is easily achieved by drinking at least three glasses of milk, preferably skim, each day. Dairy products in general are excellent calcium foods, yet they are not the only way to meet your daily requirements. Canned fish products such as sardines provide ample amounts of calcium. Green leafy vegetables (i.e. collard greens) are also calcium containing foods; however the presence of phytates and oxalates bind to calcium and limit the amount that is absorbed. Fortification of soy products, orange juice and cereals with calcium will greatly improve the calcium status of consumers.

Vitamin K is another fat-soluble vitamin necessary for normal bone health. One of its major functions is to aid in the formation of osteocalcin, a contributor to bone formation. Studies have related low vitamin K intakes with increased risk for osteoporosis. Vitamin K is synthesized by intestinal bacteria, yet the rate at which it is absorbed is not enough to maintain necessary levels in the body. Therefore vitamin K must be consumed through the diet. Dark green leafy vegetables, liver, alfalfa and kelp are all excellent sources.

High intakes of animal protein or sodium can increase the amount of calcium lost in the urine. Studies have related vegetarian diets with reduced urinary calcium loss compared to diets high in animal protein. Sodium by itself has the potential to increase the amount of calcium lost in the urine. Since Americans tend to have high protein diets, lowering your intake or substituting meat with beans or tofu can help to spare calcium. Replacing soda with milk, and not adding salt to your foods will also help.

PREVENTING OSTEOPOROSIS THROUGH EXERCISE:

Regular exercise aids in bone formation by adding mechanical stress to the bone and greatly increasing the amount of minerals deposited over time. Bone development is

Turn to HEALTH page 6

RUNNING with SCISSORS

Episode IV: Listen up Ladies

By Melissa Pimmel and Lizzy Nießen

We're back! Did you miss us? Well, its only been a week, and we sincerely hope that everyone had a lot of clean Halloween fun in their hangin' costumes recommended by the women of Running with Scissors. We realized this week that we've been ranking on guys a lot and things they do wrong, so this week, we're gonna rail on the ladies.

Now, we realize that we're not perfect, and we are both guilty of wearing pajamas to class and occasionally making a questionable wardrobe choice, but most of the time, we look good, we wear clothes that fit and our belts match our shoes. The following is a list of faux pas that ladies (knowingly (and unknowingly) commit that should be eliminated from acceptable fashion altogether.

Exposed buttlloss

Thongs serve their purpose when you are wearing pants or a dress that require no panty line, but for the love of everything holy, do not expose your underwear. Once in a bar, the women of Running with Scissors witnessed a poor woman leaning over the bar with her flossed plumbers butt hanging out. Butts aren't pretty things to expose in public, and its just not classy. Save it for the privacy of your own home.

Excessive makeup

Nobody wakes up in the morning looking gorgeous. Have you seen Christina Aguilera without makeup? A little makeup is necessary here and there to enhance your features and cover things that you don't want exposed. However, it is never necessary to leave your dorm or apartment in the morning with 75 gallons of war paint splattered on your face. A little eyeliner, shadow, blush and mascara is all fine, but when it takes you more than 10 minutes to put on makeup in the morning, and you run out of your liquid black eyeliner more than once a month, this is a problem, and you probably don't look that great. Minimize the makeup, wear a little but to enhance your features, but don't drown them out. Mom always told us that nobody should be able to tell you're wearing makeup because if they can, you're wearing too much.

Excessive hairspray and hair color

Hairspray is a necessary product to any woman's hair prod-

Turn to RUNNING page 6

Keep the girls in tact

Ladies, please wear bras. It's so easy to tell when someone isn't as there is a lot of unnatural movement in the upper body area. There's nothing attractive about excessive jiggling. If you can pull of a shirt with a built in bra, then do it. But if they can't keep the twins in line, put on a bra. Perkiness beats sagging. Just ask 60 year-old ladies.

Jackets are part of your outfit

Nothing is more painful than watching women wear jackets that completely don't go with their outfits. If you're dressed up wear a dress coat of some sort, not your ski parka. If you're going to go down the denim jacket route, either wear khakis or jeans that match the denim of your jacket. Do not go with dark denim and light jeans. It looks ridiculous.

Knee high boots

We love knee high boots as much as the next girls. We really do. But there is a time and a place for everything, and boots are no exception. While visiting a club in boots it is downright appropriate, even sexy, however for your 9 a.m. class... not so much. Boots are pretty much a simple entity. Knee high boots and a mini-skirt simply should not be worn to class period. Is clubs or parties maybe, but never wear them to classes. Note that is not to say that we don't appreciate the occasional long skirt coupled with a pair of boots. But if your are shooting for classy look, as a general rule skip out on the boots for class wear.

Ill fitting clothing

This goes either way. Wearing clothes that are too tight or equally as bad a wearing something looks as if an elephant could fit inside. Simple. Bump put, make the attempt to try on your clothes before you purchase them or to read the tag. Seriously wash them. While belly tees can be cute in the right situation, wearing a shirt that looks as though it was meant for your 3-year-old cousin can only be a recipe for disaster. Same goes for baggy pants. Having a sexy style is great, however having a potential love interest wonder if they can physically fight, that your pants is not so great.

Overdone jewelry

Accessories are some of the most fun and interesting additions to one's wardrobe. They can also easily be messed up. Try

University Orchestra seranades Fine Arts Center with trip to Vienna

By Gretchen Keller
COLLEGIAN STAFF

While the University of Massachusetts' Orchestra was to take the audience on a trip to 18th century Vienna, we did not reach our destination until the end of the concert. The first two pieces, by Glinka and Mozart, were composed outside of Vienna, as was pointed out to the audience during the oral program notes that were given by the conductor and director of the Orchestra, Lanfranco Marcelletti. The audience was taken to Russia and Paris before our grand entrance into Vienna through Beethoven's Eroica Symphony. Marcelletti remarked that all three of the composers at one point did live in Vienna.

Marcelletti created an intimate atmosphere, in the giant hill at the Fine Arts Center on Wednesday, Oct. 30. He cracked jokes and told stories about the composers and their pieces. It was refreshing to see a conductor so relaxed and gregarious in place of the usual seriousness and aloofness that surrounds most other conductors. The audience was laughing and if it wasn't for the orchestra sitting behind him on stage one would think he was a stand-up comedian in a tux. "I love to give my so called talk shows in my concerts and I do it whenever I can," Marcelletti remarked. He explained that he had not conducted any of the "Giant American" orchestras, but during his time conducting the Sao Paoulo Symphony and the Chilean National Symphony, he would frequently speak to the audience. "I feel that it created a bond between the audience and us, the orchestra," Marcelletti said, "I dislike the lake of communication that sometimes happens in classical concerts . . . and I love to talk!"

His comic energy changed as he assumed his position on the podium and became athletic in his conducting. The concert opened with the overture to Glinka's Ruslan and Ludmilla, an opera adopted from a poem by Aleksander Pushkin. The piece was played with force and fury with the violins scurrying to keep up. The tempest broke allowing the, always understated, violas to shine for a brief moment with a sweeping melody that highlighted the rich sound of the instrument.

Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante K297B, was the next on the program. It is a showcase for the clarinet and oboe, which are supported by a French horn and a bassoon. The oboe was played by Fredric Cohen and the clarinet by Michael Sussman. While the rhythmical nature of Mozart was starting to wear thin on the strings, the clarinet and oboe carried the piece, keeping it light and flowing while the rhythmic pulsing of the cellos and the violins were played with such a lack of enthusiasm that the piece became dull. The French horn was played by Laura Klock and Stephen Walt played the bassoon.

The Fine Arts Center hall was a little over half full, and remained so during the intermission. As the audience reconvened for the last half of the concert, Marcelletti again came out to introduce the next piece. It was Beethoven's Third Symphony, the Eroica Symphony written originally in honor of Napoleon Bonaparte. Yet, as Napoleon crowned himself Emperor, Beethoven fell into a fury angered that a man who destroyed royalty had now evolved into a tyrant and. Beethoven felt that Napoleon was turning his back on freedom, "Which is something we very much need these days" Marcelletti said.

Instead, the symphony stood to represent the four stages of a hero; life, death, rebirth and the climax of the hero's purpose. While the piece was very heroic, it was also long. When it was premiered in Vienna on April 7, 1805, the audience complained of the length and likened it to "a monster in a cage" for the unusual ferocity of the music, which was not common for the classical time period in music (1750-1830).

There were spots in which the sweeping themes gave way to dull interludes, which were in tune and all of the notes represented, yet they were lacking life.

Lanfranco Marcelletti is fairly new to UMass. This is his second year conducting the University Orchestra. He has moved around quite a bit in the last ten years, which he has been conducting. Before that he was a pianist. Marcelletti describes his nomadic nature as a commitment he made in his life to "Work in a place where I can give my best and where I have things to share and to receive at the same time. When this agreement is over, it is time to move on."

He feels his time at UMass has just begun and he thoroughly enjoys working with the students who are open to learning and give their best.

Clipse on campus Tuesday

The Bronx, Cali, HOTlanta ...the world of hip-hop is made up of foundations represented by stylistically regional hip-hop genres. Every few years however, a novel hip-hop act emerges, outshining conventional.

This year the duo of brothers, Malice and Pusha T, a.k.a. Gene and Terrence Thornton, have arrived to introduce the Virginia streets to the hip-hop world. Discovered and produced by the Neptunes, Clipse recently achieved a near impossible feat when Lord Willin', which dropped this summer featuring their hit "Grindin'," went to No. 1 on Billboard's Top R&B/Hip Hop and Top Rap Album Charts.

The brothers were no strangers to success though, with the year 2000 hooking them up with a host of No Limit Artists including Master P, 504 Boyz and Silk Da Shocker. In 2001, the duo appeared on releases from The Backstreet Boys, Jermaine Dupri and Grammy award winning Nelly Furtado. Most recently, Clipse was seen by a record-setting 12 million MTV Video Music Award viewers tin the U.S. alone1 when they joined Justin Timberlake on "Like I Love You" this September.

Starting on Nov. 7, Clipse will be opening for Nelly on the first leg of his Nellyville Tour. On Tuesday, Nov. 5, a mere two days prior to the kickoff of the 'Nellyville tour, University Productions & Concerts along with Black Mass Communications Project will be hosting Clipse with Damiini and Clinton Sparks from Hot 93.7.

Doors of the Student Union Ballroom open at 8PM. $5 with valid Five-College ID/$10 general admission. Be sure to get tickets in advance at Tix Unlimited in the Student Union because this show is going to be hot!

On the Net: www.clipse.com
-Taryn Patterson and Jaime Sabine

■ Running

continued from page 5

the top of the list of things that one should never wear for accessories is anything too large or dangerous looking. Earrings that are the size of shower hangers and weigh more than ten pounds should also be avoided at all costs. Beyond bringing down the bottom of your car with a serious amount of weight they also look terrible.

Layering

Wearing layers is almost essential when it comes to winter wear. After all it gets cold outside and you are forced to compensate by wearing say a sweater and a tee-shirt or a even a lightweight sweater under a heavier one. This however is not an opportunity to act as though you are colorblind or plain old stupid. When it comes to layering make sure that the colors on your layers of clothing match. Simply put, don't go around pairing your favorite lime green top with an aqua sweater. Try to stick with neutrals and neutrals or match earth tones together. Bottom line: avoid looking as though you got dressed in the dark.

Mismatching genres

This can be the kiss of death when it comes to apparel. Pairing a nice pair of black pants with something like a baggy hooded sweatshirt can cause any good outfit to go bad. Sports attire should go with like outfits such as sneakers with running pants, and casual wear should be paired with casual wear such as a sweater and a pair of jeans. If you decide to pair sus running pants with a button-down shirt you will look like you are suffering from an identity crisis and you will look like an idiot.

Most of these tips are simple pit falls that we all make at one time or another that are very easy to avoid. We wouldn't offer the advice if we didn't think that it was pretty common. So as always call us shallow, but we also are right.

Melissa Hammel and Lizzy Nielsen are Collegian Columnists.

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
— The Pizza Alternative® —
256-1616

2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 3/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Mention/enter coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616

2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
One Coupon per 2 Zones
Mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616

D.P. Dough = Great Calzones + Fast Delivery + Low Prices

Senior Photo Opportunity!!!
Photos will be taken through Friday November 8, 2002 in Campus Center 905/09.
Make your appointment at www.ouryear.com and use the School Code 147.
Order your copy of the 2003 Index when you get your photo taken, and you will recive your copy for a DISCOUNTED PRICE OF $40.00
Questions call 545-0848

WIRELESS SAVINGS!
Introducing the Sony Ericsson T61C
The New Look of Reliability
SAVE $40.00
$69.99 Regular Price
$30.00 Mail-in Rebate
$10.00 Instant Rebate
$29.99 Your Cost
With new 1 year agreement. Some restrictions apply.
• Personalize your phone with snap-on front and back color covers and customizable ring tones.
• Keep in touch with two-way text messaging.
• Surf the web with the five-way joy stick and soft keys.
The T61C makes calling fun and easy!
4000 Night & Weekend Airtime Minutes when on the America's Choice Network
Plus
1000 Anytime Mobile To Mobile Minutes to call any of our 30 million customers nationwide on our national mobile to mobile network
America's Choice
300 anytime minutes FOR $39.99 monthly access With 1 or 2 year agreement
Unlimited nationwide long distance. No roaming charges coast-to-coast. All when calling on the America's Choice® network
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 69¢/min. CDMA tri-mode phone with updated software required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley 322 Russell St. 413.587.3248
Holyoke 50 Holyoke Mall 413.533.2500
verizon wireless
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri. 9:01pm-5:59am Sat. 12am-Sun. 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and Calling Plan. $35 activation fee applies. $175 early termination fee applies. Requires credit approval. Cannot be combined with other service promotions. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Mobile to mobile calls depicted by calls made during night and weekend hours. Subject to taxes & other charges. Not available in all markets. Geographic and other restrictions apply. See brochure and sales representative for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless.

UMass gets first HE win

Mauldin scores first goal in weekend split

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Instead of allowing such a brutal loss to break its spirits, the Massachusetts hockey team decided to accentuate the positive.

The Minutemen rebounded from a heartbreaking 2-1 overtime loss to Providence on Friday to knock off Northeastern by a count of 5-3 on Saturday night. Five different players lit the lamp in the victory over the Huskies as UMass (2-3-0, 1-2-0 Hockey East) notched its first conference points of the season.

Providence	2
UMass	1
UMass	5
NU	3

"One of the things I said [after Friday was] 'let's look at how we played, we played [well] all week-end, and we've got to build off that, and that's what we did," said senior captain Tim Turner, who tallied one of the Maroon and White's goals. "We deserved both games, but we got a split out of it, and you've got to be happy with that."

"We've played hard the last couple of games and really had very little to show for it," Head Coach Don Cahoon added. "It's a good group of kids that are working hard together to improve themselves, so it's nice to get out of here with a win."

Northeastern trailed the entire contest against the Maroon and White, but Tim Judy's top-shelf rocket over Minutemen netminder Gabe Winer on a five-on-three power play pulled the Huskies to within one goal at 4-3.

But Greg Mauldin's blast from the left circle on a two-on-one break with linemate Stephen Werner provided insurance for UMass and sent most of the 2,916 fans at Matthews Arena home disappointed. Mauldin's goal was his first of the year after leading the team in scoring last season.

"It feels really good now after my injury," said Mauldin, who missed last Sunday's game against Nebraska-Omaha. "Hopefully, we'll keep it rolling."

UMass jumped out to an early 2-0 lead at the end of the first period on goals by freshman Matt Anderson and Turner. Anderson's one-timer off of Josh Hanson's feed from behind the net put the Maroon and White on the board midway through the opening frame, and freshman Chris Capraro's crossice pass on the doorstep was put home by Turner seven minutes later to double the UMass lead at the intermission.

After Peter Trovato redirected a left-wing feed past Husky goaltender Tim Heinerts at 2:27 of the second period to give UMass a three-goal cushion, Northeastern quickly trimmed the lead to one on goals three minutes apart from Brian Swinlarski and Eric Orthp.

However, Nick Kuiper increased the UMass lead again to two at 5:30 of the third on a fluke play. As Heinerts prepared to play the puck on a potential dump-in, he left the crease too soon. Kuiper took advantage of the young netminder's mistake, firing a shot from the red line into the far corner of the empty goal and bringing all the momentum over to the visitor's bench.

Heinerots finished with 27 saves for the Huskies, while Winer racked up 25 stops in picking up his second win of the year.

The special teams play of the Minutemen, a shaky aspect early in the season for the team, was solid against the Huskies. UMass notched its second power play tally of the year on Turner's goal, and the penalty kill, a woeful 53.8 percent entering the weekend, killed off six of seven Husky man advantages.

"I thought we were a lot better and more organized on both fronts," Cahoon said.

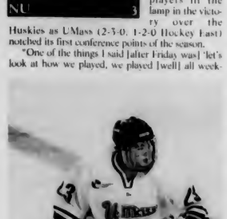
Friday night, UMass outplayed Providence in the final two periods, outshooting the visitors 24-14 in the second and third frames and controlling most of the play. But a failed clearing attempt by UMass early in overtime gave the Friars' Cody Laughlean room to fire one from the left circle for the winning goal.

"It was one of those games where things weren't going our way, and we were fortunate to get the goal in overtime," PC defenseman Jeff Mason said.

The Friars opened the scoring at 10:44 of the first period, when Jon DiSalvatore fired a shot on Winer, which caromed right to linemate Devin Rask near the right post. The senior sniper put home the biscuit past the out-of-position Winer, collecting his third goal of the season.

But the trio of Rask, DiSalvatore and Peter Fregoe was held silent by Winer and the rest of the Minuteman defense for the remainder of the game. Providence's top line, averaging just under eight total points in its previous five games, accumulated a mere two against the Minutemen.

UMass tied up the game late in the second period off a wild play in front of the Friar net. Capraro sent a pass towards the middle to linemate Craig McDonald, who lost control of the feed. But the puck squirted through a pair of Providence defenders, and Mike Warner somehow redirected the disjunt senior netminder Nolan Schaefer for the Maroon and White's only tally.



Schaefer was brilliant in net for the Friars, stopping 27 of 28 Minuteman attempts. The former second team All-American made several key stops throughout the game, especially in the third period with the game deadlocked at one. Schaefer grabbed Mauldin's bid for the game-winner early in the third off a Friar turnover, and Werner's shorthanded attempt off a rush down the left side was gloved by the crafty goaltender. Freshman Peter Alden tried to solve the Yellow Grass. Sask. native with two and a half minutes remaining as he went one-on-one, but Schaefer kicked aside his low shot.

"Every time we make a mistake defensively, you can always count on Nolan," freshman winger Torry Gayda said. "It's good to look behind and see Nolan in net, he can make it happen for you."

UMass made a significant lineup switch for the weekend, as forward Thomas Puck moved back to defense for the pair of contests.

"He gives us a whole new dimension back there," Cahoon said. "Tommy was great about it; he just wants to help the team."

The Minutemen return to action this Saturday against Hockey East opponent Maine.

FRESHMAN FORWARD TORIN CAPRARO TALLIED TWO ASSISTS FOR UMASS IN THE SPLIT THIS WEEKEND

■ Delaware

continued from page 10

lucid," Whipple said. "He's just so competitive – he throws a block on the run play – we'll just have to wait and see how he's going to be."

Tim Day – who relieved Krohn following a concussion suffered against Villanova – performed particularly well in relief on Saturday, completing six of seven passes for 46 yards of his own.

"There wasn't any panic when that happened because our guys have seen Timmy Day and we won the game against Villanova with him," Whipple said. "We're just finding a way to get it done."

The Blue Hens jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the second quarter, when Hall went over the top on a one-yard sneak. The score was set up by a 51-yard scamper by Germaine Bennett, who blasted through the right side of the line and was barely caught from behind by safety Shannon James.

"We need to get the ball in his hands a little bit because he did have an outstanding day," Keeler said.

After Zullo's touchdown and a 33-yard field goal by Doug White put the Minutemen up 10-7, the Blue Hens moved the ball 70 yards downfield, but were without any timeouts as the clock ticked close to halftime. Rather than spike the ball and try to tie the game with a field goal, Keeler elected to throw another pass, which fell incomplete as the half expired.

"We were not playing for a field goal," Keeler said. "We thought we were actually putting more pressure on the defense by not firing the ball. Our special teams coordinator said it has to be inside the 15 [to go for the field goal], the way the wind was gusting and the way [kicker] Scott [Collins] was hitting the ball."

Whipple was confident going to halftime with a three-point lead.

"Just being at home gives you a little more of a security blanket," he said. "It felt like if we could get a big play – and we did with Mark Kimener – getting us a two possession lead, once again when we get into the fourth quarter, we're not going to throw the ball and try our run game and make them beat us. Our defense came up great again in the second half."

The Maroon and White now controls as own destiny for the A-10 title, as Villanova beat William and Mary 41-20. Keeler thinks the Minutemen stack up with the best in the conference.

"I think overall on both sides of the ball they might be as sound a unit as we've seen," he said. "These guys are pretty balanced, maybe the best combination of offense and defense [in the conference]."

Cain (nine unassisted tackles, one sack), Corey Potter (eight tackles, one for lossst and James (eight tackles, three pass deflections) were the key players for Tom Masella's defense, which has emerged as one of the most cohesive units in the conference, if not the country, over the past five weeks.

"This isn't like '98 where 35-17 was close because they were scoring on us," Whipple said. "A two-possession lead is big for us.

"Our guys have been down in the red zone so much, we're just playing UMass football, the way this team has formed an identity."

GERALD DIGIOVANNI/COLLEGIAN

AFTER BEING KNOCKED OUT OF THE GAME FOR THE SECOND TIME THIS SEASON, UMASS QUARTERBACK JEFF KROHN IS ATTENDED TO ON THE SIDELINES BY ONE OF THE TRAINERS.

STUDENT TRAVEL
get hyped for spring break '03
Jamaica.....$729
Cancun.....$649
Amsterdam...$509
Paris.....$485
Includes air & accommodations from Boston. Prices are per person. Some taxes & fees not included. Other departure cities and destinations available.
44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.on STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> OFF THE STREET

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Veggie Potato Skins $4.99 4.48
Nachos Especial $4.95 4.48
Sweet Potato Fries $3.79 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
OCMP Welcome Here
Closed on Mondays
www.judiesrestaurant.com
51 N. Pleasant Street 253-3491

Matchmaker, Matchmaker... Make me a match!
SINGLE SEARCH West & Central Mass
Can Help You Find Your Soulmate!
♥ Designed by a marriage counselor
♥ Easy and affordable
♥ Safe and respectable
♥ Unique two-way compatibility matching system
Contact us for a FREE Consultation & Brochure
www.massingles.com
massingles@aol.com
Single Search welcomes people from all lifestyles and backgrounds

NFL Sunday Round-up

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) – Tom Brady showed up Drew Bledsoe again.

A year after taking away Bledsoe's starting job when both players were with New England, Brady out-dueled his former mentor to lead the Patriots past the Buffalo Bills 38-7 Sunday.

Brady completed 23 of 27 passes for 310 yards and four touchdowns, helping the defending Super Bowl champions snap their four-game losing streak.

Suddenly, the Pats (4-4) are back in the AFC East race. They inched closer to Buffalo (5-4), which had won three straight, and division-leading Miami (5-2).

Philadelphia 19, Chicago 13
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) – Defense carried the Philadelphia Eagles – again.

Shutting out Chicago in the second half and stopping a final drive Sunday, the Eagles' stingy defense preserved a 19-13 victory over the struggling Bears.

Hugh Douglas sacked Jim Miller on a third down from the Eagles' 24 with 17 seconds to go. Miller then threw a fourth-down pass to the end zone that was too high for Marcus Robinson as the Bears (2-6) lost their sixth straight.

Pittsburgh 23, Cleveland 20
CLEVELAND (AP) – Tommy Maddox threw two touchdown passes, Amos Zeroue ran for a career-high 111 yards and Pittsburgh's defense shut down Cleveland completely on Sunday, giving the Steelers a 23-20 win over the Browns.

With their fourth straight win, the Steelers (5-3) took command of the division race – they're 4-0 inside the AFC North – and hit the halfway point looking better than they have all season.

Tampa Bay 38, Minnesota 24
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) – Brad Johnson threw for 315 yards and a career-high five touchdowns, and the Tampa Bay Buccaneers appeared virtually unstoppable on offense during their 38-24 victory over the Minnesota Vikings on Sunday.

Keyshawn Johnson had nine receptions for 133 yards and two TDs. Karl Williams, Rickey Dudley and Mike Alstott also had touchdown catches for the Bucs (7-2), who matched the best nine-game start in team history.

Tennessee 23, Indianapolis 15
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) – Keith Bulluck returned a fumble 61 yards for a touchdown and Peter Sirmon's interception led to another score as the Tennessee Titans moved into a first-place tie atop the AFC South with a 23-15 victory over the Indianapolis Colts.

It was Tennessee's third straight win and the Colts' third straight loss.

Jeff Garcia and the San Francisco offense held the ball for the last 6:32 minutes of regulation and all of overtime. The 49ers (6-2) won the game and kept the ball for a 41-yard Garcia completing more than a dozen consecutive passes.

The Raiders have lost four straight following a 4-0 start. Rich Gannon was 18-of-28 for 164 yards, ending his NFL-record streak of six-straight 300-yard games.

Compiled by The Associated Press

Harrington completed 3 of 4 passes on the drive and Stewart ran four times to set up the field goal as Detroit (3-5) topped last year's 2-14 mark.

Cincinnati 38, Houston 3
HOUSTON (AP) – The Cincinnati Bengals guaranteed their first victory of the season, then went on and routed Houston to get it.

Energized by a 102-yard interception return by Artrell Hawkins and four touchdown passes by Jon Kitna, the Bengals (1-7) became the last NFL team to get a victory this season, 38-3 Sunday over the Texans (2-6).

Atlanta 20, Baltimore 17
ATLANTA (AP) – The Atlanta Falcons squandered a 14 point lead but bounced back to win their fourth straight, beating the Baltimore Ravens 20-17 Sunday.

Michael Vick completed only 12 of 24 passes for 136 yards. The second-year quarterback also was sacked five times, gained negative rushing yards, fumbled twice and threw his first interception of the season.

New York Jets 44, San Diego 17
SAN DIEGO (AP) – The San Diego Chargers came dressed in their powder blue throwback jerseys and left looking like powderpuffs after getting stomped over by the New York Jets.

Chad Pennington, Curtis Martin and Santana Moss helped the visiting Jets (3-5) get better in a hurry, grounding the big plays in a 34-13 loss to the AFC-leading Chargers (7-2) on Sunday.

Washington 14, Seattle 3
SEATTLE (AP) – Kenny Watson ran for 110 yards in place of injured running Stephen Davis and Shaun Alexander had two touchdown re- passes as the Washington Redskins beat the Seattle Seahawks 14-3 on Sunday.

Matthews was hardly spectacular, completing 16-of-27 for 174 yards and one interception. He threw an 11-yard TD pass to Darnerion McCants and a 19-yarder to Rod Gardner.

St. Louis 27, Arizona 14
TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) – Marshall Faulk rushed for 178 yards Sunday, including the clinching 15-yard touchdown with 1:53 to play, as the defending NFC champions won their third straight, 27-14 over the Arizona Cardinals.

Faulk also caught five passes for 56 yards.

San Francisco 25, Oakland 20, OT
OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) – After missing a short kick as regulation ended, Joe Cortez redeemed himself with a 25-yard field goal in overtime as the San Francisco 49ers beat the Oakland Raiders 25-20 Sunday.

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
549-RENT OOPS!
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co

Interested in Business?
The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING
✔ Student Discounts
✔ Professional Bartending Training
✔ Tips on Finding a Top Paying Job
✔ Become a Talented, Socially Conscious Bartender
✔ National Restaurant Association Alcohol Awareness Program
✔ Great Part-time or Summer Job
LEARN TO BARTEND IN A WEEKEND!
Call Now, Space is Limited!
-November 15TH - 17TH
-LEWIS-SEBRING ROOM
-VALENTINE HALL
-AMHERST COLLEGE
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program. It works. Contact CampusFundraiser (888)923-3238, or visit [illegible]

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your Legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

91 Acclaim needs work $350 545-3547

87 Toyota Camry Wagon. Very good condition. $1895 256-6625 Leave message. Gre621@webtv.net

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy and enthusiastic workers for the following: Youth Basketball Supervisors/ Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at the Human Resources Office, Amherst Town Hall, Main Street. For more information contact Erika Cumps at cumpse @town.amherst.ma.us.

Part time. $8.50/hr. Brandywine Apts. Needs a leasing person. Tues & Thurs Afternoon, Sat & Sun. Call 549-0600

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons All ages & genders 253-4109 or djatabumpus@yahoo.com

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit@aol.com

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted. Gorgeous 2 bedroom uptown apartment, fully renovated. Huge bedroom with walk-in closet. Parking included. Fully furnished living room and kitchen. Available January. $462.50/ month plus utilities. Call Lindsay at 549-7235

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandy-wineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! or call 1-800-327-6013 Guaranteed Lowest Prices. Free Meals and Drinks! Cancun, Jamaica, Florida and Bahamas Party Cruise! Our Seventeenth Year! Reps Wanted!

Save 50% off over 2 thousand hotel resorts Call Conard 584-5198

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreak-discounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

- CBS / 3
- NBSN
- Fox Sports Network
- PBS / 57
- HSCN Cinema
- WB / 10
- UPN 38
- TV Guide Channel
- FOX / 61
- ABC / 40
- NBC / 22
- International Channel
- UMATV
- HSCN InfoChannel
- ESPN
- ESPN 2
- UVC-19
- ESPN Classic
- Gavel-to-Gavel
- CNN
- CNN HL
- Weather Channel
- Learning Channel
- History Channel
- A & E
- Discovery Channel
- Discovery Health
- Food Network
- NASA
- Home & Garden TV
- Travel Channel
- Lifetime
- CNBC
- Tech TV
- BET
- AMT
- USA
- TNN
- MTV
- MTV2
- VH-1
- TNT
- TBS
- E! Entertainment
- Sci-Fi Channel
- Court TV
- Nick at Nite
- Comedy Central
- Cartoon Network
- Game Show Network
- TV Land
- FOX Family
- Univision
- Galavision
- Telemundo
- College TV Network
- C-SPAN
- C-SPAN 2
- CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, Amherst

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

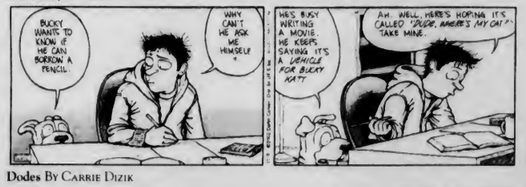
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Non-student rate: 30 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Dodes By Carrie Dizik

The Torques By Ken Fredette

WTF? By Epi

Quote of the Day

"There are two ways to live your life, one is as though nothing is a miracle, the other is as though everything is."

-Albert Einstein

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 47 LOW: 29	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33	HIGH: 53 LOW: 29

Horoscopes

ARIES- You are the one.
TAURUS- Get up out of your chair and go the nearest window. That is if you have a window. If you can't find a window then make one. When you find this window look out of it, at the people, the trees, the animals, the buildings. And discover your answer.
GEMINI- Lucky you may be. A woman today, lay eyes and heart on you she will. Screw it up you might. Lest care you treat her with and goddess you make her feel like.
CANCER- You are a poison in the locker room. You're not a team player. You put "me" before "we," so get with the program. Unless of course you're on your own, then by all means rock on.
LEO- What begins swift is likely to end swiftly as well. If this sounds like something out of a fortune cookie, it is.
VIRGO- The Dark side I sense in you.
LIBRA- Now is the time to proceed with extra caution.
SCORPIO- Look at your television. Is it on? It should be on. If it is not on, you are falling behind. Now move to your computer. You know what to do.
SAGITTARIUS- Get up and do whatever comes to mind. At least you'll be making headway.
CAPRICORN- Be sure to make yourself available to others throughout the day.
AQUARIUS- You'll deal closely with those who are after something quite different today.
PISCES- Rise from your mental slumber. Now regress. Think but do not act alone, unless thou art together.

Geoduck By W.J.S.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

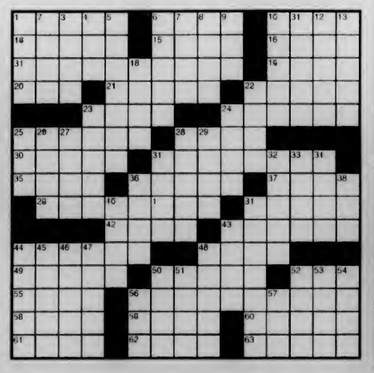
LUNCH
Italian Minestrone Soup
Chicken Cacciatore
Chili Nachos
Native American Stew (vegan)
Vegetable Chili Nachos (vegan)

DINNER
Italian Minestrone Soup
Veal Parmesan
Chicken Margarita
Roast Vegetable Wrap (vegan)

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Voted Best new Bar/Club in The Valley 2002
MON
All-U-Can-Eat $5.95
8:30-11pm
TUES
TEAM PUB TRIVIA
Put your education to real use!
Win money and prizes
9pm call for details
163 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst
548-6900
"Start Your Own Tradition"

TODAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS
1 Fragrant shrub
6 "Now!"
10 Catch the bus
14 Japanese port
15 Every
16 "The heat —
17 Wolfman Jack, e.g. (2 wds.)
19 Huge excess
20 Approx.
21 Decided
22 The ones here
23 "Woe is me!"
24 Dairy product
25 Paris tower
26 Acct. insurer
30 Overpowering fear
31 Cold residue
35 Equine fodder
36 Gray and McCrea
37 Part time
39 Kind of park
41 Landscape
42 Hardwoods
43 In a row
44 Detroit
48 Hong
49 Kahuna's hello
50 — boom
52 Hindu Mr.
55 1492 caravel
56 Germ killer
58 Always
59 Light bulb metric
60 Racket
61 Bone-dry
62 Self-images
63 Bushed



DOWN
1 Postpartum's giant
2 Cow-headed goddess
3 Fold out
4 Pedigree org.
5 Wheelied
6 Denominations
7 Accept
8 Made a hole in one
9 Quaker "your"
10 Annuitize
11 Gay
12 Well thoroughly
13 Stage direction
18 Libra's stone
22 Diving position
23 Make — — buck
24 Corn cribs
25 Ancient Tokyo
26 Mideast nation
27 Goat cheese
28 Wingless insects
29 Pickling herb

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	D	A	M		C	A	R	E	T		S	L	I	M
L	I	M	A		O	R	A	T	E		H	U	G	E
S	M	O	G		D	I	N	E	D		E	N	O	S
		S	K	I	D	D	E	R		P	E	A	R	S
			C	U	L			H	E	A	T
		F	L	I	D	E		L	A	V	I	S	H	E	D
G	A	L	L	A	I	S		A	U	G	E	R		O	D	E
I	V	A	N		S	U	G	A	R		D	R	I	M
G	E	M		O	U	T	E	R		G	U	S	T	O
S	T	A	C	K	E	R	S		L	E	A	S	E	S
			I		L	A	Z	A		A	S	T	I
I	N	L	A	Y		P	R	E	S	E	N	T	S
D	E	A	R		S	O	U	S	A		E	U	S
E	S	I	D	E		A	I	L	E	D		M	U	I
S	O	H	E		P	E	E	P	S		S	P	R	Y

11-11-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

31 — out (doze off)
32 Staring at
33 Get up
34 Mile, in Acapulco
36 Bleed or Rivers
38 Corn serving
40 Sioux City site
41 Actor — Price
43 Clark's 'Daily Planet' cohort
44 Horses' hair
45 Martini garnish
46 Copy machine need
47 Midwest airport
48 Stretch fabrics
50 Jagged tear
51 Sarge's pooch
52 Mingle
53 Hatfield
54 Kept cold
56 Wonder
57 Taro dish

Today's Staff

Melissa Hammel
Gerald Ling
Jim Pignatiello
Pete Preston
Jen DiMeglio
Jennifer Eastwood

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Sports Update:

NYC nominated for 2012 Olympics

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) – New York City turned on its star power, flexed its financial muscle and touted its status as the "world's second home" to beat out San Francisco on Saturday and become the U.S. candidate for the 2012 Summer Olympics.

The winning organizers broke into cheers, tears and shouts as the close vote was announced and Frank Sinatra's "New York, New York" filled the room.

On a weighted scale of voting by the 123 members of the U.S. Olympic Committee board of directors, New York received 132 points out of possible total of 223.

New York organizers, assuring the USOC that they have the resources and security to run the world's biggest show, laid out an ambitious $5 billion plan that would place virtually all events within city limits.

"We won't bring the Olympics back to the United States on the cheap," Mayor Michael Bloomberg said, contrasting the city's plan with a much lower cost bid by San Francisco.

Miree's run lifts Pitt over No. 3 VTU

Pittsburgh 28, No. 3 Virginia Tech 21

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) – Pittsburgh did it again to Virginia Tech.

Brandon Miree ran 53 yards for a touchdown with 4:11 remaining, lifting Pittsburgh past No. 3 Virginia Tech 28-21 Saturday night as the Panthers rallied from a 21-7 deficit.

The Panthers (7-2, 4-0 Big East) dominated just as they did a year ago in beating the Hokies 38-7. Pitt got three touchdown passes from Rod Rutherford to freshman sensation Larry Fitzgerald and 275 rushing yards against the nation's best defense against the run (40.75 yards).

The Hokies (8-1, 5-1) were done in by their offense, which scored its touchdowns on first-half drives of 3 and 21 yards set up by special teams plays, and Lee Suggs' 59-yard touchdown run just after halftime.

Miami takes care of lowly Knights

No. 1 Miami 42, Rutgers 17

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) – For three quarters, Rutgers looked poised to pull off a major upset against Miami. Ken Dorsey made sure that didn't happen.

Dorsey completed a 20-yard touchdown pass to Andre Johnson early in the fourth quarter, then added a 1-yard TD pass to Kellen Winslow to help the top-ranked Hurricanes rally for a 42-17 victory Saturday.

Miami (8-0, 4-0 Big East) was a 39-point favorite against the Scarlet Knights (1-8, 0-5), but the 'Canes trailed 17-14 to start the final period.

Miami scored four straight touchdowns after that to win its 30th straight game.

The turning point could have been Rutgers' fake field-goal attempt late in the third quarter. With a 17-14 lead, Ryan Sands lined up for a 27-yard field goal on fourth-and-5. Holder Sean Carty tried to run for the first down, but was stopped for no gain.

BC Eagles upset Irish in South Bend

Boston College 14, No. 4 Notre Dame 7

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) – The perfect ride is over for Notre Dame.

Linebacker Josh Ott returned an interception 71 yards for a touchdown, and Boston College produced one of the biggest upsets of the season by defeating the fourth-ranked Fighting Irish 14-7 Saturday.

Notre Dame (8-1) entered the game confident it had returned to its glory years after a big win at Florida State last week. But the Irish gave the ball away all day, and the Eagles (5-3) gladly took advantage, scoring both touchdowns courtesy of first-half turnovers.

The bitter loss conjured memories of the 1993 season, when unbeaten Notre Dame defeated Florida State and became No. 1, then lost the next week to Boston College in the final game of the regular season.

The Fighting Irish were off to their best season since '93 before running into the Eagles, who ended a 23-game regular-season losing streak against Top 25 teams. It was BC's first win over a top 10 team since beating a No. 8 Notre Dame in 1994.

Compiled by The Associated Press.

Hens caged by Minutemen

GERALYN LYNCH/COLLEGIAN

WIDE RECEIVER JOE BRUCE STIFF-ARMS A BLUE HEN DEFENDER AFTER ONE OF HIS FOUR RECEPTIONS IN UMASS' FIFTH CONSECUTIVE ATLANTIC 10 VICTORY.

Kimener's INT secures victory

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A gander at the Massachusetts football media guide shows that the team has been more futile against Delaware than it has against any opponent that it has played in the last 50 years.

Apparently, the Minutemen have had other reading material at their disposal.

Linebacker Mark Kimener returned an interception 18 yards for a touchdown, as the Maroon and White got yet another solid performance from its defense and 120 yards rushing from R.J. Cobbs to defeat the Blue Hens 17-7.

UMass	17
Delaware	7

"This was just a really solid game by our football team," Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "I really felt that Delaware would have to play a perfect game to beat us because we were just ready to play. Delaware came to play and they played very hard. I thought we would run the ball better on them than we did. It was just a solid A-10 game and we were glad to be at home."

"The kids prepared as well as any game we've had," said K.C. Keeler, who is in his first season at the helm of the Blue Hens. "I thought we played with great emotion. I just thought we played a pretty good team that made more plays than we did. We do not have a lot of playmakers in the passing game and we have four freshmen starting in that spot. We had some opportunities, we didn't execute."

The story of the game was certainly the Minuteman defense, which has allowed just 53 points over its last 20 quarters. UMass intercepted Andy Hall three times and recovered a fumble, but no play was as big as Kimener's pick.

After Sidney Haugabrook inexplicably downed a fair catch at the four-yard line, Delaware ran a pair of plays that bought them no room to work with. On third and 9, Hall rolled to his right and tried to find a seam in the UMass zone. But Kimener leaped up and caught the ball at the 18, rumbling all the way to put the Minutemen ahead to stay, 17-7.

"I dropped back in coverage, kind of keyed off the quarterback, reading my man and he threw it there," Kimener said. "I just made a good break on it. I had that tunnel vision – I just saw the end zone. Gerard Washington told me later he threw a block for me."

"Sidney's our third punt returner," Keeler said. "I don't know what we'll do. We told him that the way the ball was blowing, the eight-yard line was fine. That was a mistake, but again, he plays a lot of snaps."

The Minutemen struggled to run the ball for most of the day, but on the first drive of the fourth quarter, Cobbs gave the Hens and the crowd something to remember him by. On second and 10, he slashed to his right into a swarm of Delaware defenders. But he bounced off a would be tackler, cut back across the field to his left and rumbled down the sideline 84 yards to the Blue Hen 6.

"I just saw the linebackers moving over to where we were running the ball," Cobbs said. "I bounced off a guy and turned my head quickly to see if there was anything and I just took it and tried to get outside. They swarm to the ball pretty well. As Coach was telling me all week, the cutbacks should be there."

Dan Mulhern, a candidate for the Buck Buchanan Award (given annually to the best defensive player in Division I-AA) and this week's A-10 Player of the Week, was thoroughly impressed by Cobbs' performance.

"Those are the most frustrating runs," he said. "He's going to be a very good running back in the A-10. He's quick and he's strong."

Jeff Krohn had a solid day under center for the Maroon and White, going 11-for-20 for 141 yards and a 36-yard touchdown strike to Adrian Zullo, but left the contest early for the second time in three games. He was yet again shaken up with a blow to the head, this time while throwing a block on an Adrian Zullo reverse.

"He knew where he was, but he was

Turn to DELAWARE, page 7

UMass holds total control

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It hasn't always been pretty, but the Massachusetts football team is exactly where it wanted to be with three games remaining on the 2002-03 schedule.

Controlling its own destiny.

Heading into Saturday's contest against Delaware, the Minutemen (7-2, 3-1 Atlantic 10) had the same number of losses (one) in the conference as Maine and William and Mary.

That three-way tie would have gone all down the list of breakers to a computer-generated power poll that would have named the A-10 champion and its automatic bid into the Division I-AA Tournament. As you can guess from the BCS's issues in I-A, you never want to have a computer poll determine a conference winner.

Now if the Maroon and White wins out, it won't have to leave anything up to the eggheads.

While the UMass defense was leading the team to a victory over Delaware on Saturday, which ran its winning streak to five games, it was getting some help from Villanova in the form of a 41-20 trouncing of William and Mary in Philadelphia.

The Tribe's second in-conference loss of the season drops it below Maine (8-1, 5-1 A-10), which enjoyed a bye this week, and the Maroon and White.

Villanova quarterback Brett Gordon completed 19-of-26 passes for 256 yards and four touchdowns while his No. 11 team took down the No. 12 William and Mary squad. Gordon was subsequently named A-10 Offensive Player of the Week. Freshman tailback Martin Gibson rushed for a career-high 109 yards on 12 carries.

Since the Minutemen beat up on the Black Bears, 20-10, on Oct. 12, they hold the tiebreaker and, presuming they sweep their last three opponents, will win the conference and likely get a home Division I-AA playoff game at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Assuming that UMass is going to win its final three games on paper is easy, as it will take on arguably the three worst teams in the conference – New Hampshire, Hofstra and Rhode Island.

UNH (2-6, 1-5 A-10) boasts one of the best players in the conference in running back Stephan Lewis, who is averaging almost 97 yards per game on the ground, along with 42 yards per game in the air this season. Lewis torched the Minutemen last year, in UNH's 35-24 win at McGuirk, rushing for 266 yards, catching four passes for 94 yards and scoring four touchdowns in the contest.

GERALYN LYNCH/COLLEGIAN

TWO DELAWARE DEFENDERS ATTEMPT TO BRING REDSHIRT FRESHMAN R.J. COBBS DOWN TO HIS KNEES IN THE 17-7 MINUTEMAN VICTORY SATURDAY. COBBS RAN FOR 120 YARDS ON 17 CARRIES AGAINST UD, INCLUDING AN 84-YARD DASH IN THE FOURTH QUARTER.

Hofstra (3-6, 2-5 A-10) is rebuilding after a 2001 season that saw the Pride win a piece of the A-10 Championship. Hofstra did manage to give Maine a scare (24-17) two weeks ago, its only A-10 wins have come at the hands of UNH and URI.

Rhode Island (3-6, 1-5 A-10) has had as bad a 2002 as any other team in the conference. The Rams' lone A-10 win came in a 17-14 nailbiter over Richmond.

Those three teams are a combined 9-18 (4-15 A-10) and should be a troika of walkovers, but the likelihood of a young team not showing up in at least one of these games is rather strong. For the Maroon and White to get that automatic bid into the postseason, it must beat up on the bottom-dwellers of the A-10.

If the Minutemen do fall, however, they could drop all the way out of the playoff picture as, in addition to Maine, the A-10 boasts three more teams with just a pair of losses in the conference – Northeastern, Villanova and William and Mary. UMass won't play William and Mary this year, while the team fell to Northeastern in its third game and got the 'W' over Villanova a few weeks back.

This four-way tie for second could easily result in a missed postseason for the Maroon and White.

But for now, the Minutemen holds their own destiny. Just win out, and you'll be able to call yourself a champion for life.

I Say, Mediocrity Arts page 5. Go out and vote Ed/Op page 4. Another big weekend Sports page 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY-FOUR ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.05.02

Seven unions to protest outside Trustee meeting

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members of the Graduate Employees Organization (GEO) will lead the other six University of Massachusetts unions in protest on Wednesday morning as University's Board of Trustees meet inside the Mullins Center at 9:15 a.m.

After the August decision made by acting Governor Jane Swift to veto pay increases promised to the unions, members across the state have gathered to try and revoke the decision. They have protested Swift's actions over the course of the fall semester, as well as petitioned for a special session within the Senate.

Members of GEO and the University Service Association called for a vote of no confidence with President William Bulger on October 17. They gave a variety of reasons for it, much of which came from his inability to fund their contracts. The statement also petitioned for Bulger's resignation, due to his lack of support.

With state elections taking place today, members of the Student Government Association (SGA) have stressed their support for the unions, agreeing with GEO that it is their right to fight for their union contracts to be funded.

"If that is what they choose to spend their energy on, I completely agree," SGA Speaker Dan Saunders said. "I agree with the message their sending and I'm confident that it will not be disruptive. I think it will really show how they have united on this campus."

Members of GEO announced their decision to picket the Mullins Center along with the help of all the UMass unions who were not funded. Members explained that they hope they will get a message out to Bulger that their contracts need to be funded in order for this University to function.

"This specific action has been in planning for about a month. This is the first time we have all (unions) really working together in this capacity," Vice President of GEO Lisa DePiano said.

"We want to send a clear message that President Bulger is working for us and advocating on our behalf," she said. "There is going to be a lot of undergraduate representation there too so they can see the larger context of who they are affecting."

Student Trustee Bill Powers said he feels students have every right to share their opinions. He said that members of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP) will also be on the agenda to speak at Wednesday's meeting.

"I think its good that they're using the opportunity to express their opinions," Powers said. "I

Turn to TRUSTEE, page 3

ELECTION 2002: Students encouraged to vote

By David Grant
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

As part of Election Day, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) will set up a polling station in Hampden Dining Common for the Southwest area of the University of Massachusetts.

"This is the only polling station on a college campus in the state of Massachusetts," said Kerry Mulcahy, director of SCERA. "We are lucky to have that privilege and [we] want to keep it."

The polling station, which is open between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. today, is available to both undergraduate and graduate students who are registered and from John Quincy Adams, John Adams, Coolidge, Kennedy, Washington, Mackimmie, Patterson, Prince, Thoreau and Crampton dormitories. Residential Directors and Assistant RD's who live in the area can also vote at the Southwest polling station.

The Southwest residential area has the highest population of University students. SCERA located their polling station there strategically to accommodate those students.

The trial program is in jeopardy this year. According to Mulcahy, if voter turnout at the Hampden site goes below a certain number, it could be the last year that UMass will afford its students a chance to vote on campus. The required number for the booth's survival is not available at this time.

The initiative began last month when the eight member staff of SCERA went door to door throughout campus to promote voter awareness. Staff members informed students on how to register, handed out absentee ballots and distributed information about the candidates.

Parts of Southwest are not included in the Hampden polling station area. Students from Melville, Moore, Pierpont, Cance, Emerson and James Dormitories are designated to attend the Bangs Community Center on Boltwood Walk in Amherst Center to vote.

Students in other areas of the campus all have designated polling places in other parts of Amherst, as well. Students from the Central Area vote in Wildwood School on Strong Street. Orchard Hill and Van Meter Dormitory students vote at the North Fire Station on E. Pleasant Street. The Northeast and Sylvan areas are designated to a polling station at Immanuel Lutheran Church on N. Pleasant Street.

Founded in the 1960's, SCERA is the research and advocacy arm of the Student Government Association, assisting the SGA in working for a campus environment that maximizes the University's resources to meet the self-identified needs of its students.

Mulcahy said that right now, the organization's major concern is the lack of participation by students registered to vote. The agency is seeking to educate students about the issues and mobilize them to the polls.

"Important decisions are going to be made on Nov. 5," Mulcahy said. "[They] will drastically change this university and we cannot afford to leave out the student voice in these decisions."

Tuesday's election will determine the state's governor for the next four years. Some of the other offices that are up for election are U.S. senator (six-year term), state representative and state senator (two-year terms each).

In addition, there are three ballot questions regarding the income tax (Question 1), bilingual education (Question 2) and campaign funding (Question 3).

With the confusion of how to read the ballots that many voters faced in Florida during the presidential election, the government has attempted to make it easier to prepare voters and better acquaint them before they enter the polling station.

Mulcahy said that by going to www.state.ma.us/sec, individuals would be able to view a sample ballot and questions they will be asked to answer. "This will make it easier and faster for people when they go to cast their vote," said Mulcahy.

If there are any questions, the SCERA office can be reached at 545-0355. Individuals not sure of where they can vote can also go to www.wheredoivote.ma.com to find out.

Introducing your gubernatorial candidates

Shannon O'Brien is the Democratic candidate for governor. She is currently the Treasurer of Massachusetts.

She became a state representative from 1987 to 1993, a state senator from 1993 to 1995, Vice President of External Affairs at Community Care Systems from 1995 to 1997, before becoming state treasurer.

As governor she says she will focus on reenergizing that state's economy and attracting good jobs to the state. She also wants to improve the public school system.

O'Brien will demand that state budgets are on time, honest, and fiscally responsible, that the cost of prescription drugs are reduced and that hospitals and nursing homes remain open. She said that she will focus on bringing accountability to state government, protecting the environment, and ensuring an adequate supply of affordable housing.

O'Brien is pro-choice on the issue of abortions, and supports civil rights for lesbians and gays. She is in favor of gun control measures, opposes the death penalty, and supports a minimum wage.

On the net: www.obrien gabriel..com

Mitt Romney is the Republican candidate for governor.

Before running for Governor, Romney worked as President and CEO of the 2002 Salt Lake Olympics for three years. While running the Olympics he erased a $379 million dollar operating deficit, organized 23,000 volunteers, and oversaw an unparalleled security mobilization for public safety and led one of the most successful Olympics in our country's history.

Before the Olympics, Romney ran unsuccessfully against Ted Kennedy for Senate.

Romney supports lower taxes and supports the voter rollback of taxes from 2000. He is also in favor of removing the present bilingual system and supports a one-year English immersion for children not fluent in the language.

He also supports the MCAS test as a requirement to graduate from high school, a woman's right to choose an abortion, and the death penalty, but only on certain crimes, such as terrorism, the assassination of public officials, and heinous first-degree murders. He does not support gay marriage, but believes that all citizens deserve equal rights.

On the net: www.boston.com.

Jill Stein is the Green Party candidate for governor.

Stein fully supports the Clean Elections Law. She is against the death penalty, and said that she looks for real solutions to prevent crime heal the community, reduce crime rates, and save lives.

She is against increasing the Mass Pike tolls to fund the big dig. As she sees it, east/west commuters should not be penalized for a north/south project. She thinks the best way to fund the Big Dig would be with a small increase to the gasoline tax.

Stein does not believe that the MCAS should be used as a requirement to graduate. She feels that the MCAS must be reformed to make it truly comprehensive. She believes that any needed revenue should be generated through progressive taxes.

She supports the woman's right to choose abortion and believes that medical coverage should extended to all women, so that choices are made with the women's best interest in mind.

Stein fully supports extending the definition of marriage to give full legal protection to committed domestic relationships, regardless of gender.

On the net: www.boston.com.

Carla Howell is the Libertarian candidate for government.

Howell sponsored Question 1 on the ballot to get the state income tax repealed. She is in favor of smaller government, and plans on dramatically cutting taxes, as well as state spending. Her plan would create $300,000 to $500,000 for citizens in Massachusetts.

She is against gun control because she feels gun freedom reduces crime and keeps people safe.

Her plan for education is to subtract funding, subtract employees, subtract regulations, restrictions and controls, and subtract authority and control and oversight. She plans on ending all state funding of education and ending state government's responsibility for education and all of the regulations and control that the state has over it.

Howell votes small government on every issue. She also plans to veto every state budget higher than $14 billion. She currently works as a management and strategy consultant.

On the net on: www.carlahowell.org.

Barbara Johnson is the Independent party candidate.

Johnson does not support the Clean Elections Law under the current circumstances. She is against the death penalty because she feels it is too easy to convict an innocent person. She feels that Pike tolls should not be used to fund the big dig.

On education, Johnson does not support MCAS as a graduation requirement. She also feels that lowering income tax in favor of more sales taxes will increase investment.

Johnson is pro-choice on abortion in cases of rape, incest and medical reasons. She is pro-life if an unmarried father wants custody of the child. She believes that the father's consent is needed before an abortion can take place.

She also fully supports the civil unions of gay and lesbian couples. On bilingual education, Johnson supports total immersion in kindergarten through grade two. She believes that it matters how long each child has been in the country for older children. In those cases, she wants a phased plan put in place.

On the net: www.boston.com.

-compiled by Hirak Shali

JAMES SCHAUFLER/COLLEGIAN

MICHAEL GARIJIAN SPEAKS YESTERDAY IN THE STUDENT UNION ABOUT E2M'S MODEL OF COMMUNITY-CONSCIOUS CAPITALISM. GARIJIAN'S GROUP CALLS E2M "the economic model of the second millennium."

E2M questions capitalism

Mark Ostroff
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Community-conscious Capitalism" was the topic of discussion last night at the Campus Center, when members of the non-profit organization E2M, spoke about their work on a new economic model for capitalism.

According to Michael Garijian, founder of E2M, the new economic model is designed to work with the current capitalist system, while promoting social consciousness and better wealth distribution.

"Together we have the capacity to make capitalism work for the common good," said Garijian.

E2M, or "the economic model of the second millennium," is an economic model designed to enable regional communities to use capitalism, creating economic power and wealth for themselves. Garijian's idea is that E2M-compliant companies would allow communities to invest in them. The funds that are generated by stocks would be distributed through a regional E2M council to the community where it could use the money for its needs and invest money in other companies, generating more funds.

Garijian believes as communities become wealthier through this process, they would be able to address socioeconomic and environmental problems.

"Capitalism is a tool that concentrates wealth, said Garijian, you don't hate the tool you just hate the use of that tool. Capitalism's ability to concentrate wealth is its greatest asset."

According to Garijian, the group designed the system to legally be implemented without the need to petition to any higher office, such as the state. All that is needed is organization on the part of the community.

"The only thing needed is your decision to begin to do it, just as we have," said Garijian. "If you want it, you can have it. There just has to be enough of you."

Garijian discussed the E2M model's design to be used beyond local communities. According to Garijian, if an E2M-compliant standard becomes well established, its system will have the potential to spread internationally.

"We hope to reinvent capitalism to create a sustainable university, valley, region, and beyond," he said.

Garijian, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, developed the concept of E2M in 1989. Originally an innovator and manufacturer, he holds nine worldwide patents. He started his group's website, E2M.org, on the first day of the new millennium. The group incorporated as a non-profit organization eight months later.

Other members of his group also spoke in the evening. Janet Bunce, a local businesswoman working for E2M, talked about how she considered this new practice to be a simple solution to solving different problems.

"There's so much need out there, so many great causes," she said. "Sometimes the simplest messages are the hardest ones to accept."

Mary Westerfelt, an activist and member of the E2M working group, elaborated further about how the group felt about solving socioeconomic problems with the model.

"Activists have a saying: 'The fighting is so hard, but the

Turn to CAPITALISM, page 3

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Monday Oct. 28, 2002

8:52 p.m.: Vandalism was reported at Cashin Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave. Amherst Fire Department (AFD) and Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) responded and reported that the alarm was caused by smoke detectors activated by overheated dryers.

9:55 p.m.: Student Security reported that there was a trash can smoking outside of McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane. EHS reported that a small fire was extinguished.

10:58 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Campus Center Hotel on Campus Center Way. AFD transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Tuesday Oct. 29, 2002

12:54 p.m.: Larceny of a bicycle was reported out of Stockbridge Hall. It was a red and silver Roadmaster Mt Storm.

3:12 p.m.: A caller reported that he heard students say that they were going to attempt to catch the geese at the pond and kill one. The caller also said that they had and that they had done this before, and that about 20 students were reported heading toward the area. An officer was dispatched to the scene and reported that the geese at the pond were healthy.

3:45 p.m.: The driver side window of a vehicle in Lot 49 near the Solar House on Windmill Lane was reported smashed. Nothing appeared to be taken from the vehicle.

3:23 p.m.: APD reported that they have a person on a cell phone that was on the way to University Health Services with her friend. The person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

5:33 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported at the Mullins Center on Commonwealth Avenue. An ambulance was dispatched and transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

9:45 p.m.: A person reported that a driver's side window was forced and opened on a Jeep in Lot 12 on Forestry Way. A CD player and a tool set were stolen.

10:56 p.m.: A caller in Pierpont Dormitory on Tearing Street called to report a past assault and battery on his friend. The caller was advised to have the victim contact a detective regarding the nature of the event. The victim then immediately called to speak to the detective. The incident is under investigation.

Wednesday Oct. 30, 2002

1:27 a.m.: A caller in McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane reported receiving almost 50 calls in the past two nights. The caller reported that there is breathing on the other end of the phone, but that no one says anything.

2:18 p.m.: Two or three large cereal bins were reported being taken from Berkshire Dormitory on Southwest Circle.

Thursday Oct. 31, 2002

9:01 a.m.: Damage was reported to the soft top of a Jeep in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

9:39 a.m.: UMass Transit Services requested that a person on top of the bus stop in the Haigis Mall on Presidents Drive wearing a mask be removed. When police arrived, the person had left the area.

10:16 a.m.: A parking control officer reported that he was with a person who had his stereo stolen and car damaged in Lot 13 on Olympia Drive.

11:24 a.m.: A PVTA bus driver called in to report an accident between the bus and another vehicle on Presidents Drive.

4:40 a.m.: A traffic stop on Massachusetts Avenue led to the arrest of Daniel M. Ratcliffe, 25, of 141 St. in Athol, Mass. Ratcliffe was charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended registration and operating a motor vehicle with no inspection sticker.

4:48 p.m.: A caller reported that he found his vehicle in Lot 49 on Orchard Hill Drive unlocked and his CD player missing.

7:29 p.m.: A caller reported an individual selling candy for a church. All floors were checked; the seller appeared to have left the area.

9:33 p.m.: An officer found three suspicious people in Lot 13 on Olympia Drive. The officer trespassed the people and checked the lot for damage to vehicles. Nothing was reported.

10:28 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Patterson Dormitory on Sunset Ave. AFD was dispatched to the scene and transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

10:40 p.m.: A receptionist reported that an RA just broke up a fight in the elevator lobby. The responding officer reported that the fight was still on-going and that there is a large group in front of the building. The victim did not want to press charges.

11:12 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Baker Dormitory on Clark Hill Road. AFD transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

11:33 p.m.: A caller reported that a pumpkin was thrown off the seventh floor balcony of Dickinson Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive and went through her windshield. The officer dispatched reported that the individuals in the room in question were throwing bottles and things off the balcony, but no pumpkins.

Friday Nov. 1, 2002

1:10 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Thoreau Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue. One person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by AFD.

Top associate of bin Laden killed in U.S. missile strike

By John J. Lumpkin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – U.S. forces killed a top associate of Osama bin Laden in Yemen in a missile strike, expanding the war on terror with America's first overt attack on suspected al-Qaida operatives outside of Afghanistan, a U.S. official said Monday.

Qaed Salim Sinan al-Harethi was one of several al-Qaida members traveling in car in northwest Yemen when a Hellfire missile struck it Sunday, killing him and five others. The official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the attack was believed to have been conducted by a CIA aircraft, possibly a missile-carrying Predator drone.

The official Yemeni news agency, local tribesmen and the U.S. official confirmed the strike killed al-Harethi. Witnesses said they saw an aircraft, possibly a helicopter, in the area. Helitrires can also be launched by attack helicopters.

The others killed were believed to be low-level operatives. The attack occurred in the northern province of Marib, about 100 miles east of Yemen's capital of San'a, where al-Qaida is considered active.

U.S. counterterrorism officials have said al-Harethi, also known as Abu Ali, was al-Qaida's chief operative in Yemen and a top target of U.S. anti-terrorism efforts. An associate of bin Laden since the early 1990s in Sudan, al-Harethi is a suspect in the bombing of the destroyer USS Cole in Aden, Yemen, on Oct. 12, 2000.

The CIA declined comment. On Monday, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld told a Pentagon press conference, "It would be a very good thing if he were out of business."

A Yemeni official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said: "Authorities have been monitoring this particular car for a while and we believe those men belonged to the al-Qaida terror network."

Many al-Qaida operatives fleeing the U.S.-led war on Afghanistan have joined comrades in Yemen. After the United States detected growth in al-Qaida presence there this spring, hundreds of U.S. troops deployed to Djibouti, the tiny African nation facing Yemen across the Gulf of Aden, officials said. The Marine amphibious assault ship Nassau recently replaced the USS Belleau Wood in the waters between the two nations.

Inside Yemen, U.S.-trained Yemeni troops deployed to suspected al-Qaida hotbeds in August.

Besides al-Harethi, at least one more Yemeni al-Qaida operative linked to the Cole attack, Muhammad Hamdi al-Ahdal, is thought to be in Yemen, U.S. officials say. In the Cole attack, two suicide bombers slammed an explosives-laden boat into the hull of the ship, killing 17 U.S. sailors and disabling the vessel.

Also believed to be in Yemen are Shaykh Dahwan and Suwaid, described as al-Qaida operatives who plan and provide support to terror operations, and an al-Qaida communications expert known as Miqdad, said a U.S. defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Many al-Qaida followers in Yemen, bin Laden's ancestral homeland, are led by Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, bin Laden's Persian Gulf operations chief, U.S. counter-terrorism officials said.

U.S. intelligence believes Yemeni-based terrorists linked to al-Qaida carried out the Oct. 6 attack on a French oil tanker, the Limburg. A small boat apparently crashed into the ship and exploded, blowing a hole in its hull and spilling 90,000 barrels of oil into the Gulf of Aden. One crewman was killed.

Since the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on the United States, the CIA has used remotely operated Predator drone aircraft to make pinpoint strikes on al-Qaida leaders and do reconnaissance.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It came the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

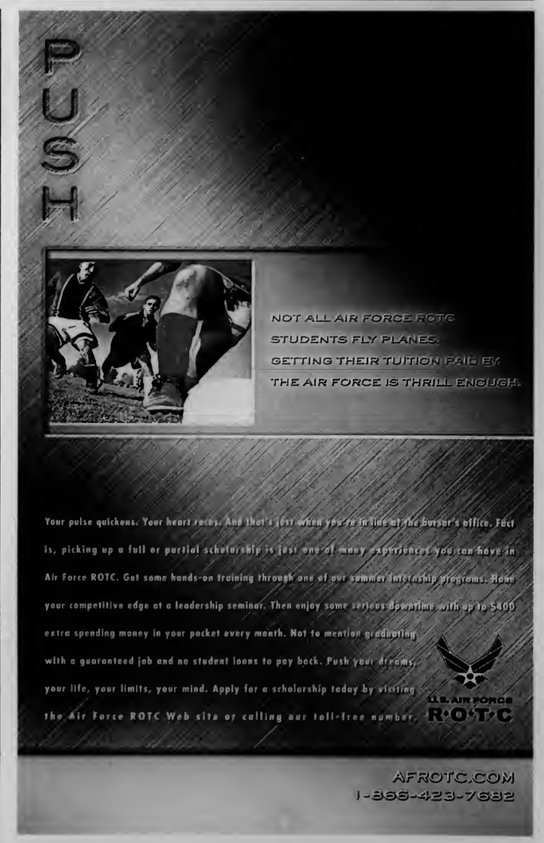
American Red Cross

You can help a premature baby through its first fragile days of life, support a cancer patient during chemotherapy or help put an accident victim back on the road to recovery. How? By giving blood. Just one pint of your blood and one hour of your time can make a miracle happen.

PLEASE DONATE BLOOD.

TODAY!
10:30AM – 4:30PM
Campus Center Room 174

Each donor will receive a 15-minute AT&T prepaid phone card as a thank you for donating.



*Sponsored by BioSci

To donate blood:
- You must weigh 110 pounds
- Be in good general health
- Have not donated in the past 56 days

"Attention all UMass blood donors who gave blood on September 4th & September 9th: You are now eligible to donate again.

"Share the wealth of good health. Give Blood Today. It's a heartwarming experience."

If you have any questions, please call 1-800-462-2229, or visit our website @ www.newenglandblood.org

Fill-A-Bus event to collect food, clothing

By Matt Casey
Collegian Correspondent

The Fill-A-Bus event to benefit the Amherst Survival Center kicked off yesterday outside the Student Union.

Sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega and the Office of Community Service Learning at the Commonwealth College, it centers on getting students and faculty of the University of Massachusetts to donate food and clothing to the Center, which acts as a soup kitchen, homeless shelter, and free store.

The drive runs from Monday through Thursday this week. Donations can be made in the old yellow bus parked outside the Student Union.

"They [students] pass by here everyday," Stephanie Horhota, vice president of Alpha Phi Omega Service said.

An Alpha Phi Omega member will be on hand to accept the donations and monitor activity around the bus.

Students and faculty can donate a large array of items to the Fill-A-Bus event. "We get everything from dishes to toys," Horhota said.

The focus, however is simple. Food donations and clothing are the main purpose of the event, according to Katie Green, an Alpha Phi Omega member and on-site volunteer. Perishable foods will not be accepted.

"As much as people like to steal bananas from the dining commons and bring them here... We can't really take those," Patrick Arsenault, an Alpha Phi Omega member, said.

In recent years, students and faculty have donated more than 500 pounds of food alone. Alpha Phi Omega and the UMass Office of Community Service Learning hope to top that number this year.

Organizers of the event have added a new feature this year. Donations made by Greek Life and residence life participants will be separated. At the end of each day, volunteers will count the donations and declare one of the two parties the winner. Volunteers and organizers hope that the spirit of competition will increase donations.

On Friday, after the event ends, the bus will be driven to the Amherst Survival Center and unloaded by Alpha Phi Omega volunteers. Donations will be used to feed, clothe and help the needy in the area.

The Amherst Survival Center provides food and clothing for the needy at no cost to them. It also provides hot meals at noon on weekdays and emergency boxes of food for families in need. Other services offered there include information, counseling and assistance to families and individuals who need it.

Alpha Phi Omega and the UMass Office of Community Service Learning split the responsibility for the event, with the Office of Community Service doing the paperwork and Alpha Phi Omega manning the operation, collecting the donations, and unloading the bus.

"They ordered the bus and [are doing] more of the administrative [side]," Said Horhota. "We're doing more of the physical."

The event is timed to end shortly before Thanksgiving and the holiday season. It coincides with Alpha Phi Omega's National Service Week, which is usually planned for the first or second week of November. This is done purposely to aid families and individuals at the time of year when the financial situation can be most difficult.

"I think its great come holiday season," said Horhota.

Two killed in latest suicide bombing

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM (AP) – A Palestinian suicide attacker blew himself up Monday while grappling with an Israeli security guard at a shopping mall in a Tel Aviv suburb, killing the guard and another civilian and wounding 12 other people, including two infants.

The bombing – the 81st by Palestinian militants in two years – marked a first test for Israel's new defense minister, Shaul Mofaz, who was sworn in Monday. Mofaz, known for his hawkish views, advocates the expulsion of Yasser Arafat and tough military action against the Palestinians.

There was no immediate indication of any Israeli retaliation, but it has struck back militarily for previous suicide bombings.

Against the backdrop of violence, Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's government fended off three no-confidence votes. Sharon rejected calls for early elections and was searching for partners to stabilize his coalition. Sharon lost his majority last week when the moderate Labor Party quit. In the Monday evening bombing, the assailant, identified as Nabil Sawalha, 20, from the Balata refugee camp next to the West Bank city of Nablus, blew himself up in a shopping mall in Kfar Saba, a town northeast of Tel Aviv just across from the West Bank Palestinian town of Qalqilya.

Palestinian militants linked to Arafat's Fatah movement in Nablus claimed responsibility for the attack, contradicting an earlier report ascribing the blast to Islamic Jihad.

Police said one of the Israeli dead was a security guard who struggled with the bomber, stopping him from entering a crowded appliance store and thereby averting more casualties. The bomber blew himself up as he wrestled with the guard, police said.

"The alertness of the security force here prevented the terrorist from entering the shop, which would have caused a great disaster," national police chief Shlomo Aharonishki told Israel TV.

The other victim's body was so badly mutilated that officials were unable to immediately determine the gender or identity.

Lorin Michael, 17, was helping care for two children in an apartment across the street when she heard the blast. As their mother scooped up the tots and hustled them inside, Michael rushed onto the balcony.

"I saw dust and smoke and pieces of bodies," Michael said. "Everything was black."

A row of refrigerators and white washing machines lay tipped over inside the store. Bits of the shredded roof of a shopfront walkway overhang littered the sidewalk.

David Baker, an official in Sharon's office, said the attack was "proof that Palestinian terror knows no limits, specializes in cruelty and specifically targets the innocent."

In Washington, State Department Spokesman Richard Boucher reminded Americans of travel notices advising caution in the Middle East in the wake of the latest bombing.

"We obviously condemn these kinds of activities in the strongest possible terms," Boucher said.

Earlier Monday, two Palestinians were killed, one of them a militant from the Hamas movement on Israel's wanted list, when their car exploded and burst into flames in the middle of a Nablus street.

Palestinians blamed the blast on Israel, which has carried out dozens of killings of suspected militants. It appeared the Suzuki car was booby-trapped and the bomb was detonated by remote control, said Moeen Sakkaran, chief of Palestinian intelligence in Nablus. The Israeli military declined to comment.

A WOMAN IS RUSHED FROM THE SCENE FOR TREATMENT AFTER A PALESTINIAN SUICIDE BOMBER BLEW HIMSELF UP AT A SHOPPING MALL IN THE TOWN OF KFAR SAJA YESTERDAY. THE ATTACKER KILLED TWO ISRAELI CIVILIANS AND WOUNDED 12.

Hamad Sadder, a member of the Hamas military wing who was being sought by Israel, was killed. Palestinians said. They said his nephew carried out a suicide attack last week in a West Bank settlement that killed three Israeli soldiers. The second man killed wasn't immediately identified.

In Israel's parliament, Sharon's weakened government withstood three no-confidence votes brought by opposition parties seeking to force new elections.

Sharon said he opposed early elections, but he also insisted he would not change government policies to accommodate a far-right party whose support he needs to restore his majority.

"Taking the nation to immediate elections would be irresponsible," Sharon told legislators from his right-wing Likud party. "I hope everyone acts responsibly and doesn't try to make it difficult for a stable government to function."

That indicated he would not accept a demand by Benjamin Netanyahu, the former prime minister. Sharon has offered Netanyahu the post of foreign minister in the hope it would firm up his government. But Netanyahu said he would accept only on condition that Sharon agreed to elections in the coming months.

However, Sharon did not announce any decision about Netanyahu.

After the moderate Labor Party quit the coalition last week, Sharon has the support of only 55 of the 120 legislators.

Sharon may have a temporary safety net from a far-right grouping whose seven lawmakers seem ready to prop up the government long enough to pass the 2003 state budget in coming weeks, but after that may favor forcing early elections.

■ trustee

continued from page 1

know that members of the MSP are on the agenda to speak to the Board of Trustee's. I think having the Board of Trustee's here is a great opportunity to show them where the budget cuts have hit us on our campus."

United Auto Workers Local 2322 President James Shaw said that they are hoping to walk away from Wednesday's protest with a promise of some form of conversation with Bulger.

"I'd like to walk away with a promise of some form of conversation, a meeting," Shaw said. "The President needs to get on our side if he wants to pull this campus together."

Shaw said that he is alarmed by Bulger's inability to get involved in the advocacy of the UMass campuses. He believes that protesting opens the possibility of the Board of Trustees commenting on the funding of the union contracts. Up until now, they have been silent on the issue.

"We've been asking Bulger to meet with us and he has refused to do so, which is a little alarming," Shaw said. "We're counting on him as a political figure who used to be the President of the Massachusetts State Senate to help and use his contacts and to get the legislature to come back and override Governor Swifts veto. As far as the board, they have been almost silent."

Saunders said that tomorrow's state election could directly affect the future of the University.

"The first question about the income taxes, if passed will mean that we're in deep trouble," Saunders said. "So [I'm] hoping the first one will fail because the University would lose a lot of money if passed."

Members of the SGA and UAW Local 2322 expressed confidence in the support of higher education and union contract funding presented by gubernatorial candidate Shannon O'Brien.

"Shannon O'Brien has been in support of the union contracts and moving the Universities budget from a one year budget to a four year budget plan which would be a tremendous help," Saunders said. "But I really can't say who will be best because I don't know Mitt Romney's stance either. It would not be fair to say who would be best."

■ capitalism

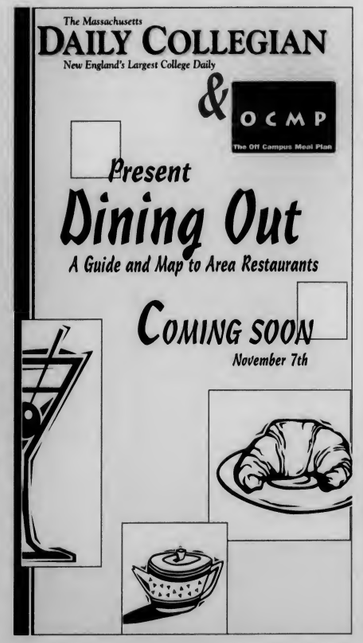
continued from page 1

stakes are all low.' The problem is that all these issues are interconnected," she said. "But things can happen if we embrace a system that allows us to make decisions as a community."

UMass student, David Bisson, a junior Economics major and the E2M campus coordinator, spoke about organizing the University to hopefully comply with E2M's mission.



According to Bisson, E2M's solution would make a good solution to unifying people with different approaches capitalism's problems.

"A lot of people are battling over the best solutions," he said. "I see E2M as a way to bring together people on different sides of the spectrum."

email us at the dailycollegian @yahoo.com

www.dailycollegian.com

Can GOD

MAKE A ROCK
~ SO LARGE ~
THAT HE HIMSELF
CANNOT LIFT IT ?

What would a professor say?
Why not ask one...

Meet a panel of UMass professors who enjoy engaging with thoughtful skeptics and think that Christianity still makes sense in the real world...

...and they will answer questions about what the Bible has to say about gender and sexuality, stem-cell research, war and peace, science,
evil, other religions, heaven, hell,
what to do about obnoxious roommates
and
really, really big rocks.

Wednesday Nov. 6th 3:00pm

Campus Center 163

www.umass.edu/christian/faithandreason

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM WRITING FOR THOSE WHO LIVE BY THE RULES, NOT BY THE RULEBOOK ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Make it count
Go out and vote

With a close gubernatorial race, and three statewide ballot questions, Massachusetts voters have been subject to a barrage of campaigns, advertisements, opinion pieces, rallies and mailings in every direction. Information has been placed on the table.

Sifting through it all is the challenge.

But well worth the time. This year's contest has been especially involved, and both contested from the start. Before the primary elections on Sept. 17 as many as six Democrats were vying for the party nomination.

When the field narrowed to four – Robert Reich, Thomas Birmingham, Shannon O'Brien and Warren Tolman – the race continued to attract attention.

Now, after all the primary debates and rhetoric of the summer, O'Brien and Republican Mitt Romney have engaged in a head to head, a $25 million campaign.

Breaking 1998's record of $19 million, the gubernatorial candidates are engaged in a strong and perhaps even excessive advertising campaign.

In a Boston Globe article, Secretary of State William Galvin described the amount of money spent as "obscene." Galvin also predicted that the total expenditure would top $50 million before polls close tonight at 8 p.m.

Obscene or not, the candidates have been fairly matched in the polls, standing within one half of one percent of each other.

But the governor's chair has not been the only cause for attention.

The ballot features three statewide ballot questions that have been the subject of press and advertisements as well.

On the electoral chopping block this voting season is the state income tax, bilingual education and Clean Elections.

Question 1, a libertarian movement to end the state income tax, asks voters if they want to continue with the tax. For and against, this particular question has sparked interest. For, the Libertarian party and supporters, tout new jobs that a tax repeal will create. Against, teachers, state aid providers and state employees, say that the funding and salary elimination that would result from a majority of yes votes would do more damage than good.

Question 2, the future of bilingual education will be decided for certain today when voters may choose to put in place an immersion program that would virtually eliminate the use of native language education in classrooms.

Or, if the majority of no votes come in, a revised bilingual program will go into use statewide in September.

Question 3 will decide the fate of a limping Clean Elections system, voted on with a ballot question in 1998. The system, designed to provide funds for statewide candidates, has been hampered by a lack of funding and legislative support.

Voting yes will show continued support for this program, which is designed to provide eligible candidates with the money necessary to mount campaigns. With growing campaign costs, epitomized by the Romney/O'Brien race, this question provides third party candidates and candidates outside the established political realm an opportunity to run.

Whatever you choose, however you vote, the importance is that a ballot is placed from as many eligible voters as possible.

So excuses get out and vote.

Information from Boston.com was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian Editorial Board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Send submissions to editorial@dailycollegian.com

Social positionality

ALLISON LESHEFSKY

Racial holocaust isn't over yet

COURTNEY CHARLES

If you thought Barbie was a toy of the past, then you're very wrong. Now there's Diva Barbie 2002.

Two of my roommates happened to catch a glimpse of the Diva in this month's issue of Marie Claire. A frightening argument ensued over the race of the Diva. One of my roommates swore she was not white, while the other insisted to tears that she was.

Me? I don't see why it should have to matter. I don't see why skin color should have to matter at all. Skin color is only that, the shade of the top layer that binds the body together. We all have the same chemical and biological components that make us human.

Underneath our skin, we're all the same people, with the same hopes and dreams. We all want to live the best possible life we can.

So why do stereotypes persist? Do people really know so little about the world around them that they must view other groups in fear and suspicion?

Last week, I saw a very well-dressed young man in need of help carrying refreshments to the same speech I was attending. He was black, and well, I'm not. I offered to help him, and as we walked across campus with our groceries I noticed people giving us strange looks. It could have been my imagination, but I swear it wasn't.

My roommate's boyfriend is really hot and also really Indian. My roommate looks like a blond cherub. When they go out together people stare at them. They are so in love that it shouldn't have to matter what ethnicity they are. They look beautiful together. Why can't people see this? How can they be so blind?

When you come to UMass, it first seems like this huge ocean of diversity compared to high school. There are members of many different races and people from all social classes and different backgrounds. And guess what? All these groups are here for the same thing: an education.

But somehow, the University seems divided. People choose not to even acknowledge the unique and special differences of those around them. They choose instead to ignore them, and allow the gap to widen.

People choose not to celebrate differences and educate themselves, but choose to tiptoe around what they have no experience with or understanding of.

People are so busy trying to be politically correct that they end up ignoring the unique and beautiful qualities of every group.

Why should they do this?

Why should people voluntarily segregate themselves from other races and cultures?

Why do people persist in their ignorance even today and deny the existence of racism and other discrimination altogether?

In case some people haven't noticed, this is an institution of learning. People come here as a stepping-stone to the big bad real world and are brought together here by the same desire to learn about the world around them.

What people should also be doing is learning about each other. After all, most of what a person learns in college consists of learning outside the classroom.

From the cult preaching of popular culture, people think they have been educated about people with different heritages.

People lose sight of the value of personal experience. They lose sight of the gift of thinking for themselves. Instead, many choose to swallow what is handed to them in a neatly pre-packaged helping of pseudo-life. Why would they ever want to do this? Why would anyone trade real living for a regurgitated mess?

The only lesson people gain from popular media is the art of pre-judging.

Only it's not an art.

It's a distorted message that teaches people to think falsely that they have the power to judge people they know nothing about based on someone else's biased judgment call.

People have no right to judge anyone but themselves.

People have no right to judge someone based on how they look or present themselves.

They have no right to judge someone based on their taste in music or expression.

People think that they are experts on diversity because they saw the movie Roots or because they studied the Civil War in high school. Guess what people: get over it and open your eyes. Just because slavery is illegal in the United States doesn't mean that the racial Holocaust is over.

Courtney Charles is a Collegian Columnist

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

My generation has often been accused of apathy toward social and political issues, which accounts for the small number of voter turnout on election days. It is unsurprising that students and young adults vote in such low numbers: after all our generation and the issues we are concerned about are too often ignored. However the only reason politicians are ignoring our voice is because we don't vote.

Our generation is not apathetic. Students across the country are volunteering in record numbers, 70 percent of 18-24 year olds nationwide volunteer locally and we also make up 85 percent of the military. Right here on UMass we have groups run by students like MassPIRG, ALANA, SCERA and the SGA that fight for students' interests everyday. There are so many students at UMass and we have a tendency to focus on our differences, ignoring the fact that we have universal causes for concern. What student at UMass isn't concerned about the lack of funding for state universities in Massachusetts? What student at UMass isn't concerned about money's influence in today's politics? What student at UMass wants to see our forests and parks destroyed by giant corporations? What student wants to be known as a part of the generation that didn't care? I have faith in the fact that here at UMass we do care. Everyone knows how students feel, politicians see the anti-war rallies and river clean ups and they get scared. They know we have the power to change everything. Which makes me wonder whether or not we, the students know what power we posses? We live in a democracy that is unfortunately controlled by old people. It's simple they vote and we don't.

This Tuesday November 5 lets all get out and vote. Even if you think nothing affects you on this year's ballot (which isn't true) vote anyways. If we continue to ignore the political process then we will continue to be ignored. If there is a better voting turnout for 18-24 year olds then politicians will have to pay attention to what we are concerned about. Stein, O'Brien, Romney, vote for who ever you want, as long as you, we, vote.

Mark Koch
UMass student

To the Editor:

Question 2 proposes the elimination of bilingual education through the use of transition techniques, where students are taught in their native languages. As an immigrant who attended Massachusetts public schools from grades 6 to 11, I am in favor of Question 2 and believe that the current program is a great waste of state resources.

There are many inefficient aspects of today's bilingual education. The first, and most obvious, is that by teaching in the students' native language, they are in no way improving their proficiency in English. If students are to learn all the mathematical and scientific terms in their native languages, they will lag behind when they actually enroll in mainstream classes. Secondly, it is impossible to attend to the needs of every immigrant. Most bilingual programs are offered only in Spanish or Portuguese. Though the majority of the immigrants is Hispanic and Brazilian, as is the case in the town of Framingham where I grew up, there are still thousands of Asian, European and African immigrants who speak entirely different idioms and who do not receive any "special treatment" from public schools. These students are automatically enrolled in ESL classes and forced to quickly learn enough English to communicate with others.

Instead of a "smooth transition" into American culture, the bilingual program allows immigrants to remain stuck in their own culture. If a Brazilian immigrant can attend classes, speak to friends, attend church, watch TV, go to stores and do EVERYTHING in Portuguese, what incentive does he or she have to learn the English language? None. This is exactly what happens in Massachusetts public schools. Students ostracize themselves and simply refuse to learn English as well as respect and embrace the differences of the American culture. The reason I and other immigrants attend college today is because we chose to challenge ourselves. I feel that the bilingual program does not challenge or encourage students to learn and to grow as individuals.

State representative Ellen Story claims that "There is no way that you can learn in one year enough to take all your other classes in it [English]." Is Ellen Story an immigrant? Has she ever taken ESL classes? I believe not. After taking ESL classes for one year, I enrolled in all mainstream classes in the 7th grade and finished middle school with nearly straight A's and three awards of achievement. Learning a second language was not an easy task. It was a challenge, and a price to pay in order to take advantage of the benefits of living in the United States. What I did unknowingly was to reject the bilingual program that was offered to me and create my own immersion curriculum. The same idea is proposed by Question 2, and I feel that it is the most efficient way to teach immigrants.

Like Isabel Espinal, who led the rally against Question 2 last week, I believe that it is important for immigrants to retain their culture, values, and language. However, my opinion is that it is not the responsibility of the government. It is up to immigrants themselves to join hands and work together to balance the perpetuation of their own beliefs with integration into mainstream America.

Juliana Leal
UMass student

To the Editor:

In the 1998 referendum question, two-thirds of Mass. voters supported clean elections, which are taxpayer-funded allocations for candidates who agree to contribution and spending limits. Rather than take private money from wealthy donors, these clean candidates can afford to run by just collecting a few hundred donations of $5. With Question 3, we must show the government we still care about this program that accounts for 0.1 % of the state budget (not a lot of money).

Why should we care? We voters are sick and tired of hearing about campaign contributions from special interests getting them special favors, like Enron getting away with screwing its workers out of retirement savings or a Mass. coal power plant owned by PG&E getting exemption from environmental regulations by the Jane not-so-Swift administration after cutting a large campaign check.

Public funding rather than reliance on private donations will reduce this indebtedness to special interests. Maine and Arizona have already started clean elections with promising results – lower candidate spending and higher competition with more candidates running than in the past. Let's do the same in Massachusetts!

Matthew Saradjian
Graduate Student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.05.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

International success, STOMP, reaches UMass

STOMP booms, slides and bangs into the Fine Arts Center for two sold-out upcoming performances. For all those ticket holders out there, here is a little overview of what to expect.

STOMP, according to an interview with co-creator Steve McNicholas posted on the group's web site, is a piece of theatre created by musicians.

"It doesn't have a narrative, and it doesn't have dialogue, and it doesn't have melody particularly, but it is totally rhythmically based," McNicholas said. "Everything that happens in the show has totally to do with rhythm. The prime directive for all the performances is: rhythm comes first. Movement comes second, and we try to make that mixture more interesting and more palatable by adding levels of comedy to it."

STOMP is a movement of bodies, objects and sounds – even abstract ideas. But what makes it so appealing is that the cast uses everyday objects, but in non-traditional ways. There is no speech, no dialogue, not even a plot. STOMP is a type of performance art. As listed on the company's web site, the production uses interesting everyday objects to make rhythms. Including things like brooms, lids, bins, poles, sand, blocks of chalk, bathroom sealant, sink plugs, power bars, drumsticks, 450 liters of water, bananas, ball point pens and boxes of matches.

STOMP originated on the streets of Brighton, England. McNicholas and Luke Cresswell created STOMP with a group of street performers commonly known as "buskers" trying to grab people's attention. Busking is an old custom in the United Kingdom, dating back to booth theatres erected at village fairs in the Middle Ages. and McNicholas and Cresswell updated this historical custom to begin a modern symbiotic connection between movement and music.

This popular production commences tonight and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center.

- Christine Papacchini

STOMP, WITH ITS UNIQUE RYTHMIC SOUNDS AND NON-TRADITIONAL USES OF EVERYDAY OBJECTS, HITS THE FINE ARTS CENTER TONIGHT

SR-71's latest release sends positive self reflective messages

SR-71
Tomorrow
RCA Records

Heavy, yet melodic, it is a CD that demands attention with its pounding sound and heartfelt lyrics; the new album by Baltimore/Washington natives SR-71 is a musical experience for all of the emotions. Engaging the same emotionally rich hardcore style that made their previous CD, Now You See Inside, powerfully original, SR-71 has released Tomorrow.

"Lots of nights, lots of cities, lots of girls," said guitarist Mark Beauchemin in a press release describing both the new CD and the "Now You See Inside" tour. "It's all there you just have to read between the lines."

With songs like "My World" and "Hello Hello," SR-71 delves into the complexities of young romance. On the other end of the emotional continuum, there are songs like "They All Fall Down," where the band exposes the insecurities that come with being involved with others.

While this CD tackles both the lightest and darkest sides of its topics, it also urges listeners to live with abandon and have fun. Beauchemin phrases it this way: "It's about the inevitability of tomorrow. If you do nothing to change my tomorrow, then I'm gonna be just as pissed and miserable as I feel today."

Though many of the songs come across as being filled with self-pity and useless wallowing, the message is made in clear punctuations like the song, "The Best Is Yet To Come:"

You see yourself being so small
Running into every brick wall – It's not as far as you can go – The road is twisting/ Turning – A life is living/Learning – There's so much more for you to know... Above the flood of emotion – It's all about forward motion.

- Cameron J. Woods

Grade C+

Abandon more than just a typical thriller
Latest Holmes' production speaks of college stresses

By Kathleen Nestor
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

ABANDON
Directed By Stephen Gaghan
Starring Katie Holmes, Benjamin Bratt and Charlie Hunnam
Playing at Cinemark 10 in Hadley

Most would rather have a root canal than endure another teen slasher/thriller movie, and just by watching the movie trailer, one might think Abandon is just that. However, this film turned out to be an intelligent, artistic and heavily symbolic picture that didn't just make you jump, it made you think.

The plot centers on the artistic college phenom Catherine Burke (Katie Holmes), who's trying to play the impossible balancing act of keeping up her grades during finals, completing her senior thesis and competing for a highly coveted job at a banking firm. As if her life isn't filled with enough drama, Katie's old boyfriend, Embry (Heath Ledger look-a-like Charlie Hunnam), went MIA two years previous and now Detective Wade Chandler (Benjamin Bratt) is assigned to the case to determine if there was any foul play involved in his disappearance. That's the basic premise of Abandon, and if more were told, it would ruin the movie.

Most intriguing is Catherine's character, and Holmes' expert portrayal of a smart, beautiful and yet troubled student – a role she has had much practice in (i.e. "Dawson's Creek," Disturbing Behavior and Teaching Mrs. Tingle). What made this film different was the portrayal of the darker side of competition with its callus and vindictive streaks – think cutthroat PreMed, majors. Holmes was careful not to put on her "I didn't study at all - I'm just lucky" cavalier attitude that is characteristic of the jovial Joey Potter she plays on "Dawson's." Instead, she showed Catherine's cold, calculating personality that allowed her to achieve her high goals. If anything, this film accurately depicts the sleepless nights spent studying, social sacrifices and determined commitment that is required to succeed in college and in life, but also proves that students who do well can party just like the rest of them.

The other underlying theme of Catherine's character is in her curse of being beautiful and how this always seems to eventually hurt her in some way. She always has men after her: potential job employers, close friends, detectives and even her therapist. This constant bombardment from amorous suitors who are either in lust with her or want only to rescue her shows the rarely discussed price of beauty. Despite all this attention, in the end, she is always left alone and abandoned, just like her father left 18 years earlier in her life. All of her trust issues with men and insecurities about being left alone all stem from this traumatic experience from her childhood. Holmes' body language, in contrast to her slick, confident language, is laden with a subtle fragility and inner sense of overwhelming fear that is key to understanding Catherine's actions and the true meaning of the movie.

First-time director Peter Gaghnan cleverly executed the chilling suspense and eerie feeling necessary to make this thriller effective. Gaghan, best known for his writing of the critically acclaimed Traffic, transported the audience successfully into the life of a typical college student. Unlike the unrealistic portrayal of teenagers

MTV's latest cultural phenomena

Characters in MTV show "Jackass" hit the big screen; the soundtrack reaches store shelves

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

JACKASS: THE MOVIE
Directed by Jeff Tremaine
Starring Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera and Steve-O
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

To call Jackass: The Movie a movie at all is to give it too much credit. It lacks all the essential elements of what a real movie is. There is no plot, no characters and no screenplay to speak of (of course, that can be said of many of this year's so called movies). Weirdly, however, that frees it to be more honest than most of the films released this year.

Essentially, Jackass is just an 85-minute version of the hit MTV series in which ringleader Johnny Knoxville and his cronies take slapstick to new, delirious forms of painful dementia. The television series was brilliant in the way it stripped gross-out, frat-boy comedy down to its infantile take on the id. Knoxville and his team of happy masochists traipsed around thinking up new ways to humiliate, degrade and injure themselves, but they did so with so much goofy enthusiasm that being appalled would hardly seem to matter. They didn't set out to offend and disgust, that just came naturally. What they set out to do was have fun, which, to them, involved stunts like being roasted over a giant barbecue. Comedy was stripped down to it's purest essence and we had no choice to be anything but stunned, disgusted… and launched into new fits of laughter with every dumb stunt. The "Jackass" team brought comedy down to new lows and, in the process, brought it to new heights.

Jackass: The Movie offers up more of the same. Tasteless and unruly, juvenile and sick, the movie showcases all the greatest hits in pain (no pun intended). The boys, especially big brother Knoxville, never seem happier than when they are suffering bruises, contusions, concussions and the indignity of humiliation. It's amazing the things that these rowdy kids will do to get a laugh; irresponsible too. But to bemoan the irresponsibility of the "Jackass" team is to miss the point; this is all an anarchic joke, and the brutal prodding of our social mores is part of that joke. Like Tom Green before he imploded, this is all about flipping upside down our current civil propriety. The Andrew W.K. song that accompanies the company's antics is titled "We Want Fun" and the delight of the movie is that it is about more nothing than finding that illustrious high, that kick that comes from having, you know, fun. Knoxville and friends aren't really hurting anyone but themselves (innocent bystanders that get caught in the melee are probably really in on the joke), and that's really what matters.

For all the atrocities that the "Jackasses" commit, Jackass: The Movie turns out to have more integrity than almost any other comedy released this year. The movie is stupid, gross, obscene and pandering, yes, but the movie never promised to be anything more than stupid, gross, obscene and pandering. Unlike a film such as Men In Black 2 (a movie that seems to be made of nothing but Styrofoam), Jackass delivers on everything it promises.

Grade: B

Going in, you know all you will get is dumb guys doing dumb stunts. It's that kind of simplicity that renders Jackass: The Movie one of the funniest films of the year.

True, the competition is hardly fierce; Slackers, Kung Pow: Enter the Fist, Snow Dogs, The New Guy, Sorority Boys and Juwanna Mann are among some of the films slugging it out for a position on the year's 10 worst list. And even when the films weren't outright terrible, they were nothing more than mediocre (Serving Sara, Simone, Van Wilder, et al.) There are moments when Jackass does toe the line; the urine snow cone gag is not only too gross to be effectively funny, it also seems like nothing more than filler between the better gags, which include a guy crawling over mousetraps and Knoxville getting shot in the stomach with a riot-control pellet.

One of the refreshing things about Jackass is that it isn't totally all for the gross or dangerous, unlike Green's horrid Freddy Got Fingered. There are moments of real cleverness, a surrealistic pop culture touch probably inspired by producer Spike Jonze. Some of the guys visit Japan and spend a night on the town dressed in giant panda outfits; another time Knoxville and Jackass tool around town on scooters dressed in old age make-up. The movie opens with a clever bit scored to Orff's suite "Carmina Burana," spoofing one of the gang's earliest television stunts. These intermittent sparks of daft intelligence cropping up through the inanity of the rest of the material shows that there is indeed an undercurrent of thought snaking its way through Jackass.

I can imagine cineastes and moral hypocrites sniffing in the air at the stench of such impure material. They may even call it the year's worst film – only they would fall into the trap it has set for them. Me, I was in suspense waiting to find out what happened next. Jackass: The Movie may be tasteless and immature, but I laughed harder at it than at any other film this year.

B+

(Paramount; rated R for dangerous, sometimes extremely crude stunts, language and nudity; 85 min.)

By Timothy Gabriele
COLUMBIA CORRESPONDENT

JACKASS: THE MOVIE: The Official Soundtrack
American

Fans of MTV's cultural phenomena "Jackass" have been salivating for the arrival of the prankster group's first major motion picture. Now that the film is here and topping box offices across America, fans can rejoice in the triumph of stupidity. Trailing the long-awaited release of the Jackass: The Movie is the equally anticipated release of a soundtrack.

Since the show's premiere in fall of 2000, viewers have scrambled through online message boards and peer-to-peer sharing programs looking for the music used in the 1fill in the blank with some outrageous thing never before seen on television) stunt or sequence. Many of the stunts performed on the show rely mainly on visual appeal, rather than dialogue. To properly accompany the action on screen, a score was needed that would exemplify the attitude and visual buffoonery of the stunts performed.

Being mostly skate-punks from the Northeast, the cast and crew of "Jackass" had to look no further than their own record bins. Unfortunately, as the liner notes point out, obtaining clearances for musical use in a notorious major cable television show is not quite as simple as it is when hiding a song behind the guise of accompaniment to a skateboarding video, like the Big Brother and CKY videos that

Knoxville, Bam and Ryan Dunn had debuted in (fans of Bam Margera's CKY 2K will recall the revolting series of events that immediately follow the quite striking use of Bjork's "Hyperballad.") The cast and crew were particularly upset about the inability to use the Dead Kennedy's seminal stoopid track "Too Drunk to Fuck" after cutting the already infamous "Golf Carts" sequence in the movie.

The music remaining is a mixed bag. It screams of "compilation CD," but perhaps no other soundtrack warrants that title more than an essentially "compilation film." Despite the lack of thematic unity and the album's running time of only 38 minutes, the soundtrack to Jackass: The Movie is a satisfying listen. Things kick off, appropriately enough, with Johnny Knoxville's formal introduction followed by the theme to "Jackass," "Corona" by the Minutemen. The song, from the classic college album Double Nickels on the Dime, has become sonically synonymous with the show in the same fashion one associates Dick Dale's "Miserlou" with Pulp Fiction.

While a worthy song though the lyrics, it only fit the "Jackass" attitude with creative associations. The first line seems to be the most important to the Jackass crew: "The people will survive."

And surely enough, the members of "Jackass" have survived time and time again where they probably shouldn't have.

Andrew W.K. sounds in with "We Want Fun," the only original tune on the entire album. W.K. is often hit or miss in his breed of party hardy music, but "We Want Fun" definitely nails the binge-drinking vibe right over the head with a bottle and continues swinging away. It's a successful attempt to rewrite the "Fight for you Right" of the MTV and "Jackass" generation. With its cheesy lines and "Hey! Hey!" chants, the song is unavoidably fun, taking cues from '80s hair bands to enhance the hedonistic ambience.

CKY's "Flesh into Gear" will sound familiar to anyone, familiar with the band's "music video" releases. It appeared both on the band's "I and-speed" and "CKY2K" videos back when it was known as "Sinking Fast." The video releases were actually just compilations of skateboarding montages, miscellaneous pranks and "Jackass"-minded stunts by Bam Margera and Brandon Dicamillo and others (much of Jackass's first season was comprised of CKY clips and outtakes), with CKY providing the majority of the soundtrack. Now signed to Island, CKY are able to take their twisted metal to the masses with new tools. "Flesh into Gear" has been trumped up a bit from its original version. The vocals are a bit more gruff than melodic, the guitars a bit sludgier, and the song even comes complete with a keyboard solo. The result sounds like a completely different band covering "Sinking Fast." This is not necessarily a bad thing, but it's hard to resolve that the band that decimated Def Leppard by doing a grindcore cover of "Foolin" now wears in Queensryche influence so high on its sleeve. Regardless, this is one of the more melodic metal songs to come out in recent years.

The rest of the album flies right by with rapid paced acceleration. Younger "Jackass" fans get schooled with essentially cuts from The Ramones, the Misfits and Slayer (sounding in with "Angel of Death," possibly the heaviest song ever written). Overlooked punkers, The Rezillos, fill in the blank left by the Dead Kennedys with "Somebody's Gonna Get Their Head Kicked In," a jolting thrasher that could have been the new Hives single if it wasn't written over 15 years ago. The Cramps-meet-Buzzcocks thrasher is a brilliantly catchy and uncompromising tour-de-force that, like most of the tunes here, times out at about two minutes.

If there is any thematic element to the music it seems to be about going out, getting wasted, getting the living crap beat out of you and calling it a well-spent day. Garage enthusiasts, Sinut Peddlers, contribute with the eloquently put "Let's Get Fucked Up." Glamour Grrrl outfit, Sahara Hotnights, extend the theme further with "Alright Alright (Here's My Fist Where's the Fight?)" And for those of you just never thought to burn a copy to CD, you also get a copy of Sir Mix A-Lot's fluke hit "Baby Got Back" (which comes right after "Angel of Death").

The Jackass: The Movie soundtrack could have easily been twice as long, filling in the blanks with classic segments from the show if need be, but it wouldn't have sounded nearly as enthusiastic if it had. Like most good punk albums, it goes on for just as long as it has to without having to become tired before its conclusion. Ironically, for an album and a movie dedicated to the celebration of excess, the soundtrack avoids it in style.

Avoiding the sophomore slump

By Justin Marques
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

COLDPLAY
A Rush of Blood to the Head
Captiol

Two years have passed since Coldplay released their debut album Parachutes, an album full of songs about love torn apart that spurned the hit single "Yellow." Lead singer Chris Martin sounded like a sick dog down for the count. For some listeners, Parachutes was a little too mellow.

With the release of A Rush of Blood to the Head, Coldplay returns with a more sense of urgency and hope. While as much of half of the album deals with lost love, the band also gives way to put focus on some of their political views. In the opening song "Politik," Martin wants listeners to notice the gap between rich and poor nations and advocates free trade, so they can survive. This view is expressed in greater detail in the album's liner notes. Martin repeats for everyone – politicians included – to "open up your eyes" in order to see the decimation of the world around you and to help close the widening gap between rich and poor.

With the album's first single, "In My Place," the band returns to their classic themes of love. Guitarist Johnny Buckland creates a shimmering accent to Chris Martin's vocals, somber with great depth and more sobs and growls. "God Put a Smile Upon Your Face" has a great jangle like guitar tone to begin, that eventually goes into its own complete free flowing space.

But Martin still has some angst to vent. The title track of the album has Martin murmuring about going to war stating: "I'm going to buy a gun and start a war if you can tell me what's worth fighting for." Martin also questions death in the final track "Amsterdam." By the end, the listener cannot help but to view Coldplay as a band of pessimists, but fortunately there is a greater sense of hope and overall happiness in lyrics telling listener to look inward as well as out.

Coldplay, through A Rush of Blood to the Head, not only manages to avoid the dreaded sophomore slump, but also matures into a top notch guitar-driven hand taking on their own personal issues and the world. They do this with a great amount of emotion and an ever-growing confidence in their own abilities.

■ I Spy

continued from page 5

Sometimes, the arguments are old hat, nothing more than what has been seen by feuding partners before. Sometimes though, Murphy and Wilson are allowed to let loose, and the movie comes alive. They take delight in riffing off each other, and we take delight in watching two pros being allowed to do what they do best. They have great fun in the seduction sequence, in a sewer set scene and in the verbal interplay that punctuates an otherwise laggard chase sequence. The director, Betty Thomas, directed The Brady Bunch Movie and should know how to direct an offbeat retread of an old TV show, but rarely does the movie rise anywhere higher than the monotone weariness of the ebony/ivory buddy flick formula. There are bits when the movie spoofs the clichés, which goes to show the kind of material that this could have been.

For once, I eagerly await a sequel. I want to see if chances will be taken, if a more auspicious team of producers will allow the cast and director to do something more than a one-week wonder rehash. Watching I Spy, I saw how good Murphy and Wilson could have been together. But that's a problem. I don't go into a movie wanting to see how funny Wilson and Murphy could have been together; I want to see how funny they are together. C+ (Columbia; rated PG-13 for action violence, some sexual content and language; 96 min.)

Senior Photo Opportunity!!!

PHOTOS WILL BE TAKEN THROUGH FRIDAY NOVEMBER 8, 2002 IN CAMPUS CENTER 905/09.
MAKE YOUR APPOINTMENT AT WWW.OURYEAR.COM AND USE THE SCHOOL CODE 147.

ORDER YOUR COPY OF THE 2003 INDEX WHEN YOU GET YOUR PHOTO TAKEN, AND YOU WILL RECIVE YOUR COPY FOR A DISCOUNTED PRICE OF $40.00

QUESTIONS CALL 545-0848

GREAT Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services

1 ► Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass
2 ► A great place to get contact lenses
3 ► FREE sample start-up contact lens solutions
4 ► Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases
5 ► Contact lenses mailed directly to your home or office
6 ► FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames

SPECIAL OFFER: 10 PERCENT STUDENT DISCOUNT ON ALL FRAMES AND EYEGLASS LENSES!*

"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services"
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services

* Cannot be combined with other insurance discounts.

For appointments or questions, call 577-5244
UHS EYE CARE SERVICES

Introducing
Natalee Prince
Ethnic Hairstylist
Hair, Skin & Natural Nails

Casimir Kocot
79 So. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA 01002
413.256.3440

XC teams fall at A-10s

Men finish 6th, women run 8th

By Reid Davenport
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There are times when teams are asked to take their efforts to the next level. That's just what was asked of the Massachusetts men and women's cross country teams this past Saturday at the annual Atlantic 10 Championships in Pittsburgh, Pa. The men placed sixth and the women came in eighth.

The big news out of the meet was that La Salle was able to win first place in both the men and women's meets, hosted by Duquesne University at Schenley Park. La Salle's men's cross country team placed six runners in the top 10 while the women's squad finished four in the top 10.

La Salle's Todd Witzleben finished first overall on the men's side with a time of 25:22 for his second consecutive individual title and Most Outstanding Award. La Salle junior Sheila Klick was named the Most Outstanding Performer on the women's side after winning the race in a time of 17:39.

Saint Joseph's freshman Andre LaBoy placed third overall (25:23) and was named Most Outstanding Rookie. Rhode Island freshman Kristen Coon finished fifth overall with a time of 17:58 and received similar accolades on the women's side. La Salle Head Coach Charles Turpey was named Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year for the second straight season.

Saint Joseph's, Duquesne, Dayton and George Washington rounded out the top five on men's side, while Richmond, Rhode Island, Saint Joseph's and Duquesne rounded out the women's top five.

Despite a positive outlook for the meet, the Minutemen were only able to pull out a sixth place finish. Coach Ken O'Brien had mentioned that the teams to worry about were La Salle, Saint Joseph's and Duquesne, who had its top three runners returning this year.

For the Minutemen, Senior Dave Hartman led the team with a 27th-place finish, completing the course in 26:25. Senior Ed Breen placed 51st with a time of 26:28, while sophomore Andrew McCarron and senior Colin Baughman were the next two runners to finish, registering times of 26:32 and 26:38, respectively, to place 53rd and 54th overall.

On the women's side, the team did finish higher than predicted. Last year, the women's squad placed fourth, in what was their worst placing ever. Yet due to the inexperience of this year's team, the Coaches Poll predicted them to place ninth. The women managed to finish a notch higher in eighth place, but that placing now is the worst placing for the women ever.

The Maroon and White was led by senior Julie McGee with a 28th-place finish, as she completed the course in 18:50. Sophomore Alexis Anzelone ran the race in 19:07, and came in 36th place, while junior Katie Knowles was 43rd with a time of 19:15.

Both UMass teams will take next week off before running at the NCAA Northeast Regional, Nov. 16, in The Bronx, N.Y.

THE TOP THREE MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY TEAM FINISHED OFF A SOLID SEASON WITH A SIXTH PLACE FINISH IN THE ATLANTIC 10 TOURNAMENT.

■ soccer

continued from page 12

The loss ended the Minutewomen's season, giving them only A-10 powerhouse Richmond to look forward to.

Richmond did not help the sting of the George Washington loss, netting seven goals to UMass' three. The Minutewomen were dominated for the majority of the game, being outshot 28-17 by the explosive Spider attack.

"It was a bizarre end to a strange season," Rudy said about his team's final contest.

The Spiders wasted no time, scoring three of their seven goals in the first half. Edda Gararsdottir, Whitney Sikes and Jenna Merriam each put one past Minutewoman keeper Kelli Nigh, who was pulled at the half.

"We had to adjust just to stay in it… They came out with three front runners," Rudy said.

Garasdottir and Sikes weren't done; both scored another in the second half.

The Minutewomen brought the game within two goals in the second, netting three unanswered goals. Freshman Adair Bixler went unassisted eight minutes into the half, giving the Maroon and White its first goal of the game. A few minutes later, Richmond made some defensive personnel changes, which opened up opportunities for an aggressive Minutewoman attack.

Senior Martha Conover scored her last goal wearing a UMass uniform at the 67:40 mark, blasting one by from inside the box. Erin Lilly scored soon after at 70:33. After the sudden resurgence from the Minutewomen attack, the Spiders made another set of substitutions, which neutralized the Maroon and White offense.

Richmond rebounded quickly with another two goals, putting the game fully out of reach.

With the season over, Rudy is looking toward the stellar youth on his squad, including freshman standout Lindsey Bellini. "She could be the best player in the A-10 in a few years," Rudy said.

With the season coming to a close, the Minutewomen are out of contention for the A-10 playoffs for the second year in a row. With a strong freshman class moving up, the Maroon and White has its sights set on vast improvement and success in years to come.

GERALD LING/COLLEGIAN

MARTHA CONOVER SCORED HER FINAL GOAL IN A UMASS UNIFORM AGAINST RICHMOND.

■ goal

continued from page 16

good for tops all-time in UMass soccer history.

"I can't say enough about Yuri," said Koch. "He just makes us click offensively and he controls things out there. He really makes things happen."

The Minutemen kept the ball rolling on offense, when just over two minutes later, Deren took a feed from classmate Andrew Ficher and blasted a shot from inside the goalie box past Colonial keeper Erie Hand at 28:50.

"Deren continues to pace our offense," Koch said. "He's just a pure goal-scorer and he does a lot of things well for us."

The forward added to his glaringly impressive statistics with his second goal of the game off of a free kick at 57:06. It was the 19th tally of the year for No. 13.

With UMass sitting on a comfortable 3-0 lead approaching the 80th minute, the game appeared to be in the bag. GW would not go down without a fight though, as it ended the shutout bid at 78:40 when Matt Osborne rifled a free kick past Altomare. Osborne then proceed to make a game of it when he took a feed from Arnar Johannson and again beat the Minuteman keeper for his second goal of the game at 80:13.

It would be too little too late, though, as Altomare would stymie the Colonials' final scoring chances in the waning minutes of the contest. The senior keeper, coming off of his first Atlantic 10 Co-Player of the Week award for his exceptional play last weekend, recorded a career-high nine saves in the game. He pushed his record to 11-1-2 on the season, and a more impressive 8-0-2 in A-10 play.

UMass is now 12-4-2 overall, and sitting pretty at 8-0-2 overall in the A-10, however Koch knows that his team still has some unfinished business to take care of, and can do so beginning next weekend.

"It isn't over yet," said Koch. "We still have one left next weekend, and we need to continue to work hard if we want to win it. We need to maintain our focus on that game and make sure we're ready to do the things we need to do to come out and play."

Rhode Island, after keeping pace with the Minutemen through most of the year, has fallen to the back of the pack with four consecutive league losses. The importance of the contest, however, lies with the fact that the Maroon and White still needs a win or tie or a Richmond win or tie to nail down the conference title outright.

"It's good to know you get to finish the season at home," said Deren. "And it just adds to it to know that the game is going to mean a lot for us if we want to stay on top."

PTAH MYERS' GOAL AGAINST GEORGE WASHINGTON CAME ON YURI MORALES' 27TH CAREER ASSIST, A RECORD FOR THE UNIVERSITY.

A season finished before it ever began

ADAM LEVOY

Last week marked the beginning of the long and grueling NBA season.

Soon enough we will learn which teams will be the studs and which ones will be the duds. If there is one dud already though, it is the New York Knicks.

They are a lowly 0-3, and there is no light at the end of the tunnel for a franchise that is reeling since trading Patrick Ewing two seasons ago. Newly acquired star player Antonio McDyess is out for the season after breaking his kneecap in a preseason game, and there is no simple solution to the team's woes. As New York fans see it, they are only three games into the season, and there are only 79 games left to play.

A season that was going to be the "rebirth" of the new-look Knicks has crumpled before their very eyes. A season full of new expectations and returning playoff battles in Madison Square Garden has vanished. To put it simply: No McDyess equals no hope.

After last year's miserable season in which the Knicks did not make the playoffs for the first time in 13 years, General Manager and President of the club Scott Layden packaged former UMass star Marcus Camby, starting point guard Mark Jackson and the rights to the seventh pick of the 2002 NBA Draft to the Denver Nuggets in return for former superstar Antonio McDyess – emphasis on "former."

One year ago, a player of McDyess' caliber would be labeled as virtually "un-tradable" by NBA teams. He was a great young talent whose athletic skills set the standard for other forwards in the league. He was what teams considered a "franchise" player. Just as he was about to reach the prime of his career, McDyess suffered from two separate injuries in 2001 on both his knees, which resulted in season ending surgery.

Then came the Draft in New York. When Commissioner David Stern announced that the Knicks had traded the often injured and maligned Camby for McDyess, the Garden fans reacted to the news by chanting, "Fi-re Lay-den, Fi-re Lay-den."

The Knicks fans were sharing their critique of the trade, not because they did not want to trade Camby, but for the team had just acquired "damaged goods." As any person running a basketball club or who has taken General Managing 101 knows, you never trade for a player who is coming off surgery on both knees. Knicks fans knew this, but for some reason the Knicks' brass thought they were improving the team.

The blockbuster trade was to be based on these terms. If, and only if McDyess remained healthy and returned back to his former All-Star form, would the trade be viewed as successful. If McDyess re-injured his knees in any way, the trade would be a bust.

The season is not even a week old and McDyess is already out for the entire 2002-03 campaign. Life, or a season for that matter, can change dramatically within in seconds. Within one jump, one tip-in dunk, and one awkward landing, the promising season that was ahead of the Knicks has become all but a dream.

After getting MRIs taken the night of "the fall," McDyess and the city of New York received the worst possible news they could receive. Their newest player had broken his kneecap. Knicks doctors claim that this injury has nothing to do with his prior knee injuries, but lets get real.

Layden is getting exactly what he deserves by trading for a player coming off extensive surgery. Instead of rebuilding the franchise and starting over with a new young player with the seventh pick of the draft – a draft that was full of quality players, Layden decided to "retool" so he could quickly put a Band-Aid over the team's problems.

He only had to listen to the fans' reaction to know that he would have huge problems if McDyess' knees did not hold up. Now no one will ever know how his knees would have held up during the rigors of an NBA season, because he will not even play a single game.

For the Knicks, this will be the season that never was. I might sound like a pessimistic person, but I am a realist. They were a weak team to begin with, and now without McDyess they are as flawed as ever and represent the smallest team in the league. They are winless thus far in this new season, and there is no one need that will catapult the team to contenders again.

The best thing this team can do is tank the season, (which will not be hard considering the circumstances of recent eventst and enter the Lebron James sweepstakes in next year's Draft.

This certainly will be a year to remember – or rather a year to easily forget, for the season is over before it ever really began. At least New York has football and hockey to watch for a couple months—actually scratch that, that is a whole other issue for another day.

Adam Levoy is a Collegian Columnist.

sports@dailycollegian.com

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

NEED HELP FINDING A MAJOR?

Come to the MAJORS FAIR!

Wednesday, November 6, 2002
6:00 - 8:00 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom

Don't miss this unique opportunity to explore the impressive range of majors & resources available at UMASS: representatives from more than 70 departments & programs in one location.

Sponsored by Pre-Major Advising Services, Commonwealth College, & The Campus Career Network.

Daily Collegian CLASSIFIED

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENT

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

AUTO FOR SALE

91 Acclaim needs work $350 545-0547

87 Toyota Camry Wagon. Very good condition. $1895 256-6625 Leave message. Grc621@webtv.net

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00. Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00. 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy and enthusiastic workers for the following: Youth Basketball Supervisors/ Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at the Human Resources Office, Amherst Town Hall, Main Street. For more information contact Erika Cumps at cumps@town.amherst.ma.us.

Part time. $8.50/hr. Brandywine Apts. Needs a leasing person. Tues & Thurs Afternoon, Sat & Sun. Call 549-0600

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

EMPLOYMENT

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons. All ages & genders 253-4109 or djatabumpus@yahoo.com

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle. Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit@aol.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDocLove.com?

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted. Gorgeous 2 bedroom uptown apartment, fully renovated. Huge bedroom with walk-in closet. Parking included. Fully furnished living room and kitchen. Available January. $462.50/ month plus utilities. Call Lindsay at 549-7235

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs from Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! or call 1-800-327-6013 Guaranteed Lowest Prices. Free Meals and Drinks! Cancun, Jamaica, Florida and Bahamas Party Cruise! Our Seventeenth Year! Reps Wanted!

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring BreakDiscounts!... 1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

THIS COULD BE YOUR AD

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

1 ..... CBS / 3
4 ..... NBC / 5
5 ..... Fox Sports Network
6 ..... PBS / 57
7 ..... HSCN Cinema
8 ..... WB / 20
9 ..... UPN 38
10 ..... TV Guide Channel
11 ..... FOX / 61
12 ..... ABC / 40
13 ..... NBC / 22
14 ..... International Channel
15 ..... UMATV
16 ..... HSCN Info Channel
17 ..... ESPN
18 ..... ESPN 2
19 ..... UVC-19
20 ..... ESPN Classic
21 ..... Cozad-ford Govt
22 ..... CNN
23 ..... CNN HL
24 ..... Weather Channel
25 ..... Learning Channel
26 ..... History Channel
27 ..... A & E
28 ..... Discovery Channel
29 ..... Discovery Health
30 ..... Food Network
31 ..... NASA
32 ..... Home & Garden TV
33 ..... Travel Channel
34 ..... Lifetime
35 ..... CNBC
36 ..... Tech TV
37 ..... BET
38 ..... CMT
39 ..... USA
40 ..... TNN
41 ..... MTV
42 ..... MTV2
43 ..... VH-1
44 ..... TNT
45 ..... TBS
46 ..... E! Entertainment
47 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
48 ..... Court TV
49 ..... Nick at Nite
50 ..... Comedy Central
51 ..... Cartoon Network
52 ..... Game Show Network
53 ..... TV Land
54 ..... FOX Family
55 ..... Univision
56 ..... Galavision
57 ..... Telemundo
58 ..... College TV Network
59 ..... C-SPAN
60 ..... C-SPAN2
61 ..... CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day; Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

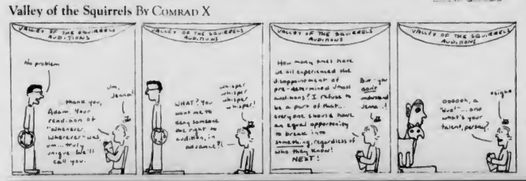
to a Classifieds page near you.

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"If there's a bright center to the universe, you're on the planet that it's farthest from."

-Luke Skywalker

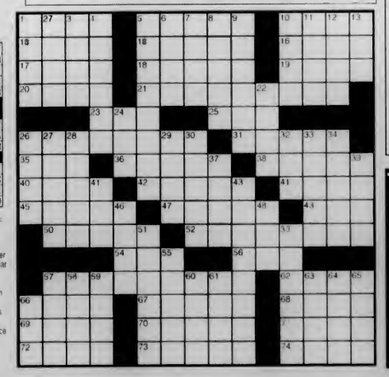
Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
High: 44 Low: 30	High: 42 Low: 35	High: 48 Low: 28

Horoscopes

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) – Focus on presentability today. You'll want to adopt the right behavior and look your best – particularly during an evening gathering. Make sure your robes are pressed and brushed, and that your goat's head is the freshest available.
PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – Someone is likely to know what's going on inside your head better than you do today. Let the neurosurgeon do her work, she knows how to fix your wiring.
ARIES (March 21 – April 19) –What begins as a slow process – one that you do not wholly enjoy – is soon to be something that you do with much more gusto. Wink, wink.
TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – Attendance is required in your second class. Make sure you wake up.
GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) – You can afford to be more sensitive today. And everyday for that matter. Seriously, you aren't known for your tact, are you?
CANCER (June 21 – July 22) – You'll be going from one thing to another all day long. Yeah, because that's a specific prediction. Man, I love my job.
LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) — A social gathering affords more than one opportunity to capitalize on someone else's oversight. Set your phasers on "insult."
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) — Want to know a secret? Too bad. I didn't get to be a highly paid astrologist by giving away freebies.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) — Focus on any endeavor that allows you to put your best foot forward – rumba, baby, rumba.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) – You'll be forced to crush someone with your poisoned tail after they stupidly make fun of "the new scaly kid."
SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – You might want to double-check your figures today. You'll notice that you forgot to carry the one.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – Don't let someone else's lack of enthusiasm bring you down today. They just suck.

Atlantis
41 Belmont Walk, Amherst 253-9075
DINNER AT 5, LAST SEATING AT 9
AMHERST'S HOTTEST NEW NIGHT-CLUB AND RESTAURANT WITH DJs SPINNING VINYL SIX NIGHTS A WEEK, 10:30 TILL 1 AM.
TUESDAY Greek Night w/ DJ Excellent (Free Pizza, Free Shwarmage)
WEDNESDAY Hip Hop and Top 40 with DJ Big Jazz
THURSDAY Hip Hop and R&B with DJ Priceless
FRIDAY "House On The Rocks" with DJ's J-Cut and Noah
SATURDAY Hip Hop / Reggae with DJ TROUBZ
SUNDAY Drum & Bass with Com Pizza & Chilltone



ACROSS
1 Judge's garb
5 Fumble
10 Skillful
14 Receptive
15 Wore the crown
16 Tobacco wad
17 Kitty's feedback
18 Imposing on
19 Coffee dispensers
20 Are, in Taxco
21 Alms asker
23 Orange seed
25 Watch
26 Confess
31 Motel rentals
35 Thurman of films
36 Dries up
38 Closes lightly
40 Parade feature
42 Stair-climbing aids
44 Muffin spread
45 Tummy exercise (hyph.)
47 Simon and Diamond
49 Pen Tin —
50 Filled with cargo
52 Smudging
54 Curtain hanger
56 Acid color
57 Leisurely
62 Tot's wheels
66 Donkey comment
67 Prefix meaning "large"
68 Car import
69 Party-thrower's plea
70 Between
71 Archeologist's find
72 Jokester Martha —
73 Bowling alleys
74 Furniture buy

DOWN
1 Heavy gold chain
2 Concerto or symphony
3 Ernie's pal
4 Wholly absorbed
5 Cranker
6 Trick
7 Kim — of "L.A. Doctors"
8 Awards judgment
9 More nervous
10 Greenish-blue
11 Chair
12 Dryer fuzz
13 Newspaper VIPs
22 Execs
24 Treasury dept
26 Causes a blister
27 AOL message (hyph.)
28 — Fe Trail
29 "Rollerball" star
30 Makes an effort
32 Gloating cry
33 Vitamin lead-in
34 Author Gertrude —
37 Lessome
39 Ballad
41 Flop
43 Musher's team (2 wds.)
46 Bolivia neighbor
48 Declare
51 Usual
53 Gave back
55 Serious theater
57 Big Dipper bear
58 Dark color
59 Ad spiel
60 PC menu item
61 Atlantic flier
63 Not courteous
64 Hubbubs
65 Calcium source
66 Icy remark

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

L	I	L	A	C		S	T	A	T		R	I	D	E
O	S	A	K	A		E	A	C	H		S	O	N
D	I	S	C	J	O	C	K	E	Y		G	L	U	T
E	S	T		O	P	T	E	D		T	H	E	S	E
		A	L	A	S			B	U	T	T	E	R
E	I	F	F	E	L		P	D	I	C
D	R	E	A	D		G	L	I	N	K	E	R	S
O	A	T	S		J	O	E		S	O	R	E
N	A	T	I	O	N	A	L		V	I	S	T	A
		O	A	K	S		L	I	N	E	A	R
M	O	T	O	W	N		K	O	N	G
A	L	O	H	A		S	O	N	I	C		B	R	I
N	I	N	A		A	N	T	I	S	E	P	T	I	C
E	V	E	R		W	A	T	T		N	O	I	S	E
S	E	R	E		E	G	O	S		T	I	T	H	E

11-12-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Look for the Dining Out Guide

(Presented by The Massachusetts Daily Collegian and OCMP)

on November 7th!

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Yankee Corn Soup

Jerk Pork Strips with Vegetables Sandwich

Hungarian Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)

DINNER

Yankee Corn Soup

Chicken Pot Pie

Boston Scrod

Caribbean Vegetable Stew (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Technician — Esther Danzig
Copy Editor — Glen Straub
Production Supervisor — Scott Cirese
Production Staff — Sarah Lloyd, Elizabeth Bishop

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

OSU overtakes Miami for No. 2 in BCS standings

By Andrea Szulszteyn
Associated Press

Look who's No. 2 in the new Bowl Championship Series standings.

Ohio State, helped by a big quality win over Washington and earlier this year and Miami's drop in The Associated Press poll, have overtaken the Hurricanes in the standings released Monday.

The Buckeyes jumped three spots and nudged past defending champion Miami, which stayed unbeaten while posting its closest call of the season, a 10th straight win Saturday, 42-17 over Syracuse.

But the Hurricanes had to rally in the fourth quarter and then use them. Oklahoma remained No. 1 while Ohio State moved up to 6.01 with 5.37 points, 0.44 ahead of Miami.

The top two teams in the final BCS standings released Dec. 8 will play in the national title game at the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Jan. 3.

"We're proud of what our young men have done to date," Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said. "But we know if we don't play our best football game of the year at Purdue, we won't be Nov. 2 anymore."

OSU moved up a 0.17 composite total, compared to Miami's 0.01. But the Buckeyes got a 0.6 deduction for a 25-7 victory over Washington State on Sept. 14. Miami has no comparable deductions.

The strength-of-schedule deductions were added last year after Miami failed to make the national championship game over Florida State, finishing the 2000 season despite beating the Seminoles and Nebraska that year.

The Hurricanes' struggles against lowly Rutgers dropped them to No. 3 in the AP media poll. A component of the BCS standings includes the average of the AP media and coaches polls. Miami is No. 1 in the coaches' poll, giving it a 1.5 poll margin.

If Miami had stayed No. 1 in both polls, its poll average would have been 1 — putting the Hurricanes 0.06 points ahead of the Buckeyes.

"I don't [worry] concerned about what the pollsters do," Miami coach Larry Coker said Monday about the AP media poll. "Just stuff it will be easy to rate us if we don't play better. But first we have to do is make sure we get it corrected and win the game. If we do that, the polls will take care of themselves.

"I know that sounds like a broken record, but I really believe it's true."

Miami (5-0) trailed 17-14 entering the fourth quarter at Rutgers. Oklahoma (6-0), meanwhile, dominated then-No. 13 Colorado 27-11, and that was enough to change the poll.

The Hurricanes got 27 first-place votes to Oklahoma and used their record 21 consecutive polls at No. 1 snapped.

"Nobody wants us in the national championship game," Miami cornerback Willie McGinest said. "The minute we lose, we'll probably fall down to No. 10. I don't know why there are so many haters."

The BCS formula uses the AP media and coaches polls, computer polls, strength of schedule, won-loss record and a loss-against system.

Oklahoma has 2.04 points — 1.5 for poll average, 1 for computer polls, strength of schedule, zero for losses and 0.7 deduction for a victory over Texas.

Goal accomplished

UM clinches share of conference title

By Mike Marselli
Collegian Staff

On Oct. 4, 2002 the Massachusetts' men's soccer team sat at 3-0-0, having just completed the non-conference portion of its schedule at 4-4 and preparing to welcome Xavier to Rudd Field. The arrival of the Musketeers signaled to the Minutemen that conference play was upon them and it was time to turn up the intensity.

UMass	1
Richmond	1

UMass	3
GW	2

THE DUKES HAS SPENT MUCH OF THE YEAR IN THE AIR FOR THE MINUTEMEN THIS SEASON, AND HIS HIGH-FLYING ANTICS HAVE HELD UMASS TO AT LEAST A TIE FOR THE A-10 TITLE.

The Maroon and White was the defending Atlantic 10 champion and it was determined to defend its title with vigor, as the Minutemen had made it one of their top goals prior to the season. UMass defeated Xavier that rainy fall afternoon, 2-0, and exactly one day short of a month later, the Maroon and White walked off the sun-soaked field on the campus of the University of Richmond having tied the Spiders 1-1.

The draw, coupled with Friday's 3-2 triumph over George Washington, guaranteed the Minutemen at least a share of the A-10 title – a distinct goal for UMass at the start of the season.

"We knew since the beginning of the season that we were a team to beat in this league," senior tri-captain Jeff Doreen said. "The road to the [Conference] championship would come through us, and we wanted to defend it as well as we could."

Richmond (9-3-3 overall 6-2-2 A-10) came out firing in the first half against the typically strong Minuteman defense, firing six shots at senior goalkeeper Enzo Altomare. While the defense held strong in front of him early, the Spiders' Stephen Douglas took a cross from teammate Eric Dutt and lofted a shot past Altomare into the upper left corner of the net, giving Richmond the early edge at the 18:26 mark.

From that point on the defense clamped down and shut the door on the Spiders, allowing only three second half shots and permitting the Minutemen to keep the ball in the offensive zone for the majority of regulation. The usually potent UMass attack was firing on all cylinders throughout the second half, as it bettered its first half total of 11 shots with 12 chances in the second.

With Richmond keeper Mike Swanerr up to the steep task of stopping the barrage of shots, it looked as if the Minutemen would be faced with accepting their first conference loss of the season.

The role of savior, however, would be played by a rather unlikely source. Junior midfielder Devlin Barnes, entering play with one goal on the year, would slide a slow rolling shot under Swanerr at 79:28, sending the game into overtime and giving the Minutemen a chance to clinch the conference title outright.

"Devlin's goal was obviously huge," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "We had been putting the pressure on them all game and we couldn't put one away until he did."

Having expended itself throughout the first 90 minutes to consistently pepper the Richmond goal with shots, the UMass attack seemed to run out of gas in the two extra frames as it managed only one shot in the final 20 minutes, which came in the second overtime.

"We really didn't put enough pressure on them in either overtime," said Koch. "We worked hard in regulation to tie the game but then didn't have anything left."

Richmond, on the other hand, was relatively sharp in the extra session, as it would retain the ball in the offensive zone for a majority of the time. They fired six shots, yet only one was on net and was turned away by Altomare.

"Enzo continues to perform," Koch said. "Week in and week out he continues to come to play, and he performs within his abilities which helps us play well around him.

"We would've liked to pick up the 'W' today, but I'm happy with how we fought back, and now we have to prepare and be ready for our [last] game next weekend."

The Maroon and White would not have been put in position to secure a piece of the conference title if it wasn't for its effort on Friday afternoon. The upstart Colonials (9-8-0 overall 5-3-0 A-10) refused to give up despite falling behind early, and it would be up to the usual suspects to keep UMass on course for the victory. Also, the game would not be without its milestones, as senior tri-captain Yuri Morales etched his name in the Massachusetts record books early in the contest.

In feeding junior Ptah Myers with the Minutemen's first goal at 26:20, Morales notched his 27th career assist.

Turn to GOAL, page 7

Familiar foes down UMass

GW, Richmond end soccer's season again

By Bob McGovern
Collegian Staff

It appears déjà vu has struck the Massachusetts women's soccer team as it dropped a crucial weekend series against Atlantic 10 opponents George Washington (10-8-0, 7-4-0 Atlantic 10) and Richmond (11-5-2, 8-3-0 A-10). Last year the Minutewomen were defeated in these same two games, eliminating them from the conference postseason.

GW	2
UMass	0

Richmond	7
UMass	3

THE MINUTEWOMEN ATTACKED THE GW GOAL HEAVILY ON FRIDAY, BUT COULD NOT GET A SHOT PAST KEEPER BRIDGET (RIGHT, #0).

George Washington put the initial damper on the Maroon and White's weekend by handing it a 2-0 loss at Rudd Field. The loss statistically ended any chance the Minutewomen had at receiving a post-season bid.

The Maroon and White (6-11-0, 5-6-0 A-10) outshot George Washington 14-12 and hung around the Colonial goal, getting seven out of the game's eight corner kicks.

"We didn't make early enough decisions on defense," said Coach Rudy, in regards to the two goals scored against the Minutewomen in the first half.

George Washington netted its first goal 20 minutes into the game off the foot of Ina Kain, one of the Colonials' premier scorers. Kim Sanders put in the game's final goal at 39:31.

A major cause for the early defensive disruption was the absence of senior defensive player Alexi Rudd. With Rudd out of action there were positional movements causing uncertainty between both the defensive and offensive fronts, especially on the wings.

"We really didn't get any flank play," Rudy said.

The Maroon and White neutralized a very balanced Colonial attack for most of the second half, but had trouble squeezing one by George Washington keeper Kelly Paolucci.

"The big stat was the amount of saves…there were no rebounds, she just ate them up," Rudy said.

Turn to SOCCER, page 7

Minutewomen head to A-10s with victory

By Todd Foster
Collegian Staff

It's tough to keep focus on a goal after a tough struggle to reach it. The Massachusetts field hockey team knew that winning within their conference was the most important mission during this season.

After 14 straight losses, including one in the Atlantic 10, UMass (4-16, 4-2 A-10) won four of its last five games at the end of the season, finishing with a 4-2 A-10 record was good enough for second place in the conference and for a bid to the A-10 tourney.

"Everyone lost faith in us after we lost Anke Bruemmer, who was the main part of the team last year," sophomore forward Caitlin Berevin said. "It was great that we, as a team, could maintain our focus on A-10, and finish second in the conference. Nobody believed we could do it except for us. It's exciting to know that we could do it."

The Minutewomen finished out the season on the road against a struggling Rhode Island team (1-16, 1-5 A-10) this Saturday. The Maroon and White cruised to the 3-0 win in Kingston, R.I. The victory ensured UMass a spot in the A-10 Tournament, beginning on Thursday.

The Minutewomen jumped out to an early lead behind the lead of senior captain Stacey Blue. Blue scored an unassisted goal at the 11:17 mark, which was the only goal of the half.

The first half's stats looked to be pretty even. Each team got three shots off and the Rams had five corners to the Maroon and White's one.

The end stats were even more deceiving as the each team finished with five shots, as URI ended up with seven corners, while UMass had one fewer with six. The game is made up of numbers, but the score is the most important one.

UMass	3
URI	0

Much like the first half, UMass wasted no time going on the attack. Blue was involved again, finding freshman sensation Jamie Bawden for the score only six minutes into the concluding half. Only in her first year, Bawden has led the team in points (10) and goals (five) all season.

At 54:39, senior captain Erika Whiston finished off the Rams with the third and final goal, giving the Maroon and White the shutout victory. The co-captains, Whiston and Blue, have combined for eight points (three goals, two assists) over the last two games.

Ashley Egland was credited with the shutout, though her young defense didn't make her work very hard. URI wasn't able to get a single shot on net Saturday against the UMass defense.

Due to having no chance at playoffs, URI gave sophomore Jennifer Perry the first appearance of her collegiate career. Perry was only able to come up with one save in her debut.

"It wasn't even suspected that we would play that well," Beresin said. "The game against URI was on grass, which was an advantage for them, because [URI] plays on it all the time, was a major disadvantage to us.

"Regardless of the grass, we still played the best game of our season. Our offense and defense worked so well together. It was really exciting, and the defense did such a great job."

With this mission completed, the Minutewomen are focused on an A-10 Championship and a bid to the NCAA Tournament. There is no rest for the women as they depart tomorrow night for Richmond, Va. Head Coach Patty Shea was only able to fit in two practices this week.

"We are just really focusing on our skills, the simple basically," Beresin said. "Taking care of passing and receiving and working our ball patterns, if we do that successfully, no one can beat us."

Spirited Away
Arts page 5.
The college road trip
Ed/Op page 4.
Swimming heads up
Sports page 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY FIVE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.06.02

Election 2002:

Romney wins gubernatorial race

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE, MITT ROMNEY WAS DECLARED THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS LAST NIGHT AFTER SHANNON O'BRIEN CONCEDED THE RACE AT 10:30 P.M. THE RACE HAD BEEN VERY CLOSE UNTIL ROMNEY PULLED AWAY LAST NIGHT.

BOSTON (AP) – Republican Mitt Romney, the man who returned to Massachusetts on a wave of Olympic glory, completed his seven-month sweep into the governor's office on Tuesday by defeating Democrat Shannon O'Brien in the race to replace acting Gov. Jane Swift.

O'Brien called Romney to concede the race shortly after 10:30 p.m.

The son of former Michigan Gov. George Romney had pledged to "clean up the mess on Beacon Hill," capitalizing on a wellspring of anti-government sentiment and fears that electing a Democratic governor along with the Democrat-controlled House and Senate would return Massachusetts to the dreaded days of "Taxachusetts."

The election of Romney, a former venture capitalist, continues 12 years of Republican control of the governor's office in this state where Democrats outnumber Republicans nearly three to one.

Eight years ago, Kennedy successfully attacked Romney's venture capitalist record, accusing him of profiting at workers' expense and even importing Indiana workers who said Romney had cost them their jobs.

O'Brien tried the same tactic, but this time around Romney was able to overcome the accusations, pointing out that the firm he founded, Bain Capital, had created tens of thousands of jobs around the country.

In fact, Romney didn't shy away from his business record on the campaign trail, pledging to use his business expertise to lure companies to Massachusetts, create jobs and keep taxes low. Romney said electing a Democratic governor would create a "Gang of Three" – along with House Speaker Tom Finneran and incoming Senate President Robert Travaglini, both Democrats – that would raise taxes.

All 12 Massachusetts members of Congress are Democrats, too.

Romney fired back at O'Brien, the fourth generation of her family to work in state government, by tying her to the Beacon Hill establishment and highlighting the lobbying work of her husband, a former legislator.

He appealed to voters to elect a Republican to offset the overwhelmingly Democratic Legislature, and he was able to overcome a substantial advantage that O'Brien enjoyed among women, according to polls. O'Brien, 43, was vying to become the state's first elected female governor.

Some voters voiced concern that Romney's national profile from the Olympics could land him a Bush administration post before completing his governor's term – a sensitive topic in Massachusetts, where the last two Republican governors, William Weld and Paul Cellucci, left office before finishing their terms.

Romney also defeated Green Party candidate Jill Stein, Libertarian Carla Howell and independent Barbara Johnson.

Romney and his wife Ann live in Belmont. They have five sons and four grandchildren.

O'Brien had been vying to be the first woman elected Massachusetts governor.

"Mitt sent his personal best to both Shannon and her family and thanked her for her years of work for the commonwealth," said Eric Fehrnstrom, Romney's spokesman.

Romney, 55, led all candidates in the polls after his successful oversight of the Winter Olympic games, but his campaign nearly ended before it got going: Democrats filed a lawsuit to knock him off the ballot, claiming he didn't meet Massachusetts' residency requirement because of the time he lived in Utah.

The challenge was rejected in June, however, and Romney embarked on a campaign full of "work days" meant to dispel his wealthy businessman image and help him understand the concerns of working people. He rode the back of a garbage truck around Boston, for example, pounded nails on the Big Dig, and even slung sausages at Fenway Park.

Romney's only previous political experience was an unsuccessful 1994 bid to unseat Democratic U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy. Romney's father ran for president in 1968 and his mother Lenore ran unsuccessfully for U.S. Senate from Michigan in 1970.

-Associated Press

Question Two passes two to one

'Clean Elections' repealed

By Steve LeBlanc
Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — Voters endorsed a plan to end bilingual education and do away with Massachusetts' Clean Elections law Tuesday, and appeared ready to reject a proposal to abolish the state income tax.

While the bilingual education question rolled the state's immigrant communities, the debate over the Clean Elections law pitted Beacon Hill leaders such as House Speaker Thomas Finneran, D-Boston, against advocates of public campaign financing.

The question with the potential to cause the most turmoil on Beacon Hill seemed headed to defeat as voters appeared willing to pass up an opportunity to end the state's income tax.

Question 1: With 43 percent of precincts reporting, opponents of the repeal effort were ahead of supporters by a 53 to 47 percent margin.

Supporters, including Libertarian gubernatorial candidate Carla Howell, said eliminating the income tax would force lawmakers to make do with less, put more money back in the pockets of taxpayers and create jobs.

But critics warned that ending the tax would drain $9 billion in state revenue each year, make it harder to maintain schools, roads and police and fire services, and drive up property and sales taxes.

Ann Phillips, a 47-year-old registered nurse from Brookline, said she wasn't convinced by the promise of more money and jobs.

"I'd like it, but it's not realistic," she said.

Question 2: Of the three ballot initiatives, the plan to replace bilingual education with a one-year English "immersion" program drew the most heated debate, but gathered enough votes to pass by a more than 2-to-1 margin.

Under the initiative, students not proficient in English would be taught all classes in English.

Supporters said the state's three-decade-old bilingual education program has created an educational ghetto for students not proficient in English.

Opponents said the ballot question would force all school districts to use a "one size fits all" approach to teach English and let parents sue teachers for teaching in a native language.

Nowhere was the debate as fierce as in immigrant communities. Latino activists had rallied opponents at the same time as some Latino parents expressed support for the initiative.

Julie Garcia, 30, a certified nurse assistant from Springfield learned English in school after her family moved to New Mexico from Mexico.

"It's a hard thing, but this is America," Garcia said. "You have to speak English."

Question 3: The last statewide question asked voters whether they really meant what they said four years ago when they approved the Clean Elections law.

Apparently, they didn't, as they voted 3-to-1 on the non-binding question in opposition to the law, which provides public dollars to candidates who agree to fundraising and spending limits.

The law met with bitter resistance from state legislators, who refused to fund or abolish it.

After the state's highest court intervened, lawmakers agreed to pay for the law for one year and put an advisory question on the ballot.

Clean Elections supporters said the wording of the non-binding question was skewed to give lawmakers an excuse to kill campaign finance reform.

Those who oppose the law said the state can't afford to give money to candidates, especially in the middle of an ongoing fiscal crisis.

Opponent also won the financial backing of corporations and wealthy individuals, who poured more than $600,000 into the campaign to defeat the campaign finance law, including $50,000 each from Liberty Mutual Life Insurance, John Hancock Financial Services, State Street Bank and Fidelity Investments.

Art Edward, 85, of Springfield said campaign reform is worth the cost.

"The only way we are going to really get clean elections is by using government money."

SGA brings back Blue Wall bar

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

The Blue Wall will once again turn into a party on the weekends as the proposed plan by the Student Government Association to place a bar back in the Campus Center restaurant was finalized.

The Blue Wall, which will be going under renovations over winter break, will be the home of a new on-campus bar coming in the Spring 2003 semester. Members of the SGA addressed this issue with the Administration, who finalized the proposal over the past week.

President Dave Carr spearheaded the proposal along with his Executive Cabinet and Auxiliary Services. Carr explained that on a daily basis the Campus Center is hoping to make quota, and by bringing a bar back it would not only increase revenue, but also bring students back to the center of campus.

"It's finalized and a bar is going to be in the Blue Wall by the first day of next semester," Carr said. "We're looking to make last call later than that of in town. We're still working out the minor details but we're going to have a huge grand opening when it is complete."

Speaker of the Senate Dan Saunders shared in the excitement of the new implication of a bar in the Blue Wall. Saunders explained that he felt it was great to be refocusing student energy onto campus.

"I'm pretty psyched. It's great to put energy towards the middle of campus," Saunders said. "We've still got a few issues to discuss like safety and parking, but it's exciting and great for the SGA."

Carr shared In Saunders excitement by further explaining that getting a bar on campus is a way to show students that the SGA is working for them.

"For so long the focus of the SGA Presidential and Student Trustee elections have been for these huge changes, and people run on these platforms of [expletive]," Carr said, "By the time they blink it's August and they're done. I've blinked and it's November and I just want to be able to look back and say look at what the SGA did. We worked for the students."

Other issues surrounding Auxiliary Services included implementing the Flex System back into student meal plans.

Due to the popularity of student run businesses such as Greeno and the Sylvan Snack bar, Carr and Executive Cabinet were able to put the Flex System back into student run businesses on campus.

"You can use the Flex System at the Blue Wall and the Coffee Shop and now we've put it back into the budget so that students can use it in student run businesses again," Carr said.

Carr also explained that in relationship to the Your Campus Meal Plan (YCMP) the SGA has worked it out so that meal deals will be available in the various YCMP dining locations.

"You have $6.50 in every swipe, yet only $5.50 is the value given, and that won't even cover a full meal," Carr said. "So now, we've worked it out so that every place will have meal deals that will be $5.50 and give you everything so you won't have to always pay with extra cash."

Members of the Senate have also been working on a variety of issues, specifically surrounding policies within the Residence Halls. Saunders explained that one of his top priorities was looking into Housing Services and its accordance with Massachusetts State Laws as well as looking into disciplinary actions taking place.

"I've been primarily focusing a lot on some bigger issues on campus such as students getting penalized for having very small amounts of marijuana," Saunders said. "I'm also looking into housing with accordance to Massachusetts State Law and if they're working in accordance with that."

Saunders went on to say that as far as motions within the Senate, that he is looking to slow down and work on motions that will actually be put into effect at the University.

"We're going to try and slow down and produce some quality well researched motions and at the same time put them into effect," Saunders said. "We're going to be spending a lot of time working in committees and out of committees to make the best possible changes on campus."

The SGA Senate will convene tonight at 7:00 p.m. in room 174 in the Campus Center. All Senate meetings are open to the public.

Board of Trustees meets with SGA and UMass president to discuss issues

By Kristin Shrewsbury
Collegian Staff

Members of the University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees, along with President William Bulger and members of the Amherst campus student body, gathered yesterday to discuss pressing issues within the Amherst campus.

Issues surrounding what needs improvement on campus as well as gathering student's perspectives on what would improve campus life were a few of the topics discussed. Members of the Board of Trustees split up to address issues with individuals from the University, and used their time as a question and answer period.

Members of the Student Government Association were on hand to discuss issues regarding UMass Auxiliary Services and Housing Services. Questions regarding the budget cuts and their affects as well as possible fee increases at the University were also addressed.

"For a lot of people it went well, but for me it didn't go as well as I would have liked," SGA President Dave Carr said. "The Trustees seemed really interested in us and everybody had a really positive outlook, it was nice to have them get a better idea of what kind of university we are."

Issues surrounding the call for a vote of no confidence in President Bulger were also addressed. Carr explained that Bulger is doing the best he can, especially with the Senate being out of session.

"The unions are calling for a vote of no confidence because he [Bulger] won't call and try to get the Senate to come back for a special session," Carr said. "He said that he was doing what he can, and the only reason I'm siding with him is because there is no way the governor, who vetoed their contracts, is going to call the Senate back for a special session to revote on it. It's just not going to happen."

Issues involving Auxiliary Services, specifically regarding Dining Services, were also addressed. The possibility of adding major food chains to campus was talked about in depth.

"We talked about Auxiliary Services and the food here and possible ways to get maybe a Wendy's or a McDonald's on campus," Speaker Dan Saunders said. "We talked about the pros and cons and even though they can't decide on anything. It was just really refreshing to see that they were attentive to our concerns."

Fund raising and fee increases were also brought up at yesterday's meeting, as members of the Board of Trustees and Bulger discussed some details of the University's financial issues.

"Money is the root of all good and evil and with more money we will be able to get more professors back on campus," Carr said. "We're not getting into classes because we don't have the money and I think this year people understand that more than they did last year. This year we're better off than last year and I think the students' outlooks are not as hateful as they were last year around this time and all the big budget cuts were happening and all the protest. I think people's attitudes are a lot better."

Saunders agreed, also explaining that financially the University is really waiting on the Massachusetts Gubernatorial election.

"One thing that will largely decide how things go is who wins

Turn to TRUSTEE, page 2

UMass votes

University of Massachusetts students came out to vote at polls located all over campus yesterday. The polls were arranged by SCERA (Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy) who needed to get 10% of the student population out and voting in order to keep them for future elections.

According to poll worker Ashleigh Sullivan, the polls kept a steady turnout throughout the day in comparison to the primary election, which received a considerably smaller student turnout. The main problem that was reported by the polls was the number of students who were registered in other areas other than Amherst.

To register in Amherst, students can go to Commuter Services and Off-Campus Housing in room 428 of the Student Union.

By Amy O'Neill and Hiral Shah

Meningitis case reported on University campus

A 22-year-old senior at the University of Massachusetts has been diagnosed with bacterial meningitis. The student, a male from Dorchester, Mass., is hospitalized at Hartford Hospital and listed in critical condition.

According to University sources, the student went to University Health Service on Monday, Nov. 4, complaining about feeling ill. The student was transferred to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton. Cooley Dickinson started the student on antibiotics and transferred him to Hartford Hospital.

According to www.medterms.com, symptoms of bacterial meningitis include high fever, headache and a stiff neck. Nausea, vomiting, discomfort looking into bright lights, confusion and sleepiness are other potential symptoms. In its later stages, patients with meningitis may have seizures.

The diagnosis is confirmed by examining a sample of spinal fluid obtained by a lumbar puncture (spinal tap). Treatment is started as early as possible. Appropriate antibiotic treatment of most common types of bacterial meningitis should reduce the risk of dying from meningitis to below 15%, although the risk is higher among the elderly.

Bacterial meningitis is spread through respiratory and throat secretions.

Anyone within contact of a patient's oral secretions and anyone living within the same household is at risk of contracting the disease.

The student's close friends and family have been contacted and are currently being treated with antibiotics.

-Dan Lamothe

■ trustee

Majors fair tonight

[illegible] will be held tonight from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Student [illegible] sponsored by Pre-Major Advising Services, Commonwealth [illegible] and Undeclared Program, designed for students who have yet to [illegible] or are unsure about choosing a current major.

[illegible] out if one major is right for students to receive information in a [illegible] setting. [illegible] UMass 60 departments and programs will have [illegible] available for discussion and answering questions. Minor departments [illegible] to promote [illegible] certificate programs, including the Asian and [illegible] Studies program, the Non Information Technologies Program [illegible] Women's Studies Program.

[illegible] ROTC and Air Force ROTC will also be represented. [illegible] [illegible] student programs, such as the Native American Student [illegible] NASSU and the Residential Academic Program (RAP) will [illegible].

[illegible] representatives will be discussing major requirements, [illegible] possible career paths. Professors and chief undergraduate [illegible] be answering questions.

[illegible] to receive a large amount of student attention.

[illegible] there's always a lot of energy," said Peter Woodsum, [illegible] Commonwealth College. "It's a good event to make connections [illegible] a big university."

[illegible] progress for advising. "Academic advisors often don't get [illegible] with departments," said Xzanda Sesmor, an organizer [illegible] "It's a good place for advisors to network."

Tevon Saltzsker

Pre-gaming at last

UMass seniors Joey Watkins, Mike Nicosia, and Leo Lichtenberger huddle around hot coals before a football game. The new policy on tailgating has created a much more festive atmosphere at games.

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com

CAN GOD
MAKE A ROCK
~SO LARGE~
THAT HE HIMSELF
CANNOT LIFT IT ?

What would a professor say?
Why not ask one…

Meet a panel of UMass professors who enjoy engaging with thoughtful skeptics and think that Christianity still makes sense in the real world…

…and they will answer questions about what the Bible has to say about gender and sexuality, stem-cell research, war and peace, science, evil, other religions, heaven, hell, what to do about obnoxious roommates
and
really, really big rocks.

Wednesday Nov. 6th 3:00pm

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Wednesday

The Asian American Students Association will be holding a hot pot luck dinner entitled Asian Flava at the basement of Dwight Dormitory at 6 p.m. The event is free for people who bring traditional food to share and $3 for others.

As part of a cultural reflection series, the Hermanos of La Unidad Latina Lambda Upsilon Lambda Fraternity will present the movie I Like It Like That to be followed by discussion about issues raised in the film. The presentation will be held at the Malcolm X Cultural Center beginning at 7:30 p.m. and refreshments will be served.

A lecture by historian Jennifer Sartori, will be held at Smith College's Seelye Hall at 7:30 p.m. The talk is entitled "From Smith to Suffrage to Civil Rights: A Southern Jewish Woman's Odyssey." The event, sponsored by the Lucius N. Littauer Fund in Jewish Studies and the Jewish Studies Program, is free and open to the public.

The National Society of Black Engineers will be holding an interview tips workshop from 6 to 8:30 p.m. in room 811 of the Campus Center. All are welcome and urged to bring their resumes.

The Women's Rosh Chodesh Program will be holding a night of arts and crafts project to take home and will bring together women of the greater Amherst community in celebrating Rosh Chodesh. Light refreshments will be served and the cost of the night will be $7.

Thursday

A talk by Laurence Thomas will be held at 4 p.m. in room 301 of Herter Hall. An African American and Sephardic Jew, Thomas will discuss the theory about narrative identity and group autonomy in the lives of Blacks and Jew, including parts of his own personal story.

A bowling tournament will be held between first year students and seniors. Participants will meet at the Hillel House at 7 p.m.

A Tsedek Hillel Planning Meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Hillel House. Free pizza will be provided. RSVP to tzedekhillel@yahoo.com.

Friday

The Hermanos of La Unidad Latina Lambda Upsilon Lambda Fraternity will present "Lambdas Take Over UMass" at the Malcolm X Cultural Center beginning at 11 p.m.

Conservative, reform and Kehilat Hillel Haazinu Shabbat services will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House. Shabbat dinner will be held at 7:15 p.m. and is free to UMass students on a meal plan.

Saturday

HASA-CASA, the annual semi-formal event held by the Haitian American Student Association and CASA Dominicana, will be held at the Student Union Ballroom from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. It will be the ninth annual event and this year it is entitled "Hispaniola Rise," including food and music from both cultures, speakers, performances and spoken poetry. Admission is $10 for general public and $8 for five College students.

MarKamusic will be holding a show featuring their new album "Women and Children" inviting people to come celebrate the beauty, power and flare of Latin American music. The show starts at 8 p.m. at the Northampton Center for the Arts, 17 New South Street, Northampton. Tickets are $10 and are available for purchase at For The Record in downtown Amherst.

Morning services with Kehilat Hillel Haazinu will be held at 9:30 a.m. in Hillel House followed by a light lunch at 1 p.m.

Monday

Imam Warith Deen Mohammed, leader of the largest Muslim community in North America, will give a free public address at Smith College under a talk entitled "The Power of Ramadan, a Mercy for All Humankind." His lecture will be held at 4:30 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium.

Alexandra Zapruder, author, curator and Smith graduate, will be holding a lecture discussing her new book Salvaged Pages: Young Writers' Diaries of the Holocaust, which won the 2001-2002 National Jewish Book Award. The event will be held at 4:30 p.m. in Smith College's Seelye Hall.

Tuesday

The Socialist-Feminist-Anti-Racist Organization, Solidarity, will be organizing a discussion with Max Elbaum, editor of War Times Newspaper, in room 168 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. The discussion is entitled "Wars and Antiwar Movements: From Vietnam to Iraq."

There will be a Student Alliance For Israel (SAFI) general meeting at 7 p.m. at Hillel House.

Compiled by Rahwa Asmerom

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

NEWS MEETING TOMORROW AT 4PM

CREDIT CARDS OCMP Delivery EXPRESS CLASSIC AMERICAN ROADSIDE DINING and the home of 2 BURGS for 2 BUCKS
Burgers
Hot Dogs
Chicken
Seafood
Fries
Shakes
Smoothies
287 RUSSELL ST
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
585-0241
Burgers & Dogs

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

GET PAID TO GO TO SCHOOL.
TALK ABOUT
ROLE REVERSAL.

The U.S. Air Force will pay for you to continue your education while you serve your country as a nurse. Through selection into the Air Force Institute of Technology program, you could earn your advanced degree in as little as two years and get paid to do it. You'll be part of an elite team of medical professionals who have chosen to serve their country in this proud institution. To learn more about Air Force Nursing, please visit airforce.com or call 1.800.423.USAF to request more information.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily
&
OCMP
The Off Campus Meal Plan
Present
Dining Out
A Guide and Map to Area Restaurants
COMING SOON
November 7th

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

The Packers' Brett Favre:

A vanishing breed

If we gathered a throng of burgeoning American athletes in a room with the purpose of directing them toward a positive athletic career, we'd show them Brett Favre.

We'd tell them not to watch how he plays football, and to mimic how he conducts life.

We'd point to the emotion with which he plays, regardless of score or record and how he gives 100 percent on every play, from beginning to end.

We'd speak of his addiction to painkillers, his subsequent admission and what he did to beat it.

We'd mention the infectious smile and charisma he brings to work everyday, those same characteristics he retains post-win and post-loss. Brett Favre hates losing, yet he accepts defeat and tips his hat accordingly. And unfortunately, in the modern era of blatant conceit on the field of competition, Favre is an antiquity.

Subconsciously he is fighting a battle for sportsmanship and dedication. And it is a struggle that he will almost inevitably lose to attrition. Favre will lose because he is outnumbered by players like Terrell Owens, who attempt to show up opponents with gaudy, self-promoting touchdown celebrations.

Favre will lose because student-athletes who ply their trade on Saturdays, mimic what they see from Owens and company on Sundays.

He'll lose because the antics of Barry Bonds are mimicked by 12-year olds playing to ESPN cameras during the Little League World Series.

He'll lose because Charles Barkley is not a role model, and Jack McDowell flips the bird, and Dennis Rodman kicks cameramen, and Keyshawn Johnson feigns a throat slashing, and the U.S. hockey team trashes hotel rooms, and P.J. Brown body slams Charlie Ward, and Mike Tyson bites Evander Holyfield, and Latrell Sprewell chokes coaches.

We're not saying that Brett Favre is the perfect role model. We're aware of his mistakes, including his pain killer addiction and his supposed dive in the face of Michael Strahan's record-setting sack last season. But what makes Favre a sufficient role model is his ability to fess up and face his flaws.

Too many times we've seen athletes run and hide from adversity, as Sammy Sosa did when Sports Illustrated columnist Rick Reilly called the Cubs slugger on his proclamation that he'd be the first in line for steroid testing if Major League Baseball decreed it.

We're also not saying that Favre is the only adequate role model in professional sports. We are very comfortable looking to athletes such as Boomer Esiason, Wayne Gretzky and David Robinson as positive archetypes for young athletes.

But they too are outnumbered and outgunned by the brash brutes of the modern sporting world. Unfortunately it's the negative stereotypes, portrayed by the likes of Owens and Rodman, that get the headlines and the airtime. While Favre and company are left fighting a losing battle.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Lessons learned on the road

M. KENDRY

There's nothing like the open road. Driving across the American countryside, seeing new cultures and hearing new accents in our great nation. It is truly the epitome of freedom. Heading out to Indiana this weekend, I am in what may be the biggest road trip that I've ever made in a single weekend. The trip had its ups and downs, but overall it was a learning experience that will change the way I travel through the midwest.

A good point to remember is to always pay your tolls. While it's hard to pass getting stuck with the license plate camera, I can't imagine how many people really take to the road without any cash. On the trip out I had to pay 75 cents in tolls, and I amassed no tickets with the license plate camera. I can't thank my self enough a little over $60 dollars in cash. Overall, we did fairly well, scoring 45 states, seven Alaska as well as four Canadian provinces. I'm still in search of Delaware, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, South Carolina, South Dakota and Wyoming, so if you spot them, please, please.

Restaurant food is an interesting subject. McDonald's, Burger King, Ron Rogers Hardees, Come on, let's admit it, it's all the same thing. Should a person really blow the money on the same food they can eat at home, especially at inflated rest stop prices? Now there are exceptions to process. Deep fried burgers (Coughlin). But they are few and far between. In fact on the ride home from Indiana, I didn't eat at Denny's single thing, from the time I woke up at 7 a.m. until I got home around 7 p.m. By the way, why are the Simpsons hawking Burger King?

Lake-effect snow is the real deal. You've heard the weatherman talk about it all the time. The regions around the Great Lakes suffer from huge snowfall due to lake effect snow. As a native New Englander, I've always laughed cautious as to just how much snow could it be than a full blown Nor'easter. I experienced just how menacing the snow could be. Accumulation totals were light and the distance traversed on the storm was less than 20 miles, but it was the suddenness of its approach that affected me. One second it was clear and sunny and the next white flakes were pelting my car. Driving westbound on the New York State Thruway it almost seemed as if I was heading straight towards a white wall.

Don't trust your driving instincts. Driving in the middle of the snowfall, the wipers on my car began to accumulate so much of the white stuff that they were becoming ineffective. My friend suggested rolling my head out my window to wipe the snow off. I tried and it worked the first few times. However, I went to the well one too many times. I pushed the wiper and when I went to snap it back, it jumped off and started to bounce around. It was a miracle the blade did not go flying off into the wilderness, but rather it got pinned down onto the hood until I could stop my car.

For the next half hour, in driving snow, my friend and I tried every trick in the book to attach the wiper back to its arm. It was basically a futile task as the blade had been bent. Finally we got the blade partially attached at least good enough to make it the 17 miles to the next rest stop to have it replaced. And true to Murphy's Law, not five minutes after we began driving again, the snow stopped. Figures.

Try your best not to be a hotel snob. For the past two years, I've stayed exclusively in hotels that were either paid for by WMUA or my mother. Thus, I'm used to some of the best places around. When I first laid eyes on the Best Western Angola Inn, I was not that cheerful. Looking at what in essence was a dressed-up motel, I trudged down to my room. Upon opening the door, I was pleasantly surprised. Though the room contained nothing extraordinary, it was more than adequate, which was unexpected.

Utilize wide-open highways, but don't forget your radar detector. Whenever I venture out on the road, I always feel the need to drive fast. The turnpikes of the Midwest and other highways outside of urban areas are prime candidates for speed. They are long, straight, and have vehicles traveling usually at a minimum of 75 to 80 miles per hour. I was going above that on my way home and unfortunately ran into a member of the Highway Patrol on the Ohio Turnpike. He clocked my van at 86 mph. I was pissed, but also relieved he hadn't seen me a few minutes earlier when I got my trusty minivan up to the 90 mph range. Thanks to the laws of the Buckeye State, what would have been a $160 ticket here in Massachusetts will only be costing me $97.

Road trips are an experience, plain and simple. Over the years they've allowed me to visit 20 states, seeing parts of the country that I may never see again. They also generate stories that as time goes on, turn into lore. I recommend to each and every one of you to grab your keys and take to the highways, exploring this great land of ours. Just watch your speed, forget your appetite, and always trust your local meteorologist.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

Think Ed/Op

The true power of the middle

SAM WILKINSON

During its long history it seems that the University of Massachusetts has spent a great deal of its time looking at issues in the polarized extremes, colors of black and white. Rightly so, as a place where the debate should be genuine and diverse, the issues at hand have hijacked every important issue in recent memory and each has only one way to define the problem, a right and a wrong.

So we are left to the [illegible] students [illegible] of the [illegible] of war, [illegible] unfortunately, the debate often conservatives. Progressives are [illegible] gravitating passionately [illegible] more cautious consideration of [illegible] this war [illegible] stayed quiet [illegible] been shouted [illegible].

The conservatives [illegible] to any [illegible] are [illegible] conception of war [illegible] seen conflicts as [illegible] of the cold war [illegible] arrived. Rumsfeld [illegible] Intelligent [illegible] real possibilities are the most realistic. [illegible] get your gas [illegible] Hussein? [illegible] an immediate [illegible] assault [illegible] their surroundings [illegible] dive-bomb [illegible] attack without [illegible] if to invade [illegible] dentists [illegible] Americans [illegible] seem willing to [illegible] Saddam Hussein [illegible].

This sort of [illegible] and around [illegible] against both [illegible] endless and [illegible] about the situation [illegible] somebody observes the [illegible] is taking place [illegible] any war against Iraq, somebody else can point out that Saddam Hussein has twice attacked his neighbors and a third time attacked a people many in the region. With any mention of the innocent civilians that will surely die as a result of this war, the other side can ask how many Americans would have to die before war is deemed a real threat.

And around, and around, and around.

There are all good points of course, but unfortunately the debate often stops there. Neither side is willing to listen to the other, and anybody bringing a third consideration to the table is immediately dismissed, or worse, immediately shouted down by the opposition. Thus, if anybody says maybe war isn't the best option, conservatives label the person unpatriotic, and if anybody says overthrowing Saddam Hussein is a threat, liberals label the speaker as warmongers. This happens even though intelligent and thoughtful possibilities are the most realistic. I think [illegible] people are confused as our country stands on the doorstep of conflict and helpless to do anything about it. And in the vein of polarized opposites, those who disagree or don't know.

> "Like so many issues at UMass, it is those with opinions toward the middle of these two polar opposites who feel the real heat."

If this sort of subtle thought and consideration doesn't occur, the two extremes of this debate will have once again given the notion of decent academic discourse a bad name. While polarized communication has been a UMass staple for as long as anyone can remember, perhaps it is the brink of war that can end this embarrassing legacy. Unfortunately, this would also require both sides to act maturely and decently, and UMass has rarely been the breeding ground for such behavior.

Sam Wilkinson is a former Collegian Columnist.

Collegian Ed/Op – Everybody's Reading It

Letter to the Editor:

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Uri Strauss's article on Wednesday, October 30, in which he claims that Israel is not a true democracy because it has a "Jewish character." He states that it is a contradiction to be a Jewish state and democratic. Apparently there is a double standard when it comes to judging nations.

Perhaps Mr. Strauss is not aware that the words "In God We Trust" are inscribed on our currency, and are in our national anthem (Editor's note: "In God We Trust" does not appear in "The Star Spangled Banner.") Perhaps Mr. Strauss is also not aware that Christmas is a federal holiday in our nation. Or maybe he never noticed that a big Christmas tree is erected in Washington, D.C. right by the White House every December. I guess we don't have a democracy either. How funny. I've been living in a dictatorship all these years without even knowing it, and in a country with no religious freedom. Wow, was I blind!

Mr. Strauss goes on to say that Arabs cannot vote in the West Bank. Perhaps this is because of Arafat's dictatorship, his censorship of the media, his firing of his cabinet whenever they disagree with him, and his government sentencing people to death by shooting squad without a trial dozens of times a year. Arabs left Israel during the war of independence when Arab leaders put pressure on them to leave, promising them that they could come back as soon as the Arabs drove the Jews into the sea. Those who decided to stay were given Israeli citizenship and full democratic rights.

Arab ministers of Israel's parliament (the Knesset) have traveled to Syria (a neighboring dictatorship that has refused to have peace negotiation with Israel and which the US recognizes as a supporter of terrorism). Most recently, MK Bishara traveled to Syria where he not only preached anti-Israel sentiment, but also encouraged Palestinian terrorism (World Socialist Web Site-April 16th 2002). Azmi Bishara traveling to Syria and encouraging violence is equivalent to an American senator traveling to Taliban-controlled Afghanistan after September 11 and praising the Taliban. One would assume that such action would warrant a fine or impeachment if not arrest, as this would surely happen anywhere else. Instead, none of this happened. A democracy with so much freedom that members of the government are free to go to enemy states and support terrorism in their own country.

If anyone is going to be accused of being racist, perhaps it is the PLO, who is a supporter of suicide bombing to kill as many Jewish men, women, and children possible just because they're Jewish. Mr. Strauss also blasts Jews living in "fortified Jewish-only towns connected by Jewish-only roads". The towns are fortified because Palestinian terrorists keep on trying to get in to kill civilians, like the two teenage girls and their mother who were shot to death by a Palestinian terrorist who infiltrated a settlement today.

The elements of religion in our government do not at all infringe on the democratic character of our country, and just as religion and democracy have been able to co-exist in our nation, so have they been able to co-exist in Israel.

Israel has always strived for peace, and I am proud of the United States to be able to see the facts and support Israel.

Gilad Skolniek
UMass student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.06.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER FASTWOOD

The Black Pirate

Gift of the Game

Divining Mom

Last Ball

Northampton Independent Film Festival offers diverse cinematic lineup

About 10,000 expected to attend event

By Matthew Despres
COLLEGIAN STAFF

NORTHAMPTON — It is the eve of the eighth annual Northampton Independent Film Festival, a celebration and study of thoughtfully produced local and national cinema, and festival Managing Director Charlie Burke is quietly in control of the last-minute details, handling each frame individually as opening night draws near.

"It has been good, it's been busy," says Burke, who was brought in some four months ago to help maintain a project undergoing a slight shift in identity. "We're putting together pamphlets, putting out program books, and we're looking for volunteers. We have a really high caliber group of people involved. Everybody has come together with their expertise and made this what it is. [The NIFF] is a total group effort."

Though voluntary help will continue to sweep in throughout the week, the groundwork for the festival has long been in place; beginning tonight at the Academy of Music and running through Sunday, the festival will screen some 85 films at four locations: the Academy, the Pleasant Street Theater, Wright Hall and Stoddard Hall on the campus of Smith College. It will also play host to interactive panels and award presentations at Harry's and the Northampton Center for the Arts. Burke estimates between 8,000-10,000 people will attend in some capacity during the next five days.

With an emphasis on art produced under the radar, without the backing of commercial enterprises, the NIFF will stress the work of North American independent filmmakers, particularly those working out of the New England area.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity to get to see new work and independent work that won't be distributed at commercial theaters," said Carolyn Anderson, a professor in the Communication department at the University of Massachusetts, and the UMass representative in the Five-College Film Council. "[The festival] is also a great opportunities to see older films in new environments."

With panel discussions scheduled throughout the week addressing a range of topics from screenwriting to the roles of gender in film, the festival has evolved into more than a reflector of cinematic trends; it also allows for absorption and discussion of those ideas, a necessary exchange for local students, according to Anderson.

"[It's a great chance] to meet the filmmakers and discuss their work with them," she said. "I think [students] have an enlarged sense of the diversity and excitement of independent cinema."

As part of the festival organization, Burke has taken additional steps to harness that excitement and involve the local community to an even greater degree.

"We have a couple of students from the [UMass] Communication department who we gladly had come in and help take over certain aspects of the festival," says Burke. "Some are college graduates who have come into help, there are a couple of professionals who have offered their expertise in film and video. We've gotten help from a lot of people who are offering different aspects of what they can do."

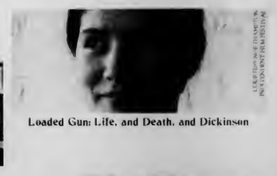
A similar diversity has extended to the NIFF schedule itself. Documentary (Gift of Game, Loaded Gun and The Last Editor), animation (the special appearance of Disney's Spirited Away), comedy and drama are well represented.

Of particular interest for Valley residents is the closing day schedule on Sunday, Nov. 10, which highlights films of special local interest. Loaded Gun: Life, and Death, and Dickinson considers the life of poet and Amherst resident Emily Dickinson, while Downside Up captures the rebirth of North Adams through Mass MoCA, the largest museum of contemporary art in America.

"All independent films open a dialogue on something that is important and crosses through all ages and interests," says Burke. "That's what this festival is doing."

The Northampton Independent Film Festival opens tonight and runs through Sunday. For more information, go to www.niff.org.

SPIRITED AWAY IS ONE OF THE MANY FILMS THAT WILL BE SCREENED AT THIS YEAR'S NORTHAMPTON INDEPENDENT FILM FESTIVAL. THE FESTIVAL OPENS TONIGHT AND RUNS THROUGH SUNDAY.



Don't Ask, Don't Tell

Adrift

The Last Editor: The Story of Jim Bellows

Loaded Gun: Life, and Death, and Dickinson

Jam Master Jay: Losing a rockin' influence

ROCKIN' OUT
With Samara Marblestone

I'm usually up-to-date with things, but this case is an exception. I was watching a re-run of "Friends" last week when my friend casually turned to me and asked if I heard that Jam Master Jay (Run-DMC's DJ) was shot in the head in New York.

Chills ran all throughout my body. No, I didn't know that he had been murdered.

The death of a member of Run-DMC affected me for a very personal reason. Two nights before I came up to school for this semester, my friend and I went to see Run-DMC, Kid Rock, and Aerosmith perform at Jones Beach Theater on Long Island. I was in the front row, and I remember two things very clearly from the whole concert. The first was how Run-DMC opened up the concert to a barely half-filled venue with only a 20-minute set. They didn't care at all. They were so energetic and amazing. I'm personally not a huge rap fan, but these guys made me smile. The second thing I remember is that I was one of the last few to see Jay Master Jay live on stage. Read a little further to find out the details.

I wasn't sure whether or not to write about Run-DMC's loss in my column for this week, but then I realized, how could I not write about this? I had doubts because Run-DMC is a rap group, and I'm a rock columnist. Then I stopped thinking so hard and realized that if it were not for Run-DMC's influence, rock would be nothing like it is today.

Without Run-DMC, an unsteady bridge over boiling lava may have, to this day, separated the worlds of rock and rap.

Let's travel back in time to 1986. Besides the big hair and lots of unnecessarily used cans of hair spray, something took place in that year that forever changed the world of rock 'n' roll. It involved not only a rock group named Aerosmith (who at the time were struggling to gain back their then-diminishing popularity), but also an up-and-coming rap group called Run-DMC. These two music groups took a chance and decided to do something that had never been done in the history of music, and that was to have a popular rock band and a popular rap group collaborate and perform a song together. Aerosmith's previously recorded track, "Walk This Way," was chosen to have Run-DMC rap Steven Tyler's original lyrics.

And the rest is history.

Not only was the collaboration a huge success, but so was the video. If anyone has seen the video (and I hope that everyone has), the very beginning shows Aerosmith and Run-DMC performing the same song in different rooms. Finally, Steven Tyler "breaks through the wall" and they perform together. This symbolizes the imaginary wall that once previously separated rock and rap, and how it had finally been broken down.

Now, let me get back to the second best thing about the concert I attended before I came to school. The concert's finale was Aerosmith and Run-DMC performing "Walk This Way" together, along with Kid Rock.

It was absolutely amazing.

Towards the end of the song, Tyler and two of the members of Run-DMC came to the front of the stage, put their arms around each other's shoulders, and danced like they did at the end of their music video. The crowd went insane — myself included.

Never again will all of the original members of Run-DMC and Aerosmith perform their groundbreaking collaboration live, and I was one of the few privileged to see it for one of the last times.

If it were not for this famous collaboration, several rock bands would not be around today. In fact, for the past few years, a new genre in rock has broken out. Groups like Papa Roach, Linkin Park, 311, Subline, Incubus, the Necrotiones and Kid Rock would not be around today if it wasn't for Run-DMC. Almost all of these rock groups have a DJ in their band and/or have rap lyrics to compliment rock instruments.

It makes me sick to my stomach to think that a member of the original influential group had his life, talent and influence taken away all due to a gunshot to the head.

I hope that now that everyone realizes how important Run-DMC was to the world of rock n' roll. Who knows what it would be like if it weren't for them.

Funkmaster Flex had a tribute to Jam Master Jay the night after he was murdered and said something that caught my attention: "Sometimes when we talk about people passing away, sometimes you forget to say you miss a good person."

Thanks to Run-DMC for not only changing the world of rock n' roll, but for also taking a chance to do something that had never been done before.

Samara Marblestone is a Collegian Columnist.

DJ JAM MASTER JAY PERFORMS IN LAS VEGAS IN THIS MAY 12, 2001 PHOTO. HIS GROUP, RUN-DMC, HAS BEEN CREDITED FOR BRIDGING RAP AND ROCK MUSIC.

JAM MASTER JAY, A.K.A. JASON MIZELL, OF THE GROUNDBREAKING TRIO RUN-DMC WAS SHOT IN HIS NEW YORK RECORDING STUDIO LAST WEEK.

PALLBEARERS CARRY THE COFFIN OF RUN-DMC MEMBER JAM MASTER JAY AFTER FUNERAL SERVICES AT THE ALLEN A.M.E. CATHEDRAL IN NEW YORK YESTERDAY.

Del serve up killer hip-hop show

By Justin Chellman
COLLEGIAN STAFF

DEL
Pearl Street Nightclub
Oct. 29

NORTHAMPTON — This semester, there haven't been many hip-hop shows in the Five College area. In the past, the area has made up for lost time, with an [illegible] Del show in the same week. What the area has been missing is not back in quality, because last Tuesday, [illegible] Del ripping it up with some rare [illegible] act but with a whole crew of great underground artists from the west coast. Out of the five different [illegible] there came strong Pearl Street was actually a little more intimate than a usual Tuesday night but even [illegible] lacked to size it made up for in particular [illegible] support crowd can be really mixed, with a lot of [illegible] showing up with a variety of musical [illegible] an emcee coming to this area doesn't [illegible] when out in the crowd. They're greeted [illegible] kids who look like they thought it was a [illegible] girls and breakers in old school [illegible] Sometimes if an emcee really rips it [illegible] they can have a better show than they [illegible] higher profile areas. Case in point: last [illegible] School yard pointed out that [illegible] New York City, because people at [illegible] City generally go to socialize and drink [illegible] In comparison, the Northampton [illegible] digging the show nothing and from the start [illegible] going. All shows are slow to start [illegible] all the heads bobbing in the front rows [illegible] feet rolled on stage in a cloud of smoke [illegible] School Yard who have an LP out in storest, [illegible] Asia is known for spitting lyrics with [illegible] control to power the lights on stage, and as [illegible] strobes the rest of his crew. They [illegible] on stage and tore the place open over [illegible] which enticed ladies to jump on [illegible]

[illegible] two more emcees, who go by the [illegible] Under The Stairs, jumped on stage, both [illegible] to the turntables to set up their own [illegible] the two, Double K, threw the record he wanted on and began to cut it up as the other, Thes One, messed with a few buttons, making sonic killer bass sounds. They were then joined by their friend Jaz who, along with Thes Ones, freestyled for a few. Then Double K eventually stepped out from behind the tables and joined his crew in getting the whole venue jumping.

They went through a variety of songs from their three-album catalog, all of which showcase a sound that could be classified as retro-rap. When the three were on stage they took the audience through a time portal and made it seem for a while that it was the late '80s or early '90s all over again. They had the crowd responding to them while they rhymed over KRS ONE's Black Cop beat. Then Thes One treated the audience to a fast-paced 91-style rap, and an even more retro "Hang Loose" where I felt like I was listening to the Sugar Hill Gang as I watched Thes One And Jaz dance and perform on stage, giving each other daps and throwing themselves against each other. People Under The Stairs even outperformed Del, who headlined the whole show.

This is not to say that when Del came out on stage that he didn't rip it. Del was introduced by a young three man crew whom I've never heard of before, save for one of the emcees in it named EsMC. They got everyone hyped up so that the climate was set for Del (they claimed that Massachusetts is too cold for west coast heads so they needed to raise the temperature in the room for him).

Once they felt it was hot enough in the club Del came out on stage and the place got crazy as he ripped some of his favorites from throughout his career. He focused mainly on his songs from "Deltron 3030" and "Both Sides of the Brain," but gave us a few old school gems such as "Mr. Dobilina." Del has always been one of my favorite emcees and I feel that his wordplay, talent, and rhyme subject matter has always made him one of the top emcees in the game, and for a guy who has been dropping albums for over a decade he still can be versatile and make music that still appeals to new crowds. My one concern was that Del didn't perform long enough, but I guess that is what results from having a show with so many incredible acts. It could also be compounded by the fact that Del was the only act not promoting a new CD. Del was actually touring as the headliner so that with his name recognition, more people would come out to see the other acts. Finally, each of the acts came on stage for an encore of freestyles and back-and-forth rhymes that capped the evening off with a kick. We need more shows like this in our area so look out for when they happen and go see them. And for all those that attended the show and didn't play the wall, hats off to you all because it was all about the participation.

Ska-punk fun from Mustard Plug

THE SIX MEMBER SKA-PUNK BAND MUSTARD PLUG SERVE UP A DIFFERENT CD WITH YELLOW #5, THEIR FOURTH STUDIO ALBUM

By Dan Paladino
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MUSTARD PLUG
Yellow #5
Hopeless Records

Mustard Plug's fourth album, Yellow #5, finds the six-piece Michigan ska-punk band sticking to their fun-loving ska goodness, but toning down parts of their sound with mixed results.

Yellow #5 offers a few memorable treats, but ultimately lacks the lasting effect and consistency of previous Mustard Plug albums. Mustard Plug's latest album starts strong, but fizzles out through its short eleven tracks.

During the last eight years, Mustard Plug has earned the reputation of being one of third wave ska's most impressive groups, known best for their energetic live shows and anthems like "Skank by Numbers," "Miss Michigan" and "Lolita." Well-known for their bouncy rhythms, chant-along punk choruses, and infectious ska hooks, Mustard Plug return in 2002 after a three year hiatus with a couple new members and a slightly different sound.

Yellow #5 revs up promisingly with "Not Enough" and "Get it Going On," perhaps the two best songs on the album. "Not Enough" shows off the old school Mustard Plug sound of chugging guitars mixed with a frenzied horn section (Jim Hofer on trombone and Brandon Jenison on trumpet), creating a fast-paced and lively opening track.

"Get It Going On" takes the invigorating tempo of the opener a notch higher. Original member and vocalist Dave Kirchgessner sings in his charmingly quirky voice, "Listen up children, heed the words I say! There are people amongst us, who have lost their way! Some people have forgotten what it's all about/Rock-n-roll is here to make you dance and shout."

More reminiscent of the horns-driven melodies of Evildoers Beware! (1997), this song will undoubtedly have show-goers skanking with arms and legs flailing. Predictable ska lyrics aside, the quick pace of "Get it Going On" shows Mustard Plug at its most fun and musically potent.

The album progresses into the slower "The Park," which works well with the previous two tracks. It also sports some nifty transitions and vocals.

Like some of the later tracks on Yellow #5, the next track, "You Want It, We Got It" is missing the sense of urgency in the chorus that makes Plug's older songs so memorable and addictive. The sudden rush of horns and guitars that sweep up a ska chorus and made "Skank by Numbers" a danceable classic is absent here. It's still a good time, just nothing spectacular.

The next track, "Already Gone," sends the upbeat Yellow #5 to a screeching halt. While there's absolutely nothing wrong with a ska song being low key, the vocals in "Already Gone" are droning and lack intensity.

"No One But Myself," "In Your Face" and "Sorry Now" also suffer from lackluster choruses.

While Mustard Plug picks the tempo back up with the ska-core beauty "Safe," the album never quite picks up where the first four promising tracks left off.

Later songs such as "Just a Minute" and "Your Secret" are also head-nodding tunes with catchy beats that essentially got caught on the wrong end of the album.

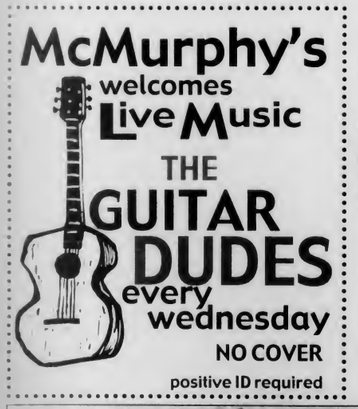
The most noticeable change in Mustard Plug's sound is their heavier emphasis on guitar riffs rather than the horn section, which usually drives the melody of their tunes. The trumpet and trombone are still key driving elements, but to a lesser extent than in the classic and unforgettable Evildoers Beware!. Mustard Plug seems more at home in the old sound, and it shows in Yellow #5.

Upon a first-time listen to Mustard Plug's latest album, Yellow #5 felt like a flat alternative to the band's usual sound. After a couple more spins in the CD player, however, it became obvious that the album had some good things to offer – they were just scattered around a bit. Despite its flaws, Yellow #5 is still worthwhile ska-punk fun, coming from one of the very best groups in the genre.

Skiba and Seconds prove they can stand on their own

By Anne Orsbirsky
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MATT SKIBA/KELVIN SECONDS
Any CD
Alkaline Man



Matt Skiba, from the [illegible] punk band Alkaline [illegible] frontman for [illegible] punk band Seven [illegible] both solo projects [illegible] split. The ten [illegible] acoustic, and each [illegible] instruments for his [illegible] On this split both [illegible] certainly proved [illegible] to make it on their [illegible] the security blan- [illegible] successful bands.

[illegible] solo careers, some artists opt to create an entirely different sound from the band they are involved with. In Skiba's case, he chooses to stay true to Alkaline Trio's signature style. The four acoustic tracks written by Skiba are energetic with a punk rock backbone, and have lyrics typical of most Alkaline songs: those of anger, alcoholism, heartbreak, and self-loathing. On the first song, "Good Fing Bye" he sings, "When you lose hope/ it's hard to cope/ watching the tyranny with sober eyes/ at daybreak or sunset/ all hours in between are spent murdering time."

Although his work lacks some of the drive and gut-wrenching emotion that makes Alkaline Trio's work distinctive, Skiba has displayed his ability as a versatile musician and has created a few great songs. His last contribution to the split is an acoustic/piano rendition of "Soul to Keep (For Phyllis)," originally done by Seven Seconds.

Seconds, on the other hand, has chosen a sound completely different from the material previously put out by his band. Rather than the old school hardcore sound of Seven Seconds, a few of the songs on the split sound like something resembling early Beatles tunes. The songs are upbeat, melodic, dangerously catchy, with entertaining elements such as hand claps, "hey" and "na na na" choruses. The lyrics, like Skiba's, describe troubled relationships but are less bleak. In the opening song, "Extra Something," Seconds sings, "Spaced out little dreamer/ Beat along and disappear/ you made me swallow something/ my pride or was it my fear?" In his solo work, Seconds has created a new sound for himself and shows extreme talent.

Overall this was an enjoyable CD to listen to. Having been an avid fan of Alkaline Trio's music in the past, it was pleasantly surprising for me to hear what Skiba had to offer as an unaccompanied act. Also, the sharp contrast between the previous sound of Seconds' band and his work on this album was unexpected, but it turned out to be a welcome change. Certainly, one does not need to be a punk rock fan to enjoy this collection of work from already established names in this musical genre.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT
PRE-REGISTRATION FOR SPRING 2003

The Writing Program Placement Test
will be offered on:
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 &
@ 7 P.M.
IN BARTLETT 61
(This is the last scheduled test until summer 2003 orientation)
This test may be taken only once.

Students should pre-register for ENGLWP before pre-registration ends.
Students do not need to register for the test.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING.
✔ Student Discounts
✔ Professional Bartending Training
✔ Tips on Finding a Top Paying Job
✔ Become a Talented, Socially Conscious Bartender
✔ National Restaurant Association Alcohol Awareness Program
✔ Great Part-time or Summer Job
LEARN TO BARTEND IN A WEEKEND!
Call Now, Space is Limited!
-November 15TH - 17TH
-LEWIS-SEBRING ROOM
-VALENTINE HALL
-AMHERST COLLEGE
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

'Laramie Project' spellbinding

By Melissa A. Thompson
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

COURTESY RANCOUDOM

SHEPARD

"You have a responsibility to say it correct." These were the final words spoken by Mike Wienke in the role of Father Schmidt at the Williston Northampton School theater group's production of The Laramie Project on Saturday night.

And say it correct they did. The show was a moving and informative look at the reaction of the town of Laramie, Wyoming to the beating and subsequent death of Matthew Shepard in Oct. 1998. It was unbelievable that the sweet, eager high school students that I spoke to before the show were the same ones just up on stage who had transformed themselves into the characters and who did such justice to their roles.

The Tectonic Theater Project and writer Moises Kaufman based the play on more than 200 interviews with townspeople, and then presented these personalities up on stage. The result was a multi-faceted look at the tragedy from beginning to end. The roles included friends of Shepard, his academic advisor from the University of Wyoming, religious figures from Laramie, the doctors who treated him, the young man who discovered him lashed to a fence outside of town, and the policewoman who first responded to the scene. Every viewpoint that surrounded his tragic death is expressed, including the great sorrow and anger of Shepard's parents and friends, the homophobic townspeople, and the media's reaction to the event. I found myself experiencing conflicting emotions as I watched the show. I truly did see a little bit of myself in all of the characters.

True to the Williston Northampton School theater group's director David Nields, however, is the sense of hope that I took away with me from the performance. As Susan Daniels, the guest director, noted on the back of the program, "By experiencing The Laramie Project, the torch has been passed. As audience members, as witnesses, like the people of Laramie, we are no longer impartial observers to an isolated incident that is foreign to our experience. We are now a group of individuals, empowered to affect change."

The Laramie Project was an invaluable experience examining both society's views and our own.

Belichick shows he still knows Drew

It happened again.

Once again, Drew Bledsoe came into a game against Bill Belichick as one of the top choices for the Most Valuable Player Award in the National Football League. Once again, Belichick stopped Bledsoe in his tracks and likely showed the league how to stop the Buffalo offense.

Belichick threw so many different wrinkles at Bledsoe that, a few times, No. 11 looked up to see four linebackers, seven defensive backs, and zero defensive linemen.

Bledsoe's stats aren't had on paper (28-for-45, 302 yards, one touchdown, one interception), but it was the mental errors that were obvious. Bledsoe would take a sack to knock the Bills out of field goal range instead of throwing the ball away – that kind of thing.

The situation is eerily similar to what the current Patriots head coach did to Bledsoe in 1999. Back then, Bledsoe was the quarterback for New England and Belichick was the defensive coordinator for the New York Jets. Bledsoe's Patriots started out 6-2 and Bledsoe was the early candidate for MVP. Belichick destroyed Bledsoe, forcing him into mistakes, interceptions and a 24-17 loss in Foxboro. The Patriots finished the season 2-5 in its last seven, missed the playoffs and Bledsoe hadn't been the same until the trade to Buffalo.

Year after year, Belichick seemed to have Bledsoe's number, sparking rumors that he didn't mind trading the QB to AFC East foe Buffalo because he knew how to beat him.

It will be interesting to see how the Bills, and Bledsoe specifically, will bounce back from the 38-7 trouncing. Will they roll over and die, a la New England in 1999, or will they come back and make a statement next week against a tough Miami squad on Sunday night? Only now will we actually see how much Drew Bledsoe has grown since the trade to Buffalo.

First half awards

Offensive MVP – LaDainian Tomlinson – San Diego – RB

Brett Favre seems to be the big choice for the major publications. That seems like a good enough choice, as did Bledsoe before this weekend's game. I, however, am going to go with Tomlinson, who is second in the NFL with 845 yards and has led the Chargers out to a 6-2 start and a share of the AFC West lead.

Tomlinson's workhorse mentality has quickened the learning curve for second-year QB Drew Brees and given the Chargers' terrific defense plenty of time to rest between defensive drives. Without Tomlinson, the Chargers are no better than 4-4, probably more like 3-5 or 2-6.

One could make arguments for Favre or Bledsoe, but this one seems rather easy to me.

Defensive MVP – Derrick Brooks – Tampa Bay – LB

This one isn't as easy. No one is standing out over everyone else. There's Brian Urlacher from Chicago, who is leading the NFL with 83 tackles. You could look at rookie end Julius Peppers from Carolina, who has amassed an impressive nine sacks. Consistent stalwarts Warren Sapp, Jesse Armstead, Zach Thomas and Jason Taylor are all having strong years, but Brooks deserves this honor the most.

On a team that has had trouble scoring, Brooks has been like instant offense on the defensive side of the ball. No. 55, who had to take on a greater leadership role back when Hardy Nickerson left the Bucs for Jacksonville, holds a share of the league lead in interceptions with four. Brooks has returned three of those picks for touchdowns, including a 97-yarder. He is on pace to make over 100 tackles, has deflected seven passes and made a sack. On a team that must rely on its defense heavily, Brooks is the most valuable player.

Next week: Offensive and Defensive Rookies of the Year.

My fantasy team

Lonesome Sundays had a good run this week, despite the Kansas City bye week. Who would have thought that with all the bad luck I've been having, I would win without the best fantasy player in the league, Priest Holmes. L.S. scored the third most points in the league and improved to 4-5, good to finally get out of the cellar. My team did fall from second to third in the league in points scored this week, but still has, by far, the most points scored against.

I guess that's something to hang one's hat on.

If this was college football…

Here is how my top five would look (there are only five because Regan has diarrhea of the mouth):

1. Green Bay (7-1)[Last Week: 2] – The Packers took down Miami, which was the No. 3 team in last week's poll. The Dolphins are out of the top five because of the severity (24-10) of the beating. They'll be back once they get back on track. That'll happen whenever Jay Fiedler comes back to play quarterback. It was nice to see Ahman Green find the endzone twice last night, as he has been putting up decent yardage, but couldn't find paydirt. Two touchdowns on Monday night may get him on the right track.

2. Denver (7-2)[Last Week: 4] – The Broncos are quickly becoming the team to beat in the AFC. After a bye this week that saw them jump two places, Mike Shanahan's squad will take on the Raiders on Monday Night Football. If you read this column every week, you know which team I'll be rooting for in that AFC West matchup.

3. New Orleans (6-2)[Last Week: 6] – Another bye week team, another move up in the poll. The Saints suffered a tough, last-second 37-35 loss to the Atlanta Falcons two weeks back, but I just have a really good feeling about them. The offensive combination of Deuce McAllister and Aaron Brooks should be lethal for years to come.

Next week's game at Carolina should be an absolute trouncing.

4. San Francisco (6-2)[Last Week: 7] – The Niners made it two in a row this week with an overtime score over the dreaded Oakland Raiders. The offense is looking better of late, but it the defense will be challenged next week against the tough Kansas City offense. Terrell Owens was lethal, catching 12 passes for 191 yards.

The Niners now own the Bay Area bragging rights for some time, as the two teams will not meet again until 2006.

5. Tampa Bay (7-2)[Last Week: 8] – Tampa probably shouldn't have made the top five, but Head Coach Jon Gruden finally listened to me and got Keyshawn Johnson the ball. Keyshawn caught nine passes for 133 yards and two touchdowns – one more than he had all of last year. Guess what…the Bucs beat Minnesota 38-24 for their seventh win.

Now, if Michael Pittman could only get anything done.

Gimme pick of the week

If you are a gambling man, take St. Louis at home over San Diego. I'm not sure what the point spread will end at, but expect the Rams to win what should be a high-scoring affair by at least two touchdowns.

Obviously, take the over.

0-fer watch

Sadly, this will be the final 0-fer watch as the Cincinnati Bengals beat up on the expansion Houston Texans, 38-3 this week. Cincy QB Jon Kitna threw for 263 yards and four touchdowns on 22-for-27 passing.

Make sure to check in next week, as Pig's Skinny will have a new section in this space.

Don't worry, the Bungals will still be trashed in that section, too.

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist. Pig's Skinny runs every Wednesday.

■ notebook

continued from page 12

Sports Network Poll and 19th in the ESPN/USA Today vote.

The Huskies still have an outside shot at the postseason with just two conference losses, and could most definitely help their cause with a victory over Villanova. The Spiders are all but done in terms of tournament chances, but could play spoiler when they host Maine and travel to William and Mary in the last two weeks of the season.

At least the benches didn't float away

After a biblical amount of rain the week before, the grounds crew at Rhode Island had the task of finding all the pieces of decimated Meade Field. Too bad the crew couldn't find the pieces of Rhode Island's offense.

James Madison ended its five-game losing streak with a 15-11 victory over the Rams, who attempted just six passes – completing six – and threw one for an interception.

The Dukes struggled on the ground, picking up just 136 yards on 52 carries, but the passing game was in tact as Matt LeZotte completed 13 of 15 tosses for 176 yards of offense. JMU controlled the ball for almost 35 minutes, and did not commit a turnover in the game. Raymond Hines was best on the ground, with 97 yards and a touchdown.

Jayson Davis was less than stellar, running the ball 17 times for 58 yards. The Rams got a pair of safeties in the closing minutes, but it was not enough to propel them to victory.

URI is facing the toughest ending schedule of any A-10 team, as it hits the road for games against William and Mary and Villanova before finishing the season at home against UMass. JMU has a week off before hosting William and Mary at home and Northeastern on the road to end its campaign.

Pride finds non-conference success

The Pride is having a subpar season, with five consecutive conference losses going into this weekend's game against Elon College. Holstra fell behind 6-0, but ran off 13 consecutive points to spur the offense. Ryan Cosentino went 22-for-31 for 271 and a touchdown in the victory.

New Hampshire and Maine both had byes last week.

■ Notre Dame

continued from page 10

booth opened, a line of well over 100 people had already formed. And for those with money, there are ticket brokers. Get ready to open your checkbook though, as tickets that have a face value of $45 were going anywhere from $295 to $650 apiece, courtesy of Shamrock Seats, just one of many brokers.

Students are at least guaranteed tickets. Yet that doesn't mean that a few extra prayers are not being said at the Grotto. "[The process for getting tickets] is a crazy lottery system," Pamela Jefferson said. "It's completely by luck whether or not you get good seats of not. You can't improve your chances at all. The seniors are all in a section near the 50-yard-line and the freshmen all get stuck in the end zone… but you could be in the first row or in the 50th [row], up in heaven."

2:02 p.m. Less than a half hour before kickoff, the stadium is mostly filled, with the rest of the fans swarming around the band outside the student section.

The stadium, empty three hours earlier when I walked through the end zone, was now nearing capacity. Finally, after a rousing national anthem sung by many in attendance, the Fighting Irish appeared in their tunnel. To say there was an excitement over the green jerseys being worn by Notre Dame on that Saturday is an understatement. When the first player became visible to the crowd, the stadium erupted. It was a huge step in Head Coach Tyrone Willingham's drive for the "sea of green."

Willingham, himself often in a green polo shirt, has encouraged students and other fans to wear green to the games.

In his postgame press conference, Willingham discussed the importance of the green jerseys and the "sea of green."

"The sea of green is important because it talks about an attitude," he said. "It talks about the Notre Dame family and football team coming together and being as one. And so I thought it was a great time, as we speak of the jerseys, to have our team to be a part of that oneness, that single mindedness, that pursuit of victory. Our young men were excited to wear the green jerseys today…"

4:59 p.m. Now well into the game and behind Boston College by a score of 14-0, the Fighting Irish fans remain ever faithful and supportive of their team.

From early on in the game, it was clear that the Notre Dame players on the field were not the same players that had vaulted to an 8-0 start and a No. 4 ranking. It didn't matter to the fans in the stands, especially the students. Even after seven fumbles, three of them lost, and two interceptions, the spectator support remained.

The student section in the northwest corner of the stadium remained loud, proud and vocal for the entire 60 minutes of action. And sure enough, when Carlyle Holiday connected with Maurice Stovall on an impossible touchdown pass with 2:25 remaining in the game, the fans were all there to cheer, with the students proceeding with their customary pushups.

6:14 p.m. I make my way to the pressroom, anxious to hear Coach Willingham's response to the day's heart breaking loss.

Despite the fact that Notre Dame lost the game 14-7, all but dooming their national title hopes, Willingham did not make any excuses, nor did he hide his emotions.

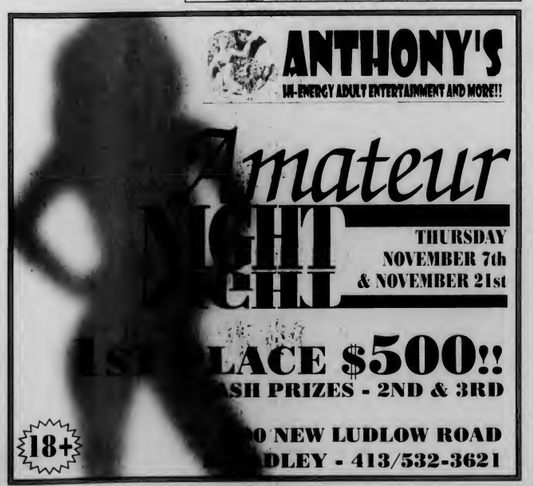
"We are not going to be a coaching staff or a program of young men that whine and complain about calls," he said. "I'm hurt. I'm disappointed because I felt like it didn't have to happen. Our team, not an individual, did not live up to our expectation today."

6:51p.m. Following Willingham's remarks, I start the walk back to my car, getting one last glimpse at Notre Dame and its supporters.

The loss to Boston College was heartbreaking to the Irish, particularly at the hands of the Eagles. Before the game, fans felt that Boston College "shouldn't be here. They shouldn't even try." Notre Dame fans were respectful after the game. There were no "BC sucks" chants, no angry words shouted at the visiting fans. (The same could not be said for the Eagles' supporters.)

Waiting outside the stadium gates were thousands of fans. It was now bordering on an hour after the end of the game. Yet here they were, fans of all ages waiting. They waited patiently for the Fighting Irish, for their players. People were asking any member of the team, from the starting quarterback to the backup kicker, for his autograph. It was irrelevant that the team had just lost in such a devastating fashion. This was still their team.

Willingham remarked, "Every young man on this team was playing to win that football game today, and that I'm proud of." Those not in the locker room knew this as well, and now they were showing it with unflinching support following a terrible defeat.



7:35 p.m. Now out of the parking lot, I head back to the Indiana Toll Road to make the drive back to my place.

As a Fighting Irish fan myself, I too was upset. However, I think I probably reacted to such a loss better by being at the game, amid the throngs of fellow devotees, than if I had been in my dorm room here at UMass. The support of the crowd was awe-inspiring. From the moment I stepped onto campus in the morning until I pulled my car out of the parking lot later that evening, I felt like a member of the family. At least for a day, I was a part of the greatest fan base in college football. Even if I never again set foot in South Bend, it is a memory that I will cherish for the rest of my life.

Regan McKeudry is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

AUTO FOR SALE

91 Acclaim needs work $350 545-0547

87 Toyota Camry Wagon. Very good condition. $1895 256-6625 Leave message Gre621@webtv.net

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy and enthusiastic workers for the following: Youth Basketball Supervisors/ Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at the Human Resources Office, Amherst Town Hall, Main Street. For more information contact Erika Camps at cmpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

EMPLOYMENT

Part time. $8.50/hr. Brandywine Apts. Needs a leasing person. Tues & Thurs Afternoon, Sat & Sun. Call 549-0600

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons All ages & genders 253-4109 or djatabumpus@yahoo.com

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit@aol.com

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

MISCELLANEOUS

What is www.AskDoc Love.com?

PETS

Adorable gray cat needs a good home. Cat needs its shots. Call 413-253-1759 Ask for Mike

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

TRANSPORTATION

Air Taxi, transportation in/ out of Northampton Airport to your destination. L & E Air Charter, (401)-524-1697

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS/57
7	HBO Cinema
8	WB/20
9	UPN/38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HBO Inhd Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-to-Travel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Hobby Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

AZANNASALE

Thursday November 7 through Saturday November 9.

$10 off Mavi, Seven, and Joe's jeans.
$10 off Steve Madden, Diesel, Franco Sarto, Mia footwear.
Sale on Urban Outfitter sweaters.
Sale on Jewelry.

ZANNA

AZANNASALE www.Zanna.com

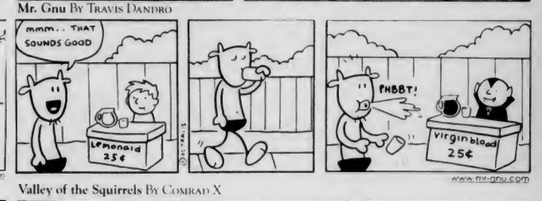
TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

> "Fortunately, I'm adhering to a pretty strict, uh, drug, uh, regimen to keep my mind, you know, uh, limber..."
>
> -The Dude, The Big Lebowski

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 46 LOW: 32	HIGH: 47 LOW: 22	HIGH: 40 LOW: 20

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – An early start today will enable you to get more done – but much of that will be in a personal vein.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may have some trouble as the day opens gathering your forces. Later on, however, you're likely to enjoy more support than you need.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You mustn't fool yourself into thinking that you deserve anything today that you are not willing to work for in some way. Be realistic.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You're anticipating something that isn't likely to transpire, but you may be missing signs of something that really is on the way.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You're likely to get what you want today – and then some. You'll surely have your hands full on more than one occasion today. Prepare yourself.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You're not likely to agree with many other people today about certain pivotal issues. Your singular point of view suits you well at this time.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – A disagreement between friends is no reason for the relationship to an end. You can surely keep any threat from materializing at this time.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The only way you can show others exactly what you're after and what you expect is to show them. Your demonstration can be more than constructive.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may be tempted to do something out of character today with the sole intent of attracting a new kind of attention. Think twice, however!
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may feel as though you're "on the spot" today. Put yourself in someone else's shoes and things can be seen in a more balanced fashion.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may find yourself caught between two conflicting desires today – and neither one is your own! You can strive for a compromise and achieve it.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You would prefer to be left to your own devices today; you're not likely to tolerate anyone who keeps trying to "look over your shoulder."

YOUR COMIC COULD GO HERE! CALL 545-1809 TO FIND OUT HOW.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Tomato Basil Beef Stew

Chicken Nuggets

Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

Vegan Nuggets (vegan)

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

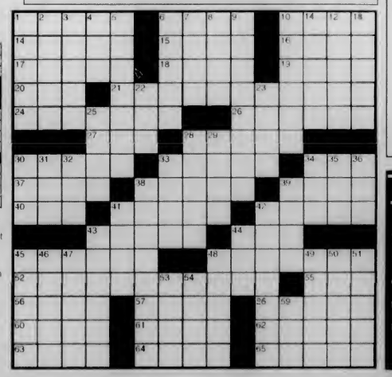
Roast Turkey

Thai Seitan (vegan)

THE HARP IRISH PUB

Wed: Reggae Night
Thurs: Mad Cap Jam Rock
Fri: Irish Seisiun
Sat: Equalities (Roots, Rock, Ska)

163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-0430
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 Tread heavily
6 Complexion problem
10 Mini-play
14 "The Tempest" spirit
15 Constant change
16 Dixie bread
17 Sicily neighbor
18 Boat runway
19 Kind of rug
20 Work by Keats
21 Driveway obstacles (2 wds.)
24 Tends the aquarium
26 Rococo
27 Fly trap
28 Turkish coins
30 — — so good
33 Brand name
34 Neon or ozone
37 Toe the line
38 Crystal-clear
39 Luxurious
40 Beat the field
41 Burglars need
42 Sentimental
43 Advertises
44 Have a snack
45 Era
46 Abscess
52 Very scary (hyph.)
55 Shaw item
56 Movie canine
57 Kind of muffin
58 Toughen up
60 PA
61 Like one Ranger
62 "48 Hours" lead
63 Otherwise
64 Ceases
65 Understand

DOWN
1 Mead's island
2 Commerce
3 Tennessee grinder
4 Bumped into
5 Wall covering
6 Putty coils
7 Lobster's appendage
8 Without feeling
9 Surveyed new territory
10 Deposits eggs
11 Pusan's country
12 Lifeless
13 Pick on
22 Kan. neighbor
23 Spoken
25 On vacation
28 Shortages
29 Egret cousin
30 Plant crops
31 — Wan Kenobi
32 Boggy ground
33 Greed
34 Bush's org.
35 Poisonous snake
36 Reserved
38 Worth praising
39 Gourmet appetizer
41 Dock
42 Drooping
43 Harangue
44 Bonn single
45 — out (discontinue)
46 Palette adjunct
47 Ceremonies
48 Attends a banquet
49 Football coach Don —
50 Fruit pastries
51 Marinate
53 It may be pumped
54 Beach cover
59 Hide — hair

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	O	B	E		G	R	O	P	E		A	B	L	E
O	P	E	N		R	U	L	E	D		Q	U	I	D
P	U	R	S		U	S	I	N	G		U	R	N	S
E	S	T	A		M	E	N	D	I	C	A	N	T
			P	I	P		S	E	E
R	E	S	T	R	I	C	T		R	O	O	M	S
U	M	A		S	E	A	R	S		S	H	U	T	S
B	A	N	D		R	A	I	L	S		O	L	E	O
S	I	T	U	P		W	E			T	I	N
			L	A	D	E	N		S	W	E	A	R	S
				R	O	D			D	Y	E
U	N	H	U	R	R	I	E	D		P	R	A	M
B	R	A	Y		M	A	C	H	O		A	U	D	I
R	S	V	P		A	M	O	N	G		I	D	O	L
R	A	Y	E		L	A	I	N	E	S		D	E	S	K

11-11-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Andy Vogt
Photo Technician	Daniel Davies, Jr.
Copy Editor	Andrew Merritt
Production Supervisor	Shannon Farrington
Production Staff	Scott Pihl, Lizzy Nielsen

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Defending the title

Men return to pool in search of repeat

By Jeff Boyd

A disappointing results against New Hampshire Oct. 19 combined with an exhausting performance at the Brown Invitational last week and has the Massachusetts men's swim team pared to defend its Atlantic 10 championship.

Despite losing two swimmers to injuries and one to prolonged illness, Head Coach Russ Yarworth maintains optimistic about his team's potential to capture its sixth A-10 championship in eight years.

"We're missing a few key guys right now," Yarworth said. "But I've been really pleased with the training. The rest of the guys are really hitting committed."

Last weekend's Brown Invitational served as a training and proving ground for the remaining swimmers. At the Invitational Yarworth placed each swimmer in six different events as a means of preparation for the season that lies ahead. Though its experience was exhausting for the swimmers, Yarworth was satisfied with the effort.

"The goal at the Brown Invitational wasn't so much to get fast times," Yarworth explained. "The goal was to swim tough and swim hard, and we certainly accomplished that. They were exhausted by the end of it, but the attitude was just awesome."

The Brown Invitational also gave the UMass swimmers a preview of what lies in their near future. Rhode Island, a team that has struggled to escape from the bottom tier of the A-10, had trouble keeping pace with the Minutemen. Brown, on the other hand, showed signs of greatness throughout the day, forcing the UMass swimmers to keep up.

"We definitely looked a lot stronger than Rhode Island," said Yarworth. "On the other hand, Brown looked quite a bit stronger than us. That might not be the case at the end of the season, but it gave us a solid benchmark of where we are with our training."

Next weekend, the bus that carries the Minutemen to take on Boston University will hold an unusually light load of passengers. Five team members will not make the trip because of their involvement in the Club Water Polo National Championship. Add that to the three injured and sick swimmers, and the Minutemen will have to utilize a depleted roster to compete against a strong Terrier team.

"BU has always been good competition for us," said 10 captain Darren Johnson, who is among the injured swimmers. "And since we're missing half of our squad this weekend is going to be even tougher."

Although he encouraged those members of the water polo team to continue with their experience, Yarworth knows that going into BU with a depleted lineup will not be an easy, despite last year's 223-75 victory.

"BU is strong this year. We usually handle them pretty easily, but when you are down eight swimmers, it gets kind of tough," Yarworth said.

If the Minutemen hope to continue with their success against Boston University and the rest of the A-10, they will have to rely on their experience. Having only graduated one senior last spring, this year's squad could prove to be even more dominant. Of the 26 team members there are nine seniors and four juniors.

"We have a lot of experience on our team," Johnson said. "That should help us win the A-10 again."

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN

SENIOR LAURA BLOTTER IS ONE OF 12 SENIORS ON THIS YEAR'S WOMEN'S SWIMMING AND DIVING TEAM.

A veteran's affair

Senior Allery leads women's squad

By Nick Wright

It's hard to know what will constitute a success for the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team this season.

In the conference's preseason poll of the Atlantic 10 coaches the Minutewomen were ranked fourth, the same ranking that they achieved at last year's Atlantic 10 championship.

Coach Bob Newcomb admits that this is a fair reflection of the Maroon and White's abilities. He warns that achieving a similar finish or an even higher one than last year will be tougher than it appears on paper.

"There are some teams that will be significantly better than last year, in particular Fordham and St. Bonaventure," said Newcomb.

One factor in favor of UMass is that the squad is a very experienced one. The 25 member team includes 10 seniors, among them standout diver Kate Allery.

Newcomb said of Allery, "She may well be the best diver in the conference. She is someone we have come to rely on; she has been performing more difficult dives each year."

The diving triumvirate of Allery, fellow senior Kalyn Knopf and junior Joanna Walsh has been together for three years. As Newcomb points out, "If she [Allery] does have an off day, one of the other divers steps up."

The importance of Allery was evident in the Minutewomen's opening meet against UNH. Allery won the 3-meter diving event with a score of 252.52.

Other Minutewomen winners in the 166-134 defeat against UNH included junior Diana Alberti, who won the 200-yard butterfly in a time of 2:11.04, and freshman Aimee Bourassa, who placed first in the 200-yard freestyle in a time of 1:55.11.

This past Saturday, the Maroon and White took part in a tri-meet scrimmage with Brown and Rhode Island, where there were no scores recorded.

Newcomb said, "The meet was very productive. It gave me the chance to swim everyone in all their events and also swim some events that we don't at dual meets."

Avid followers of the team may also witness some last times this season. "It's going to take a while for the team to develop, but we have the potential to do some damage to the record board," Newcomb said.

Regardless of how well the team performs throughout the season it will all boil down to the Atlantic 10 Championships, due to be held in Buffalo, N.Y. from Feb. 20-22.

UMass' next meet is this Saturday at Boston University.

Wildcats dominate Tribe

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It had all the makings of a hard-nosed, shot-to-the mouth, old-fashioned football game. Five-and-two William and Mary, which had won five consecutive contests, paid a visit to Philly to faceoff with 6-2 Villanova, which had a week off following its second Atlantic 10 loss of the season at Massachusetts.

Two of the best quarterbacks in the conference – Brett Gordon of the Wildcats and Dave Corley, Jr. of the Tribe – went head-to-head to answer the question of whether W and M's high-octane offense could overcome Nova's stingy defense.

However, it was the Wildcat offense that showed what it was made of, putting up a 41-20 lambasting of the Tribe and all but eliminating William and Mary from a shot at first place in the A-10. Had the Tribe been victorious and finished its season by winning out, it likely would have won a tiebreaker atop the A-10 because of a power poll. However, with two conference losses, it is now quite unlikely – barring a major shakeup in the conference over the next three weeks – that William and Mary will be able to grab the title and is now just a bubble team for the Division I-AA NCAA Tournament.

Villanova, on the other hand, solidified its position as an at large candidate with its only two losses on the season coming at the hands of the two teams ahead of it in the conference – Maine and UMass. Additionally, it lost those two games by a combined eight points.

A week after setting the school record for touchdowns, Corley was upstaged by Gordon, who threw for 25 more yards than his counterpart despite throwing seven fewer passes, and connected for four touchdowns. Corley went just 20-of-33 for 253 yards, throwing for one score and a pick.

The Wildcat defense could not slow down All-America candidate Rich Musinski, who yet again went for more than 100 yards, picking up 115 on eight catches. He is now eighth in Div. I-AA in receiving yards.

The Wildcats got a solid outing on the ground from the tandem of Martin Gibson and Cameron Cross. Gibson ran the ball 12 times for 108 yards and a score, while Cross carried only five times, but scampered for 85 yards on the day.

Nova got out to a 7-0 lead just over seven minutes into the first quarter and never looked back, and with the victory moved up to No. 11 in both polls. Gordon received his third A-10 Offensive Player of the Week Award of the season for his performance. The Wildcats have a tough task ahead of them this week, as they head to the always-difficult Parsons Field to take on Northeastern.

William and Mary fell to 20th in both polls, and heads home to take on slumping URI this weekend. Still, the Tribe will have difficulty finding its way into the playoffs with three losses, even though one came to D-I Indiana in the first week of the season.

Ignoring history

Of all the rivalries in the Atlantic 10, none has been more historically lopsided than Massachusetts and Delaware. The Blue Hens held an astounding 21-5 all-time advantage over the Minutemen heading into Saturday's matchup, which was a crucial one for both teams.

Should the Minutemen lose, they would have to fight their way just to get a spot in the post-season, while a win, followed by a trio of wins to end the season, would most likely see the Maroon and White hosting a postseason game. Delaware, on the other hand, was facing a must-win contest, as a fourth conference loss would mean that K.C. Keeler's troops would be sitting at home for Thanksgiving.

The Minutemen exorcised the demons of their past by way of a 17-7 victory that was not as close as the score might indicate. Toni Masella's defense was again spectacular, halting the Blue Hen offense in its tracks and even scoring a touchdown. When Mark Kimener ended Andy Hall's streak of 143 passes without an interception, he essentially ended Delaware's streak of two consecutive wins over the Maroon and White. Him rumbling into the end zone just provided icing on the cake for UMass, who gave Delaware next to nothing for the rest of the game.

R.J. Cobbs provided a nice subplot, with a cutback on 2nd and 10 that turned into an 84-yard gain (fifth longest in I-AA this year) down the left sideline. His 120 yards on the earned him his fourth game this season with 100-plus rushing yards. So much for UMass' main weakness being its running game.

Dan Mulhern had another fantastic game for the Hens, with 14 tackles, 11 of the solo variety, and a block on a Doug White field goal attempt to win his second straight A-10 Defensive Player of the Week Award.

Things get no easier for Delaware, as they head to Orono to take on No. 5 Maine this weekend.

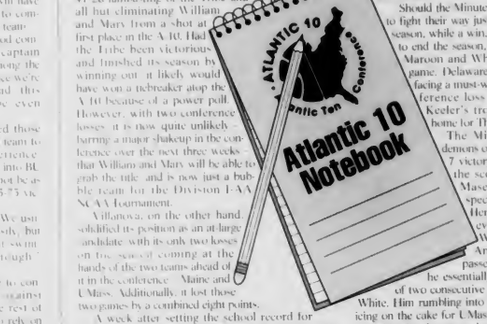
Massachusetts sits in prime position, with its three remaining games coming against the bottom three teams in the conference. However, with a young team, Mark Whipple has the challenge of getting his team up for its final three games.

Adam Vinatieri wannabe

A good kicker can make the difference in a conference like the A-10. Ask Keeler, who has been given ulcers because of the inconsistency of Scott Collins – who likely cost the Hens at least two games. Or check with Mark Whipple, who can pencil Doug White in for three points, assuming the kick is within 40 yards and the ball clears the defense.

Add freshman Miro Kesic to the list of clutch kickers in the A-10. His 37-yarder with four seconds remaining was the longest in conference history, and it gave the Huskies a 24-21 win over Richmond.

Stacey Tutt came in midway through the game, and was a sparkplug for the Spiders, who were down by scores of 14-0 and 21-7. He went 4-for-8 for 113 yards through the air, and also picked up 62 yards and three touchdowns on the ground.



Tim Gale had by far his best effort of the season, as the fullback workhorsed his way to 33 carries and 155 yards as Don Brown used a power rushing attack to unsettle the Spiders' quick linebackers. Shawn Brady completed 12 passes for 122 yards and a pair of scores to lead the Huskies, who moved up to 18th in the

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 7

GERALD HINGO/COLLEGIAN

MARK KIMENER'S INTERCEPTION AND RETURN FOR A TD PUT UMASS UP FOR GOOD, 17-7, AGAINST UD.

The culture of college football

REGAN MCK-

Knute Rockne. George Gipp. Ara Parseghian. Rudy. Dan Devine. Joe Montana.

This past weekend I made a pilgrimage out to the Midwest, specifically South Bend, Indiana. For in that small town, just 90 miles east of Chicago, lies the University of Notre Dame, and with it, one of the most storied programs in all of college football. With some persistence, ingenuity, and some good old luck of the Irish, I was on my way to cover game nine of Notre Dame's 2002 season. The opponent: none other than the Boston College Eagles. It was time for the 14th Blarney Bowl.

8:58 a.m. I leave my hotel room, 70 miles to the east in Angola, Ind. and begin the trek along the Indiana Toll Road toward South Bend.

Driving along, it seemed that every vehicle I passed either had bumper stickers, window stickers, full size decals or even personalized license plates all proclaiming a love for the Fighting Irish. My hotel room had been located so far away because it was the nearest vacancy. After exiting the highway, automobiles such as my own, without parking permits, were directed to the satellite parking lot.

A remote extension of the campus store had been set up to sell clothing and other game-day merchandise on the spot for fans just arriving. Shuttle buses ferried people to the stadium, but I chose to walk and enjoy the surroundings. To try to put this distance in perspective, it was the equivalent of going to a UMass football game but having to park at Totman Gymnasium.

10:13 a.m. With over four hours until kickoff, I decide to explore the campus I last visited nearly five years ago.

Having made my way onto the main part of campus, I began to mix in with the thousands of others who were there enjoying a cold November morning. Students were scattered across campus selling hot chocolate for warmth, encouraging everyone to get psyched up for the day's game. I made my way to the key spots on campus, beginning at the Golden Dome. The Basilica of the Sacred Heart was filled with onlookers as well as hundreds of people saying prayers before the game.

In another religious pre-game ritual, hundreds more were down at the Grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes lighting candles for Notre Dame. I passed by the dorm I stayed in when I last visited and headed to the campus store. Described by one as a replica of Barnes and Noble, the two-floor complex was jam-packed with people looking to buy everything from official Notre Dame apparel to blue and gold hair dye – anything associated with ND. Forty cashiers handled a crowd that, while in line, a person compared to Disney World.

11:41 a.m. Having fully stocked up on souvenirs, I head towards the stadium and all the tailgating.

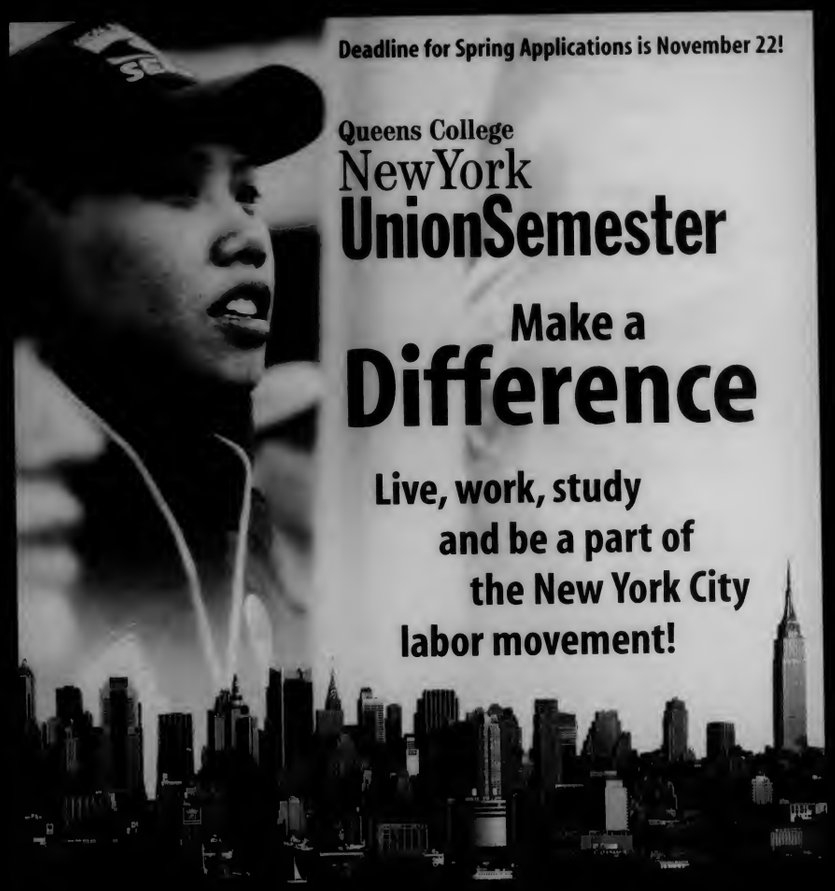
The stadium parking lots extended for what seemed like miles, filled with barbeques, coolers, beer and enough liquor bottles to give Liquors 44 a run for its money. People were out there in the crisp autumn air just having a good time. Friends and family were mingling while little kids tossed the football around dreaming that one day maybe they could run out of the tunnel onto that famed field.

Loyal fan Greg Jefferson explained that he and his party had started at 8 a.m. for a 2:30 p.m. kickoff. His sister Pamela added, "some people just go continuously from the night before. [At] 4 o'clock there's 40s on Fridays."

12:27 p.m. After becoming energized with all the pregame festivities, I make my way into the stadium and up to the press box.

I counted myself among the lucky in being able to have access to a press pass for the game; obtaining tickets is next to impossible. The 80,000-odd tickets to the game break down like so: 11,000 for students, 7,000 for faculty and staff, 5,000 for opponents, 16,000 for season tickets (of which none have been available in over 30 years), 9,000 for University allotments and 32,000 for contributing alumni. For the game against Boston College, Notre Dame received 55,482 alumni requests for tickets, meaning that 23,482 alumni, who donate to the university, were forced to watch the game on NBC.

Even though all those tickets were sold, it doesn't stop people from trying to get more. All across campus, as well as on many street corners in South Bend, people were standing with simple signs proclaiming: "Need Tickets". For those willing to wait, there were tickets that had been turned back in, available via will call.



However, 75 minutes before the

Turn to NOTRE DAME, page 7

REGAN MCKENWOOD/COLLEGIAN

NOTRE DAME STADIUM WAS FILLED TO CAPACITY SATURDAY FOR A MATCHUP AGAINST BOSTON COLLEGE, AND BY SELLING ADDITIONAL SEATS ON THE FIELD, ND PLAYED IN FRONT OF ITS LARGEST CROWD EVER.

HOME SWEET HOME?
ARTS PAGE 5.

ELECTION NIGHT BLUES
ED/OP PAGE 4.

UMASS YEAR TWO
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN

THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FOURTY-SIX ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.07.02

Board of Trustees face cries of justice

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Protesters held signs up, passed out t-shirts and bellowed "What do we want? Justice! When do we want it? Now!" during Wednesday's open Board of Trustee's meeting.

The meeting, held at the Mullins Center, united members of the seven UMass unions in protest over their vetoed union contract raises. The issue, an ongoing battle on the Amherst campus this semester, was made more visible to President William Bulger, who attended the meeting.

Three representatives spoke on the behalf of the seven unions and asked that Bulger and the Board of Trustees support their request to have their vetoed contracts reinstated by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts legislature.

"We urge you to join us to persuade a vote in the House of Representatives to override Governor Jane Swifts veto," President of the Massachusetts Society of Professors Ronald Story said. "Mr. President please lend a voice to this campaign for the hour is growing very late."

Thomas Choish, chapter President of the Local 509 SEIU, also spoke before the Board, expressing his concerns on campus morale. Choish presented a stack of signed petitions requesting that funding of the union contracts be reinstated. Choish and Story both explained the importance of the petition in regards to the University and the severity of their goal to reverse Swifts veto.

"No good deed shall go unpunished," Choish said. "The staff and faculty feel deceived, angry and distrust."

Story expressed his thoughts, saying that the signed petitions were the largest organized mass petitions in the history of state universities.

"We've done a multi-campus petition drive that is one of the largest in the history of nationwide state universities," Story said. "People have signed willingly because they feel betrayed by the state and we want to present that here to you."

Bulger responded to the protesters by explaining that they take the union contracts very seriously, but due to Massachusetts's fiscal crisis the state is unable to allocate the money to fund the union contracts at this time.

"I do understand your frustrations, but the commonwealth's economy and fiscal year budgets are unable to appropriate the money to fund the contracts," Bulger said. "I'm aware of your disappointment. Some faculty and staff have quietly told me they are willing to make due of what is handed to them."

Members of the union protested Bulger's response, but Bulger continued explaining that areas around the state had been drastically affected, and that he is confident that in the future the union contracts will be fulfilled.

"The problems in state funding is real and it's stark and painful. We are not alone, many states and public universities are facing similar challenges," Bulger said. "We do hope for a better day and I have confidence our officials on Beacon Hill value the unions contracts."

Union members protested in further defiance of Bulger's response by shouting, "fund the contracts or we won't work" as they left the building.

Members of the Student Government Association commented on the union protests, saying that they felt the unions reaction was immature.

"They really shot themselves in the foot," President Dave Carr said. "It was really childish and I felt like I was in a room with a bunch of five-year-olds."

The Board of Trustee's and Bulger continued the meeting, addressing issues surrounding Auxiliary Services and Housing Services fee increases. The Board of Trustee's passed a five percent raise in Auxiliary Services and Housing Services fees. This is the first raise in fees within both services in six years.

SGA members responded to the fee increases saying that they felt it complied with the growing needs of both services.

"They approved the fee raises for Auxiliary Services and housing by five percent and we're supposed to get one every year to keep up with costs, but this is the first raise in six years," Carr said. "They need it because they're working within the Trust Fund and rising inflation. They need to be able to keep up with housing compliances."

Board of Trustee member Diane Mose addressed issues regarding athletics within the five UMass campus. Mose explained that athletics bring in revenue to the Universities and campus life.

"Student athletics are very much apart of student life and there is a great deal of need to generate revenue through these programs," Mose said. "We need to win and we need to drive attention to programs that will benefit all students on campus because they are all very important to student life on campus. The more people that show up, the better they are."

The Board of Trustee's also passed a motion allowing Chancellor John V. Lombardi to make exceptions to the alcohol policy on campus at his own digression. This solidified the ability to allow tailgating at sporting events, a privilege that reinstated at the Amherst campus this fall.

TRUSTEE MEMBERS GRACED WITH THE PRESENCE OF WILLIAM BULGER DISCUSS THE CURRENT BUDGET PROBLEMS FACING UMASS. AS THE TRUSTEES ENTERED THE MULLINS CENTER THEY WERE MET WITH THE COMBINED PROTESTS OF THE UNIVERSITY'S SEVEN UNIONS.

Students seek answers at Majors Fair

By Ferron Salniker
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Students still unsure about there academic future sorted through the options Wednesday in the Student Union. The annual Majors Fair was held in the building's ballroom, providing students who are without a major or uncertain about their current majors the opportunity to meet and speak with advisors.

Sponsored by the Pre-Major Advising services, Commonwealth College and Career services, the event had representatives from over 80 Majors and programs.

Both minor and certification programs were at the fair, including the Cultural, Health and Science certificate program, the Native American Studies Program, and the Asian and Asian American Studies program. The International Program and the Five College exchange program were represented. Representatives from the Army ROTC and the Air Force ROTC were also present.

Students strolled into the Student Union Ballroom throughout the two-hour event. The College of Engineering and the School of Management were among the most visited tables. The College of Natural Sciences table saw heavy turnout as well.

The fair is designed to give students the opportunity to receive information more accessibly. Professors and chief undergraduate advisors answered questions concerning major requirements, benefits and career possibilities.

"It's designed as an opportunity for students to come to one room where they are able to talk to representatives from various majors," Tommie Joyner, a representative from the Campus Career Center said.

Representatives were pleased with the turnout. "We had a good turnout despite the rain," Peter Woodson, an organizer from the Commonwealth college said. "The only issue for next year is that we may grow out of the ballroom."

Representatives found the fair helpful as well.

"Students find information they weren't aware of by asking questions face to face," Aurthur Stern, a faculty advisor from Commonwealth College, said "but the Majors fair also gives the representatives the opportunity to meet with students who we may not normally get to see, it works both ways."

Most students found the fair to be helpful and informative. "It let me know what else was out there, and what I could do with each major," said freshman Katie Walsh.

"My only problem was that there were so many choices," said Danielle Coyghlan, a freshman.

A number of students said that representatives did not share the students' enthusiasm. "A few of the tables were unwelcoming," freshman Frankie McPherson said. "Majors should have representatives who are a little more lively."

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

SENIOR TOM SOUTHWORTH TALKS TO A STUDENT ABOUT THE POLITICAL SCIENCE MAJOR AT YESTERDAY'S MAJORS FAIR IN THE STUDENT UNION BALLROOM.

SGA members show disappointment in Bulger's union contract ignorance

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members of the Student Government Association called for action Wednesday on union requests to reverse the vetoed funding of their state contracts.

Disappointments surrounding Wednesday's Board of Trustees visit and actions taken by University of Massachusetts unions at the meeting were discussed. Members expressed their disappointment in President William Bulger's lack of discussion surrounding the union contract issues as well as University funding.

"He [Bulger] was just trying to please, and not piss of the people in the room more," President Dave Carr said.

Carr further explained his disappointment with the unions and their lack of respect for the Board of Trustees. "It was the most disgusting display I've ever seen in my life, talk about disrespect," Carr said.

"I respect the idea that the unions need to get the money that they deserve, but not if the unions are going to jeopardize student life."

Speaker Dan Saunders agreed, explaining that he hoped that the Senate would step up and voice a stance on the issue. Saunders explained that he felt it was up to the Senate to decide what message they want to send, and how they would like to disseminate it to the unions, administration and the state. He continued, saying that it is the Senates choice to decide if they want to take any action at all regarding these financial issues.

"We as a student elected body need to say something," Saunders said. "We need to have a voice and we need to have our voice heard, so I hope that you will work together as a Senate and put together some kind of message to send to the union and presidents office as to what you want to see happen. It's a lot of money were talking about and we need to have a voice in it."

Aside from the disappointments in Wednesday's events, the Senate pressed appointed six new members to the Senate.

Members addressed a motion calling for a bylaw change in the SGA Constitution, asking that Senate Constituent Communiques go out monthly rather than once a semester to all residential areas on campus and to the commuter districts. The bylaw change was requested as part of an effort to increase campus communication between the SGA and the greater student body and to notify students of actions taken by their elected representatives.

"The Public Policy and Relations committee met maybe once or twice last year and we did a brainstorm in ways that they could help get information out to students on what the

Turn to SGA, page 2

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

TRUSTEE BILL POWERS SPEAKS TO THE SGA ABOUT YESTERDAY'S TRUSTEE MEETING, THE ADDITION OF A BAR IN THE BLUEWALL, AND FUTURE BUDGET ISSUES FOR STUDENTS AT YESTERDAY'S SGA MEETING.

Romney to 'balance' budget

By Jennifer Peter

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) – A crowing moment from Republican Gov. Paul Cellucci's campaign in Washington on the Supreme Court ruling in favor of Catholic Archbishop Bernard Law [illegible]

"Winning is better than losing," Cellucci said [illegible]

"I woke up Nov. 7 of 1990 and it didn't feel as good," Romney joked. "I've tried winning. I've tried losing. Winning is better."

During the campaign Romney positioned himself as the champion of working people battling an entrenched, out-of-touch Democratic establishment. Democratic gubernatorial candidate Shannon P. O'Brien, backed by Beacon Hill lawmakers, portrayed himself as the underdog.

Romney claimed a hands win over O'Brien, garnering 49 percent (or 1,674,794 votes) while O'Brien received 45 percent (or 1,564,654 votes).

With the campaign over, rhetoric shifts to reality as the former Winter Olympics chief faces a legislature [illegible] Democrats than [illegible]

"I'm optimistic that voices are better than one," he said. "I hope the leadership as well as the membership of [illegible] will adopt the same view."

Ashburn, who congratulated Romney on Tuesday night, said [illegible] the new administration urged [illegible] partnership and work with lawmakers.

Romney's victory [illegible] no previous political experience [illegible] as he prepares to take the helm of the [illegible] Romney's father ran for president in 1968 and his [illegible] Romney ran unsuccessfully for U.S. Senate from Michigan in 1970.

False Alarm

ARMED THE HOLDERS RESPOND TO AN EMERGENCY AT THE LIBRARY YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

SGA

continued from page 1

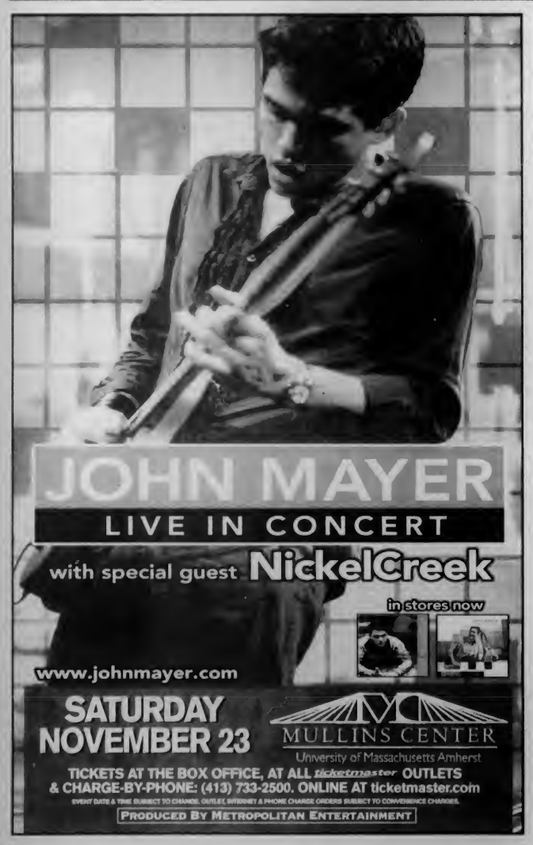
SGA is doing," Chair of Public Policy and Relations Adrienne Girard said. "We've done a lot of discussion on how to put them up and we want to try and make it into a bathroom newsletter."

Senate members questioned the motion and called for a friendly amendment in requesting to include cultural centers on campus as well as the restrictions as to where the communiqués could be posted. A five-minute recess was called to discuss the issue in committee.

Members accepted the friendly amendment as well as passed the bylaw changes. A monthly communiqué will now be standard policy to be done by every Senator within their elected residential hall district as well as within the commuter district.

"I felt it went really good. We're really trying to slow down and make sure we have motions that are going to be implemented," Saunders said. "I met with the committee chairs and they are working on some great motions that will be coming up quickly. President Carr had some great things to say and we're really all working together as the SGA. Any victory that happens is not the Executive Cabinet's or Senate's victory, its the SGA's victory."

News Dept. meeting @4



QUESTIONS, COMMENTS, or CONCERNS?
COME DOWN TO THE NEWSROOM
OR CALL: 545-3500

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Luo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

As an engineer in the U.S. Air Force, there's no telling what you'll work on.
(Seriously, we can't tell you.)

United States Air Force applied technology is years ahead of what you'll touch in the private sector, and as a new engineer you'll likely be involved at the ground level of new and sometimes classified developments. You'll begin leading and managing within this highly respected group from day one. Find out what's waiting behind the scenes for you in the Air Force today. To request more information, call 1-800-423-USAF or log on to airforce.com.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

ELECTION 2002:

Sweeping win for Republicans but...

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION CHAIRMAN HARVEY PITT PRESIDES OVER A MEETING OF THE COMMISSION IN WASHINGTON YESTERDAY. PITT RESIGNED TUESDAY UNDER PRESSURE AS THE GOVERNMENT'S TOP SECURITIES REGULATOR AFTER OTHERS ABOUT ETHICAL DECISIONS THAT HE HAS MADE

Democrats still hold power on Hill

By Steve LeBlanc
Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) - When Mitt Romney steps into the governor's office in January, he could learn a harsh political lesson his three Republican predecessors know all too well.

Even with a Republican in the corner office, Democrats run the show when it comes to state politics.

Not only do they hold every other statewide office, from attorney general to state treasurer, they also hold every Massachusetts seat in Congress.

More importantly, for Romney, Democrats hold overwhelming majorities in the state Senate and House of Representatives, majorities wide enough to handily override any Romney veto.

Former Republican governors William F. Weld, Paul Cellucci and acting Gov. Jane M. Swift soon realized that without enough Republicans in the House or Senate to sustain their vetoes, they had to rely on the bully pulpit and their personal negotiating skills to push their agenda.

Romney, after repeating his campaign pledge to battle patronage, tax hikes and mismanagement, acknowledged the need to work with state Democrats moments after winning the race for governor.

"I'm asking you to join me in forging a new era in Massachusetts, an era of inclusion ... where Republicans and Democrats and Greens and independents and people of all backgrounds and ethnic groups work together to create opportunities for all of our citizens," Romney told supporters.

Democrats said they hoped Romney will live up to the pledge.

A unified front is especially important to help guarantee the state gets its share of federal resources, according to Democratic U.S. Rep. John Tierney, who won a fourth term in office Tuesday.

"I hope he will be able to work with us and realize that a lot of different programs we do on the federal level require a state match, and that will require that the governor work with the state Legislature," Tierney said.

One of Romney's top priorities will likely be to develop a rapport with perhaps the most powerful Democrat on Beacon Hill, House Speaker Thomas M. Finneran, D-Boston.

Finneran, who supported Democratic gubernatorial candidate Shannon P. O'Brien's campaign, hasn't been shy about using his power to frustrate the agendas of past Republican governors.

But Finneran, a fiscal conservative, has also seen eye-to-eye with some of those governors when it comes to the state's rocky finances. Most recently he praised Swift for cutting another $200 million from the state budget in the face of dwindling revenues.

Finneran did not return calls to his home or office Tuesday night.

The state's ongoing fiscal crisis could give Romney and Finneran a chance to collaborate on ways to rein in spending. On other issues, like the death penalty, the two could butt heads. Romney supports capital punishment, which Finneran opposes.

Romney will also have to contend with an overwhelmingly Democratic state Senate.

In the Senate, Romney will have a chance to work with a new leader Senate President Thomas F. Birmingham, D-Chelsea, opted not to seek re-election to pursue a campaign for governor. The Senate is expected to elect Sen. Robert E. Travaglini, D-Boston to replace Birmingham.

In Congress, Romney must also work to build relationships with the state's all-Democratic delegation, including senators Edward M. Kennedy and John F. Kerry.

During the race, Romney touted his GOP credentials. At a campaign stop on Monday, Romney responded to a visit by former President Bill Clinton, in town to campaign for O'Brien, by saying that while it's great to have a former president in the state, it will be even better to have a governor with access to the current Republican president.

MASSACHUSETTS DEMOCRATIC TREASURER CANDIDATE TIMOTHY CAHILL GREETS HIS SUPPORTERS DURING HIS ELECTION NIGHT RALLY CELEBRATING HIS VICTORY IN BOSTON YESTERDAY

Romney is well aware of the troubles that plagued Weld, Cellucci and Swift.

During Romney's campaign, his running mate Kerry Healey pledged to work to build the party and field enough Republican candidates to win enough seats in the Senate to win back the power of the veto pen.

Pitt resigns from SEC

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Harvey Pitt resigned under pressure Tuesday night after a series of political missteps that embarrassed the Bush White House just when it needed to shore up investors unnerved by accounting scandals.

In a letter to President Bush, Pitt said "the turmoil surrounding my chairman ship" had made it difficult to stay in the job. "Rather than be a burden to you or the agency, I feel it is in everyone's best interest if I step aside now, to allow the agency to continue the important efforts we have started."

The White House quickly accepted his resignation.

Three administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House welcomed the resignation of a regulator who had created a host of political problems for Bush in the run-up to Tuesday's midterm elections. Pitt's troubles had been seen as weakening the SEC at a time when the market was reeling from corporate debacles, including Enron, WorldCom and Global Crossing, and the economy was fragile.

The latest fumble came when Pitt failed to share with fellow commissioners information about William Webster, the newly named chairman of an accounting industry oversight board, before the agency voted last week to put the former CIA and FBI director in charge of the panel.

The revelation led SEC commissioners, including Pitt, to request an internal investigation Thursday of Webster's selection – and renewed the almost daily drumbeat of calls from Democrats and other Pitt critics for his resignation.

A senior White House official said Bush aides heard over the weekend that Pitt was inclined to resign. Neither the president nor his aides requested the resignation, but Pitt called the White House personnel office Tuesday afternoon and said he intended to resign.

There were no objections, and Pitt submitted his resignation late Tuesday afternoon. In it, Pitt said he thought the controversy was hurting his ability to lead the SEC.

The official said Bush won't have a replacement immediately. They had not begun to search for candidates as of Tuesday night and expected Senate confirmation to be difficult in the intense political climate, the official said.

Former SEC Chairman Richard Breeden was said to have been informally approached about the job, but declined. Breeden is now a court-appointed monitor for the bankrupt WorldCom.

Pitt, who first worked at the SEC in the late 1960s and built his career as an attorney in appearance-conscious Washington, has been criticized for meeting with the heads of companies under SEC investigation and for his close ties to the accounting industry – at a time when the SEC is investigating major accounting fraud at big corporations. Pitt represented the Big Five accounting firms while in private practice.

In this latest instance, Pitt withheld information about Webster's lead role on the auditing committee for U.S. Technologies, a company facing investor lawsuits alleging fraud. Webster told The New York Times that Pitt assured him that SEC staff had looked into the issue and it would not pose a problem.

Last month, Democrats asked Bush to remove Pitt, whom they accused of bowing to the accounting industry by opposing the appointment of John H. Biggs to head the oversight board. Supporters of Biggs, a pension fund administrator, believed he would advocate tough regulation of the accounting industry.

It was not immediately clear whether Bush sought Pitt's resignation, but the White House made no secret that Bush was angered by Pitt's failure to warn the White House and chief of staff Andrew Card about Webster's role with the auditing committee.

Bush ready to utilize Republican Congress

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush and his party savored sweeping midterm election victories Wednesday and began sketching an agenda for a new, Republican-controlled Congress. The leader of defeated House Democrats, Rep. Dick Gephardt, signaled he would step down.

"I'm excited to be able to be on offense," said Republican Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the once and future Senate majority leader. He said GOP priorities will include a new Homeland Security Department as well as targeted tax cuts to help the economy. He added that Bush's judicial nominees could expect speedier review.

Bush made no public remarks during the day, and aides said he wanted to avoid giving the appearance of gloating. "There's a lot more to do and the president looks forward to working with Democrats and Republicans to do it," said his spokesman, Ari Fleischer.

Republicans were assured of 51 seats in the new Senate, a gain of two. Democrats had 47 and the support of one independent. One race remained in doubt, in Louisiana, where Democratic Sen. Mary Landrieu will face Republican Suzanne Terrell in a December runoff.

In the House, Republicans had 227 seats – a gain of four – and led for one more. Democrats won 205, and led for three. There was one independent.

Senior aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Gephardt intended to declare on Thursday that he would not seek a fifth term as House Democratic leader. The 61-year-old Missouri lawmaker is a potential challenger for the White House in 2004, but it was not known whether he would discussion his presidential ambitions when he made his announcement.

His decision not to seek a new term in leadership came at the end of a day in which two members of the rank and file urged him to step aside. And it triggered a race between the second-ranking and third-ranking members of the leadership, Reps. Nancy Pelosi of California and Martin Frost of Texas.

Gephardt was elected to a 14th term in the House on Tuesday, and is expected to remain in Congress even though he will no longer be leader of his party.

The elections marked a remarkable triumph for Republicans, who backed history to gain seats in a midterm election in which they held the White House.

"I think you have to give an awful lot of credit to the president of the United States," said Lott. "He put his prestige on the line and I think it made a huge difference in this election."

One Republican polling firm circulated the results of an election-night survey that made the same point, saying that late-deciding voters gave Bush higher approval ratings than the country at large, and that support for the president was higher, still, among voters in the pivotal House districts where the battle for control was settled.

Democrats conceded the obvious. "This was one tough night," Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle said on the morning after, appearing on NBC's "Today" show.

And some party activists grumbled about the party's leadership. "There wasn't any unified message," said David Worley, former chairman of the party in Georgia. "I think the national leadership did a miserable job of giving a theme to the election."

Gephardt, a likely contender for the presidency in 2004, flew back to the capital from his Missouri congressional district early in the day to decide his next step. The 26-year congressional veteran is "going to spend a day with his wife and family and talk to friends and advisers and begin making a decision about his future," said his spokesman, Erik Smith. "If he chooses to run for minority leader we're confident he'll win."

Even so, one Democratic lawmaker, Rep. Peter Deutsch of Florida, said, "It is now clearly time for him to step down."

A second Democrat expressed similar thoughts. "It's obvious that we need some fresh faces and in some cases fresh ideas," Rep. Harold Ford, of Tennessee said on Don Imus' syndicated radio show. Rank-and-file Democrats are asking "some pretty tough questions about his leadership," Ford said of Gephardt.

A nationwide survey conducted by Public Opinion Strategies, a GOP firm, found a "late surge to Republicans," as much as was the case in the GOP landslide year of 1994. Interviews showed that "the handling of Senator Wellstone's memorial service and the way the ballot situation was handled in New Jersey was clearly a factor in helping drive Republican intensity this election," the firm said.

That was a reference to a memorial service in Minnesota for the late Democratic Sen. Paul Wellstone several days before the election. Many Republicans complained the event veered into politics, and Democrats had privately expressed concern about possible fallout.

New Jersey represented a political victory for Democrats, who prevailed in a court case to replace Sen. Robert Torricelli on the ballot even though the deadline for a switch had passed.

POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
at North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM Starting at $79.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Companies
One mile South of UMass

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Red Bull 3 for $5.00
Coors Light 20 pack Bottles $12.99 + dep.
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St Rt. 9 584-8174

UMass Amherst Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships
$2,000!!
Applicants must be full-time sophmore and junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Four scholarships will be awarded and each recipient will receive $2,000. A complete application must include a resume, an unofficial academic transcript, essay and a letter of reference.
Applications must be completed and returned to the Alumni Relations Office by Friday, November 22nd at 5 p.m.
For more information, please contact Melanie Corbeil at 545-2317or mcorbeil@admin.umass.edu
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS AMHERST

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003
Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
Direct airfare and hotel transportation to parties and in Ocho Rios, these reliable low airfares will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours
1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services
1.800.648.4849
www.ststravel.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Welcome to Beacon Hill, Mitt

all eyes at UMass are on you

Welcome to the head of the Commonwealth, Mr. Romney. Big promotions require big decisions; here are a few issues that we at The Daily Collegian would like to see you address when the reigns of Massachusetts are officially transferred to your eager hands.

Think outside Boston. You've pledged to "clean up the mess on Beacon Hill." Fair enough. Let's not forget, however, that your new jurisdiction extends past the immediate 'mess' in Boston and continues to affect all points west as well. That includes, though is not exclusive to, the residents of the Pioneer Valley, particularly those of us employed by, and attending school at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Our state school system for higher education is failing more each day in part because of a severely anemic budget; the cuts here in Amherst have compromised a number of the sources a functioning University should be afforded.

And don't think we've forgotten. Yesterday morning at the Board of Trustees meeting here in Amherst, a petition was circulated with some 7,000 signatures calling for the reversal of acting Gov. Jane Swift's veto of $30 million worth of negotiated raises for workers at public colleges and universities. Money may be tight, Mitt, but don't let complacency bury it further. This state needs every last one of us involved in the public education system if "success" of any kind is to be achieved at all.

Relations with the legislature. If Mitt wants to follow the money, he'll have to tiptoe through a Democrat heavy legislature to get to it. "Finneran will make him eat crow," said Jeff Berry, a political scientist at Tufts University, in an interview with The Boston Globe regarding the Speaker's ability to essentially outmuscle the Governor in the lawmaking process. We suggest Mitt focus on compromise; leaning too far on comfortable business instincts will only continue to muddy the process.

Romney has spoken at length on "combining our resources and our resolve together." The majority of us as voters bought into that; now we wait and see if Romney fulfills his end of the bargain.

Romney has promised "people before politicians." He's pledged people before partisanship, which runs counter to Shannon O'Brien's accusations that he always stressed profit.

Profit is what we need, but not at the expense of the citizens.

Campaign promises may have won Romney an office, but they won't secure him a popular opinion if he doesn't take the necessary steps to fulfill them.

Only time will tell, and we'll be watching.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

An acronym for stupidity?

CAREY

Many of us in college know how hard it is to concentrate on our schoolwork. The solution for most of us is to surrender a few hours of sleep. I'm no different. Normally, I start the day by drinking a potent brew of black tea. At midday I refuel with Bluewall coffee, again, black, or with a pinch of sugar on mellow days.

Using study aids is a popular practice among us college kids. However, this idea has recently become popular with younger students as well. Some as young as fourth grade are using drugs given to them by their parents in order to improve their grades. This behavior should seem awful if not down right illegal, but drugs are fine, as long as they're curing some disease or correcting a "disorder." This is where attention deficit disorder (ADD) comes in.

I first became interested in ADD when I saw how many people allegedly have this disorder. According to some, this simple three-letter acronym stands for the agent responsible for the worst epidemic in American history. Some studies show that nearly 90 percent of all Americans have this focus-diminishing affliction in one extreme or another.

Scientists are at a loss in explaining exactly where this condition originated, and why it has only now begun to rear its ugly head. Other reasonable minds have asked where this disorder has come from, and why medicine is needed to correct it. So far, the medical community has given no sufficient answer. However, we do know it rushed on to American shores like a tsunami of foreign electronics in the late 1980's. Around the same time, as the first Nintendo and Atari game systems hit the markets, this strange disorder had begun to eat away at the concentration and academic discipline of American youth.

For years, experts were unable to provide an answer for sliding test scores, and the indifference that children began to take towards learning. Those unlucky enough to catch the affliction displayed symptoms ranging from lack of focus and increased procrastination to reduced enjoyment in schoolwork. But then a cure was found. The pharmaceutical companies and the competent researchers that worked for them invented a drug that halted this epidemic in its tracks.

> "According to some, this simple three-letter acronym stands for the agent responsible for the worst epidemic in American history."

Ritalin is now hailed as the attention-diminishing solution. Sold worldwide at a fair price by major pharmaceutical corporations, this new drug has been said to work miracles in restoring the attention span of children diagnosed with, ADD, ADHD and dyslexia. At last children have been given back the option to pick up a book and read again.

For now the epidemic seems to have waned. Much of this is credited to doctors prescribing Ritalin to kids without an active disability, but as a precaution in case they someday develop one. After all, some would say, medicine in good measure is needed in a case like this. But given the past many have begun to ask: what if another pathogen mutates from obscurity deterring another generation of minds eager to learn?

Medical researchers have asked this question too. Doggedly, they research other potential cures to ADD and similar afflictions. So far there are some promising reports. For instance, deep in the Andes Mountains of South America there is said to be a mystical powder that natives have used ritualistically for centuries may contain hyper-focusing properties. Preliminary experiments by many experts have yielded positive results. Look for it soon, in your local drug store and pharmacy.

Our society has become one obsessed with "performance enhancement" whether it's better oil for our cars or better grades for our kids. With the arrival of chemical innovation, any of our children could be driven by mental strength, comparable to the physical strength that powers our favorite sports heroes to super human accomplishments never thought possible. However, there are those who object to a better world through chemistry. Some complain that assimilating children's natural behavior with drugs is wrong, and that ADD, in reality, is a fictional disease invented by drug companies in order to wring money out of the gullible public. Whatever the case maybe, if ADD is really just an acronym for stupidity, then a lot of people have it.

Robert Carey is a Collegian Columnist.

Misadventures with parking services

TOM LA CHANCE

I recently had an unpleasant experience with the University of Massachusetts Parking Services. I got towed. I'm sure those who choose to commute will understand. I wandered around the parking lot looking for my car. I didn't know if it had been stolen or what had happened. I felt like idiot walking around thinking, "Where's my car? Where's my car?" I finally found the spot were it had been parked. I then turned and went into the back entrance of Whitmore, and I called Parking Services. It was kind of a strange conversation.

I dialed the number and heard "Parking Services. Can you hold?" I said "Not really." I was irritated by the situation. I didn't want to wait. It didn't matter. She put me on hold anyway. She came back about two or three minutes later, and I told her my license plate number and make of automobile (Oldsmobile). She said, "Is this Thomas? I thought. "You don't know me. What gives you the right to address me like you were my mother?" and I then said "Yeah, that's me." She then told me I would have to pay almost $450.00, including towing charge, to get my car back. I told her honestly I didn't have it. She then killed me with kindness, insisting that there was nothing she could do about it. I told her that I had to pick my mother up from the hospital today. Which was true, though she was going to be there for a smoking cessation class. She hadn't been hurt or sick. I was hoping to appeal to the sensitive side of this voice on the telephone. It didn't work. It then dawned on me it was going to be one of those days that I would have been better off staying in bed.

But wait, I'm getting ahead of myself. In order to give you the big picture, I'd like to back up a little and tell you something about my life in the last few years. After graduating from high school and dropping out of community college for a "semester," I spent the next six years working dead-end jobs. I finally realized I was going nowhere. I had to go back and finish my education. I worked full-time and re-enrolled in my local community college on a part-time basis. I later graduated and transferred to UMass. I didn't apply to any other colleges or universities. I wanted to go to this school.

My first few semesters with some adjusting went okay. I commuted to school through the Greenfield bus line (GMTA). It ran twice a day. Then something happened. I came into some money. Not much, mind you, but enough to buy a "beater" car. "Things are looking up," I said to myself. So being like most people, I registered for a parking permit. The Yellow lot was the least expensive so I got a sticker and put it on my car. It cost me forty dollars for one year. Someone told me that it had been "twenty" the year before. The next year it went up to sixty bucks. This began my misadventure with Parking Services.

The yellow lot by the Mullin Center is a strange area for parking. A parking lot should be boring, safe and predictable. Those are the qualities you want. This parking area or field is unpaved. It is my understanding that there is no intention of ever paving it. Recently, when it was still relatively warm out, I noticed many tall weeds growing in one section. They looked like wheat. In past winters, when there was a moderate to heavy snowfall, it had the tendency to be a very slippery and treacherous place. Now, it is true that there is a covered bus stop. However, have you ever noticed how empty the buses are for that area (No. 34 and No. 35) in the mornings? They look less than half full. I have noticed that after 5 p.m. over 70 percent of the lot is empty. Also, it is my understanding that there isn't any yellow lot permits available. So one could conclude that hundreds of commuters (the yellow lot by the Mullins Center is big) must be walking to class. If you are given the choice between walking or riding, wouldn't you choose to ride? One could also conclude that all those people must have little or no confidence in the bus service or they would of waited. If my car was a little bigger I might offer each of them a ride.

Every student knows that most professors will lower your overall grade if you develop a trend for being late for class. It also feels uncomfortable and stupid being tardy. As a commuter who drives this is one of the problems I have to deal with on a regular basis. I found I had to choose between lesser and greater evils. Park legally by the Mullins Center and spend 25 to 30 minutes walking to class, wait forever for the bus or park in restricted areas and not be late for class.

I took a chance and got some tickets but not many. I always moved my car back to the Yellow lot went I had time (a hour or more).

This year was different. My now former landlord sold the house I was renting an apartment in. In the entire time the building was for sale he led me to believe I wouldn't have to move. I also really didn't want to have to move. I was hoping. Needless to say I ended up homeless for about a month. I slept on a friend's couch and showered at the YMCA. I found a new place right before school started so my funds got a little drained. I didn't have the price of parking permit. So, I tried to do without it.

It's hard to hide an Olds in an age of medium to small cars. As a result I acquired a few tickets. I didn't think anything would happen to me because I knew I couldn't graduate until I paid them. I planned to pay them next semester. I did park in metered spots when I had change on me. It didn't work. It was like they knew when the meter ran out. It's kind of creepy actually. I parked in the Parking Garage when I had the cash. I noticed the parking garage the attendants don't always stay past midnight.

The main reason I got so many parking tickets is because of time schedules. I'm doing my pre-practicum at Amherst Regional Middle School (AMS). The throwing class (ceramics) I have before I go to AMS leaves very little traveling time. The classes are fixed so I have to adapt to them and that's what I was trying to do. So this brings us back to where we started. I came out of class to find my car missing. I realized that I didn't have much time. Maybe I could have parked in a metered spot, but I had no change and the voice at Parking Services told me they would have towed my car if it had been parked anywhere in Massachusetts. Which may not be true. I spent my rent money to get back my car having been stranded on campus. The money for my rent ended up coming from my retired parents who live on a fixed income. I should supplement their finances not the other way around.

Well hell, maybe you'd say I got what I deserved. I still don't feel under the conditions that I did anything wrong. It is very expensive to park on this campus and the price goes up every year. It cost $140 this year for freshmen to park in the cheapest lot on campus. The metered lots are fifteen minutes for a quarter. Sometimes the meter is broken and you don't realize this until you've wasted half your change. Parking Services doesn't seem to be able to relate to this. In downtown Amherst it's the standard hour for a quarter. At Amherst College there is at least one large area on their campus where you can park for free.

I don't think prices should be related to rank. It shouldn't have anything to with whether you're a freshman or not. If you're old enough to drive you should be able park without discrimination. Parking costs should have to with economic status. I could see some people getting parking permits for $20. Also, parking fines shouldn't go to the Athletic Scholarship fund. This fund should find its money somewhere else. The money received from fines should go to supplement Parking Service's budget.

As I continue attending this University I find myself asking, "What is the point of dumping more stress on college students lives when a great deal already exists with classes, work and finding an identity?" Parking Services should make life easier for students not more complicated. It's a service, and they should act like one. They should be virtually invisible until you need them.

Tom La Chance is a UMass student.

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

Election night blues or Easthampton in the rain

JAMIE LOO

It was a night that I thought would be a good story to tell in 20 years.

I would be sitting in a newsroom somewhere talking about how I was in Easthampton Massachusetts on November 5, 2002 when the first female governor of the Commonwealth was elected. Easthampton where all the action was going on Shannon O'Brien's hometown.

I thought wrong.

The night started with Frannie Carr and I getting lost looking for the town hall, so that we could get the first ballot returns for a class. We passed the famous pond in the center of town and a large cemetery. Then in the middle of the dark and out of nowhere came a guardrail. We almost ended up in the pond. When we got to town hall it's completely empty, aside from people practicing for a play. The town clerk's office is even locked up. Frannie and I panicked but waited patiently until 9 p.m. rolled around and the town clerk showed up. We waited in anticipation for the rest of the entourage to come in, the reporters, campaign teams and eager people waiting to see the results. The imaginary entourage we conjured up in our heads never showed up.

Maybe the big party for Shannon had already started and was somewhere else in town, O'Brien obviously won the precincts in the Easthampton area. Instead of coming back to Amherst right away, Frannie and I thought we would go on an adventure and look for a good story for The Collegian. Here we were, in Easthampton, hometown of Shannon O'Brien on election night. There must be a great story somewhere.

We walked up Union Street, past all the closed storefronts. Easthampton is a nice town; I would love to go back again in the day time, I thought. We were slowly passing the Big E supermarket in town when suddenly we saw a large group of people clustered together looking in one direction.

"Oh my God, they must be watching TV! Here it is! We've got a story."

"We've got a story," Frannie yelled with me.

We began running towards the entrance of Big E optimistic that inside there were excited people watching the victory roll in for their hometown native. Frannie and I reached the door and stopped short, frantically looking for a television. It ended up being a staff meeting.

10 p.m. It's raining now. Undaunted we continue our search for a story, up the street, until we see the Union Street Pizza House. Owner, James Pascoe, his son, nephews and a few other people are watching CNN. Pascoe's business has been in town for over 30 years and said the O'Briens are a well-known family in town. Her father, Eddie O'Brien, has been on the governor's council for years and gets food delivered from Pascoe's restaurant all the time. Pascoe said Eddie is a huge fan of hamburgers and always gets them well-done, until it's almost burnt. Shannon used to also stop in frequently while she was a state representative and while she was treasurer.

"Shannon O'Brien loved her meatball grinders," Pascoe smiled.

Frannie and I continue up the road and pass by Treydon's Bar and Cafe. The televisions are tuned to a sports game. A waitress tells us that it's been calm all day and that most people in town are probably at the O'Brien campaign headquarters in Springfield or Boston. She said the staff has been checking in on the results every now and then and are disappointed Shannon is behind. The waitress said Shannon's sister, Gaylin, still lives in town and comes in at least once a week.

"F—ing Republicans," she mumbles when we tell her the current results.

Away from the town center, people are gathered at the bar in Legion Post 224. Jaime Morrow the bartender stops, between serving drinks to look up at the television, avidly watching the results come in.

"How are you doing, Frankie," she says, already preparing a drink he hasn't even ordered yet.

Morrow said that a few people have come in tonight to watch the returns, but that nothing particularly exciting has been happening in Easthampton.

"Six guys came in cheering for Shannon, but they all left when Romney started winning."

Morrow said there has been a mixture of Romney and O'Brien supporters in town and that there is no animosity between either side. In Morrow's opinion, a lot of the support for Romney was because he said he wouldn't raise taxes, and O'Brien most likely would.

"People don't realize that instead of raising taxes he'll cut jobs, which affects the low income people. People are going to lose their jobs now," said Morrow.

Morrow gets a drink for another customer and asks if he voted today.

"Nope, I couldn't, I was working all day," he answered, gazing up at the television screen. Morrow said that ultimately Jill Stein, Carla Howell and Barbara Johnson ended up hurting O'Brien, like the way Gore was hurt in the presidential election.

"Their message is hurting the state and now Romney has it. Yeah, Massachusetts is doomed now," said Morrow sarcastically.

11 p.m. Frannie and I are still sitting in the bar waiting for O'Brien's concession speech. This wasn't the night we had hoped for. It wasn't a night for the Democrats of Massachusetts either.

11:30 p.m. Frannie and I call The Collegian and give our concession speech. We don't really have a story for the front page. We'll probably be telling this story in 20 years with a great feeling of nostalgia, but not right now. Especially not for the next four years, until the next election. It was still raining, which we thought was the perfect anti-climactic end to our night in Easthampton, on election night 2002. The hometown of Shannon O'Brien, who was almost the first elected woman governor of Massachusetts.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

THIS OLD HOUSE

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.07.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

HOUSES OF AMHERST

graphic by kate

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Old windowpanes with just that hint of extra magnification. Aging red bricks pieced together to form a complex puzzle-schemed walkway. Intricate trim outlining sharp edges of a house. Maturing fireplaces with layer upon layer of paint spread over its delicate surface. These are the images associated with old homes – antiques spaces with co-existing modern conveniences and aged relics dwelling inside. These are the fragments of living history and the hot spots honoring different heritages. These are the historic houses of Amherst.

Because such homes are mostly privately owned, the general public rarely has a chance to step inside these proud structures and absorb their unique atmosphere. However, thanks to the Amherst Historical Society, the general public had exactly this chance last Saturday during the Fourth Annual Amherst House Tour.

This self-guided touring program allowed patrons to visit seven privately owned Amherst homes, each with their own distinct features to delight the visual senses. The tour began four years ago as a solely historic homes expedition, in which all buildings were within walking distance of each other, explained Fiona Russell, Director of the Historical Society.

Over time, though, the Historical Society has expanded the types of houses included in the program, as each year a new set of seven is picked, resulting with two modern homes in this year's featured selection.

Proceeds from the tour benefit the Amherst History Museum, and as such, a seven member House Committee, a subdivision of the museum's ruling Board of Directors, chooses the homes eligible for touring. Each committee member is responsible to find a house to become part of the tour, Russell noted, and with the program gaining momentum each year, "usually, from previous tours, the [committee members] will get people coming out of the woodwork and volunteering their homes," she added.

The committee begins by discussing possible houses, reported Ellen Melley, one such board member on the committee. "We try to have a mix of different styles – pick houses that are interesting. I was the one who thought of this house," she said, standing inside the Deacon Kellogg house, the oldest home presented on the tour this year, and gesturing around the small window-lit room, its white wooden fireplace humbly embedded into the elegantly papered wall.

The entire premise of this program is to raise funds for the Amherst History Museum on Amity Street. "It was just an idea for fundraising," as Russell phrased it – and the idea has since become one of the museum's six major fundraising annual events. While this type of benefit is unique to the area, Russell added, other historical societies have previously hosted similar programs even longer than this has run – particularly in New England where a higher concentration of older homes can be found.

Walking into the chosen homes, especially ones dating back in time with a bit more history and story behind them, proves emotionally overwhelming for the avid fan of housing decor. The second house on the tour stop, a Queen Anne Victorian home

Turn to HOUSES, page 6

MICROLOGY

Dedicated to the subtle science of microwave cookery in all its forms and varients

WITH JESSICA PELLETIER

Have you ever taken time to smell the odors exuding from the ventilation system in your microwave? Of course you probably haven't; one generally doesn't press one's nasal passages up against such things. My point is that I desperately need a chance to ventilate some pent up frustration, so open up those nostrils and take a whiff.

I've worked at the campus Dining Commons for over a third of my college career and it is getting pretty hard listening to the comments people make regarding food service and the people who work within this system. Not everyone who dines in the DC says these things, but for some reason rude and uncalled for comments have been springing up everywhere.

I find another way to show off your "wit." If you've exceeded the university's required years with the campus meal program and you still insist on going to the DC and are still complaining, do yourself a favor and either get rid of the meal plan or find something more enlightening to talk about than how the food "sucks."

Quit making fun of the employees. These are people with lives and families of their own. If you're doing something you know you shouldn't (sneaking in without paying, taking silverware) don't get angry with them for doing their jobs. I've discussed everything from literature to financial development with these folks and they deserve more respect than they're given. Many have their college degrees as well, and being treated like a servant in a hamlet isn't in their job description.

Stop stealing. I can't even believe I just had to ask rational humans to do this, but honestly. All my friends and I want sometimes is to come in for a bagel and coffee between classes. Why can't we? Because Quickie Mc-Lightfingers has decided to snatch a knapsack full of food and the rest of us are screwed. And I don't want to hear whining about how "we're overcharged" or "they've got more in back." The truth is, you can justify taking what isn't yours any way you want, but if I catch you I'm hunting you down and taking it back.

Everything is "safe to eat." The stupidest question I have ever heard regarding food quality at the D.C. was, "is it true they put laxatives in the food?" That is such a stupid question and so against all health code regulations that I can't even begin to explain it. By the way, the answer is no. The sanitary precautions used are in accord with every aspect of the business, from the time the food comes in to the time you bus your tray. Gloves are always used and nothing of an artificial or preservative nature is ever used. We also do not use MSG in any of our Asian meals, to kill another rumor I've heard.

Here's a little known stat for you as well: UMass ranked eighth in the nation for self-operated food service industries. We're also in the top five for menu diversity in the country, so if you think you're getting a sucky deal and are still complaining, do yourself a favor and either get rid of the meal plan or find something more enlightening to talk about than how the food "sucks."

Sorry to those readers to who this does not apply; it's been a basic waste of your time, but it needed to be said. I've got over 40 hours to my workweek plus classes and I just can't stand to see other people I work with whom I know are decent and hardworking treated like the scum of the earth because the food isn't being pushed out fast enough or the spoons haven't been replaced immediately. So let's try having a little respect for people who are trying to earn a living and get their contractually promised pay at the same time. Purchasing a meal plan does not mean you have the right to treat others like your personal servants, regardless of the power trip you might get.

Thanks for your time guys, I just had to vent this time. Next time it's pumpkin pie and meatloaf, I promise.

Jessica Pelletier is a Collegian Columnist.

The Anniversary rocks Pearl Street

By Lauren DeFilippo
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

THE ANNIVERSARY
with Burning Brides and Koufax
October 25, 2002
Pearl Street Night Club

Rock returned to Pearl Street on October 25. Unfortunately, not too many people were there to see it. Then again, that might not be such a bad thing. A sparse crowd assembled in front of the small stage in the intimate downstairs club to see The Anniversary, Burning Brides, and covertly advertised Koufax.

Koufax, labelmate of The Anniversary, opened the show with an energetic set. Their sound, a mixture of pop harmonies with clever bass lines, was enjoyable, especially some of the newer tracks like "Come Back to Life." The band released their second full-length album, Social Life, on October 22.

To classify Philadelphia's Burning Brides as simply riding the wave of popularity that garage rock and its synonyms are currently enjoying would be unfair. It is the band's intention to make and perform their sound as "a mixture of both the dark and the beautiful" according to singer Dimitri Coats, who points to the band's name as a prime example. What is most important, however, is that they also have fun while they do it. They are just fun to watch. They put it all out there, and disarmingly grab your attention. That's not too bad for two ex-Juilliard students and Jason Kourkounis, borrowed from the equally rocking Hot Snakes.

When compared to the Koufax and The Anniversary, Burning Brides has a somewhat unexpected sound, a phenomenon that demanded the audience's rapt attention from the first song. Theirs is a gritty, classic rock influenced sound that is remarkably filled out for a three-piece unit. For a better understanding, think Queens of the Stone Age, circa 1997, mixed with The (International) Noise Conspiracy. The best songs of the set by far were "Arctic Snow" and "Plastic Empire" from the album Fall of the Plastic Empire, released in early September.

Burning Brides walks the fine line between aggressive rock posturing and cleverly constructed pop sensibility, with the live show being held together by singer Coats' impassioned lyrics. Be sure to bring along the earplugs, though: it is worth noting that the live performance is considerably faster, noisier and more driving than their studio output.

The same cannot be said of Kansas City, Mo. exports The Anniversary. Since the release of their second full length album, Your Majesty is Scared as Well, Records earth this year, the band has moved away from their power pop, punk-influenced beginnings to embrace a seventies rock sound that evokes AM radio nostalgia. Despite the transition, the band's direct and plaintive style still resonates with indie music fans. Simply put, the kids are a little more polished around the edges then they used to be.

The band gathered a considerably larger crowd directly in front of the stage then the two bands that had preceded them. They began the set with a two-minute instrumental intro to "Sweet Marie," the breakout hit from their latest release. The set was nearly entirely comprised of material from the Your Majesty release, with the occasional insertion of newer material. Despite all of the more rock-riff oriented songs, the crowd remained sedate but attentive, quietly mouthing the lyrics to each song in true emo fashion.

As the Anniversary finished their set, the foreign sound of cliché, European dance music coming from upstairs filled the room. To remedy the situation and appease the cheering audience, the band returned to the stage for a short, but memorable two-song encore. The encore, however short, possessed the single most energetic moment of the entire evening. The band closed the night with what they called "A little song called 'The Heart is a Lonely Hunter'" from their Designing a Nervous Breakdown album, released in 2000. The group of considerate and motionless fans erupted into a jumble of flailing arms, head bobbing, and an enthusiastic sing-along. If that's not appreciation, what is?

■ houses

(continued from page 5)

dating from 1892, strikes the observer right away with its interior rose color-schemed walls and furniture. There's a staircase set a few yards from the front door. As yellow light (streamed through a side yellow stained glass window) spreads its color tint over the light rose carpeted stairs with a plaid cross-crossed sectioned mahogany wooden railing faithfully lining it to the second floor, one realizes this house encompasses a personality of its own.

A large, three bay window protrudes in the building's front, undeniably singling it's Victorian style. Built and then originally owned by John L. Lovell – who launched the first Western Massachusetts photographic studio – the home comes with one other aspect highlighting its unique style: an intricate garden in the back yard with an accompanying porch. As current homeowner Suzannah Fabing expressed, the garden marks the best aspect of the property. "On the back porch in nice weather, we just live out there," Muspratt said. "It's what makes the house particularly wonderful."

Step number three, more lavish and on bigger scale of grandeur than the Victorian manor, the President's house at Amherst College (pictured on the cover page), sets hidden behind a row of tall evergreen bushes. Three sets of stairs, a short white picket gate and an old brick walkway lead up to the circular driveway of this ivy lined brick home, trimmed in white.

Inside, one finds a lavish antique fireplace in practically every downstairs room and in four upstairs. Special treasures abound in this place, making fans of detail smile upon seeing something like window shutters built to fit into the window's frame and appear as part of its sill paneling. Upon even further inspection, though, these fans will notice such shutters have been, over the years, painted so many times they can no longer fit into the set frame – marking a beautiful flaw of imperfection that suggests the home has a lived history linked with it.

An impressive drawing room, sectioned into thirds by white Greek-style pillars, radiates with its white and light pink color scheme. Although the room appears as if it was at one time three separate, smaller rooms, housekeeper Sabra Mott explained that since the building's original design by Warren S. Hovland, the basic structure of the room has remained as presented today.

Changing gears in almost every sense of the term, the fifth home on the tour, an 1859 Victorian farmhouse, presents a living dollhouse. With library bookshelves over its parlor doorway, a four bay window back-dropping a petit couch, quaint doily curtains shimmering in the sun, a petite and somewhat hidden wooden back staircase lining the dining room, a brick wall showcasing white and blue china plates and playful doorway trims, this house has all the angelic charms one could imagine. Its intricate and colorful wallpaper dazzles the eye from room to room and pleases homeowner Carol Kaminsky, who hand selected many of the fun attributes of the house over the years. "There's a lot of blue and a lot red [in the color scheme of the wallpaper in her favorite room], and I guess it's the combo of the two that's my favorite," she said.

In the end, the tour was designed to make money for the museum; as Muspratt with her Victorian structure realized, leading her to agree in making her house part of the tour to support the museum. "I feel like a neighbor to the historic society," she said, using the proximity of her home to the museum as a basis of her statement. "I know how hard it is for small historical societies," she continued. "As an owner of an old home, [I believe] it's important that we have these kinds of places."

And this year marked the greatest success for Amherst's event, with over 700 tickets sold and houses toured through five (those centered closest to the Amherst town center) each receiving 195 visitors. The final profit, reaching nearly $4,000, substantially exceeded the profit margins of the past, Russell said. The money will benefit the museum's operations budget, which can go toward anything from opening up the museum to the public to paying its heating bills to contributing toward its director's salary to aiding in beginning its next fundraiser.

The museum is set in a historic house – the Strong House, to be exact – and features a series of periodic rooms presented through a guided tour. Twenty-five different volunteer tour guides, all varying how much time is dedicated each month to the museum, make up the group who explain the history of the Strong home – itself dating from 1750 and standing as one of the three oldest homes in Amherst. The history details the house itself, Russell said, but it also details the entire town history of Amherst within its progression over time.

Within this light brown painted wood sided building, onlookers will also find an ongoing art gallery exhibit dedicated the art of Mable Loomis Todd. This feisty Victorian woman, whose heyday rests in the 1880s, founded the Amherst Historical Society and was the one to first have Emily Dickinson's poetry published – she even served as a co-editor for the first books of Dickinson. Beyond that, Todd practiced her art frequently, painting on traditional canvas, wood plate and furniture among other things. "There wasn't a nook or cranny she didn't paint," as Russell put it, noting how the museum encompasses a large variety of such work.

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM
WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM
WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM
WWW.DAILYCO
AILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

LIQUORS 44
EVERYDAY PRICING!!
½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99 + dep.
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99 + dep.
COORS LIGHT & COORS 30 12OZ CANS 30 PACK $18.49 + dep.
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 30 12OZ CANS 30 PACK $10.99
HEINEKEN 24 12OZ LONGNECK BOTTLES CASE $18.99 + dep.
BASS ALE & GUINNESS DRAUGHT 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99
SAM ADAMS 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99 + dep.
SMIRNOFF ICE 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99
MAGIC HAT 6PK BOTTLES 6 PACK $5.99
C K MONDAVI CHARDONNAY MERLOT CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $11.99
BELLA SERA PINOT GRIGIO 1.5L $9.49
TWIN VALLEY WINES CHARDONNAY MERLOT CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $6.99
CITRA WINES 1.5L $5.99
BERINGER'S FOUNDERS CHARDONNAY 750ML $7.99
FAT BASTARD SHIRAZ 750ML $7.99
CARLO ROSSI 4 LITRACHOS 4.0L $6.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 80 PROOF 1.75L $18.99
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD 1.75L $18.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN 1.75L $13.99
CUTTY SARK SCOTCH 1.75L $25.99
JACK DANIELS 750ML $17.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFFERED 1.75L $11.99 + dep.
GOLD TEQUILA 750ML $14.99
ROMANA SAMBUCA 750ML $16.99
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
Amateur NIGHT
THURSDAY NOVEMBER 7th & NOVEMBER 21st
PLACE $500!!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND & 3RD
18+
0 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
DLEY - 413/532-3621

TICKETS ONLY $7, $10, $15 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
Cirque Eloize
An Adventure into a world of "Fellinesque" characters and virtuoso circus performers. Both on the ground and in the air, Cirque Eloize promises heart-stopping parade accompanied by an infectious mix of music, dance and theater. A special night for the entire family!
Saturday December 7 FAC Concert Hall 8 p.m
FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Fosse
journey through song and dance through the extraordinary career of showman Bob Fosse. Starring some of the hottest dancers, Fosse includes such and never-seen-before dance and musical numbers from the choreographer's richest works on stage, film, and television.
Thursday November 14 FAC Concert Hall 7:30 p.m
Sponsored by 106.3 new rock media
Fosse

Maine an unfriendly host to UMass

Minutemen 0-17-0 at Alfond Arena

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Sometimes within Hockey East competition, certain teams just seem to match up well with one another. The Massachusetts hockey team usually plays eye-to-eye with Providence, Northeastern and UMass-Lowell.

But with that comes the other end of the spectrum – Maine.

The Minutemen (2-3-0, 1-2-0 HE) head north for a contest with the No. 11 Black Bears (5-1-1 overall) on Saturday, and waiting for them in the center of Orono is Alfond Arena, one of the best hockey rinks in the country at the collegiate level, but one that has been none to kind to the Maroon and White over its history. UMass has never picked up a point at the arena, going 0-17-0 all-time, including a weekend where it was outscored 14-1 in a pair of games late in the season.

FRESHMAN PETER ALDEN WILL TAKE HIS FIRST TRIP TO MAINE'S ALFOND ARENA SATURDAY. HIS PREDECESSORS HAVE STRUGGLED THERE, WITH A LIFETIME 0-17-0 RECORD IN ORONO.

"It's a longer trip than most of the others we have," Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "It should be no factor at all. The game is played within the glass. It should be an inviting place to go play a hockey game. UNH is an inviting place, Cornell is an inviting place, UVM is an inviting place – they all have great home crowd with a lot of energy. It should be a place that you look forward to playing in."

The Minutemen do have experience this year to build on, however, as last weekend they downed NU at Matthews Arena, a place where they had not won in three years. Coming off the win has given Cahoon's squad an additional air of confidence in practice this week.

"It's always interesting to me to watch a team come off a win," he said. "The kids are a little bit looser and a little bit more upbeat. Hopefully our kids are not getting too caught up with it all and are just taking it day by day and they continue to work hard and continue to grow. We are not out of the woods yet as a program, but we certainly think we're holding a compass."

Maine has had a solid season so far this year, outscoring its opponents 32-10 over its seven games, but has not played an incredibly high-octane schedule so far this season, and will be playing its first league game against the Maroon and White.

"They're dangerous to begin with and I'm sure they'll be jacked up, but hopefully so will we," Cahoon said. "They've got a little bit of a different look on defense, but they keep bringing them in. They've got a good goaltender, and a bunch of forwards that can put pressure on you."

Leading the Bears between the pipes is freshman sensation Jim Howard. He has saved almost 95 percent of his shots for a 1.05 goals against average in four games played. Howard held the Minutemen to one goal last year while playing for the U.S. National Team Development Program.

"He's [dominated] since the beginning of the year and he's got a whole year of the U.S. Development Program under his belt, so he's played at a pretty high level," Cahoon said. "He's a good goaltender but he himself isn't going to make the difference."

Offensively, the Bears lost top scorer Niko Dimitrakos, while on defense it lost captain and leading blueliner Peter Metcalf to graduation and number two man Michael Schutte to the NHL. Leading the offense is the senior trio of Martin Kariya, Chris Heisten and Robert Lisiak, who have combined for 28 points in seven games. On defense, Francis Nault (1g, 5a) leads the way for Maine.

The Maine offense will be a challenge to the Maroon and White defense, which has been solid since allowing six goals to Boston College in the opening game of the season, and has since added former forward Thomas Pöck to the mix.

"For the time being he's going to play back there for sure," Cahoon said. "He just relies on his good instincts and gradually is becoming more comfortable back there. He makes the right play a large majority of the time. He gives us a whole new dimension back there."

The offense made strides against the Huskies on Saturday night, posting their largest goal output since a 6-3 victory over Connecticut nearly a year ago.

"We're generating opportunities," Cahoon said. "Hopefully we can keep pressure on people. If we develop a little more maturity and poise around the net, we'll score more goals."

Also impressive last weekend was freshman netminder Gabe Winer. Winer turned aside 43 of the 48 shots he faced over the two conference games. For his performance, he was awarded Hockey East Rookie of the Week honors.

"I feel like I'm playing better every game," Winer said. "I'm still not up to the level I think I can play at, but I'm improving every game."

Playing in Alfond Arena for the first time for the freshman-heavy Minutemen could be a harrowing experience, but some freshmen, like Winer, seem to be lacking the expected apprehension.

"I like playing in hostile rinks," he said. "It's more fun than anything. At Northeastern it was fun to go out – they yell 'sieve' when they announce your name – and I just think it's funny. When they know they can't score, they can't really yell at you."

JUNIOR MIKE WARNER SCORED THE LONE GOAL IN LAST FRIDAY'S 2-1 OVERTIME LOSS TO PROVIDENCE.

His bench-ness

ADAM LEVOY

Has "Air" Jordan been grounded by the Wizards?

To begin this new season, Michael Jordan is coming off the bench for the Washington Wizards as their sixth man. The team decided it's in his best interest to rest his knees as much as possible during the rigors of an NBA season and have him play against other team's second-string players. This move by the Wizards makes sense from a basketball standpoint; however, having MJ come off the bench will slowly diminish the Jordan aura he has created in the sport of basketball.

Last season, the Wizards were well on their way to an unfathomable playoff berth, when all of a sudden their season turned to ruins when Jordan's knees gave out in early spring.

Jordan will turn 40 this year, and although his skills have diminished some, he still is Michael Jordan and can hold his own with the best of the league. He does not have the lift and vertical leap he once had, but, then again, how many 40-year-old players are still in the league performing at the level he is?

This is the generation that remembers Jordan flying through the air as if that was his home. We remember Jordan for talking off from the free-throw line in his classic dunk contests with Dominique Wilkins in the late 80s. We remember Mike for winning six championships, three-peating twice against players such as Magic Johnson, Clyde Drexler, Charles Barkley and Karl Malone. Most of all, we simply remember Jordan for being Jordan.

Seeing MJ coming off the bench is something this generation never thought it would see. How can the man who was once the lone megastar in the league, punishing players – tongue hanging out and all – now be a second string player? Fans still want to see Jordan play, but want to remember him for the great player he once was – not as the bench player for the Wizards.

Knowing Jordan, he will not be coming off the bench for long. He has too much respect for himself and competitive zest still burns inside of him. He might not throw one down like he used to, but opposing teams still do not want to see him with the ball at the end of a close game. By Christmas, MJ will probably be playing normal minutes again, causing havoc on the court.

The hardest thing for a player to do is accept his age. No one likes to admit when it is time to hang up the jersey and call it quits. Jordan can still play, however every time he misses a dunk or settles for a jump shot rather than fly through the air at altitudes unbeknown to man, we see how mortal he has become. We want to remember number 23 for being bigger than the sport of basketball.

Michael Jordan's lone goal when he came to the Wizards was not to win a championship but to just reach the playoffs. If his goal is accomplished this year, which it very well can, that should be the final chapter to the story of Michael Jordan's legacy as the greatest player to play the game. Let's hope he does it as a starter, though, and that he throws in a dunk or two to keep the Jordan aura alive and well.

•••

This Monday, Madison Square Garden did not sell 19,763 tickets for a New York Knicks game for the first time since 1993. Only 18,100 tickets were sold marking the end of the consecutive sellout streak at 433 games – the longest in the league.

This is due to last year's lackluster season and a disappointing 30-season in which the team failed to improve.

For the first time in a decade, there is a strong marketing push for tickets at the "world's most famous arena," for the reeling franchise. Once the hottest ticket in town, The Garden is so "yesterday" in New York these days.

This just in: Spike Lee has sold his season tickets and can now be seen sitting courtside with a fason Kidd jersey at the Continental Air-Lines Arena a.k.a. The Meadowlands.

•••

The New Jersey Nets, Dallas Mavericks, and Seattle Sonics are the only three teams to remain undefeated thus far, while the Knicks and Memphis Grizzlies are still searching for win number one.

Adam Levoy is a Collegian Columnist

Three players who started season in dog-house start to produce

By Howard Ulman
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) – Bill Belichick's doghouse seemed to be getting crowded.

Running back Antowain Smith and right tackle Greg Robinson-Randall failed training camp conditioning runs. Linebacker Ted Johnson left the Patriots for three days amid signs he wouldn't be activated for the season opener.

"We need an addition for that doghouse, the way it's been portrayed," New England's coach joked Wednesday.

If there ever was a doghouse – and Belichick says there wasn't – it's a lot emptier now.

Last Sunday's 38-7 rout of the Buffalo Bills that ended New England's four-game losing streak provided some season firsts: a 100-yard rushing game by Smith, a start for Robinson-Randall and a sack by Johnson.

Belichick said he didn't make outcasts of those players who filled major roles on last season's Super Bowl champions.

He started Kenyatta Jones over Robinson-Randall because he felt it gave the Patriots a better chance to win. He benched Johnson because he felt he needed 45 other players more against Pittsburgh. He didn't use Smith much because of the way games developed.

But none of them gave up, and now the Patriots are 4-4 with a road game against Chicago on Sunday.

Robinson-Rundall said he never thought Belichick didn't like him after he failed his run at the start of camp.

"I thought they pretty much liked me, but it's not my decision," he said. "It's frustrating at times, but whenever I get the opportunity to play I just want to get out there and try to do well."

Johnson was more frustrated. He spent his other seven NFL seasons with the Patriots and overcame serious injuries. He was a dedicated worker and team player.

Then he left the team seven days before the Monday night season opener. But he started the next two weeks and has played in six of the Patriots' eight games.

"There's no hard feelings. I have 100 percent support for whatever the coaching staff wants to do," he said Wednesday. "I had to come to a place where I could focus on my job and help the team win and not be a distraction. I'd be lying if I said that was easy."

He's tied for fifth on the team with 36 tackles.

"Ted's really played well the last month," Belichick said. "Some of the situations that came up in the early part of the year weren't as favorable for him for one reason or another.

"But he hasn't really let that get him down. He's worked through it. He's persevered, showed a lot of diligence and things now have started to come his way."

Smith's frustration was less, but he wasn't used as much as he would have liked until last Sunday, when he rushed 29 times for 111 yards and a touchdown. His previous highs this season were 17 carries and 92 yards.

Against the Bills, he also caught two touchdown passes.

"He's a spark. He's a playmaker for us," quarterback Tom Brady said. "The more time (the ball) is in his hand, obviously, the better we do. ... The way he's been playing, you try to get it to him as much as you can."

The Patriots relied on the pass in their first three games, all wins, because teams were vulnerable to it. But during the four-game slide, they passed more than they wanted to because they had to come back quickly.

In Buffalo, the Patriots scored on their first possession.

Interested writers should come to the weekly sports meeting on Sundays at 5 in the CC basement.

BEER TASTING
Thursday, Nov. 7, 2002
5:00 to 8:00 pm
Elijah Boltwood's Tavern
at The Lord Jeffery Inn
$2.00 pints
Pete's Wicked Winter Warmer
Appetizer Specials / Prizes / Giveaways
The Lord Jeffery Inn, 30 Boltwood Ave, Amherst
253-2576 www.lordjefferyinn.com

When beginning an exploration of unknown lands, challenges arise. Winds are unpredictable. Storms hit unexpectedly. Uncertainty rules. Superstitions abound. Why explore alone? USAC, a consortium of 27 U.S. universities has berths* available for stout-hearted individuals. With programs in 19 countries and as many years of experience, no one is better equipped to help you reach your study abroad goals. USAC. Your gateway to the world.
*Provided you "deeply care" Spaces fill up quickly!
Your Gateway to the World
Australia
Chile • China • Czech Republic
Costa Rica • Denmark • England
France • Germany • Ghana • Ireland
Israel • Italy • Malta • New Zealand • Scotland • Spain
Sweden • Thailand
University credit
Scholarships available
Language classes at all levels
Month, summer, semester & yearlong programs
Wide range of academic courses
Internships
Field trips & tours
Small classes
UNIVERSITY STUDIES ABROAD CONSORTIUM USAC
HTTP://USAC.UNR.EDU • 775-784-6569

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Corona 12 pack $9.99 + dep.
Busch 24 pack Bottles $9.99 + dep.
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St., Rt. 9 584-8174

SALE!
3 DAYS ONLY...FRI/SAT/SUN • NOV 8, 9, 10
Calendars
Buy 2, Get 1 FREE
Free item of equal or lesser value
Great for Holiday Giving!
Lots of styles...
art • humor • photographic fashion • gift • home Faces
main st., northampton
open til 10 • th, fr, sa

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apartment for Rent Start 1/1 2 bdrm. In Sunderland $820 utilities included on Bus Rt Call 665-2359

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Chevy Cavalier, AT, 2 Door, Purple, 105k, AC, AM/FM, $1900, 587-0906 dundas@cs.umass.edu

91 Acclaim needs work $350 545-0547

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy and enthusiastic workers for the following: Youth Basketball Supervisors/ Officials, Facility Supervisors.

EMPLOYMENT

Apply at the Human Resources Office, Amherst Town Hall, Main Street. For more information contact Erika Cumps at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

Want a better body? Custom eating and exercise program that fits into your current lifestyle Easy, Affordable Call 548-8979 or email IcanMakeYouFit @aol.com

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwires.com 584-7750

PETS

Adorable gray cat needs a good home. Cat needs its shots. Call 413-253-1759 Ask for Mike

SUBLET

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

5 ..... CBS / 3
6 ..... NBSN
7 ..... Fox Sports Network
8 ..... PBS / 57
9 ..... HSCN Cinema
10 ..... WB / 30
11 ..... UPN 38
12 ..... TV Guide Channel
13 ..... FOX / 61
14 ..... ABC / 40
15 ..... NBC / 22
16 ..... International Channel
17 ..... UMATV
18 ..... HSCN Info Channel
19 ..... ESPN
20 ..... ESPN 2
21 ..... UVC-19
22 ..... ESPN Classic
23 ..... Travel-to-Travel
24 ..... CNN
25 ..... CNN HL
26 ..... Weather Channel
27 ..... Learning Channel
28 ..... History Channel
29 ..... A & E
30 ..... Discovery Channel
31 ..... Discovery Health
32 ..... Food Network
33 ..... NASA
34 ..... Home & Garden TV
35 ..... Travel Channel
36 ..... Lifetime
37 ..... CNBC
38 ..... Tech TV
39 ..... BET
40 ..... CMT
41 ..... USA
42 ..... TNN
43 ..... MTV
44 ..... MTV2
45 ..... VH-1
46 ..... TNT
47 ..... TBS
48 ..... E! Entertainment
49 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
50 ..... Court TV
51 ..... Nick or Nite
52 ..... Comedy Central
53 ..... Cartoon Network
54 ..... Game Show Network
55 ..... TV Land
56 ..... FOX Family
57 ..... Univision
58 ..... Galavision
59 ..... Telemundo
60 ..... College TV Network
61 ..... C-SPAN
62 ..... C-SPAN2
63 ..... CTN

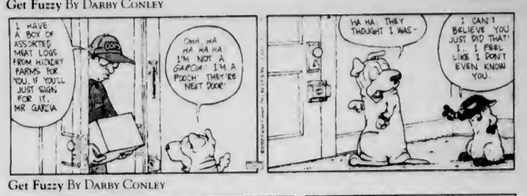
AZANNASALE

Thursday November 7 through Saturday November 9.

$10 off Mavi , Seven , and Joe's jeans.
$10 off Steve Madden, Diesel, Franco Sarto, Mia footwear.
Sale on Urban Outfitter sweaters.
Sale on Jewelry.

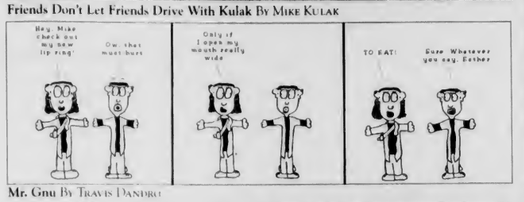
ZANNA

AZANNASALE www.zanna.com



TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Antcat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"So bombs away and as they say here's to oblivion."

-Unwritten Law

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 19	HIGH: 48 LOW: 33	HIGH: 63 LOW: 36

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You don't want to take time doing those "little things" that have become second nature. Jump right to the important stuff and make a loved one happy. And you are a great person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Your mind is off and running, but your heart may be lagging behind. Take care that you're not actually trying to deceive yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You know what you're talking about, so why do you have so much difficulty explaining yourself to others? Why do you lack confidence?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may be far more demonstrative with your feelings than usual. Others may not fully understand what you are trying to communicate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may not prefer the kind of activity that is in store for you today, but once you commit to it, you'll surely acquit yourself quite well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may receive some important news today that you're not quite sure what to do with until one last piece of the puzzle falls into place.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You're in no mood to have things go wrong today. If you have failed to prepare, you'd better be ready to do some quick-fix work!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – A dream come true may not be so much fun as dreaming it in the first place. Today, you're going to have to decide whether to continue your "pursuit."

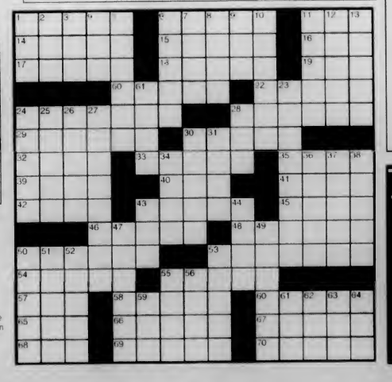
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – A little people-watching can serve you well today. You'll get a few valuable ideas and increase your own confidence through comparison.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Give yourself – and others – the benefit of the doubt today. Nothing is likely to be "perfect," and there are many appropriate ways to behave.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may be blessed with an unexpected inspiration toward mid-day. Enlightenment will enable you to fulfill someone else's high expectations.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You're not going to want to disappoint a family member who has been counting on you for some time. Today, do what you must to fulfill a promise.

Doo doo doo dodododo dodo dodo dodo do dododo... (Yeah Mario Bros. Theme song!)



ACROSS
1 Urgent
6 Black-ink item
11 Conflagration
14 Scent
15 Disconnected
16 Spanks defeater
17 Entice
18 Marry in haste
19 Perch off
20 Orlando attraction
22 Dull
24 Locks horns with
28 Thin layer
29 Arrow parts
30 Exciting
32 Price
33 Dolphin habitat
35 What a gossip's tongue does
39 Gambling stake
40 Thing, in law
41 Milled
42 Actress Meg –
43 "Mad" beauty
45 Brickell of pop
46 Light swords
48 Green
50 Fragrant fir
53 Rained ice
54 Playing marble
55 Teen hangouts
57 Clamor
58 Feminine principle
60 Bedtime stories
65 Attorney's dog
66 Canonical hour
67 Napoleon's fate
68 Sportscasters shout
69 Rustling sound
70 Ms. Reese

DOWN
1 Wine cask
2 Part of the UK
3 Back-fence gossiper
4 Elec. unit
5 Breaking news
6 Gainsboro and Baldwin
7 By oneself
8 Chimney deposit
9 Parapsychology topic
10 Overflowed
11 Beatrice's admirer
12 Typewriter choice
13 Windshield device
21 Senor's coin
23 Someplace
24 Famed stalwarte
25 Not genuine
26 Ravioli or linguine
27 Most frequent
28 Delivery truck
30 Sock parts
31 Relieve tension
34 Hatteras Bay tribe
36 Look at the books
37 Bellyache
38 Hero's horse
43 Dress bottom
44 Zero
47 Songs of joy
49 Magi's home
50 Poorly
51 Lumber
52 Docks
53 Hack
55 Kind of bus
56 Iowa town
59 Currently
61 Lumberjack's tool
62 Mae West role
63 House addition
64 Vast expanse

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	T	O	M	P	■	A	C	N	E	■	S	K	I	T
A	R	I	E	L	■	F	L	U	X	■	P	O	N	E
M	A	L	T	A	■	R	A	M	P	■	A	H	E	A
D	O	R	■	S	N	O	W	B	L	O	W	E	R	S
A	E	R	A	T	E	S	■	O	R	N	A	T	E	■
■	■	■	W	E	B	■	L	I	R	A	S	■	■	■
S	O	F	A	■	L	A	B	E	L	■	G	A	S	■
O	B	E	Y	■	R	U	C	I	B	■	P	O	S	H
W	I	N	■	M	A	S	K	S	■	S	A	P	P	Y
■	■	■	T	O	U	T	I	S	■	E	A	T	■	■
P	E	R	I	O	D	■	D	I	G	E	S	T	S	■
H	A	I	R	R	A	I	S	I	N	G	■	H	A	T
A	S	T	A	■	B	R	A	N	■	N	U	R	S	E
S	E	E	D	■	L	O	N	E	■	N	O	L	T	E
E	L	S	E	■	E	N	D	S	■	G	R	A	S	P

11-14-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Soup

Shepherds Pie

Captain's Catch Sandwich
Oney Ga

Lentil Chili (vegan)

DINNER

Tomato Soup

ITALIAN NIGHT

Chicken with Rosemary, Lemon & Garlic

Shrimp Scampi

Vegan Scampi (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Matt Despres
Photo Technician: James Schaffer
Copy Editor: Scott Eldridge II
Production Staff: Mike Kulak
Production Staff: Jolene Rousseau, Lizzy Nielsen

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Hoops opens with Nike

By Matthew F. Sacco
Collegian Staff

Since practice started four weeks ago, Steve Lappas has dropped endless coach speak about how much his players have improved since last season. But he's faced each of those positive offerings with a warning.

"We'll see how they play with the lights on."

This evening, the Minutemen have a chance to illuminate the Mullins Center with their round-ball advancement as the Nike All Star visit Amherst.

After last season, Lappas gave each of his players something to work on in the offseason.

He told senior guard Micah Brand to continue to pad his physical strength. The co-captain had responded with 19 pounds of added muscle.

The task for junior point guard Anthony Anderson was to work on getting into the lane and taking his defender off the dribble. Inroads on that front will show over time how the Atlantic 10's Rookie of the Year, but 10 points in last weekend's Maroon and White scrimmage were a good sign.

As for the rest of the Minutemen, "Everybody will play," Lappas said. "I think we've had enough playing against each other. After four weeks of beating each other up we're ready to get out there."

Fans are likely to see an all upper class first five with Anderson and Marcus Cox in the backcourt and Brandi Jackie-Rogers and Raheim Lamb up front. But expect a steady rotation of bodies.

The biggest shakeup will likely come from the revolving door that is the small forward position. Lamb is the incumbent but freshman Jeff Viggiano and sophomore Brennan Martin potentially bring a deep scoring threat.

Lamb has been running some power forward in practice in case Lappas decides to go with a three-guard set that will likely include Cox at the three and sophomore Kyle Wilson or Jersey jacking Jack Mike Lasme at off-guard.

"That helps in terms of versatility," Lappas said of Lamb. "I like versatility. I think it helps us on offense."

But Lappas semi-quells the likelihood of a three-guard set because of the practice efforts of his swingmen.

"I've been so happy with Raheim [Lamb] and Jeff [Viggiano]," he said. "I don't think it's necessary right now."

Viggiano and Lasme are part of Lappas' first full recruiting class that also features Mali native Alassane Kouyate. The six-foot-eight forward impressed in the team scrimmage last Saturday with 13 points and five rebounds.

"I was happy with the way Alassane played," Lappas said. "But again, you have to wait and see how they play with the lights on."

The Nike All-Stars' reputation precedes them as they enter Amherst for a 7 p.m. tip-off.

"Sometimes they play well, sometimes they don't play so well," Lappas said.

In its most recent game against Syracuse in the Carrier Dome, Nike was well trounced by the Orange, 93-74.

Freshman NBA prospect Carmelo Anthony dropped 37 points on 14-for-22 shooting, while Hakim Warrick added 15 and a trio of swats.

Former Maryland forward Xree Hipp led Nike with 11 points and four rebounds off the bench. Hipp last saw UMass during the Terps 94-80 loss in the 1993 Abdow's Classic at the Springfield Civic Center, where he scored five points and collected one board.

COLLEGIAN LINDSEY KEEGAN

SENIOR CAPTAIN MICAH BRAND AVERAGED 9.4 POINTS AND 5.7 REBOUNDS PER GAME LAST SEASON FOR THE MINUTEMEN.

Day will lead the way

Freshman QB will fill in for injured Krohn

By Jim Pignatiello

The following opening will strike fear into the hearts of fans of the Massachusetts football team.

The season opener will mark the quarterback left Krohn will not play because of [a game at New Hampshire (2-6, 1-5 Atlantic 10).

While missing nothing to [his hands, as winning out [and claiming the A-10 Championship, the Minutemen (7-2, 5-1 A-10) will have to play the Wildcats, who have won the last two matchups, without one of their most important players.

Krohn left Saturday's 47-7 win over Delaware in the third quarter when he was kneed in the head trying to make a block for freshman running back R.J. Cobbs. While school policy doesn't allow UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple to elaborate on the severity of the injury, it appeared that Krohn suffered his second concussion in three games on Saturday.

Starting at quarterback in Durham, N.H. will be true freshman Tim Day, who preserved UMass wins against Villanova and Delaware – the two games Krohn left due to injury.

While the change under center may change a few things, Whipple feels that it puts more of an onus on rest of the team than on a change in his play calling.

"It changes some of the things," Whipple said. "I think it makes everyone else have to play at another level. We can't drop five passes [like we did against Delaware]."

Day has played relatively well against some tough competition this season, completing nine of 15 pass attempts for 73 yards.

"It's not like he's played against the sisters of the poor," Whipple said. "He's played against Villanova and he's played against Delaware. It's not like some mop up group. He's played in some games that were tight.

"He's talented and he's a good player. We'll change some things to his talents."

Day will be right at home in the Granite State. He quarterbacked last year's New Hampshire state champion and his brother, Pat Day, was the star quarterback at UNH.

Expect Cobbs and fellow freshman running back Raunny Rosario to carry most of the offensive load and take the pressure off the rookie quarterback. Both running backs are within striking distance of Marcel Shipp's freshman rushing record of 736 yards set in 1997. Cobbs is sitting at 727 yards on 128 carries while Rosario has amassed 662 yards on 123 carries.

New Hampshire running back Stephan Lewis has owned the Maroon and White in the teams' last two meetings.

"He'll probably go in our hall of fame," Whipple said.

Lewis has 60 rushing attempts for 515 yards in the pair of contests, taking home the Bill Knight Trophy – given to the game's most valuable player – in each game.

"He's the best running back in the league and one of the best in the country," Whipple said. "He can take the ball and go 80 yards at any point and that's what frightening about him."

Lewis enters the game leading the A-10 with 1585 all-purpose yards (198.1 per game), 549 more than the next player, William and Mary's Rich Musinski on the list.

Whipple figures that jumping out to an early lead and forcing the Wildcats to throw the ball will be the best way to neutralize their terrific tailback.

"If [Lewis] carries it 40 times," Whipple said, "then it's probably going to be good for New Hampshire."

***

With a start at UNH, senior center Maikel Miret will tie the UMass record for consecutive games started. Miret, who is this season's offensive captain, has started every game (44) since the 1999 season. The record is currently held by Vaughn Williams, who started every game from 1988 to 1991.

According to Whipple, Miret will surely get the record.

"He'll start Saturday no matter what happens," Whipple said. "If he [breaks] his leg tonight, I'm going to put him at wide receiver to make sure he got a record. I'm not a big guy for individual records, but [that's what] he's meant [to us]."

Miret stands just three games shy of the school record for games started set at 47 by Jerard White from 1996-1999, but Whipple points out that it isn't just the games that Miret has been suiting up for every week.

"He hasn't missed any practices either," Whipple said. "I think he missed one as a freshman with a knee problem."

Miret's experience will be especially important Saturday, with so many young players on offense.

"He's valuable with all those freshman that are on [the offensive line]," Whipple said. "Now [we've] got a freshman quarterback and freshmen running backs [starting this week].

"The guy is phenomenal. We won't find many more like him. He's as good as I've been around."

TRUE FRESHMAN TIM DAY (NO. 16) WILL START HIS FIRST GAME FOR THE MINUTEMEN ON SATURDAY IN PLACE OF JEFF KROHN, WHO IS OUT WITH A HEAD INJURY.

A-10 time for field hockey

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

Let's play a game boys and girls. Here's how it works: pick the field hockey team that doesn't matchup with the other three.

Richmond holds an overall record of 14-6, West Chester is 9-9, Massachusetts is 4-16 and Saint Joseph's is 9-8. Have you picked out which team is different from the others yet?

By looking at the overall records, it is simple to see that the Massachusetts field hockey team is the squad that is unlike the others and possibly far less superior.

Today, however, all the discrepancies in these records will go down the drain as the Atlantic 10 postseason tournament begins and, believe it or not, the Minutewomen, with a 4-2 conference mark, hold the second seed in the four-team tourney.

On the University of Richmond campus in Richmond, Va., UMass will battle in a semifinal match against the third-seed, West Chester Golden Rams at 2 p.m.

The Rams carry an equal 4-2 conference record, but on Oct. 20, following Senior Day festivities at Richard F. Garber Field, the Minutewomen upended WCU, 3-2, in their second win of the year. The victory gave the Maroon and White the tiebreaker over West Chester and the beneficial fourth win in the conference to prevent being knocked out of the playoff hunt.

"That was a tough game for us and it was great how we pulled it out, but this time they we will be gunning for us so we must do what we need to do be successful," Head Coach Patty Shea said.

West Chester is coming off an epic, playoff-clinching double-overtime victory over the lowly 1-5 La Salle Explores on Saturday, in which A-10 Player of the Week Azure Yoder netted a penalty stroke in the second OT to give the Golden Rams the win and the third spot in the tournament.

In five years at UMass, Shea has led the Minutewomen to five A-10 titles. The Maroon and White have won seven consecutive conference championships going into this year's postseason.

"I have been lucky to be successful in the past, but our real focus is on West Chester and what we need to do to beat them," Shea said.

The Minutewomen endured the worst regular season in school history this year. A 14-game losing streak to start the season partly due to an extremely tough schedule in which it played seven teams currently ranked in the NFHCA Top 20, gave UMass its worst overall record ever. But Shea got her team to on-point for the games that mattered - the A-10 opponents.

"We hung in there," she said. "Our goal all year was conference and now we are here in the tournament and that is what matters."

UMass is no longer the cream of the crop in the Atlantic 10 though. There is a new club looking to take over the crown.

The number-one seed and host Richmond Spiders take a 6-0 conference record into this year's tournament. The Spiders will duel with fourth-seed St. Joes (3-3 A-10) in the other semifinal contest at 12 p.m.

If UMass is able to get past West Chester, it will face-off with the winner of the UR-SJU battle Saturday at 1 p.m.

But Shea is not worried about Richmond or St. Joes; she is too focused on the immediate task at hand – defeating a stingy WCU squad.

"They [WCU] work hard and they proved last game that they keep fighting," she said. "We have to protect the ball and continue to attack the goal."

SPEND THE NIGHT WITH THE DONNAS ARTS PAGE 5.
RESPECT OUR VETERANS ED OP PAGE 4.
HOOPS WINS SPORTS PAGE 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY-SEVEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.08.02

Power outage at UM

A car accident in the town of Amherst that took out a utility pole and transformer briefly affected the power on most areas of the University of Massachusetts campus late Wednesday night just before midnight.

According to Patrick Daly, associate director of utilities at the UMass Physical Plant, the brief power outage occurred in the Sylvan, Northeast, Central, Orchard Hill and the center of campus for about a minute when the transformer was knocked out.

Power was restored less than a minute later when the system swapped circuits.

According to UMass Police Department spokesperson Jim Lyons, no major problems occurred on campus. "Some fire alarms went into trouble, which is what they're supposed to do," Lyons said. "When they go into trouble that means there's power problems or something of that nature. Alarms do spike typically [with something like a power outage]."

According to Lyons, alarm technicians from the Physical Plant had restored all of the alarms to normal by around 5 a.m. Thursday.

Daly said that the technicians did have a few minor problems to deal with, particularly in the Lederle Graduate Research Center.

"We had to come and restart an air handler and an air compressor," Daly said.

Power outages in the past have led to trouble at UMass. A power outage in April 2000 sparked a riot in the Southwest area of campus at 3:18 a.m. Two hundred to 300 people gathering outside of Coolidge Dormitory after a firecracker exploded. A security desk was removed from a dormitory and set on fire. When Amherst firefighters arrived on the scene, students reportedly hurled bottles, cans and other objects at them. Ten off-duty UMPD officers, Hadley Police and a state police cruiser were called in to restore order to the area, which resulted in the arrest and suspension of two UMass students.

- Dan Lamothe

Professor speaks on "Group Autonomy"

By Morris Singer
Collegian Staff

Laurence Thomas, professor of Philosophy and Political Science at Syracuse University, spoke yesterday to a packed room in Herter Hall on the topic "Blacks and Jews: The Question of Group Autonomy and Narrative Identity."

Thomas started his talk by recounting a story of his travels to Finland, where he said that going to temple garnered him many strange looks because he is black. He said that simply being Jewish was not enough to prove that he belonged at temple, and that he had to be familiar with Jewish rituals and customs.

Thomas used this story to emphasize the necessity for all people to be familiar with the narrative of the groups to which they feel a belonging, and that this is true for him as a Jew.

"I do not think color is what makes a [group's] narrative," Thomas said.

More than anything else, he said, familiarity with the stories, ideas, traditions, and other defining factors of a group narrative is what epitomizes belonging.

"I don't care how many bagels you eat," Thomas said. "That's not what makes you a Jew."

According to Thomas, many people find it strange that he is Jewish because he is black. He said that for this reason, he once found himself feeling the need to prove his Jewish affiliation by wearing his yarmulke in public.

Thomas found this particularly frustrating because, as he says, the Torah, "makes no reference to color." Being of a particular ethnicity, Thomas feels, has no affect on being Jewish.

Thomas later commented that no one ever asks him if he is black. He acknowledged that this point may seem silly, but effectively shows that people place more emphasis on racial identity, and less on other aspects of a person. Thomas believes this is a mistake.

"Color is not a people," he said. "[Narrative] can't just be about color."

To further his point, he chose an Asian girl from the audience and asked: "Does she share the same traditions that I share? Does she embrace the same traditions that I do?"

Thomas used these questions in an attempt to diminish the significance of race in the formation of a people.

"What makes a narrative is not color as such, but a set of rituals...that one uses to sanctify who he is."

In addition to race, Thomas also touched on the issue of tragedies contributing to group narrative. He said that people are constantly comparing death tolls. Examples he cited were the Holocaust, the slave trade and the killing of Native Americans during the early years of United States history. Despite the high nature of the numbers, Thomas believes that they are not what are important in the narratives of their respective peoples. He said that there will always be a group with a more staggering set of figures, and that comparing these numbers "is not the issue."

Thomas's lecture is the first of a series of four lectures that will be happening over the next several weeks. The lectures are sponsored by the Department of Afro-American Studies, the Office of Jewish Affairs, and the Hillel House and are brought to the University of Massachusetts by the Department of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies.

The next lecture in the series entitled, "Still Songs to Sing: Holocaust Art, Music and the Translating of Poetry," will be held on Nov. 13 at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

SYRACUSE PROFESSOR LAURENCE THOMAS, SPOKE TO A CROWDED ROOM IN HERTER HALL YESTERDAY.

United Nations paves the way for Iraq vote

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS (AP) – The United States reached a critical agreement with France on a tough Iraq resolution, paving the way for a vote today which President Bush expressed confidence in winning.

The U.N. Security Council set the vote for 10 a.m. EST after the United States and its cosponsor Britain, at French urging, changed the wording in a key provision that would declare Iraq in "material breach" of its U.N. obligations.

The change addresses concerns by France, Russia, Syria and others that the original text would have let the United States determine on its own whether Iraq had committed an infraction. They feared that such a determination, would have triggered an attack on Saddam.

The new wording requires U.N. weapons inspectors to make an assessment of any Iraqi violations.

U.S. Ambassador John Negroponte said there was "broad support" for the resolution, which would toughen weapons inspections and threaten Iraq with "severe consequences" if it doesn't comply.

Russian Ambassador Sergey Lavrov wouldn't say how his government will vote. But a U.S. administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Russian President Vladimir Putin conveyed a "positive" message during a conversation with Bush on Thursday, assuring him that the resolution would pass without saying whether Russia would vote "yes" or abstain.

"We have heard the latest amendments," Lavrov said. "We got explanations that neither of the cosponsors interprets the language as containing automatic use of force, and we will be reporting this to our capitals."

Bush had pushed for today's vote, calling Saddam "a real threat" and declaring that "it's now time for the world to come together and disarm him."

"When this resolution passes, I will be able to say that the United Nations has recognized the threat and now we're going to work together to disarm him," Bush said. "And he must be cooperative in the disarmament."

The world body's chief weapons inspector, Hans Blix, said he's confident his team will be back in Iraq soon, after a nearly four-year absence.

Syria has repeatedly opposed any new resolution, but appeared to shift its position on Thursday.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa discussed Iraq with French Foreign Minister Dominique de Villepin on Thursday and said afterward that any new resolution should not provide the least possibility of using force against Iraq, according to the official Syrian news agency.

Syria's deputy U.N. ambassador Fayssal Mekdad proposed several changes to the U.S. text on the hidden trigger issue and inspections at Thursday's council meeting and said if they were taken on board, "we have every confidence that we can join the consensus."

He expressed disappointment after the "tweaked" U.S. draft resolution was circulated that not all the changes Syria wanted were included. He wouldn't say how Syria will vote, explaining that he would be reporting back to Damascus.

In Iraq, the government-controlled media called the draft resolution a pretext for war and urged the Security Council not to bow to American demands.

"America wants to use this resolution as a pretext and a cover for its aggression on Iraq and the whole Arab nation," the ruling Baath Party newspaper Al-Thawra said Thursday.

According to a timeline in the resolution, Iraq would have seven days to accept the resolution's terms. Blix has said an advance team of inspectors would be on the ground within 10 days.

Inspectors would have up to 45 days to actually begin work, and must report to the council 60 days later on Iraq's performance. In the meantime, any Iraqi obstructions or noncompliance would be reported immediately to the council for assessment.

At the same time, it offers Iraq the possibility of lifting a decade of crippling sanctions if it complies fully with its obligations.

arts and living on the weekend

STOMPing through Amherst

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

STOMP, USING ITS SIGNATURE-STYLE TRASH CAN DRUMS IN ITS PERFORMANCE, CAME TO THE PFEIFER VALLEY THIS WEEK.

By Christine Papacidis
Collegian Staff

STOMP
Fine Arts Center
Nov. 5-6

Who would have ever thought brooms, match boxes, brushes and dustpans, flip-top aluminum garbage cans, foam tubes, old metal sinks, mini plungers and empty Crystal Rock bottles could be used to combine creativity and rhythms to form the show stopping production of STOMP. For two sold out performances, STOMP dazzled and amazed audiences with their strange uses of different everyday items to create beats and rhythms.

The show started off by a single person sweeping his way onto the stage with a push broom. Before you knew it, seven other performers made their way out onto stage with their

Turn to STOMP, page 5

Something coming this change

By Mike Barrett
Collegian Correspondent

Various Artists
Swallowed Be Machinery Volume 3
Fort Huzel

Every couple of years a bunch of totally eclectic, but solid, compilations will end up in my lap. It usually happens in groups of three, like a couple of years ago when I discovered all the chaotic mayhem coming out of Rhode Island and Michigan – Load Records and Bulb Records, respectively. Their comps You're Soaking In It, Bulbophonic Sound, and Vermiform Records' Fear of Smell all had about 20 or so songs from 20 or so bands and artists ranging (and raging) from (and with) great new approaches to hardcore and punk, loops noise, some Dadaist tomfoolery, and outsider takes on the Pop Formula that still have yet to be topped, and still make semi-regular rotation in my CD player.

Turn to COMPILATIONS, page 5

Six degrees of Kevin Bacon

SIX DEGREES OF KEVIN BACON
Moderated by Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

There is a joke within Hollywood and among movie lovers everywhere that actor Kevin Bacon is connected to every other on-screen personality – past, current and upcoming – by only six degrees. (You've all seen the credit card commercial, right? Well, it's kind of like that.) From this, a brain-teasing game emerged, becoming known as Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon.

The way to play is simple. Each game requires one to find two actors names – Kevin Bacon and one other. The goal of the game is to connect Bacon to this other actor through no more than six degrees. A "degree" in this game is an actor who starred in a movie with the preceding and following star.

For example, if the puzzle were: Kevin Bacon and Kevin Spacey

Here's how one might solve it:

Kevin Bacon was in Apollo 13 with Tom Hanks.

Tom Hanks was in Road to Perdition with Jude Law.

Jude Law was in The Talented Mr Ripley with Gwyneth Paltrow.

Gwyneth Paltrow was in Se7en with Kevin Spacey.

I have therefore connected Kevin Bacon to Kevin Spacey in four steps. Certainly, there can be more than one solution to a puzzle, but the concept of this game is that every combination can be solved.

Here's this weekend's puzzle, look for the solution on a Collegian Arts and Living page on Monday.

CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

By Dan Roy

"Why did you pick your major?"

Shawna Foley
Sophomore
SOM

"Because I wanted to get a job when I get out of here. Plus, I can do anything with a degree in business."

Jeff Bakken
Junior
Legal Studies

"I'm from out of state, but it gets me in here for in-state prices."

Kristen Cote
Junior
Astronomy

"It's the only thing I've ever gotten really excited about. It's a whole new frontier, so there are endless possibilities."

Erik Vangsness
Sophomore
Landscape Architecture

"Since I was a little kid, I always loved taking land that wasn't in use and turning it into something people could really enjoy. I want my career to be something that's unique and stands out, because I myself am a very unique person."

Janice Staab
Freshman
Undeclared

"I want to do something with a point, which is why I'm not studying math or anything like that."

Colin Crowne
Junior
English/Pre-Med

"I'm applying to med school, but I wanted to learn to write and speak well. Since I was seven, I wanted to make people feel better, and I want a career that affords me the opportunity to provide for my family."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the In Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Eno Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

apply now for the new, expanded

CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROGRAM

Criminal Justice Concentration
Department of Sociology

Earn a Certificate in Criminal Justice

For students who plan a career in some aspect of the criminal justice system: police officers, probation and parole officers, paralegals, public and private criminal attorneys, district attorneys, judges, etc.

Applications are now being taken for the program.

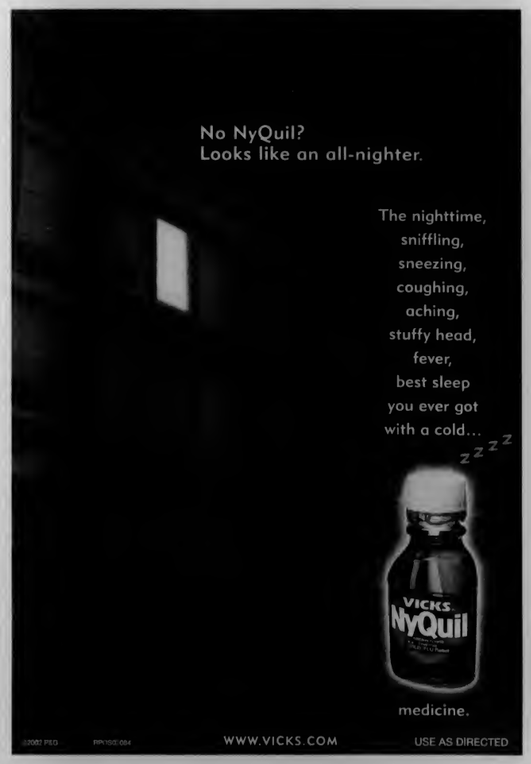
A wide variety of courses are scheduled for 2003, including new classroom and online courses in domestic violence, crime and forensics, criminal violence in America, international criminal justice, organized crime, and cyber crime.

Courses offered Winter Session 2003:

SOCIOL 241 Criminology (online)

SOCIOL 394F Crime and Forensics (on campus, M-Th, 6-9 p.m.)

SOCIOL 395K Domestic Violence (online)



For more information, and to apply to the program, contact Prof. Anthony Harris, Sociology Department, Thompson 524, 545-0475.

UMASS

To register for winter and spring courses, go to www.umass.edu/contined or the Division of Continuing Education Registration Office, 358 N. Pleasant St.

Priority will be given to registered Criminal Justice Program students.

www.dailycollegian.com

New cranberry director named

By Jen Hodson
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Carolyn DeMoranville, University of Massachusetts alumna, will become the first woman to serve as director of the University of Massachusetts Cranberry Experiment Station.

DeMoranville, who took over the cranberry station on Nov. 3, is the fifth director in the station's 90-year history. DeMoranville's late father, Irving DeMoranville, also held the director's position at the station. Cleve Willis, dean of the College of Natural Resources and the Environment, explained that a nationwide search was conducted to make sure they found the best person available, and not just someone from the University.

"It turned out though, that after all this time, right under our nose was the best candidate," Willis said.

DeMoranville holds a doctorate in plant and soil sciences from UMass, and her primary research interests include plant nutrition and the impacts of road salts on cranberry bogs. She also researches the best management practices and developments for Massachusetts cranberry bogs.

For the past 20 years, she held various positions at the cranberry station. She is also an experienced technical service provider, frequently presenting research to growers and public officials. DeMoranville has also served on the Board of Directors of the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' Association (CCCGA) and is the Northeast Region Secretary/Treasurer of the American Society for Horticulture Science.

"We are excited about Dr. DeMoranville's appointment as director," Jeffrey LaFleur, Executive Director of the CCCGA said. "She brings practical experience to the position and a motivation to move the station into new areas that reflect a changing cranberry industry."

As new host of the Southeast Massachusetts Agricultural Partnership (SEMAP), a network of business service providers for agricultural enterprises through Bristol, Barnstable and Plymouth counties, the Cranberry Experiment Station has taken over a new realm of responsibility, LaFleur explained.

"The Cranberry Station continues to change to meet the economic and business needs of cranberry growers while addressing environmental compatibility through [Integrated Pest Management] and nutrient management," he said.

The Cranberry Experiment Station has had a wide-ranging impact on cranberry growing, according to Willis. Some of the major changes that have resulted from research conducted by the staff at the Cranberry Experiment Station include: the development of the frost forecasting system and determination of cranberry hardiness levels; insect monitoring and modern Integrated Pest Management programs; introduction of modern cultivars; the use of biological control agents for cranberry pests; modern fertility management programs; effective weed management combining control with post-emergence herbicide use; and effective disease prediction and management programs.

The Experiment Station continues to rank as a leader in the United States, North America and worldwide for research and outreach programs on cranberry culture, Willis said.

"Dr. DeMoranville is truly outstanding in every important dimension. The importance of her research is recognized externally as well as valued within the industry, and the exceptional quality of her administrative skills is apparent," he said.

ARMY AND AIR FORCE CADETS STAND BY MEMORIAL HALL IN REMEMBRANCE OF SOLDIERS LOST IN AMERICAN BATTLES. THE TWO DAY TONE VIGIL IN HONOR OF VETERAN'S DAY CONCLUDES THIS AFTERNOON.

Army and Air Force honor veterans with 24-hour vigil

Beginning yesterday at 4 p.m., Army and Air Force cadets of the University of Massachusetts' Reserve Officer Training Corps have been standing a vigil in honor of Veterans Day. The 24-hour vigil will end this afternoon with a closing ceremony starting at 3 p.m., which will include a 21-gun salute at 3:45 p.m.

"Honor, remembrance, asking, saying thank God for those people that went before us. That's what this day is all about," Distinguished Speaker Brig. Gen. John R. Mullin said in a speech during the opening ceremony.

Mullin is the Assistant Adjutant General of the Massachusetts Army National Guard and also serves as Vice Chancellor for University Outreach at UMass, as well as professor of city planning.

The laying of a wreath and the symbolic laying of white carnations at the monument in front of Memorial Hall, in honor of veterans and POW/MIA of all the branches of America's armed forces followed the General's remarks.

Karl Rexer

UMass student improving

A University of Massachusetts student who contracted bacterial meningitis is still seriously ill, but his condition is improving.

According to Hartford Hospital sources and Barbara Pitoniak from the UMass news department, the 22-year-old patient from Dorchester was sitting up in bed and talking on Wednesday.

The UMass senior went to University Health Services on Monday of this week complaining of feeling ill. The student was transferred to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, where he was placed on antibiotics. From there, he was transferred to Hartford Hospital.

Symptoms of bacterial meningitis include: high fever, headache and a stiff neck. Nausea, vomiting, discomfort when looking into bright lights, confusion and sleepiness are other potential symptoms, according to www.medterms.com. In its later stages, meningitis may cause seizures.

Diagnosis of the disease is confirmed by analyzing a sample of fluid taken with a spinal tap.

The student's close friends and family have been contacted and have received antibiotic treatment.

- Dan Lamothe

New WORLD Theater

Mixtures

An Evening of Solo Works
by Nilaja Sun
Wed. & Thu. Nov. 13 & 14, 2002
8 pm, Bowker Auditorium

Infused with a flair for subtle humor and deep empathy, Nilaja Sun explores the themes of coming-of-age, mortality and the post 9-1-1 tatters of America where fear and suspicion permeate the social fabric.

Tickets for NWT shows are: $15-general public; $8-seniors & low income patrons; $5-students. For tickets call the FAC Box Office, 413.545.2511

www.newworldtheater.org

AMHERST HAIRSTYLISTS

Haircuts and Clipper Cuts
Grand Opening Special $10 until Nov. 20
$20 Shampoo & Cut, $15 Student Rate
Highlights & Color from $45
40 Main Street, Amherst
253-1200
Walk-ins welcome

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

AURAIO
caring for hair & body

In Greek, Auraio means beautiful, and we at Auraio hope to help you feel beautiful in every way.

Come in to experience a new level of excellence in hair care and massage

413•253•6999
And, call for an appointment today!

31 Campus Plaza Rd.Hadley, MA 10135
(located near Stop & Shop in Hadley)

CINEMARK
The Best Seat In Town

CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 11/8 - Thursday 11/14
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com

8 MILE◊ (R) 11:05 11:25 1:50 2:15 4:35 4:50 7:15 7:50 9:50 10:30
I SPY◊ (PG13) 11:45 2:10 4:55 7:55 10:25
THE SANTA CLAUSE 2◊ (G) 11:00 1:30 4:15 7:10 9:35
GHOST SHIP(R) 11:30 2:20 5:00 7:40 9:35
JACKASS THE MOVIE (R) 11:55 2:15 4:30 7:45 10:20
JONAH: A VEGGIE TALES MOVIE (G) 11:35 1:35 3:45
MY BIG FAT GREEK WEDDING (PG) 11:50 2:25 4:40 7:05 9:30
RED DRAGON (R) 7:25 10:10
SWEETHOME ALABAMA (PG13) 11:20 1:45 4:45 7:20 10:05
THE RING (PG13) 11:10 1:40 4:20 7:00 9:55
THE TRUTH ABOUT CHARLIE (PG13) 11:15 1:55 4:25 7:35 10:00
TUCK EVERLASTING (PG) 11:40 4:10 10:00
WHITE OLEANDER (PG) 11:40 7:30

♦NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Bioterrorism at home?

Get the facts straight

Tuesday night a couple visiting New York City paid a visit to the emergency room with severe chills and fevers. It was soon discovered that both had likely contracted the bubonic plague, the first cases in the Big Apple in more than a century.

Who was the enemy that unleashed this evil upon America? Iraq? Afghanistan? Somalia?

Actually, the prime suspect in the sickness lies at the couple's home in Santa Fe, N.M. For them, location theorize, fleas, which had feasted on a dead rat that then transmitted the virus to the humans.

A dead rat and some fleas that have been collected from their property back to the Land of Enchantment. Though not yet confirmed, these are the most probable transmitters.

This all makes logical sense. On average, 10 to 20 cases of the plague are discovered naturally in the United States each year, with nearly half of those coming from New Mexico. The state also has the occasional case of the hantavirus, another serious and potentially deadly illness. Approximately one to seven American cases is fatal.

Though people in New Mexico may be accustomed to hearing about the occasional infection of the plague, the majority of the country is not. That is why the press as well as everyone else spreading news in this country, needs to be careful to explain the whole story.

With the current state of world affairs, and the number of people who have placed themselves on constant 24-hour alert, it is not a stretch for a person to only read the headline or first paragraph of a story about a person being infected with the plague and immediately label it bioterrorism. It is one of the few diseases on a short but very serious list of potential agents that could be unleashed on any country in the world.

Bioterrorism tends to bring out the worst fears in people and causes some to be very reactionary. It is a type of warfare that has never really been unleashed in the modern world. It is also an attack method that few Americans probably feel prepared to defend against.

The issue is a hot one worldwide. France vehemently denied this past Wednesday that it has any cases of smallpox in its possession. Only the United States and the then Soviet Union were authorized to retain samples for research after the disease was eradicated in 1980.

France is an ally to the United States. What would America's response be if a person like Saddam Hussein was found to be in possession of smallpox or another highly contagious and extremely deadly disease?

We can all hope and pray that bioterrorism never becomes much more than a buzzword talked about amongst strategists and such weaponry is never unleashed on the world. This dream may come true, it may not.

The point is, that even though thoughts of deadly diseases running rampant throughout our country are indeed terrifying, we as level-headed citizens, must be sure to get all the facts, before we assume the worst.

Information from CBS News was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

I am my brother's keeper

EDUARDO BUSTAMANTE

When my brother was born my father took me aside, looked me in the eyes and said, "Eddie, it is your job to take care of your brother." He spoke in Arabic. He's nearly 18 now and he's grown to be strong, compassionate and intelligent. When it's time for us to part ways I take with me prayers and wish him Peace. I tell him goodbye, because I am my brother's keeper and he likes my candies and presents.

Recently, I wrote an editorial proposing that we, the support President Bush's plan to attack Iraq and support the upcoming war. I proposed to increase the military budget to $2 trillion. My premise was that these troops would undermine any global threat to peace. I must admit that I was surprised by the number of responses that disagreed with my perspective.

Generally, those who disagreed believed the motivations to politicians saying that going to war with Iraq was unrelated to the attainment of peace. There were three basic reactions. First, if we do not attack Iraq now, Saddam Hussein will take many lives. Second, Hussein is an irrational and won't be held in check in part because he is unaware of our true plans. And finally, the war will free the Iraqi people from their oppressive regime. All of these comments and pictures are true, but I support the war 100 percent.

However, it is the nature of modern weaponry that it's. Further, strength, courage and intelligence may not keep him alive if he chooses to fight. So for me to support this war, if I have any doubts about the veracity of these premises, it is cheaper for the life of my brother and he needs all my responsibility as his keeper.

Think about how long it takes to recover from trauma. It can take decades to fully recover from a trauma that can take minutes to inflict. It takes an hour to rape someone, but the trauma of that hour will weigh on the souls of a family for generations. War is a mass production of such minutes. Each time we enter a war we have centuries of spiritual healing to perform. We guarantee that future generations have neighbors with post traumatic stress disorder.

Having stated my hesitance to go to war, I am not positive that this war is our last alternative to minimize casualties and attain peace in this region. First, these claims about Saddam Hussein come from upper [illegible] class politicians, and since the dawn of politics there has always been a cycle of politicians deceiving the people for the politician's own gain. Politicians need periodic war, which unites the people against a common enemy distracts us from domestic injustices and gives the economy a boost.

The U.S. economy is in need of a boost and there are injustices politicians would like to distract us from: the recession, corporate scandal and the like. President Bush teachers still not making any money, corporations shipping their production offshore so they can pay children 12 cents an hour to work at an inhumane pace, the infringements on our freedom gained by the PATRIOT Act and the percent of the people owning 82 percent of the wealth.

The fact that politicians are prone to deception is not in itself sufficient evidence to oppose this war. After all, the present situation could prove to be the rare exception. But allow me to explore the three justifications for war on Iraq.

The first. If we don't attack Iraq, Saddam Hussein will deploy weapons of mass destruction against us and kill thousands of innocent Americans. To this I say that the remedy will be short lived, and the most we can hope for with an attack is a delay of this destruction. World War I, the Six Day War, and Desert Storm indicate that victory in war causes suspension of violence and a sense of victory; but also causes the emergence of a newer sticker strand of evil 10 years later. If we don't get to the root of the problem, it simply becomes stronger and escalates the violence to new heights.

The second: Saddam Hussein cannot be reasoned with, because he is irrational and wants to see us dead because he is jealous of our freedoms. Allow me to revert to the days of George Bush Sr., who was a Hussein ally. He had a mutually beneficial economic relationship with Hussein, which indicates that he didn't believe Sadaam to be "irrational" or "unreasonable."

How irrational can you be and successfully maintain as much wealth and power as he does? My sense is that to handle the amount of responsibility he has for as long as he has, indicates that he is somewhat "sane," "rational," and "reasonable."

There is something about the U.S./Israel/Arab nation's triangle and the way it is being perceived and reacted to on both sides that is simply sick. The United States starves Iraqi children through embargo, Arab terrorists blow up our country's children with planes, Israel kills Palestinian children with big tanks, Palestinians outcede bomb Israeli children. George W. Bush, Osama Bin Ladan, Saddam Hussein, Yasser Arafat, Ariel Sharon – these men kill children but they aren't "irrational." They aren't members of some cult; they are heads of state, men of great power and achievement.

"These men kill children but they aren't 'irrational.' They aren't members of some cult…"

Arab nations view our unconditional support of Israel the source of their traumas and our preferential treatment of them as evil and irrational, and arrive at the conclusion that we are evil. They respond with violence. We view their violence and their rhetoric of our inherent evil to mean that they are evil. We respond with violence. And the more violence, the more sick and out of touch our views of one another become – it's a cycle that is void of understanding and communication.

The second part of this claim, Hussein's number one priority is to see us dead because he hates our freedoms, has been extended to nearly all our enemies as a way to avoid accountability. I don't buy it because it takes two to tango, and there are plenty of other free countries that haven't been attacked. Why hasn't anyone attacked Canada?

The final justification claims that this war will free the people of Iraq from Hussein's oppression. Sadaam Hussein is a despicable, oppressive dictator. Since when is that a reason for our going to war? The United States has always supported international governments who benefitted them economically regardless of how they treated their people. We've supported dictatorships in Nicaragua, Iran, and Afghanistan just to name a few.

More importantly, this war is not an effective solution for freeing the people of Iraq. If we remove Hussein from power, we would have no other option but to replace him with another dictator, and I don't care how nice the new dictator is, because power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.

If you find after reading this that you are still positive that this war is the right thing, you know something I need to know. Because if this war is our last and only alternative for peace, then we should all go fight in it together. But let's not ignore our domestic issues, send our brothers to die and unleash mass trauma if we are less than positive that it is absolutely necessary.

Eduardo Bustamante is a Collegian Columnist.

Something we need to consider

I know some of you may be thinking that this is going to be another column about the Middle East and Israel and Palestine and oil and war and blah blah blah. I want to move a bit away from talking about that stuff in detail today, but rather focus on why I write about these things. I know many people get tired of the same old column again and again. That's ok, though, you have a right to your opinion. We need to realize that as much as the Middle East is dominating the pages of news-papers, that there is a reason for this.

The Middle East and its dynamic politics are vitally important to all of us. We may not think that each of us personally is affected by Mid East politics but I urge you to think again. This country needs the Middle East. It needs to be able to dictate policy in the Middle East. The Middle East is one of the major suppliers of our oil and is the primary supplier of oil to our allies in Europe and Asia. Petroleum is used for making plastics, fueling our cars and planes. When the Arab states imposed an oil embargo in the 1970s, people here in the United States for the first time realized how vital the region really was. There was a point where one could only get gas one or two days a week at a high price. Imagine not having gas. Hard to think about.

When we want to go somewhere we get in our car, or on a bus, or if it's far enough, on a plane. We never really think about the fuel supply though. When the dial hits the "E" we pull into a gas station, fill up, and drive along our merry way. How often do we stop to think where this oil comes from or what would happen if the oil stopped flowing? The Middle East has the world's most abundant supply of oil and since this oil was discovered, external forces that wanted that oil have dominated the Mid East.

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

There are other reasons why we should be concerned about what is happening in the Middle East. These can be humanitarian or environmental concerns, but nothing seems to make people think as much as oil. I just ask that people do not dismiss discussion about the Middle East because they think it doesn't involve them, because it does involve you. Yes, you reading this right now. I urge that everyone learns as much as they can in this region. It has and will continue to be the region that dominates our news for the foreseeable future.

Rarely a day goes by when the Op-Ed pages of major newspapers in this country, like the New York Times, go without a column on the Middle East. People are talking about this because it is vital. The decisions that are made today will affect our future and the future of our children just as decisions of the past are affecting us today. I encourage people to express your opinions on these issues and all issues. It is very important that people learn, think, and talk with each other. This is the only way we can progress. Be open about people and don't make judgments.

"It has and will continue to be the region that dominates our news for the foreseeable future."

Recently I have witnessed a lot of this. I have heard people label those in favor of war "Republicans." What does this mean? Just because an administration is pro-war (or part of an administration) and Republican does that mean that to be Republican is to be pro-war?

I hope the educated minds in our University do not think this way. I know some people see protesters against the war and immediately label them a "liberal." These terms are seriously beginning to lose their meaning. I'm sure many people have read my columns in the past and have thought that I'm just another ranting liberal. Who said I'm "liberal?" Look, I know people like to label things. But please think before you label anyone or myself anything. Whatever happened to the traditional liberal versus conservative arguments that dominated American politics like size of government, abortion, gun control and so on?

Before you go and label someone a liberal or "Republican" (a term which seems to have a negative connotation in this state) you should find out where they stand on issues regarding national policy where those terms apply the most. Once you stray into foreign policy those terms should go out the window. I myself write about the Middle East because I am directly affected by it. I was born there. I have family there and I feel at home there. I want the occupation to end. Does that make me a liberal? I don't want to see a war with Iraq. Does that make me a liberal? I don't like many of the things President Bush has done and is planning to do. Does that make me a liberal? No, not at all. That just makes me an independent thinker and I like it that way.

Yousef Mutuayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

Letter to the Editor:

To the Editor:

I'm growing tired of the comments of SGA President Dave Carr on the issue of funding workers' contracts at UMass t'Board of Trustees face cries of justice," in The Collegian on Nov. 7). Carr says the Wednesday protests by some 200 campus employees were "childish" among other things.

It must be easy to take a negative view of the employees' actions when one is not an employee. If Carr and the other SGA leaders had signed a contract guaranteeing regular pay raises, and those raises were first promised, then essentially stolen away, they might have different opinions. Employee protest is a long, successful tradition in this country, and to Carr's surprise, people will stop being polite when they are angry enough.

From the SGA's position on other issues, such as their blind approval of fee increases cited in the same article, it is becoming apparent that this group of undergraduates is living a rather privileged existence. Room and board for residents will increase $275 next year, according to The Boston Globe.

I'm sure there are plenty of students who are not as acquiescent as Carr is when he lends his unqualified support to that decision.

The SGA's failure to understand the plight of the union employees, as well as their lack of concern over the approved fee increase, shows that they are out of touch with the economic realities that members of the University community must face.

To simply brush aside the concerns expressed by employees and students from all areas of the University is an action that pushes the SGA further toward irrelevancy.

Will Fischer
UMass Graduate Student

Another three-day weekend

JENNIFER DONOVAN

[illegible] did not know the horrors that they had gone through, but chose to disregard their service completely, such as Oct. 3. I ask us, as adults, to take an active and special effort to make you take note of what real [illegible] happens to our servicemen? [Read or watch Black Hawk Down if you do not know what Oct. 3 means.]

[illegible] along with many other students on campus, work through a tremendous load of homework and also balance military commitments. We do this because we want to serve. We want to help out and make the world a safer place for all civilians. Why is it then that you dare call yourselves brave or noble in your immature protests against the military? How dare you burn the flag and use your free speech to criticize those who are willing to die for your rights?

Remember that while you sleep safely on your Serta mattress at night, many others cannot. They are spending their nights in cold, dangerous conditions that you would never even fathom. They are going to be spending this Veterans-Day miles away from family and friends, far away from the "One-day" sales at Macy's.

Please remember why Nov. 11 was set aside, so that those who serve/have served may have one day that will hopefully recognize the military personnel's sacrifice and service. To them, I say thank you from the bottom of my heart. And to you, the flag burning cowards, I say shame on you. Please stop hiding under the guise of political rights and activism and find a more appropriate way to make your statements. Thank you and God bless.

Jennifer Donovan is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING Weekend Edition

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.08.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Spending the night with The Donnas is sexy and irrepressible

BRITT ANDERSON OF THE DONNAS ROCKS OUT TO ONE OF MANY OLD-SCHOOL ROCK 'N' ROLL NUMBERS ABOUT BEING A POWERFUL WOMAN

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE DONNAS
Spend the Night
Atlantic

Garage rock revivalists The Hives and The Vines get all the media attention for shrieking their pretty little hearts out. There's so much buzz floating around these two groups that a backlash is already starting to burn, the fact is, they both deserve and don't deserve it (The Hives' "Hate to Say I Told You So" is a buzzsaw rocker of snotty power.) Neither group blazes new trails in the rock world, and both groups seem, at times, like a record's company pre-digested rebuke to the claims of corporate bull (Hey, we aren't totally fake! We got these cool, retro-raw hands too!). The Vines, especially, come off as nothing more than Nirvana lovalists that would like nothing more than to play like the big boys, but have yet to achieve quite as much talent.

But another band, made up of four young women barely out of college age, is flying up the ranks to shatter the insistent buzz swirling around those bands.

The Donnas began nine years ago when the four principals were only California middle schoolers. Vocalist Brett Anderson, bassist Maya Ford, drummer Torry Castellano and guitarist Allison Robertson formed over their shared love of the Ramones and their outsider status at their school. Originally they began playing lunchtime concerts at their school as Ragady Ann, and then as the Electrocutes. In 1997, they released their first album, The Donnas, and in 1998 released the first album to garner them attention, American Teenage Rock 'n' Roll Machine, which was quickly followed by 1999's Get Skintight and 2001's The Donnas Turn 21.

But they were written off as a gimmick group – four photogenic young women who played old-school punk rock, wore matching outfits and put on bad-girl attitudes toward sex and cigarettes.

The Donnas have been struggling since then to prove that they do know what they're doing in the rock. They have jumped from long-time label Lookout! Records to Atlantic, making their fifth album, Spend the Night, their major label debut. The jump doesn't mean sell-out as some punk fans say; it means that the women get the chance to clean up the raucous, sloppy sound of albums like Turn 21. Here there is maturation in their patented squalling rock sound, both in the lyrics and in the music.

The sound of Spend the Night is big, loud, old-school, kick out the jams rock 'n' roll. There is a sound reminiscent of Kiss, the Ramones, the Rolling Stones and other bands that feed off squealing guitars and snot-nosed vocal delivery. The record sounds like the other Donnas records, but the familiarity is comforting. It is soothing sameness (well soothing if buzzing guitar fuzz is your thing.)

Thirteen tracks blaze by in 39 blistering minutes. The favored topics of the girls include sex, beer and partying – the legendary topics of classic rock 'n' roll. Anderson alternates between sexed-up come-hither poses, scathing put downs and heartfelt pleas hidden under screw-you rock attitude. The Donnas invert the classic male chauvinist rock formula of Motley Crue exhorting male groupies to "Take It Off" and then blasting hipster musicians into the dingy look on "Dirty Denim." There's a certain sizzling wit to the girls' lyrics. The tales are rebellious anthems of rock decadence, drenched in booze and sex, but the songs are also comic exaggerations of such traditions. The Donnas have fun shouting out such bad-girl polemic, and they deliver it with a wink and a smile.

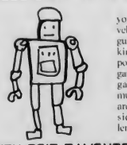
On the chirpy coda to "Dirty Denim" they condemn the object of their dissatisfaction with the scalding "You paid 200 dollars to look like that/ you oughta check out the Laundromat." A party gatecrasher gets shot down on "Who Invited You," allegedly based on the true story of a jerky band that crashed a Donnas party. A popular guy who ignored them in high school, and is now drooling over them gets his comeuppance on "You Wanna Get Me High"; they key a fake dude's Mercedes in "It's On The Rocks."

It's not all male-bashing put downs. The dashboard confessional "Take Me To The Backseat" has them demanding a little attention from their male company. The song, a thrashing beauty, is also one of the album pieces de resistance. In "Please Don't Tease" they sigh "Baby, please don't tease/I'm getting down on my knees/ Baby, please don't tease/ c'mon and give it to me." The lyrics are the sound of a sexual come-on, but the line also has a breath of deeper significance; the girls, on the surface, are singing about sex, but they are also looking for that other: respect, love, companionship. When Anderson sings "You gotta shake it off for me, baby," in "Take It Off," she isn't just telling a guy to get undressed. She's telling a guy to undress for her.

The music has a similar appeal to the lyrics, a sound both juvenile and grown up. The raw punk-glam-metal sound has been slicked up, but the power has been undiminished. The sound has now fully come together in a way it didn't on Turn 21. Robertson, the only married Donna, is terrific guitarist. Her Slash-ing axe work recalls the best squeals that Guns 'n' Roses ever put out. The rest of the Donnas are wise enough to let her rip with fiery Ace Frehley solos throughout the album.

That isn't to say that the rest of the girls back down against the force of Robertson's playing. Anderson has a nice spunky vocal deliver, ranging from a seductive rock and roll drawl, to a sly, snarky diss. Castellano and Ford give solid support in the rhythm section, with Ford's wall-blasting bass and Castellano's jumping drums.

Sexy, brash, vicious, rebellious, irrepressible, loud and undeniably cool. There are plenty of adjectives that can be used to describe the Donnas and Spend the Night. The album is a blast of fresh air, with music as tight as the girls' jeans and they are real chops making up the album. The Donnas have proven they aren't a gimmick band, but a rawk-ing real band that can sandblast the sludge out of the gutters.



COURTESY DAVID ATLAS

THE DONNAS SHOW TRUE GIRL POWER WITH THEIR LATEST RELEASE, Spend the Night, WITH ASSERTIVE LYRICS ABOUT SEX, BEER, AND PARTYING.

Rockstar makes winner with Vice and huge loser with Emergency

PRESS START TO PLAY

WITH REID DAVENPORT

Every gamer has his/her own opinion on what the greatest game out is, as well as the worst game they've played. Well, as of this moment I believe there are two contenders to fill both those slots. Oddly enough, Rockstar Games produced both of them. By now, the average gamer has figured out the first installment, and quite possibly the better installment of the two games.

There's nothing quite like wearing Hawaiian shirts, driving stolen vehicles, and shooting at innocent bystanders simply because "it's fun." If this describes your lifestyle then you've probably locked yourself in your room playing Rock Star's new installment Grand Theft Auto: Vice City.

This new release has the power to overthrow the previous title GTA3 with new cities, vehicles, weapons, and missions. Rockstar Games was able to listen to the demands of those who wanted certain additions to the game. The newest vehicles in the game include helicopters, Lamborghinis, and motorcycles. The cool new plot to the game is an excellent addition as you are attempting to take over Vice City. You buy and claim property to add vehicles, weapons, and gangs to your support.

Possibly the greatest feature, for those of you who play for hours on end, is the use of actual songs in the game. Unlike GTA3 you don't have to stand listening to the same five songs over and over again. You get to listen to artists like Michael Jackson, Megadeth, Flock of Seagulls and Quiet Riot, to name a few. Since the game is set in the 1980's don't expect too many new songs. If you really enjoy the music I suggest you save up because the disc set is contains seven discs and the price is about $50.

Overall, I believe this is a game I could definitely get lost in. There's never a moment when you get tired of stealing vehicles, shooting off your guns, or performing some kind of mission. This is possibly the most amazing game I've ever seen. For a game that requires so much detail, the graphics are great. The only downside to the game is the length of time required to play, and that's only if you hate spending more than 40 hours on one game. GTA: Vice City is currently in stores and sells for around $50.

The worst game Rockstar will probably ever create was State of Emergency. It's quite obvious that this game was released on the heels of GTA3 in hopes game players would get suckered into the fact that since Rockstar did such an outstanding job with GTA3 that State of Emergency would be just as successful. Yeah, they threw the game on the table, and I wish I could throw it right back.

When I first saw a video preview for the game, all I could think is it was like NES' River City Ransom, a game I played for hours when I was younger. I sat and counted the days until it finally came out. I rushed to the local gaming store and shelled out $50 and my ID. Yes, they actually check to make sure only adults purchase the game.

After playing it, I think they needed to check to see if the buyers were insane, because only someone out of their mind would actually want to play this game. I beat it in about the span of three days, unlocked everything, and beat it with every character. I may be good with games, but no one should beat a game that easily.

This game is possibly the most worthless game I've ever played in my life. That's right, even lamer than Night Trap on Sega CD. State of Emergency didn't deliver anything but a headache. The violence was lame, the graphics were pretty bad, and the game was just overall annoying to play.

Unfortunately, the store would not accept the game being horrible as a reason to refund my cash. I wasn't surprised when I turned it in for a game at FuncoLand to be given a $15 credit down from the $50 I paid for it, and realized they had about 40 used copies of the game.

The bottom line of all this is that because a developer busts out a nice game, like GTA: Vice City, doesn't mean that everything they throw their name on will be a hit. Needless to say I wouldn't be surprised if State of Emergency 2 was released a few months from now. Sadly, I will be one person going to the store just to see what fools will rush out to buy the game, rush home to play it, and then trade it in at the store for a lot less than what they originally paid.

Reid Davenport is a Collegian Columnist.

■ compilation

continued from page 3

Fort Hazel's Swallowed By Machinery 1, 7 follows this formula – and shows anyone paying any attention that the underground scene is still full of urine and vinegar. This gives us a hefty dose of ingenuity and tune. (Even a music video to boot!) This CD should be on everyone's stocking stuffer list for the 2002 Christmas season, and hurry quick! There's only a 1000 made! All the covers and art are hand made, and are completely different, even signed by the person responsible. The art consists of a helicopter painted in green.

Ben S.S. of the local "anti-folk-terrorist" group, and Flywheel fayes, The Ben George 7, sent this disc to me. Of course they rock the CD with their un-hit tune "Red Dress On (Lady With Thet." OK, it's as far from a hit as anything I could imagine a song to be, but it still is one of the most exciting pieces of music to come out of this scene in years, and their live set is a work unto its own.

Along with the Ben George 7 are The Nels Cline Singers (featuring Nels Cline, who some would be familiar with for a few area performances with Sonic Youth's Thurston Moore last year), darph/nadeR (winner of this semester's "best band name" award), k Records indie darlings Deerhoof and about 14 other bands from around the world.

This CD romps and rolls through noise and mush, hardcore thrash and some amazing pop twiddling. The Lines, and Boise, Idaho's Tusaime open the CD with some sweet lo-fi indie rock. Zann from Germany, along with Encompass And Stalemate from Baton Rouge, deliver the hardcore percentile for the comp, and from Australia, and my favorite Aussie indie, Dual Plover, comes The Band From Bloody Elle, contributing the weirdest track on the CD.

Loudermilk is less than fresh

By Lauren DeFilippo
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

LOUDERMILK
The Red Record
Dreamworks Records

Loudermilk is lukewarm at best. Hailed as the next big thing in rock, this former Guns 'n' Roses cover band from eastern Washington leaves a bit to be desired.

The band, recently wrapped touring with neo-emo gods Dashboard Confessional, and will join no-nonsense rocker Andrew WK November 16 in support their latest release, and major label debut The Red Record. The album was in large part produced by George Drakoulias of The Black Crowes, Tom Petty, and Ron Aniello, known for his work with Lifehouse and Days of the New, contributing to the production of two tracks ("97 Ways to Kill a Superhero" and "Attached at the Mouth").

The Red Record, named so because of the volatile nature of the color red, according to frontman Davey Ingersoll, is tight musically. Chock full of driving guitars, cohesive drumming and pleasingly gritty vocals, The Red Record unfortunately falls short, and is even weak at points lyrically in its exploration of not-so-pleasant side of friendship and self-destruction.

While Loudermilk's style is somewhat refreshing, and even original, when compared with the barrage of similar-sounding pseudo-rock, post-punk currently ejecting itself out of the music industry and into our ears, it is not perfect. The band's "poetic" metaphors are somewhat difficult to sift through, despite their catchy packaging.

The leading track, "Estrogen, Oxygen, Aches My Teeth Again," utilizes the now classic convention of layering vocals, and succeeds sonically, but is hardly a song you would like to be caught singing out loud. Hell, the band did not even include this title-worthy (and repetitive chorus) metaphor in the actual liner notes.

In comparison, ballads, like "The Twisting," and "Ash to Ash" seem somewhat misplaced, when held up to their other, faster paced, rock-out tunes, like "Rock n' Roll and The Teenage Desperation," but the ballads actually end up being the more balanced and coherent. The band even admitted in a Meanstreet September 2002 article that The Red Record was not "as heavy a record as we wanted. We wanted something with a little more atmosphere." This album is all atmosphere. Of course, with four guys with long hair who dress with a wardrobe that seems to be comprised only the red and black items stolen from Pete Townsend's closet, circa 1968 (at least when performing), atmosphere is to be expected. In fact, it's a necessity.

While this album does not necessarily deliver the all of the luster that the media buzz surrounding the band promised, there is still hope. There is a lot that can be expected from a foursome that look like mods, but who come off more like Guns 'n' Roses than new all-star Guns 'n' Roses incarnation.

■ STOMP

continued from page 1

brooms. Each person had his or her own rhythm he or she needed to keep in mind at all times, lest everyone would be thrown off.

Each of the eight performers had an amazing resource of energy throughout the whole show; STOMP proved a very high impact production, full of stomping, clapping and banging on different objects. Not only were there numerous scenes of the performers beating on trashcans and just generally making rhythmic noise, but the show also had some very comedic points.

With absolutely no dialogue, every action was done in pantomime. A guy dressed in punk rocker clothing and a mohawk was the center of teasing and the butt of many jokes – when all his character wanted was a little piece of the fame. A funny part toward the end of the show included this mohawk character, who came out hopping inside of a box and traveled across the stage behind two of his fellow cast members.

Then he proceeded to go the opposite way of the others, only to be stopped by two other cast members complete with huge black aluminum oil barrels strapped onto their feet, scaring him away. It was also a very comedic moment when this character reentered the stage with little cans strapped onto his feet. Because of his comedic moments throughout the show portraying him as always step behind the others, it was hard to take him seriously, and I found myself waiting for him to screw up or do something funny when he was actually performing on stage with everyone else.

One of the best numbers began when from the silent and dark stage emerged a sudden flame of a Zippo lighter. One by one, "clicks" ignited a small pool of light; then the stage turned dark again. The lighters formed a rhythm of on and off, flame and no flame. Soon, loud noise came out of the blue. No one knew from where it came because of the darkness on the stage, but soon people with flashlights attached to their hats proceeded into view. The stage lights warmed, and two performers, attached to bungee cords playing the upper design set, were presented. This set, actually made up of street signs, chimes, flattened metal trash cans, bells and the metal rims of a tires, created different tones, pitches and rhythms when struck. The entire sight/sound experience was the high point of the show.

In relation to the rest of the show, I only have one complaint. It got extremely repetitive with its rhythms and its whole idea of random everyday objects being presented as musical instruments. For in a show with no intermission that lasted for close to two hours, it became difficult to sit through at points. The show also seemed to be created for a more intimate place and to be performed in a much smaller venue and before a smaller audience then that of the Fine Arts Center, yet this audience got right into the show participation-wise. One particular performer conducted an "I do, you copy" clapping of hands number toward the end of the show. The only downfall to this was they put this activity right after their astounding ending number, leaving a feeling that it killed the sustained momentum of the production.

As a whole, the show was entertaining, high energy and full of extremely talented cast members who combined their own special qualities with that of the show's. By the end, STOMP got a well-earned standing ovation to bring home with them.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apartment for Rent Start 1/1 2 bdrm. In Sunderland $820 utilities included on Bus Rt Call 665-2359

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

91 Acclaim needs work $350 545-0547

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy and enthusiastic workers for the following: Youth Basketball Supervisors/ Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at the Human Resources Office, Amherst Town Hall, Main Street. For more information contact Erika Cumps at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

EMPLOYMENT

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field – work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession – training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders: Make up to $300/ Shift. No exp. required. Great College Job. Call 1-800-806-0082 ext. 1525

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.universitybartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwares.com 584-7750

PETS

Adorable gray cat needs a good home. Cat needs its shots. Call 413-253-1759 Ask for Mike

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Have you been ripped off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

YOUR AD HERE

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NBC/4
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Cinema
8	WB/22
9	UPN/16
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	LIVE/19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Univision/Galavision
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick or Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

AZANNASALE

Thursday November 7 through Saturday November 9.

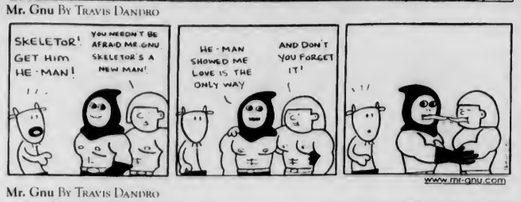
$10 off Mavi, Seven, and Joe's jeans.
$10 off Steve Madden, Diesel, Franco Sarto, Mia footwear.
Sale on Urban Outfitter sweaters.
Sale on Jewelry.

AZANNASALE www.zanna.com

ZANNA

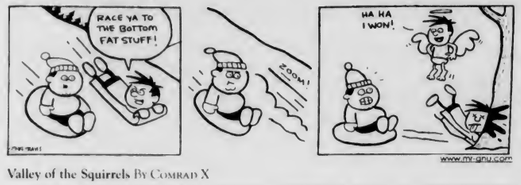
TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.



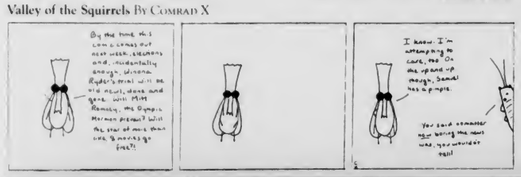
College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"You think you deserve it because you want it? It doesn't work like that. You have to earn it. You have to take it. You have to make it yours. But first you have to decide what you really want."

-Kevin Spacey
Swimming With Sharks

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 57 LOW: 38	HIGH: 62 LOW: 42	HIGH: 66 LOW: 49

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – There's nothing like being sober four days before your 21st birthday. Hang in there, kiddo. Mars says hi. And Saturn is in the third house.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Give yourself more credit! You've accomplished much recently, and you have what it takes to accomplish more in little time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – What happens today is likely to have a resounding impact on the future, so be sure you know just what is going on and why. Head warnings!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – What is it about danger that appeals to you so much? Answer this question and you'll be able to make better decisions across the board.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – A surprise contact from a friend or loved one is going to put you on the right track in search of something you think you cannot do without.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Common sense will win the day for you – but there will be times when you must break with tradition, follow your instincts, and experiment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – That which appears most attainable to you as the day opens may prove to be quite distant when the time comes. You must work hard!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may not be the one with all the ideas today, and you must be willing to let someone else take over if he or she is on a creative roll.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may receive two or more offers at once today, and you'll have to choose between them if you wish to take full advantage of either.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You will surely have to make minor adjustments all day long, so keep your eyes and ears open at all times. You don't want to get trapped!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Your progress will have to be measured in smaller increments today – but you will surely make progress, nonetheless. Seek out assistance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – A daring decision on your part may surprise those around you today, but you're likely to win a great deal of admiration when all is said and done.

Dododododo
Dododododo

Dadadadadada
Dadadadadada

dadadada da da da
da da dadadadadada

(Underground Mario!)

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

Chicken Quesadilla

Fish Nuggets

Vegan & Vegetarian Black Bean Quesadilla

Vegan Cutlets (vegan)

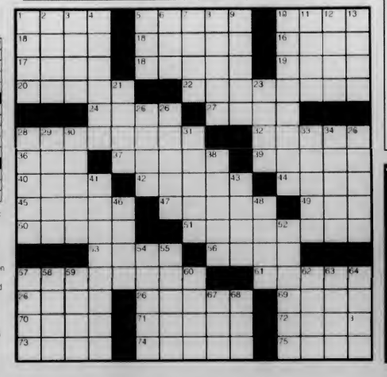
DINNER

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

BBQ Salmon

Veal Madeline

Brazilian Black Beans (vegan)



ACROSS
1 Not bogus
5 Tendon
10 NFL team
14 Ceramic square
15 Hunting knife
16 Beehive state
17 Columnist — Bombeck
18 Great
19 Style
20 Connery and O'Casey
22 Arrested
24 Cake layer
27 Bored response
28 Labyrinth monster
32 Tibetan monks
36 Big bird
37 Sgt. Bilko
39 Tangle
40 Quaff with sushi
42 Like a fruit
44 Forum wear
45 Model's need
47 Frat letter
49 Guitarist — Wood
50 Marsh grass
51 Kind of factor
53 Hit the bell
56 1920s art form
57 Sunshades
61 Rockies ski resort
65 Part of NYU
66 Glittering adornment
69 Faucet hookup
70 Sort
71 Lethargy
72 Bride in "Lohengrin"
73 Mouth off
74 Hard metal
75 Low-pitched

DOWN
1 AAA suggestions
2 Patrick's domain
3 — maker
4 Shack (hyph.)
5 Dan Rather's network
6 Common query
7 Ran up a tab
8 Pat — of the NBA
9 River-mouth formation
10 Grazing animal
11 Like — — of bricks
12 Completed
13 Lose hair
21 Location
23 Leather-working tools
25 Countless spouse
26 Viking settlers
28 Grand Canyon sights
29 Snapshot
30 Used the macrowave
31 Not plant
33 Early Nina Zealander
34 Light bulb filler
35 Teen language
38 Urged on
41 Makes a woodcut
43 Swimming-pool loc.
46 Herbal soothers
48 Verdi princess
52 Rushed off
54 Quick letters
55 Brief sparkle
57 Situates
58 Writer — Sexton
59 Splits open
60 Well-reasoned
62 Fishing rod
63 Latin I verb
64 Kind of tide
67 Regret
68 Have a cough

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

V	I	T	A	L		A	S	S	E	T		P	E	W
A	R	O	M	A		L	O	D	S	E		A	L	I
T	E	M	P	I		E	L	O	P	E		N	I	P
			E	P	C	O	T		M	A	T	T	E
O	P	P	O	S	E	S		V	E	N	E	E	R
S	H	A	F	T	S		H	E	A	D	Y
C	O	S	T		O	C	E	A	N		W	A	G	S
A	N	T	E		R	E	S		H	U	R	T
R	Y	A	N		H	E	L	E	N		E	D	I	E
		E	P	E	E	S		U	N	R	I	P	E
B	A	L	S	A	M		S	L	E	E	T	E	D
A	G	A	T	E		M	A	L	L	S		L
O	I	N		A	N	I	M	A		T	A	L	E	S
L	L	D		N	O	N	E	S		E	X	I	L	E
Y	E	S		S	W	I	S	H		D	E	L	L	A

11-8-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Matt Brady
Dan Roy
Ken Campbell
Melissa Hammel
Erika Earl
Gerald Auger

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass runs past Nike

Nineteen-point outburst pushes Lappas' squad to exhibition win

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts men's basketball team went on an early second-half run to distance itself from the Nike All-Stars and hold on for the win, earning a 61-49 win in the first exhibition game of the season.

UMass	61
Nike	49

With the game tied at 22 just 49 seconds into the second half, the Minutemen went on a 19-0 run.

Senior co-captain Micah Brand started off the run with a rather long shot from the top of the key off a Brandi kick-out and Jackie Rogers knocked down three in a row to the next three minutes to put the Maroon and White up for good.

Rogers made the final shot of the run, as all but eight points in the run came in the second half.

UMass holds a comfortable 47-30 lead with 9:49 left to go when Iowa State's Doug Deuhr. With eights went on a four minutes and change.

Willoughby made five shots, including four from downtown, and single-handedly cut the lead to 53-49 with 1:46 to go.

"If this were a real game," UMass Head Coach Steve Lappas said, "I wouldn't have stayed as long as I did with three freshman in there."

Willoughby led all scorers with 21 points on 6-for-10 shooting (3-for-7 from behind the arc). No other Nike All-Star reached double figures on the evening.

The Minutemen held on to the lead down the stretch, however, with an impressive performance as the game wore on.

With such little time remaining, Nike was forced to foul the Maroon and White and hope for missed shots. But UMass' Marcus Cox (4-to-4), Raheim Lamb (2-for-2) and Jackie Rogers (2-for-2) answered the call in the closing minute plus with a perfect performance from the line.

Rogers led the Minutemen with 14 points and eight rebounds, while Brand chipped in 13 points and five boards and Cox scored 12.

The solid second-half performance came after an ugly 22-point first half for the Minutemen, that saw them shoot just 8-for-27 from the field.

Lappas wasn't worried with the offensive troubles, however.

"We missed a lot of open shots," he said after the game. "That doesn't really concern me. I think offensively we are going to be good."

The team shot much better from the field in the second half, upping a 29.6 percentage to 41.9 percent (13-for-31).

However, Lappas would have preferred to see Anderson take more shots.

"Anderson taking just three shots from the field I wasn't by design," Lappas said. "I really wanted to see him [shoot the ball]. He's such a smart player. It's not like he's making bad decisions when he's not shooting the ball."

Anderson scored just three points, but dished out seven assists.

The Nike All-Stars' 49 total points was the fewest scored by a UMass exhibition opponent since the 1992-93 season, when the Latvian National team scored the same amount in a 92-49 point loss to the Minutemen.

"I was very pleased with the way we played defense," Lappas said.

The Minutemen converted 22 forced turnovers into 12 points, while giving the ball away just 10 times.

SENIOR CO-CAPTAIN MICAH BRAND SCORED 13 POINTS IN LAST NIGHT'S EXHIBITION AGAINST THE NIKE ALL-STARS. THE MINUTEMEN WON THE GAME 61-49.

Rogers proves worth in return

By Matthew E. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Jackie Rogers composed his theme music last night. But it was not the melodious harmony that would have most arena speakers. It was more a cappella.

Echoing off the walls of the Mullins Center was the sound of Rogers' 80-inch frame sliding across parquet and the resonating swat of hand on leather as he pulled each rebound.

For once a star fan begged for his tune.

That Rogers' we missed him last year," one man-on-the-street said as he waited for tipoff. "That and 'Sweet Jackie.'"

Following his first season with the Minutemen, which he averaged six points and almost four rebounds per game, Rogers was sidelined by a medical redshirt.

But this year it will not be his swan song.

Yesterday evening he returned, bringing with him the sweet sound of blue-collar basketball.

He opened with a thrilling drive for a loose ball that gave freshman Mike Lasme an open lane to the basket.

Rogers followed with the supple swish of two baby hooks to give UMass a 21-18 lead before the break.

He opened the second half with a listener's request.

"We wanted Jackie to become a better shooter [in the offseason]," Head Coach Steve Lappas said. "He's already great around the basket. And he's worked hard on his jump shot."

On his consecutive possessions, Rogers (14 points) stretched opposing pivot James Felton out to the elbow before lofting a jump shot through the cylinder.

Then he decided to bring his game back to its roots.

The next time down the floor, Rogers put a dent in Jay Locklier's sternum on a drop step move that finished with a kiss of the nylon.

Two possessions later he ripped one of his eight boards and started a break that ended with a Gabe Lee flush.

Another deuce from the post had UMass on a 19-0 run and Rogers kept it that way with a reverberating put of Dedric Willoughby's counter offering.

"He's a scorer but he's tough," Lappas said. "He brings an energy and a toughness to this team."

Rogers also brought a jolt to the home crowd, which was mostly muted by a plodding 12-point exhibition win over Team Nike.

His hard-hat, lunch pail style was responsible for most of the crescendos in crowd noise. And those 2,678 in attendance can expect to see more of the bellowing boards, the wars in the post and the get on the floor attitude.

Because those are the sights and the sounds of Jackie Rogers basketball.

Dacko era begins in Amherst

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Tonight a new era in Massachusetts women's basketball history begins.

For the first time in nine seasons, there will be a different head honcho roaming the maroon and white sidelines for UMass. Her name is Marnie Dacko and her reign as UMass women's basketball head coach starts tonight in an exhibition affair against the Nor'Easter Storm in the Mullins Center.

"I am really optimistic to see where our team stands, what we are able to do and how far we've come," Dacko said.

The Minutewomen were last seen playing in an epic 67-61 overtime loss to Temple in the semifinal of the Atlantic 10 championship tournament. However, that squad, led by former Head Coach Joanie O'Brien, is quite different from the club that now listens to Dacko.

In preseason practices, Dacko has attempted to instill a new style of play for the Maroon and White and tonight she will get the chance to see how well her basketball philosophy is rubbing off on her new subjects.

"I would like to say that I hope we play an up-tempo game, but if we are turning the ball over that doesn't bode well for us," she said. "I would love to apply pressure defense, create some turnovers in an effort for us to get the ball and make some layups."

The Minutewomen will test out their new brand of ball against an experienced, talented and tall Storm club.

The Nor'Easter Storm is a squad made up of former NCAA Division I basketball standouts from the Northeast. The team started in 1995, made up of former Connecticut basketball stars, but has expanded to alums from schools across New England, New York and Pennsylvania.

Two former Minutewomen, centers Lucia Madajova (1995-99) and Yolanda Mayside (1996-99), are on the Nor'Easter roster. Both players cause a major concern for Dacko as they are two of five players on the squad over six-feet tall.

"They are a big team and they mostly play man-to-man defense," Dacko said. "It will present a challenge for us but that's why we schedule these kind of games."

Another concern for Dacko is the health of her team. This year's squad could not get through the preseason injury and sickness free. Six players in total have sat out at least one practice this fall. The most serious case is Kristin Cannon who sprained her ankle and has been out for three weeks. She is not expected to play tonight.

"A lot of us have been struggling but fortunately when one person goes down, another one has been able to step and pick up the slack," Dacko said.

But Dacko says that she will not allow the injuries faze her. Her starting five of Ebony Pegues, Katie Nelson, Amber Sneed and co-captains Jen Butler and Nekole Smith is intact and she is excited to see how her team will respond to a squad that doesn't know the UMass gameplan.

"It's an opportunity to play some different faces," she said. "They [Nor'Easter] have been practicing a while and they will have played two games by the time they play us."

URI rivalry at apex of season

SOPHOMORE CHRIS CAMPIOTA AND THE MEN'S SOCCER TEAM WILL FINISH THEIR REGULAR SEASON CAMPAIGN AT RUDD FIELD AGAINST URI.

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

With the days counting down until four teams square off in Richmond, Va., the Atlantic 10 soccer tournament picture is vague, and may change this weekend.

Massachusetts sits atop the conference standings with an 8-0-2 A-10 record (12-4-2 overall). Second is Richmond at 7-1-2 (9-5-3), with Duquesne (6-1-3 A-10, 11-2-3) and Rhode Island (6-4-0 A-10, 11-8-0) rounding out the top four. Should the field stay the same through the weekend, those four teams will go to the Atlantic 10 Championship at Richmond.

UMass has a chance to change all that this weekend, when it takes on Rhode Island on Saturday at 1 p.m. With a UMass win, the Rams are out of the playoff picture. With a Rhody win, the Maroon and White could end up in a tie for first place with Richmond, which travels to George Washington, and the Rams will hold on to the last playoff spot.

Emotions will be running high tomorrow when the teams take the pitch. First, it's Senior Day, the last chance for Enzo Altomare, Jeff Deren, Yuri Morales, Derek Rhodes, Smith Utuhor, Jason Golesky, Tiago Moreira and Dave Doucette to walk into Rudd Field as players, with their last chance at a regular season win.

Second, the rivalry between these two teams has spanned a number of years, and this year's seniors have a particularly bitter taste for Rhode Island that they'd like to get rid of. The Rams lead the series 22 to 18 with four draws, and have taken the last two meetings, including 2000's matchup in a 7-0 romp. The UMass seniors don't intend to continue the trend, however.

"I think we're ready," Morales said. "I think we owe them payback for last year, and I can remember when I was a sophomore, they beat us 7-0, so we owe them."

"There's no need to get up for Rhode Island," Rhodes said. "Everybody knows that they've been a team to beat and they still are, just because they've lost a couple of games doesn't mean they're not going to come to play."

And it's not just the players who feel the emotions surrounding tomorrow's game.

"It's a home game," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "And it's the last home game, so it's senior day, obviously. And it's Rhode Island, which is always our biggest rival within the conference. Obviously it's a big game no matter what the records are."

The Rams come into the contest with four straight losses riding their backs. Their last win came on Oct. 20, a 3-2 victory over Duquesne. After that win, however, the Rams dropped decisions to St. Joseph's, Temple, Richmond, and George Washington.

Meanwhile, in that span, UMass has gone 3-0-1 with victories over St. Joe's, the Owls and GW. Richmond put up a 1-1 draw with the Minutemen.

The tie with Richmond meant that the Maroon and White will need another win to take the regular season A-10 title, and the first place slot in the tournament.

"We would have definitely liked to wrap it up last weekend," Rhodes said, "but [Rhode Island has] been knocking us off for a couple of years, and they've been our nemesis since I was a freshman here, so it's nice that we have the opportunity to knock them out of the tournament."

Should the Minutemen stay atop the standings after this weekend, they'll have the chance to accomplish something that has never been done by a UMass men's soccer team before – take the A-10 regular season title as well as the championship.

"We'd definitely like to win the regular season title, as well as the Atlantic 10 Championship for two years in a row," Rhodes said. "It's never been done in school history before, to win both in the same year, so it's definitely a goal of ours going into the weekend."

UMass Weekend Schedule

TIME HOME VISITORS

Friday, Nov. 8

Home
Women's Basketball vs. Nor'Easter Storm (7:30 p.m.)

Away
Field Hockey at A-10 Championships (Richmond, Va.) vs. West Chester (2 p.m.)

Saturday, Nov. 9

Home
Men's Soccer vs. Rhode Island (1 p.m.)

Away
Football at UNH (12 p.m.)
Men's and Women's Swimming at BU (1 p.m.)
Field Hockey at A-10 Finals (Richmond, Va.) (1 p.m.)
Ice Hockey at Maine (7 p.m.)

POTTER COUNTDOWN ARTS PAGE 5.
EMUS ON THE LOOSE ED/OP PAGE 4.
UMASS TAKES FIFTH SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTYY-EIGHT ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.12.02

'Walk for Light' to meet this evening

By Jamie Loo
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The "Walk for Light" will gather students, faculty, staff and the police department tonight to identify safety concerns on campus.

The once-a-semester walk is sponsored by the Student Government Association (SGA) and is done in collaboration with the University Police Department and the Chancellor's Committee on Campus Safety, which addresses campus safety issues.

Participants will meet on the steps of the Student Union at 7 p.m. and divide into groups to walk predetermined routes on campus, taking note of any safety concerns along the way. Students, staff, and faculty are invited to attend.

"Student safety is very important to the SGA and to Public Safety," said SGA president Dave Carr.

Carr said past walks have been effective in identifying problem areas on campus and solving them. According to Carr, student input on these walks is regarded very highly by administration and that the problems are usually solved within the semester.

"Every year we tend to add three to four more call boxes on campus," said Carr. In addition to this, Carr said that it's a common myth among students that current call boxes don't work.

"Call boxes are checked twice a week by student security supervisors," said Carr.

The "Walk for Light" began in 1997 and was organized by the Campus Safety Summit, a committee that met to address campus safety issues. The walks have resulted in the installation of additional police call boxes, more lighting on campus, and the pruning of vegetation for safety purposes.

According to an interview in a previous Collegian article with Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor, there were only five call boxes on campus in 1980. That number has jumped to over 100.

Security on campus has been a hot button issue on campus this year. Earlier in the semester, the SGA created a Select Committee on Public Safety to specifically address campus safety issues. The committee is a sub-committee of University Policy.

Student Trustee Bill Powers has been on previous walks and said that many changes on campus have been a direct result of the walks. Powers said he was on the walk that led to the placement of call boxes out by the Student Union lawn and campus pond and outside of Thompson Hall.

Safety walks have also led to the trimming back of vegetation that could be dangerous to security. A

Turn to WALK, page 3

Bush pays tribute to vets

President says 'full force' a possibility in Iraq

SCOTT APPLEWHITE/ASSOCIATED PRESS

PRESIDENT BUSH PAYS HIS RESPECTS AT THE TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER AT ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY IN ARLINGTON, VA., YESTERDAY. BUSH SAID THAT HE WILL COMMIT "THE FULL FORCE AND MIGHT OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY" AGAINST IRAQ IF SADDAM HUSSEIN DOES NOT DISARM QUICKLY.

By Ron Fournier
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) – In somber tribute to soldiers of wars past, President Bush said Monday he will commit "the full force and might of the United States military" against Iraq if Saddam Hussein refuses to disarm swiftly.

As the rubber-stamping Iraqi parliament condemned a U.S.-backed United Nations resolution, Bush used two Veterans Day addresses to underscore his impatience.

"The time to confront this threat is before it arrives, not the day after," he told several dozen veterans during an East Room ceremony.

Behind the scenes, Bush has approved tentative Pentagon plans for invading Iraq should a new U.N. arms inspection effort fail to rid the nation of weapons of mass destruction. The strategy calls for a land, sea and air force of 200,000 to 250,000 troops, administration officials said, as they sought to build up pressure on Saddam to relent.

"We have to keep, in a sense, a gun pointed to the head of the Iraqi regime because that's the only way they cooperate," Bush's national security adviser, Condoleezza Rice, told National Public Radio's "The Tavis Smiley Show."

The talk of war grew to a crescendo just three days after the U.N. Security Council approved a tough new resolution with an unexpected 15-0 vote. Iraq has until Friday to accept the resolution that would send U.N. inspectors back to Baghdad after an absence of nearly four years with broad new powers to go anywhere at any time backed by the threat of force.

With the clock ticking, Bush traveled across the Potomac River to visit Arlington National Cemetery, lay a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns, praise America's veterans and pledge his resolve against terrorism and Iraq.

"We will not permit a dictator who has used weapons of mass destruction to threaten America with chemical, biological or nuclear weapons," the president said. "This great nation will not live at the mercy of any foreign plot or power."

Standing beneath the marble dome of the cemetery's flag-draped amphitheater, the president drew cheers and whistles of approval when he declared, "The dictator of Iraq will fully disarm or the United States will lead a coalition to disarm him."

In Baghdad, Iraq's parliament condemned the U.N. resolution as full of lies, and a senior lawmaker urged that it be rejected – a prospect that likely would bring on war.

Rice dismissed the response and the parliament itself.

"I don't think anyone believes this is anything but an absolute dictatorship and this decision is up to Saddam Hussein," she told reporters at the White House.

Even if Saddam accepts the resolution, Rice said she would remain skeptical.

"They are obligated to accept, but the U.N. thought it best to ask for return-receipt requested," she said.

Bush himself said Iraq is behind the eight ball. "No enemy that threatens our security or endangers our people will escape the patient justice and the overwhelming power of the United States of America," he said in the East Room. "Should military action become necessary for our own security, I will commit the full force and might of the United States militars, and we will prevail."

Bush began his day with a pre-dawn visit to the Vietnam War Memorial. As a chilly rain pelted his umbrella, Bush placed an American flag at the base of the black granite wall, where 58,229 names of those killed or missing in the war from 1959 to 1975 are inscribed.

Later, at the East Room reception, Bush said America owes its freedom to the ex-soldiers gathered before him and its greatness to their postwar service. "Our veterans from every era are the finest of citizens," the president said. "We owe them the life we know today."

He carried the theme to the cemetery, where white headstones honor 260,000 American heroes.

"We remember those who served America by fighting and dying on the field of battle, and we remember those veterans who lived on for many decades to serve America in many ways," Bush said.

Editor from anti-war newspaper to speak

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Max Elbaum, editor of War Times newspaper, will address the nation's on-going war on terrorism tonight in a lecture in Campus Center room 168.

The talk, scheduled for 7 p.m., is entitled "Wars and Antiwar Movements: From Vietnam to Iraq" and will cover the nation's involvement in seeking out terrorism and the potential conflict with Iraq.

Elbaum will also discuss the grassroots efforts across the country to oppose military action that has occurred during President George W. Bush's administration and to promote a more secure, just, and peaceful world.

War Times debuted in February 2002 with the cover story, "From One Ground Zero to Another." Since then, the nationwide, bilingual newspaper has produced five more issues aimed at exposing the darker sides of the war on terrorism.

The newspaper's mission statement explains the purpose of the publication: "War Times is being produced to help broaden and deepen the fight against the Bush program by compiling information and analysis, and putting them into the hands of large numbers of readers."

It is this spirit that Elbaum will bring to campus tonight.

"The main thing that we hope to accomplish with this is to bring more people into a conversation on what President Bush wants to do with the war with terror and specifically with what he wants to do with Iraq," Mark Brenner, event organizer from the socialist group Solidarity, said.

"I feel like there's not a lot of debate among students on the war in Iraq, and I'd like to foster more conversation on the war on campus, given the level of seriousness that I think it represents," Brenner said.

"We really believe that there is an anti-war movement in this country,"

Turn to ELBAUM, page 3

ASSISTANT POLICE CHIEF CHUCK MADISON OF PARRISH, ALA., ARRIVES AT THE CARBON HILL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL IN CARBON HILL, ALA., YESTERDAY. MADISON WAS HELPING TO PROVIDE SECURITY IN THE WAKE OF A STRING OF DEADLY TORNADOES THAT SWEPT THROUGH THE AREA LATE SUNDAY NIGHT.

Twisters claim lives of 35 people

By Duncan Mansfield
ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOSSY GROVE, Tenn. (AP) – Searchers and dazed survivors went from one shattered home to another Monday, picking through splintered lumber and torn sheet metal for any sign of the missing, after twisters and thunderstorms killed at least 35 people in five states.

More than 70 reported tornadoes cut a path of destruction from Louisiana to Pennsylvania over the weekend and into Monday. Sixteen deaths were reported in Tennessee, 12 in Alabama, five in Ohio and one each in Mississippi and Pennsylvania. More than 200 people were injured.

"Yesterday, we had a nice brick house and four vehicles. Today, we don't own a toothbrush," said Susan Henry of Mossy Grove, where seven people were killed and at least 40 were still unaccounted for as of midafternoon.

The tiny community 40 miles west of Knoxville was nearly wiped off the map, with about a dozen of the 20 or so homes reduced to concrete foundations and piles of rubble a few feet high.

Henry, her husband and two children survived after taking shelter in the basement of a neighbor's home that collapsed around them.

"It was just deafening it was so loud," said 17-year-old Tabatha Henry. "You could hear the wood pop in the house, and that was it. Then all you could hear was the screaming and praying."

Daylight brought a picture of destruction. In Mossy Grove, clothes fluttered from tree limbs. Power lines dangled from poles. Cars lay crumpled after being tossed like toys. About the only sound was the bleating of a battery-operated smoke alarm buried deep in the rubble.

Searchers beheved that most of the missing in and around Mossy Grove were OK and had simply been unable to get in touch with family members, said Steven Hamby, Morgan County director of emergency medical services. The storm knocked out telephone service and blocked roads.

No bodies had been found since early Monday, but Hamby said digging out could take weeks.

"We're hoping that we're past the bad stuff," he said.

In Carbon Hill, Ala., 70 miles northwest of Birmingham, seven people were killed by nighttime storms that sent giant hardwood trees crashing down on houses and mobile homes.

Sheryl Wakefield cowered in her concrete storm shelter and listened to a twister roar down the country road where her extended family lives in six homes. Her sister and niece were killed when their doublewide mobile home was thrown across the street, its metal frame twisted around a tree.

"Everybody's house is just totally gone. My son doesn't even know where his house is," she said through tears. "It's gone. It's just gone."

© 2002 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization. We are proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

VOTED #1 IDEAL EMPLOYER BY BUSINESS STUDENTS, UNIVERSUM UNDERGRADUATE STUDY, 2002

Investors need to be able to trust the information that companies supply to the public. Help us audit that information and we'll help you build a career.

For opportunities and information go to:
www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere

Look beyond the numbers.

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Saturday Nov. 2, 2002

1:37 a.m.: An officer was dispatched to Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue after the report of a fight and disturbance there came in. Ron Joseph Varrichione, 19, of 96 Maybrook Rd. in Holland Mass. was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of liquor, reckless operation of a motor vehicle and a marked lanes violation.

2:21 a.m.: A disturbance was reported in Brett Dormitory on Infirmary Way. The officer dispatched reported that the subject started to fight with other people after being barred from the dorm.

3:39 a.m.: A caller reported people in the Orchard Hill Bowl setting off fireworks and kicking dumpsters. An area check turned up negative.

4:08 p.m.: A caller reported that an Alpine in-dash CD player was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 15 on Authority Way. The value of the player is about $ 100.

9:47 p.m.: A custodian in Dickinson Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive reported that one of the toilets in the bathroom on the fourth floor appeared to have been damaged by an M-80 type firecracker.

11:59 p.m.: Drug law offenses were reported in Wheeler Dormitory on Infirmary Way. The subject will be summoned to court for possession of a class D substance.

Sunday Nov. 3, 2002

12:59 a.m.: An Resident Assistant in Field Dormitory reported that someone set fire to a newspaper on the floor in front of the elevator on the sixth floor. The RA reported that the fire was out, but the floor was burned. Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) was dispatched to the scene.

1:48 a.m.: A caller in Melville Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue reported that an unknown person opened the room door and threw a fire extinguisher into the room. No injuries were reported. EHS was dispatched to replace the fire extinguisher.

2:00 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in John Adams Dormitory on Eastern Street. Air RA requested an ambulance for transport to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

2:09 a.m.: A caller in John Adams Dormitory on Eastern Street stated that he and his friend were punched in the face and head. He said that medical treatment wasn't necessary, but they wished to file charges against their unknown attackers. Efforts will be made to locate the individuals.

4:02 p.m.: A 21-speed Diamondback mountain bike was reported stolen from Lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue. The approximate value of the bike is $600.

11:31 p.m.: A caller reported that fireworks were being set off in the Orchard Hill Bowl area. An area check turned up negative.

Monday Nov. 4, 2002

4:07 a.m.: UMPD assisted with a motor vehicle accident on Butterfield Terrace. A vehicle flipped over at the intersection of Butterfield Terrace and N. Pleasant Street.

11:11 a.m.: Several microscopes were reported stolen from Hasbrouck Laboratory on N. Pleasant St.

3:03 p.m.: A person stated that his car radio was stolen from his car while parked on Hicks Way.

3:09 p.m.: A caller reported that his radio was stolen from his vehicle in Lot 22 on University Drive.

3:03 p.m.: A caller reported that his black Nissan Maxima was broken into while parked in Lot 33 on University Drive. The passenger side window was smashed. The stereo, CDs, and three tuxedos were taken from the vehicle.

Tuesday Nov. 5, 2002

1:18 p.m.: A person called to report that their motorcycle was pushed over in Lot 49 on Clark Hill Road. EHS was dispatched for cleanup of a gasoline spill.

2:32 p.m.: A person reported that his vehicle was broken into. The driver side window was smashed.

9:17 p.m.: A caller reported that his driver side window was smashed and his CD player, CDs and gauges were taken from his car while it was parked in Lot 22 on University Drive.

9:42 p.m.: Police arrested Kent L. Raymond, 23, of 87 Brent St. in Dorchester, Mass. on an outstanding warrant while he was in the Student Union.

9:47 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Student Union. The Amherst Fire Department was notified and responded, taking one person by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

10:53 p.m.: A suspicious person was reported outside of the Student Union. Police responded to the scene, leading to the arrest of Bryan R. Johnston, 21, of 95 Bruce Dr. in Dalton, Mass. Johnston was charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer.

Wednesday Nov. 6, 2002

3:36 a.m.: Techs responded to an alarm in the Campus Center Hotel due to a power bump.

12:58 p.m.: Vandalism to a car in Lot 22 on University Drive was reported. Damage was noticeable on a window, the shift column, stereo, hood and battery of the car.

2:20 p.m.: Police responded to a report of assault and battery in Lot 34 on Massachusetts Avenue. When police arrived, the victim had gone inside the Visitors Center.

3:15 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Goessmann Laboratory on N. Pleasant Street. The responding officer reported that one person was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

9:05 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Field Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive. The responding officer reported AED transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Thursday Nov. 7, 2002

4:20 a.m.: Police responded to various sites on campus after a short power outage at around midnight. Alarms in the Campus Center, Tilson Power Plant, Campus Center Garage and the Lincoln Building needed resetting. Technicians were dispatched and EHS advised.

■ Walk

continued from page 1

few years ago after a string of attacks by the campus pond, the bushes between Metawampee Lawn and the pond were trimmed back significantly.

Another result of the walks is increased lighting in various areas of campus that were once dark. "Lighting has definitely been improved in some of the parking lots," said Powers.

Powers said the walk is also good opportunity for faculty and administrators to see parts of campus in the dark that they might not normally see, but that are common pathways for students.

Carr said public safety is an important issue on campus and that he hopes that members of the community will be there.

"I would love to see 100 people there. That would be great," said Carr.

■ Elbaum

continued from page 1

Sonny Suchdev of the Office of ALANA Affairs said "We want to really engage students on campus about the anti-war movement. We want to see what a successful anti-war movement looks like and what it embodies a true democracy."

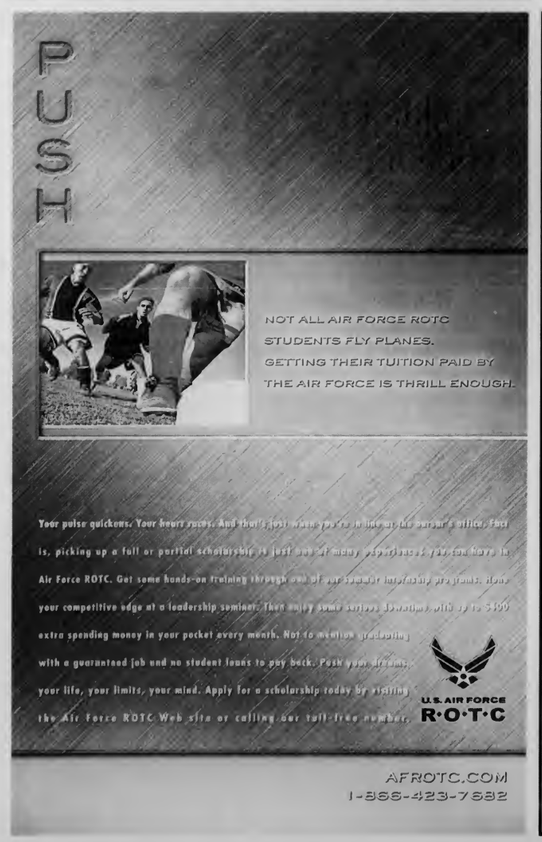
Suchdev said that Elbaum will draw parallels between the situation in Vietnam over 30 years ago and the situation in Iraq today.

"If we do believe that we're living in a democratic country, the way that should work is a grassroots democracy," Suchdev said. "That means mobilizing from the bottom up, going to rallies, making sure that our government represents us. We've seen people's movements work. Hopefully we can do that now. Democracy is more than just voting day."

The event is sponsored by the Office of ALANA Affairs, the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), the Program on Social Thought and Political Economy (STEPC), Solidarity, and the Western Mass. Palestinian Action Coalition.

The event is free and open to the public.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian



113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as "Aggie Life." Known as the College Word in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Bi-Weekly Collegian in 1938, The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has become a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew J. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ippolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

apply now for the new, expanded

CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROGRAM

Criminal Justice Concentration
Department of Sociology

Earn a Certificate in Criminal Justice

For students who plan a career in some aspect of the criminal justice system: police officers, probation and parole officers, paralegals, public and private criminal attorneys, district attorneys, judges, etc.

Applications are now being taken for the program.

A wide variety of courses are scheduled for 2003, including new classroom and online courses in domestic violence, crime and forensics, criminal violence in America, international criminal justice, organized crime, and cyber crime.

Courses offered Winter Session 2003:

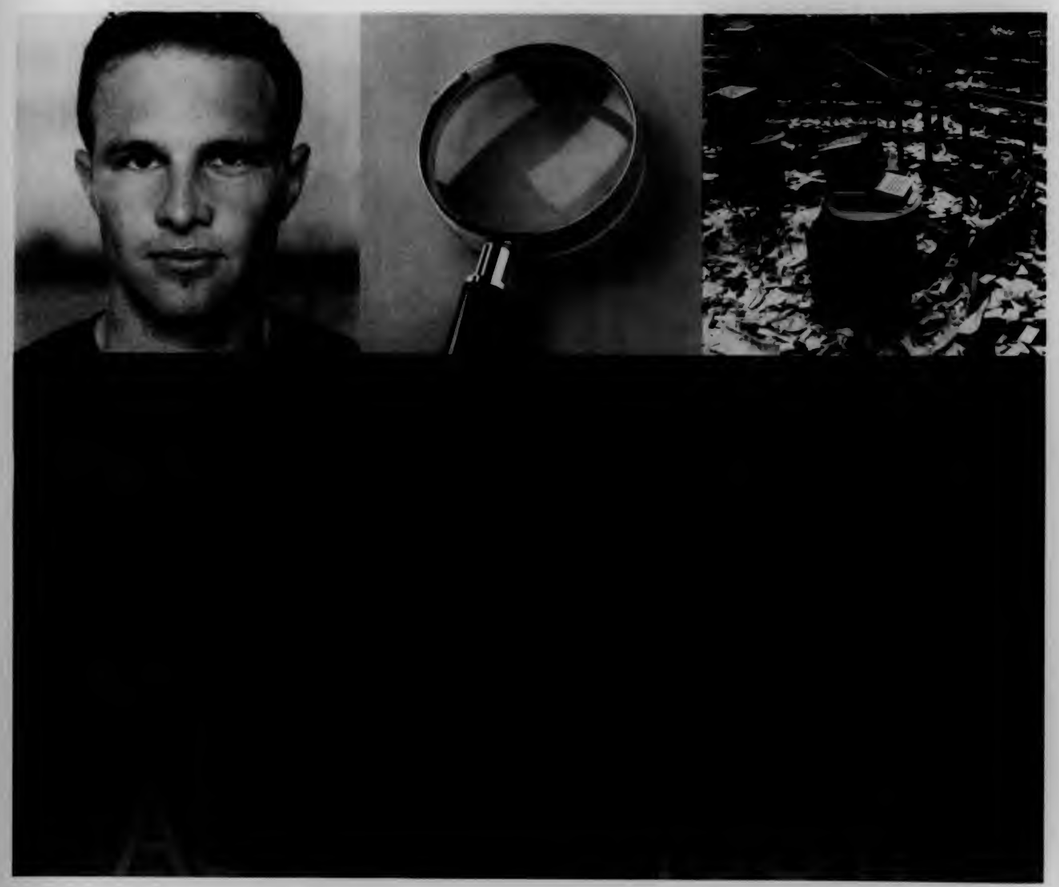
SOCIOL 241 Criminology (online)

SOCIOL 394F Crime and Forensics (on campus, M-Th, 6-9 p.m.)

SOCIOL 395K Domestic Violence (online)

For more information, and to apply to the program, contact Prof. Anthony Harris, Sociology Department, Thompson 524, 545-0475.

UMASS



To register for winter and spring courses, go to www.umass.edu/contined or the Division of Continuing Education Registration Office, 358 N. Pleasant St.

Priority will be given to registered Criminal Justice Program students.

© 2002 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization. We are proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

VOTED #1 IDEAL EMPLOYER BY BUSINESS STUDENTS, UNIVERSUM UNDERGRADUATE STUDY, 2002

Investors need to be able to trust the information that companies supply to the public. Help us audit that information and we'll help you build a career.

For opportunities and information go to:
www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere

Look beyond the numbers.

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Saturday Nov. 2, 2002

1:37 a.m.: An officer was dispatched to Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue after the report of a fight and disturbance there came in. Ron Joseph Varrichione, 19, of 96 Maybrook Rd. in Holland Mass., was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of liquor, reckless operation of a motor vehicle and a marked lanes violation.

2:21 a.m.: A disturbance was reported in Birch Dormitory on Infirmary Way. The officer dispatched reported that the subject started to fight with other people after being barred from the dorm.

3:59 a.m.: A caller reported people in the Orchard Hill Bowl setting off fireworks and kicking dumpsters. An area check turned up negative.

4:08 p.m.: A caller reported that an Alpine in-dash CD player was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 13 on Authority Way. The value of the player is about $300.

9:47 p.m.: A custodian in Dickinson Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive reported that one of the toilets in the bathroom on the fourth floor appeared to have been damaged by an M-80 type firecracker.

11:39 p.m.: Drug law offenses were reported in Wheeler Dormitory on Infirmary Way. The subject will be summoned to court for possession of a class-D substance.

Sunday Nov. 3, 2002

12:59 a.m.: An Resident Assistant in Field Dormitory reported that someone set fire to a newspaper on the floor in front of the elevator on the sixth floor. The RA reported that the fire was out, but the floor was burned. Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) was dispatched to the scene.

1:48 a.m.: A caller in Melville Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue reported that an unknown person opened the room door and threw a fire extinguisher into the room. No injuries were reported. EHS was dispatched to replace the fire extinguisher.

2:00 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in John Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street. An RA requested an ambulance for transport to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

2:09 a.m.: A caller in John Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street stated that he and his friend were punched in the face and head. He said that medical treatment wasn't necessary, but they wished to file charges against their unknown attackers. Efforts will be made to locate the individuals.

4:02 p.m.: A 21-speed Diamondback mountain bike was reported stolen from Lot 7 Lincoln Massachusetts Avenue. The apparent market value of the bike is $900.

11:51 p.m.: A caller reported that fireworks were being set off in the Orchard Hill Bowl area. An area check turned up negative.

Monday Nov. 4, 2002

4:07 a.m.: UMPD assisted with a motor vehicle accident on Butterfield Terrace. A vehicle flipped over at the intersection of Butterfield Terrace and N. Pleasant Street.

11:11 a.m.: Several microscopes were reported stolen from Hasbrouck Laboratory on N. Pleasant St.

3:03 p.m.: A person stated that his car radio was stolen from his car while parked on Hicks Way.

3:09 p.m.: A caller reported that his radio was stolen from his vehicle in Lot 22 on University Drive.

3:03 p.m.: A caller reported that his black Nissan Maxima was broken into while parked in Lot 33 on University Drive. The passenger side window was smashed. The stereo, CDs, and three mixedos were taken from the vehicle.

Tuesday Nov. 5, 2002

1:18 p.m.: A person called to report that their motorcycle was pushed over in Lot 49 on Clark Hill Road. EHS was dispatched for cleanup of a gasoline spill.

2:32 p.m.: A person reported that his vehicle was broken into. The driver side window was smashed.

9:17 p.m.: A caller reported that his driver side window was smashed and his CD player, CDs and gauges were taken from his car while it was parked in Lot 22 on University Drive.

9:42 p.m.: Police arrested Kent F. Raymond, 23, of 97 Brent St. in Dorchester, Mass. on an outstanding warrant while he was in the Student Union.

9:47 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the Student Union. The Amherst Fire Department was notified and responded, taking one person by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

10:53 p.m.: A suspicious person was reported outside of the Student Union. Police responded to the scene, leading to the arrest of Bryan R. Johnston, 21, of 95 Bruce Dr. in Dalton, Mass. Johnston was charged with disorderly conduct and assault and battery on a police officer.

Wednesday Nov. 6, 2002

3:56 a.m.: Techs responded to an alarm in the Campus Center Hotel due to a power bump.

12:58 p.m.: Vandalism to a car in Lot 22 on University Drive was reported. Damage was noticeable on a window, the shift column, stereo, hood and battery of the car.

2:20 p.m.: Police responded to a report of assault and battery in Lot 34 on Massachusetts Avenue. When police arrived, the victim had gone inside the Visitors Center.

3:15 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Goessmann Laboratory on N. Pleasant Street. The responding officer reported that one person was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

9:05 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Field Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive. The responding officer reported AFD transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Thursday Nov. 7, 2002

4:20 a.m.: Police responded to various sites on campus after a short power outage at around midnight. Alarms in the Campus Center, Tilson Power Plant, Campus Center Garage and the Lincoln Building needed resetting. Technicians were dispatched and EHS advised.

■ Walk

continued from page 1

few years ago after a string of attacks by the campus pond, the bushes between Metawampee Lawn and the pond were trimmed back significantly.

Another result of the walks is increased lighting in various areas of campus that were once dark. "Lighting has definitely been improved in some of the parking lots," said Powers.

Powers said the walk is also good opportunity for faculty and administrators to see parts of campus in the dark that they might not normally see, but that are common pathways for students.

Carr said public safety is an important issue on campus and that he hopes that members of the community will be there.

"I would love to see 100 people there. That would be great," said Carr.

■ Elbaum

continued from page 1

Sonny Suchdev of the Office of ALANA Affairs said, "We want to really engage students on campus about the anti-war movement. We want to see what a successful anti-war movement looks like and what it embodies a true democracy."

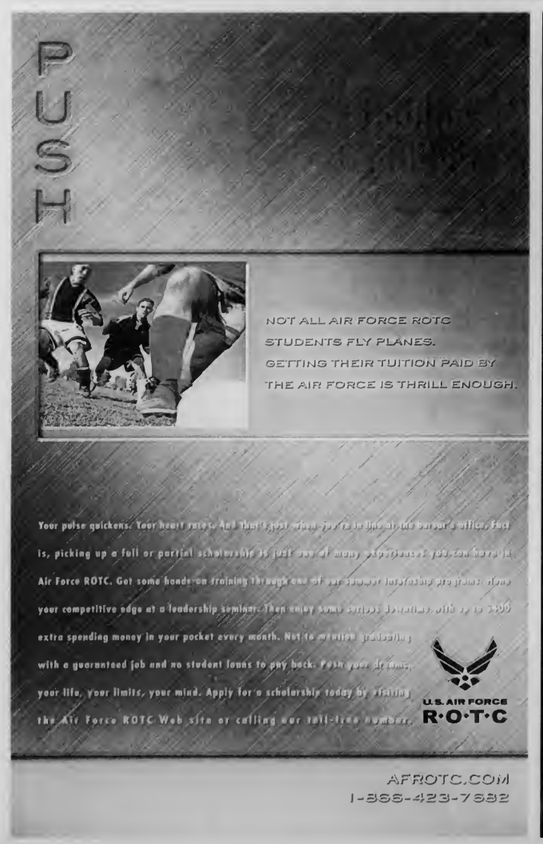
Suchdev said that Elbaum will draw parallels between the situation in Vietnam over 30 years ago and the situation in Iraq today.

"If we do believe that we're living in a democratic country, the way that should work is a grassroots democracy," Suchdev said. "That means mobilizing from the bottom up: going to rallies, making sure that our government represents us. We've seen people's movements work. Hopefully we can do that now. Democracy is more than just voting day."

The event is sponsored by the Office of ALANA Affairs, the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), the Program on Social Thought and Political Economy (STEPCE), Solidarity, and the Western Mass Palestinian Action Coalition.

The event is free and open to the public.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian



113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. Its paper was founded in 1890 as "Aggie Life." During the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1911 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth L. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ierolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

apply now for the new, expanded

CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROGRAM

Criminal Justice Concentration
Department of Sociology

Earn a Certificate in Criminal Justice

For students who plan a career in some aspect of the criminal justice system: police officers, probation and parole officers, paralegals, public and private criminal attorneys, district attorneys, judges, etc.

Applications are now being taken for the program.

A wide variety of courses are scheduled for 2003, including new classroom and online courses in domestic violence, crime and forensics, criminal violence in America, international criminal justice, organized crime, and cyber crime.

Courses offered Winter Session 2003:

SOCIOL 241 Criminology (online)

SOCIOL 394F Crime and Forensics (on campus, M-Th, 6-9 p.m.)

SOCIOL 395K Domestic Violence (online)

For more information, and to apply to the program, contact Prof. Anthony Harris, Sociology Department, Thompson 524, 545-0475.

UMASS

To register for winter and spring courses, go to www.umass.edu/contined or the Division of Continuing Education Registration Office, 358 N. Pleasant St.

Priority will be given to registered Criminal Justice Program students

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

UMass safety walks fail without participation

Tonight, the University of Massachusetts' "Walk for Light" will start at 7 p.m. on the Student Union steps. The annual walk is an interactive walk through campus designed to coincide with members of the Mass police department and the Chancellor's committee on campus safety. The main purpose is to identify safety concerns on the campus.

But is the walk enough?

In past half-hearted attempts to improve the effectiveness of the event, making it more difficult to tackle the issues that warrant inspection, students and staff members are asked to attend, but besides a handful of UMPD officers and student government members, the walk features little outside input.

The areas traveled during the nighttime campus tour are well-walked, regular campus areas. Those off-the-beaten paths through campus are the routes traveled by most students from class to class and at night.

Not are these areas being missed? Perhaps. The construction on campus has greatly changed many of our walking routes. Lately, night revelers and student workers alike are faced with the ever changing course of travel.

Student workers are another affected group. If you work on campus the likelihood of a safe path is pretty good. The well-lit sidewalks leading out from the Campus Center provide necessary light for students leaving the concrete mouth.

This does not take into account the number of students who travel off campus to earn their wages. With winter fast approaching – save this weekend's 80-degree weather – the parking lots on campus pose an interesting predicament for these workers.

With the eradication of the driving escort service – perhaps the most discussed victim of the budget cuts when it comes to safety – limited safety is lent to students in these lots. Winter weather is less conducive to waiting for the walking and that is still available.

The lots on campus are lonely spots to sit and wait for an escort when all you want to do is crawl into bed after a night of slinging pizzas in Northampton, or delivering wings to complement Monday night football. Especially in the cold and snow that is soon to descend.

The "Walk for Light" needs to address some of these "further out" areas of campus. And this is where students and staff members need to get involved.

Without input from people who are not "regulars" at these walks, then the walk fails. Without fresh perspectives and unique campus views, this walk fails. Without identifying areas of concern that have not already been discussed, debated, addressed, and revisited time and time again, this walk fails.

The only way that this interactive, open-invitation walk can address all the student concerns is if students participate. The only way that a staff member's worries can be addressed is if staff members participate.

Not taking this walk only hurts you and everyone else who travels the campus after the sun goes down.

Unsigned Editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian Editorial Board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Security is a two-way street

LINDSEY ELDER

I'll bet if you're like most students and fellow RAs that the current security methods are just not enough at UMass. Yes, budget cuts took a huge toll on the UMPD, and now sometimes student security can be everywhere all the time, but the problem is not the lack of security measures on campus. It's the abundance of students who do not take responsibility for their own actions.

For starters, I can give you an anti-theft guarantee as simple as pushing a button. This act is also known as locking your door. When returning from class, you may think you're tapping into a world-saving trend, your name. What Do you think is going to be the first thing you're asked when you report the incident? Did you lock your door? I assure you crimes of opportunity are more frequent than you may expect, but they are also the easiest to prevent.

I made the mistake last year of going to sleep without my door locked. During 1 a.m. I got up to a loud, unusual noise to see the bathroom at some point and did not want to be locked out. That night however I had the wake-up call I needed waking up to a man coming into my room while I slept. It my room at our apartment looked like. Later that week above me and I didn't realize he was in the 7th floor instead of the 8th, but fast that fact that someone had the advantage over me that I had left myself changed my attitude completely. People have been arrested and armed for wandering from hallways to search of other's unlocked by their neighbors, whether or not the student is in his/her room. Whether you're going to take a shower, going to the DC or just moving from car to car. Unless you're desperate, how much effort to bring your key along with you and have the security to know your room and possessions are safe.

I firmly believe that no one has the right to violate another human being by [illegible] or blaming anyone that's been the victim. I'm around, but I still argue that if you're not going to be responsible for your own actions and safety, then you can not expect anyone else to look out for your best interests. Why would you go out and get drunk to the level that you have no idea what you're doing and expect that everything is going to be all right? Alcohol plays a pivotal role in [illegible] sexual assaults on campus, and I'm sad to say that very few of these cases are prosecutable or winnable. When the victim is so drunk that they cannot identify the Campus Center let alone their attacker, or that neither party was coherent enough to give no defend themselves against the other it just ends up being the finger pointed.

"For all the complaining of not feeling safe, when measures are taken, most students simply try to fight the system for limiting their freedom, not appreciating that they're trying to protect them."

Fear of armed robberies in the dorms has also become an issue, but it's a fact that five out of six that have been reported this year on campus were drug related. That proves that it is not a case of security being the problem with danger wandering in and out, it just goes to show that trouble comes to trouble. In most cases, the attackers came for that one person, and because of that persons' own actions and lifestyle, not because they were randomly there to cause harm.

It responsibility rhetoric doesn't do much good, then perhaps the "money makes thing happen" approach will be more persuasive. Tens of thousands of dollars is wasted on having to replace equipment vandalized each year by students and visitors. A large part of UMass-Amherst's appeal is its excellent education for "less Benjamins" than schools such as BU or BC, however camera, training, repair costs of security alarms and other broken-sort money. Areas like parking on campus are state funded, however housing and security therein is its own entity, you get what you pay for and if it needs to be fixed, that's what your housing and fees go towards.

My friend Lauren, also an RA has seen her fair share of destruction of security procedures and suggested a mandated alternative to increasing everyone's housing costs for the vandalism of some. For instance, community billing in the dorms. When something is damaged on the 20th floor, make the 20th floor pay for it. Money makes things happen; including confessions. You'd be surprised how quickly people start remembering suspicious actions and people acting up when the costs will be coming out of their own pockets. And students will be more aware of the things that go on their floors.

For all the complaining of not feeling safe, when measures are taken, most students simply try to fight the system for limiting their freedom, not appreciating that they're trying to protect them. I remember two years ago when the idea was proposed to put a camera in the Coolidge-Kennedy quad of Southwest. All hell broke lose. Students cry that they don't want to be watched, but realize its not so someone at the UMPD station can sit and watch you walk to Hampshire dining hall in your short shorts and flip flops and violate your rights. It's with a hole about the size of a pin poked into it, with a flap to cover it. On top was a lid to keep the light off the film. To expose the film, one simply lifts the flap to allow light to strike the paper. The print is then developed in the darkroom. That was my method at least; hers may have been a bit more advanced, using a cartridge pinhole camera. The camera has no viewfinder and no way to focus. It's literally point and shoot at it's simplest.

I stared at the prints, examining the positions. I took ballet, so her shots don't look right to me. I do the poses out in the museum, trying to get them right as I look up. One of the girls in my photography class walks over. She's a dancer and corrects me. I look at her elegantly extending in the middle of the quiet museum. She's quite a contrast to the figure in the photos.

The body is shown from the stomach down, wearing only black "trunks" (a dance term), which are basically underwear as far as I'm concerned. The body is surrounded by a circular misty blackness, a ghostly quality created by the pinhole camera. She is almost overcome by shadows creeping up on her. In other images, a dark forest with spots of green expands back and to the left, a contrast compared to the harsh yellow light on her legs. The images themselves are really quite captivating.

In each image, the body is disfigured, awkwardly flailing out in the wrong positions. It's as if the legs cannot get the right stance and as if the hands realize this and stop trying altogether. The body is in the unkind glow of the spotlight yet it can't perform.

The artist words on the small piece of cardboard to the left of the prints read, "I am not this body. But I am. This is not my story. But it is." I tried going into my philosophical mode to critique and respond to this. The work seemed as if it's an expression of the artist's self pity that this body really is her. I read some more of her words: "There's all this stuff. But it gets in the way. You have to move it around. I've always had trouble with stuff." Not exactly what one might call profound wording, but I was trying to get the message behind it. However, all I could think was I'd wish she'd stop whining. Les goes on to complain about having to deal with her chaotic hair, learning to play the accordion, paying bills and bring itty for things. But this is what everyone has to deal with. Things the "stuff" of every day life. I wake up late on exam days, I have a credit card bill; I even managed to cut my hand on the toilet the other day; everyone has these small problems, and I couldn't find synpaths for her within myself – especially since she's famous enough to even be shown in a gallery.

The artist despairs and depicts this distorted struggling body who can't get the five ballet positions right. She sees the body's not hers and wishes it weren't through her depiction. But she knows it is. That body, captured by the light of a pinhole camera is her body – it's the body that deals with waking up on time and putting one foot in front of the other. We all have that problem, but we do it, and I'm sure it's not the most exciting point of the day. We are all that body and all share that story.

The statement connected with the artists work stated "The exhibited artists are not positing theories of seen making suggestions about who we are or why we are, but are rather allowing the viewer to share in private conversations that the artists are holding with their respective selves."

I read this and questioned if I had missed the point of the work and was just too shallow to see her true meaning? But by responding to such mundane and ordinary problems, I can't help but compare her to the rest of the world and not feel sorry for her.

Please bring your letters to the editor to our office in the campus center basement or email them to editorial@dailycollegian.com

The great emu escape

They're big birds, but they get frightened of the least thing," Coburn said. "There's nothing I could do about it. They're great runners and they're great jumpers."

Coburn said that the monstrous birds make great pets. "I can do anything with them," she said. "They wait for me and I pet them. I give them a run down every day."

She said that she originally got the birds from an emu farm in Whately, Mass.

The area SPCA took the two birds into custody after their capture. Unfortunately, the bird that was caught in Chicopee had to be put down after its leg was broken during the capture.

Coburn said that while she is sad to see them go, she doesn't see herself being able to take the other emu back anytime soon. Coburn thinks that repairing or replacing the destroyed pen would be a very difficult task.

She said that the SPCA has told her that they have found a good home for the surviving emu on another farm.

As for the police forces and all of the residents in both cities that caught a glimpse of the spectacle, they realize it's something they will most likely never see again.

"It's the first time I've ever dealt with an emu," Saj, a 20-year police vet, said. "I've raised all kinds of animals before, but I'd never seen an emu."

Hopefully, he enjoyed it. On the city streets of Chicopee and Holyoke, he probably will never see one again.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian columnist

"The feathery flash lit out through heavy traffic. It sprinted over a bridge and into the run-down industrial section of Holyoke, with Chicopee and Holyoke police behind it in hot pursuit."

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Jennifer Donovan's article on Nov. 8, 2002 entitled "Another three-day weekend."

Let me start by thanking Jennifer and every other UMass student who has voluntarily joined the armed services. However, I must take grave issue with the term "flag-burning cowards... hiding under the guise of political rights." To Jennifer I would ask, "Exactly what is it you're fighting for?" Are you a member of the armed services for the same reasons as you say veterans of the past were, for "patriotism, love of country and willingness to serve and sacrifice for the common good?" If so, I applaud you, as those are noble reasons. In fact, those are some of the very same reasons I am a political activist. I too have a dire love for my country and all mankind. While I do advocate for peace I realize that people don't always see eye to eye, and as my mother always says "better safe than sorry."

Just as you chose to serve your country, gun in hand, others, may choose to burn the flag. While I personally do not support this act, I do commend the bravery of those who do whatever action they feel necessary to help their fellow man. For you, see Jennifer, "flag-burning cowards," as you term them, must stand tall in the storm of criticism as they exercise democracy and speak their voice. Bravery and duty to one's country comes in many forms. Sometimes it's discovering the horror of machine guns and trench warfare, as was WWI, only to see WWII repeat the same horrors all too soon. Yet, more often then not, I feel the true struggle is putting aside the urge to condemn those we don't understand. To strive to accept people and their views, and live in harmony with them is a much greater challenge than simply calling them "cowards."

Though Veterans Day will have come and gone by the time you read this, rest assured that in the midst of my Monday prayers for my father, both grandfathers, brother-in-law, and countless other family members who have earned the title, "veteran" I will pray for you too. Hoping that someday every life tragically taken in war, will somehow lead to the one goal we all strive for, peace.

Matthew Callis
UMass student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.12.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

FAC's University Gallery winds down art exhibit

"Private Eyes: Image and Identity" up for basic analysis

1. ANN HAMILTON, "FACE TO FACE" 1992, THE SEAN KELLY GALLERY, N.Y.
2. BARBARA ESS, NO TITLE FROM COLLECTION SONDRA GILMAN GONZALEZ-FALLA AND CHENO GONZALEZ-FALLA

By Katy LoConte
COLLEGIAN STAFF

I walked into the University gallery for the first time on Thursday, quite shameful since I'm an art major. The current exhibit, "Private Eyes: Image and Identity," features the work of five contemporary artists and is running from Nov. 2 through Dec. 13. I browsed around for a bit, letting the images sink in.

I looked at five color photographs by artist Barbara Ess lining the white wall in front of me. "The Five Ballet Positions" was its title. It's obvious by looking at the pictures Ess has distorted the images, and by reading the small white card to my left, I found she has done so using a pinhole camera. This attracted me right away – pinhole cameras being the first tool I used when I really got into photography. The camera is what it sounds like. Mine was literally a round oatmeal container you walk to Hampshire dining hall in your short shorts and flip flops and violate your rights. It's with a hole about the size of a pin poked into it, with a flap to cover it. On top was a lid to keep the light off the film. To expose the film, one simply lifts the flap to allow light to strike the paper. The print is then developed in the darkroom. That was my method at least; hers may have been a bit more advanced, using a cartridge pinhole camera. The camera has no viewfinder and no way to focus. It's literally point and shoot at it's simplest.

I stared at the prints, examining the positions. I took ballet, so her shots don't look right to me. I do the poses out in the museum, trying to get them right as I look up. One of the girls in my photography class walks over. She's a dancer and corrects me. I look at her elegantly extending in the middle of the quiet museum. She's quite a contrast to the figure in the photos.

The body is shown from the stomach down, wearing only black "trunks" (a dance term), which are basically underwear as far as I'm concerned. The body is surrounded by a circular misty blackness, a ghostly quality created by the pinhole camera. She is almost overcome by shadows creeping up on her. In other images, a dark forest with spots of green expands back and to the left, a contrast compared to the harsh yellow light on her legs. The images themselves are really quite captivating.

In each image, the body is disfigured, awkwardly flailing out in the wrong positions. It's as if the legs cannot get the right stance and as if the hands realize this and stop trying altogether. The body is in the unkind glow of the spotlight yet it can't perform.

The artist words on the small piece of cardboard to the left of the prints read, "I am not this body. But I am. This is not my story. But it is." I tried going into my philosophical mode to critique and respond to this. The work seemed as if it's an expression of the artist's self pity that this body really is her. I read some more of her words: "There's all this stuff. But it gets in the way. You have to move it around. I've always had trouble with stuff." Not exactly what one might call profound wording, but I was trying to get the message behind it. However, all I could think was I'd wish she'd stop whining. Les goes on to complain about having to deal with her chaotic hair, learning to play the accordion, paying bills and bring itty for things. But this is what everyone has to deal with. Things the "stuff" of every day life. I wake up late on exam days, I have a credit card bill; I even managed to cut my hand on the toilet the other day; everyone has these small problems, and I couldn't find synpaths for her within myself – especially since she's famous enough to even be shown in a gallery.

The artist despairs and depicts this distorted struggling body who can't get the five ballet positions right. She sees the body's not hers and wishes it weren't through her depiction. But she knows it is. That body, captured by the light of a pinhole camera is her body – it's the body that deals with waking up on time and putting one foot in front of the other. We all have that problem, but we do it, and I'm sure it's not the most exciting point of the day. We are all that body and all share that story.

The statement connected with the artists work stated "The exhibited artists are not positing theories of seen making suggestions about who we are or why we are, but are rather allowing the viewer to share in private conversations that the artists are holding with their respective selves."

I read this and questioned if I had missed the point of the work and was just too shallow to see her true meaning? But by responding to such mundane and ordinary problems, I can't help but compare her to the rest of the world and not feel sorry for her.

Chamber of Secrets hits Friday

Will only fans be pleased?

By David Germain
Associated Press

Year two at Hogwarts certainly makes for better viewing than freshman year. Yet like any school calendar overstuffed with, well, school stuff, Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets starts dragging its tail around midterms.

After an hour and a half of generally brisk action, greatly improved special effects and a decent dose of dry British humor, it feels like time for director Chris Columbus to kick it into the home-stretch with a taut finale.

Instead, you're barely halfway through, and the next hour-plus of magic and mayhem might wear down all but the most indomitable "Harry Potter" fans. What happens in these stories just is not interesting enough to merit running times edging toward three hours.

(That said, stick around through the closing credits; if you've hung in this long, it's worth lingering to catch an amusing gag involving new cast member Kenneth Branagh.)

The keepers of the boy-wizard franchise decided long ago to be as inclusive as possible in the movies, seemingly a reasonable move to satisfy legions of young readers who want as verbatim a translation as possible from page to screen.

But a year ago, those kids groused anyway about omissions in Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone. They'll grouse the same about Chamber of Secrets, though it runs 2 hours, 41 minutes – nine minutes longer than the first film, so why not cut the cute but nonessential filler and bring Chamber of Secrets in at a brisk, breathless two hours?

Still, Chamber of Secrets is fairly fun despite its length. The movie nicely blends livelier humor and a darker tinge than Sorcerer's Stone, and the performances of Harry (Daniel Radcliffe) and pals Ron Weasley and Hermione Granger (Rupert Grint and Emma Watson) are much more self-assured and authentic.

While Columbus' Sorcerer's Stone essentially was a cinematic transcription of the book, he manages a bit more idiosyncrasy with Chamber of Secrets, while sticking to the letter of J.K. Rowling's narrative. Good casting for new characters, expanded roles for some returning ones, dazzling sets and effects, creepy creatures and amusing dialogue and sight gags all help light a spark lacking in the first film, for all its box-office success.

Harry's second year at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft

Turn to FILM, page 6

Film's effects on book lovers

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) – Fifth-grader Guido Girgenti couldn't wait to see the first "Harry Potter" movie and will probably see the second, which opens this week.

But something has been lost in the process.

"The first time I read the books, I was imagining in my mind how I thought it looked," he said. "After I saw the movie (last year), all I could imagine was scenes from the movie. I don't really like that."

Fans of J.K. Rowling have long created separate, personal pictures in their minds from reading her Harry Potter stories. But the singular images of Hollywood, filled with special effects and beamed larger than life on theater screens, can challenge – and sometimes destroy – what readers imagine on their own.

Guido and about 30 other fourth and fifth graders at P.S. 3 in downtown Manhattan talked recently about how the "Harry Potter" movies – Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone and Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets – affect the books.

"Just like Guido, I love the Harry Potter books, and I could imagine everything in my mind without having anybody tell me what it should be," said classmate Pace Lee. "After the movie, I read the books one more time and I couldn't think of anything except the movie scenes."

There's part in the first story when the main characters play a gigantic chess game, and when Pace read the book, he said, "I thought it was more like they became the pieces, instead of (in the movie) when they're riding the pieces."

The more memorable the film, the more it can overtake the written story. Few reading "Gone With the Wind" could now follow the adventures of Scarlett O'Hara without imagining Vivien Leigh, even if novelist Margaret Mitchell described her heroine as "not beautiful." But few reading "The Great Gatsby" will confuse the title character with Robert Redford or Alan Ladd, stars in two inferior film versions.

Some readers can't be blamed for picturing a

Turn to BOOK, page 6

Jennifer Lopez possibly engaged once more - is it everlasting love?

Her music sucks. Her acting is nothing to crow about. Her tendency toward men is enough to call her a "ho". Her name is Jennifer Lopez, a.k.a. "J. Lo."

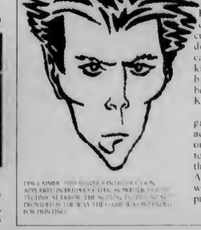
For weeks Lopez has had the paparazzi working overtime, writing and snapping pictures as she's been seen canoodling with her latest flame, ex Boston resident Ben Affleck. The rumor mill hasn't had it much easier.

It has been grinding and grating, as one juicy tidbit quickly follows another through the processing machines. A relationship hasn't caused this much commotion since Britney Spears and Justin Timberlake broke up earlier this year.

Lopez, 32, and Affleck, 30, have been photographed kissing everywhere over the past few months. On Tuesday, Lopez visited MTV's "Total Request Live" where she held up to the camera a flashy pink diamond on her ring finger. When host Carson Daly asked whether she planned to marry the star, Lopez answered, "I think everyone will know soon enough."

The already twice-married Lopez was probably referring to a lengthy interview with Diane Sawyer on ABC's "Primetime," airing tomorrow, in which she'll probably spill the beans about a planned wedding with Affleck. No doubt to help surge ratings, the network has been tight-lipped about the interview.

Affleck shows his affection for the singer-actress in the video for Lopez's new single, "Jenny I from the Block," kissing her on a hotel balcony, in a car, on a yacht. But considering their actual love life, the video doesn't stray too far from reality.



Who'd have thought Affleck is this stupid? Okay, Lopez is drop-dead gorgeous, but the longevity of her marriages and her embarrassingly bad

Six degrees of Kevin Bacon

Moderated by Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There is a joke within Hollywood and among movie-lovers everywhere that actor Kevin Bacon is connected to every other on-screen personality – past, current and upcoming – by only six degrees. (You've all seen the credit card commercial, right? Well, it's kind of like that.) From this, a brain-teasing game emerged, becoming known as Six degrees of Kevin Bacon.

The way to play is simple. Each game requires one to find two actors names – Kevin Bacon and one other. The goal of the game is to connect Bacon to this other actor through no more than six degrees. A "degree" in this game is an actor who starred in a movie with the preceding and following star.

For example, if the puzzle were Kevin Bacon and Kevin Spacey.

Here's how one might solved:

Kevin Bacon was in Apollo 13 with Tom Hanks.

Tom Hanks was in Road to Perdition with Jude Law.

Jude Law was in The Talented Mr. Ripley with Gwyneth Paltrow.

Gwyneth Paltrow was in Se7en with Kevin Spacey.

I have therefore connected Kevin Bacon to Kevin Spacey in four steps. Certainly, there can be more than one solution to a puzzle, but the concept of this game is every combination can be solved.

Here's this week's puzzle:

Kevin Bacon and Harrison Ford

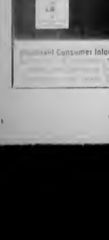
There are five possible answer routes. Turn the page for the list

Turn to SOUNDING OFF, page 6

Six degrees of Kevin Bacon

[illegible] KEST ROUTE
[illegible] with Brad Pitt.
[illegible] Duel' Chan with Harrison Ford.

[illegible] ROUTE (A.K.A. THE MOVIE FANATIC'S ROUTE)
[illegible] Days of Thunder with Tom Cruise.
[illegible] with Liam Neeson.
[illegible] Smuggler with Harrison Ford.



[illegible] ROUTE (THROUGH ALL NEW MOVIES)
[illegible] with Matt Dillon.
[illegible] McCord's w/ Liv Tyler.
[illegible] with Bruce Willis.
[illegible] with Michelle Pfeiffer.
[illegible] with Harrison Ford.

[illegible] ROUTE (WELL-KNOWN, OLDER MOVIES)
[illegible] with Sarah Jessica Parker.
[illegible] In Vegas with Nicolas Cage:
[illegible] with Sean Connery.
[illegible] The Last Crusade with Harrison Ford.

[illegible] ROUTE
[illegible] with Bill
[illegible] with Val

[illegible] of
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

Announcing Our New Amherst Site!
27 Pray Street · off Triangle Street
Now Open!

[illegible] Health provides
• [illegible] Contraception
• Pregnancy Testing
• HIV/STI Testing
• Breast Exams
• Birth Control
• Drug Tests

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential Family Planning Services Since 1973
8 Locations in Western Massachusetts

1-800-696-7752 www.tapestryhealth.org

Sounding Off

continued from page 5

JENNIFER LOPEZ IS PICTURED TO ANNOUNCE HER ENGAGEMENT TO FILM ACTOR BEN AFFLECK. SOON, IT'S GOING TO WONDER IF THIS ROMANCE IS DESTINED TO LAST.

Jennifer Lopez is proof to announce her engagement to film actor Ben Affleck. Soon, it's going to wonder if this romance is destined to last.

So, I'm sure Lopez has to say about her latest fling, even though we all know in her mind she's thinking "love don't mean a thing."

No doubt he's currently blowing even more smoke up her gigantic gigli. Too many overhead missions of the Pearl Harbor and Armageddon star have obviously damaged his brain cells. And, dammit, where's Matt Damon when you need him?

Her marriage to Judd seemed more like a swift attempt to salvage her career after splitting with a then-legally embroiled Sean "P. Diddy" Combs, whom she had been dating for more than two years. After intending her career in the 10 months of marriage to Judd, Lopez split with the choreographer (who has worked on several projects with the diva) in June. But before their divorce is even going to be finalized (Jan. 26), Lopez has supposedly already been engaged.

People magazine, quoting friends and sources, reports in its current issue the couple plans to tie the knot on Valentine's Day. Oh that's nice, on Valentine's Day in 2001, she dumps P. Diddy, and on Valentine's Day in 2003, she plans on getting hitched for the third time. Turns out the woman who proudly protests she's "real," is actually fake.

So I know I'll be watching tomorrow night to see what Lopez has to say about her latest fling, even though we all know in her mind she's thinking "love don't mean a thing."

film

continued from page 5

and Wizardry is a slow buildup to his rematch with the evil conjurer Voldemort, the bad guy who killed his parents and left that zigzag scar on his forehead, and whose butt Harry kicked in the first film.

Richard Harris' recent death makes his starch performance as Hogwarts master Dumbledore all the more poignant. Maggie Smith as crisp but kindly Professor McGonagall, Robbie Coltrane as noble behemoth Hagrid and Alan Rickman as sullen Professor Snape remain standouts among the adult cast.

Branagh provides great comic highlights as the preening dandy Gilderoy Lockhart, Hogwarts' new defense against-the-dark-arts teacher. I united to a few seconds on screen in the first film, Julie Walters is delightfully shrill this time as Mrs. Weasley, though John Cleese as the ghost Nearly Headless Nick remains a monotony.

Jason Isaacs, the loathsome British butcher of The Patriot, menacingly adds to his resume of villains as Lucius Malfoy, a bigoted wizard and father of Harry's school rival Draco (played with increasing obnoxiousness by Tom Felton). Shirley Henderson makes a quirky addition as Moaning Myrtle the ghost, who offers to share the toilet she haunts with Harry in case he gets killed.

Columbus plans to remain on as a producer for the franchise's third flick, Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban, due out in summer 2004. New director Alfonso Cuaron, who made 1995's A Little Princess and this year's racy Spanish language hit Y Tu Mama Tambien, will be kept on a short leash in terms of closely mirroring the novel, but he brings a fresh eye and playful style that bode well for Chapter three.

Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets, a Warner Bros. release is rated PG for scary moments, some creature violence and mild language.

Look for The Collegian's Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets review next Monday.

book

continued from page 5

movie star in their minds. For publishers, the "movie" has long been a favorite marketing technique using a famous face to sell hundreds of thousands books.

This fall, for example, Picador USA issued a special paperback edition of The Hours, a Pulitzer Prize winning novel being released as a movie starring Nicole Kidman, Meryl Streep and Julianne Moore, whose pictures appear on the book's cover.

It's like putting a new book out entirely, said Christine Preston, director of publicity at Picador.

But some, including Rowling's publisher, resist an obvious connection to the film. Scholastic Inc., which releases the Potter books in the United States, does not have any movie stills on the covers of the two books adapted so far.

The publishers decided the movie and the books were separate, and that Harry Potter was already well known without the movie," said Scholastic spokeswoman Judith Cornian.

Some students at P.S. 3 are avoiding certain movie adaptations, or hoping one doesn't get made.

Chloe Harrison loved Natalie Babbitt's "Tuck Everlasting," but is staying away from the new film version. She fears "it will ruin the whole thing for me." Lindsay O'Neill-Caffrey, a fan of "Snail Mail No More," by Paula Danziger and Ann M. Martin, thinks a movie would be a bad idea because it "wouldn't be as good."

Should Hollywood stop making movies out of the Potter books? Guido Gorgenti thinks they should leave it at two and let readers enjoy the latter novels on their own terms. But Pace Lee thinks the movies might as well go on – they help get more kids interested in the books and are great entertainment.

"Yes, the book is better," he said. "But it's fun to sit down in your seat with popcorn, Coke and see a movie."

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
TUESDAY - FRIDAY
BAJA'N CHEESE SKINS 2.75 4.48
FRIED SHRIMP TEMPURA 7.25 3.63
SWEET POTATO FRIES 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
10CMP WELCOME HERE
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
www.judiesrestaurant.com
31 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

Seven O's
Rt. 116, Sunderland · next to Cliffside Apts
• DJ Every Tuesday
• Every Wednesday Karaoke
• Live Music Every Friday & Saturday
6 Televisions
FoozeBall
Air Hockey
2 Pool Tables
Draft Specials
Bud, Bud Light, & Coors Light
Pitchers $5.00
No Cover Charge w/ Student ID
Free Seven0's T-Shirt for 21st B-Day
Food, Prizes and Live Music after the Game.
Come and Party with US

Interested in Business?
The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

WIRELESS SAVINGS!
SAVE $40.00
Introducing the Sony Ericsson T61C
The New Look of Reliability
$69.99 Regular Price
$30.00 Mail-in Rebate
$10.00 Instant Rebate
$29.99 Your Cost
With new 1 year agreement. Some restrictions apply.
• Personalize your phone with snap-on front and back color covers and customizable ring tones
• Keep in touch with two-way text messaging
• Surf the web with the five-way joy stick and soft keys
The T61C makes calling fun and easy!
4000 Night & Weekend Anytime Minutes when on the America's Choice Network
Plus
1000 Anytime Mobile To Mobile
Minutes to call any of our 30 million customers nationwide on compatible mobile to mobile network.
AMERICA'S CHOICE
FOR $39.99
300 anytime minutes monthly access
With 1 or 2 year agreement
Unlimited nationwide long distance. No roaming charges coast-to-coast.
All when calling on the America's Choice® network.
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 69¢/min. COMA® month phone off supplied by Verizon required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless
www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley 322 Russell St. 413.587.3248
Holyoke 50 Holyoke Mall 413.533.2500
verizon wireless
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri, 9:01pm-5:59am Sat, 12am-Sun, 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and rate plans. $175 early termination fee applies. Requires credit approval. Cannot be combined with other service promotions. Usage and allowances lost. Mobile to mobile calls depicted by calls made during night and weekend hours. Subject to taxes & other charges. Equipment and other restrictions apply. See brochure and sales representative for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless.

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003
Negril and Montego Bay
Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710 www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services 1.800.648.4849 www.ststravel.com

Bartenders Have More Spirit! Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
• Only [illegible] in Western MA
• Hands-on training [illegible]
• National [illegible]
• Lifetime [illegible]
• ID Card
• Resume
• Special UMass [illegible]
• Convenient location in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888
www.bostonbartender.com

STUDENT TRAVEL
get hyped for spring break '03
Jamaica.....$729
Cancun.....$649
Amsterdam...$509
Paris.....$485
Includes air & accommodations from Boston. Prices are per person. Some taxes & fees not included. Other departure cities and destinations available.
44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> ON THE STREET

UMass falls in A-10 final

By Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN STAFF

On Nov. 9, the Massachusetts field hockey team was in a familiar place – the Atlantic 10 championship. But unlike the last six years, it was the underdog.

Playing for their seventh consecutive A-10 title, the 5-17 Minutewomen entered the tourney seeded second due to their 4-2 mark in the conference.

After defeating West Chester (9-10, 4-3 A-10) 2-1 in the semifinals, UMass fell to Richmond 4-1 in the A-10 finals. After their worst season in history, many people did not expect the team to make it this far.

Richmond	4
UMass	1
UMass	2
West Chester	1

"We kind of proved everyone wrong by making it to the A-10 tournament, then to the championship. We gained respect there," senior captain Erika Whiston said.

Before the Maroon and White played for the championship, it needed to get by West Chester on Friday in Richmond, Va. Tied up 1-1 after the half, sophomore Danielle Carrier scored the game-winning goal at the 53:12 mark for the 2-1 win. Carrier was assisted by senior Sarah Bohonowicz.

UMass was on the scoreboard first when freshman Jamie Bawden scored at the 19:05 mark in the opening period. After sorting through the mess in front of the West Chester's net, Bawden was able to sneak one past Golden Rams netminder Carrie Hanshue. Bawden's score was her last goal of the season, finishing with a team-leading six goals.

The lead didn't last for long, as two minutes later the Golden Rams tied the game at one off a penalty corner. West Chester's Kendra Wood recorded her third goal of the season with assists credited to Stacey Tomes and Liz Morrow.

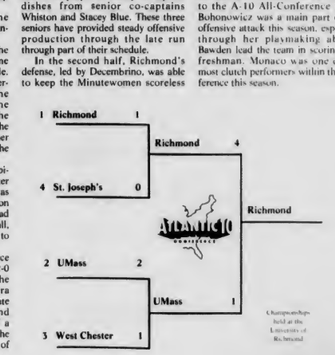
In a battle of the goaltenders, Hanshue and UMass' cageminder Ashley Egland finished almost even in the contest. Hanshue came up with five saves, but allowed two goals, while Egland had four saves, giving up only a single goal.

The victory extended the Minutewomen's A-10 tournament winning streak to 13 games.

The championship was set for the best team to challenge the six-time defending champs for the A-10 title. Richmond was 16-6 overall with a perfect record within the A-10. The Spiders proved too strong for the Minutewomen to overthrow for the right to the A-10 throne. This was the first time in seven years a team other than UMass was the champion of the A-10.

"It felt good to go to the championship, but it would have been better to win," Whiston said. "Our goal was to make to the tournament all season long. I'm glad we made it there instead of not being in the tournament at all, but it still would have been better to win."

Richmond showed its dominance early as it jumped out to an early 2-0 lead. Under seven minutes after the opening whistle, sophomore Laura Huff scored off a feed from classmate Kristin Gavin. The Maroon and White's young defense held off a penalty corner, but couldn't collect the rebound as A-10 Defensive Player of the Year Lindsey Decembrino put it away for the 2-0 advantage after 14 minutes of action. Decembrino was also named the Championship's Most Outstanding Player.



Richmond's attack kept the pressure on as it collected another goal 21 minutes into the game. Sandeep Kaur scored the goal to give the Spiders a commanding 3-0 lead.

With under five minutes to go until halftime, Bohonowicz got UMass on the board to make the score 3-1 at the half. The play was nicely set up off dishes from senior co-captains Whiston and Stacey Blue. These three seniors have provided steady offensive production through the late run through part of their schedule.

In the second half, Richmond's defense, led by Decembrino, was able to keep the Minutewomen scoreless for the final period. Gavin finished a nice championship performance with the back-breaking goal. She finished with three points on the day (1 goal, 1 assist). The Spiders ran away with the 4-1 win and the A-10 Championship.

Freshman Patricia Borneo, sophomore Heather Kenney and sophomore Adrianne Monaco from UMass were recognized with All-Tournament Team honors.

Three other UMass players were given honors this week. Bohonowicz, Bawden and Monaco were all named to the A-10 All-Conference team. Bohonowicz was a main part of the offensive attack this season, especially through her playmaking ability. Bawden lead the team in scoring as a freshman. Monaco was one of the most clutch performers within the conference this season.

Championships held at the University of Richmond

goalies

continued from page 10

standing performances. The diminutive Winer entered UMass after a stellar career at Governor Dummer Academy, which earned him the Boston Bruins' John Carlton Award – given annually to Massachusetts high school hockey's top scholar-athlete – as well as an All-New England selection.

Howard, meanwhile, was even more heralded prior to his collegiate career. The former U.S. National Development star had already been acquainted with the Minutemen before donning the Black Bear uniform, as he guided the U.S. NTDP to a 4-1 victory over the Minutemen in February, making 28 saves in the game.

Howard was relatively untested in early portions of the game, but made a key stop after a Maine turnover on the crossbar.

Moore had a chance on a two-on-one in the third period, but Winer's positioning forced him to push the puck wide. Then later in the third, an off-angle shot by Moore found its way through a screen, but Winer slid to his left and denied the rookie. Then Winer snuffed out the rebound attempt by Lawson and covered up for a faceoff.

The Minutemen got several late chances on Howard, but for the most part were kept to the outside by the Black Bear defense. Their best chances came as a result of relentless forechecking, something that has become a trademark of the 2002-03 Minutemen.

"I think they're much improved," Whitehead said of the Minutemen. "I like how they play. I like how they compete. Mauldin's just a great player, they're just a good team, they're playing as a team. We knew we were going to have our hands full tonight, and fortunately we got out of there with the two points."

Howard last allowed a goal on Oct. 18, when Colorado College's Tom Preissing put an even strength goal past him in the third period. The 3-0 CC victory also represents Maine's only loss of the season. Since then, he has faced more than 50 shots, turning all of them away.

hockey

continued from page 10

FRESHMAN CHRIS CAPRARO HAS COME THROUGH ON HIS REPUTATION AS A PLAYMAKER SO FAR THIS SEASON.

Styles by Deborah

Featuring Foil Highlights & Designer Haircuts for Students
Complementary consultation with every visit
$10 off Foils and Style Haircuts with student ID
$5 off Clipper Cuts with student ID
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

AMHERST HAIRSTYLISTS
Haircuts and Clipper Cuts
Grand Opening Special $10 (until Nov. 21)
$20 Shampoo & Cut, $15 Student Rate
Highlights & Color from $45
Walk-ins welcome
40 Main Street, Amherst
253-1200

Matchmaker, Matchmaker... Make me a match!
SINGLE SEARCH West & Central Mass
Can Help You Find Your Soulmate!
♥ Designed by a marriage counselor
♥ Easy and affordable
♥ Safe and respectable
♥ Unique two-way compatibility matching system
Single Search welcomes people from all lifestyles and backgrounds.
Contact us for a FREE Consultation & Brochure
www.massingles.com
massingles@aol.com
413-665-3218

DISCOVER the WORLD!
Have the Adventure of a Lifetime... while you serve in one of over 70 developing countries around the globe in programs in
PEACE CORPS
Education, Business, Environment, Agriculture, Health & Community Development
Visit the Peace Corps Recruiter
Office: 481 Hills South, UMass
Telephone: 545-2105
Email: peacecorps@educ.umass.edu
Apply online: www.peacecorps.gov

New WORLD Theater
Mixtures
An Evening of Solo Works by Nilaja Sun
Wed. & Thu. Nov. 13 & 14, 2002
8 pm, Bowker Auditorium
Infused with a flair for subtle humor and deep empathy, Nilaja Sun explores the themes of coming-of-age, mortality and the post 9-1-1 tatters of America where fear and suspicion permeate the social fabric.
Tickets for NWT shows are: $15-general public; $8-seniors & low income patrons; $5-students. For tickets call the FAC Box Office, 413.545.2511
www.newworldtheater.org

UMass Amherst Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships
$2,000!!
Applicants must be full-time sophomore and junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Four scholarships will be awarded and each recipient will receive $2,000. A complete application must include a resume, an unofficial academic transcript, essay and a letter of reference.
Applications must be completed and returned to the Alumni Relations Office by Friday, November 22nd at 5 p.m.
For more information, please contact Melanie Corbeil at 545-2317or mcorbeil@admin.umass.edu
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS AMHERST

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
— The Pizza Alternative® —
256-1616

D.P. Dough = Great Calzones + Fast Delivery + Low Prices
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apartment for Rent Start 1/1 2 bdrm. In Sunderland $820 utilities included on Bus Rt Call 665-2359

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0590 582-9103

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

91 Acclaim Luxury Edition needs work $350. 545-0547

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 850-982-5922

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@map-wares.com 584-7750

LOST AND FOUND

Cat found UMass Campus Black & white domesticated with flea collar

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TRANSPORTATION

Need A Ride Home For Thanksgiving? Catch a Deluxe Charter Bus to the Boston Area!! Buses leave on Tues, Nov. 26th or Weds, Nov 27th, Returning to UMASS on Sun, Dec 1st Round Trip Fare $49 Visa & Mastercard accepted Visit www.BeanTownBus.com or call 1-866-423-2686 for more deta

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get

TRAVEL

Group- Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRean.com

TRAVEL

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD COULD GO HERE! ADVERTISE TODAY! COME DOWN TO THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT!

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	ABC/13
4	NBC/6
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Channel
8	WB/22
9	ITN/35
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	CNN/19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Court TV Channel
22	CNN
23	CNN/HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	ZMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Telemundo
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

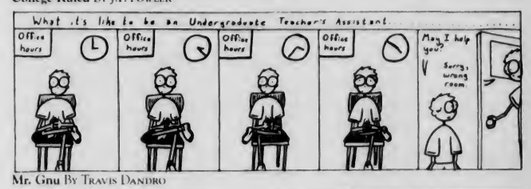
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

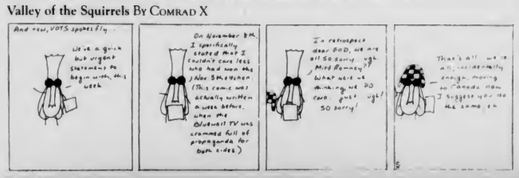
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



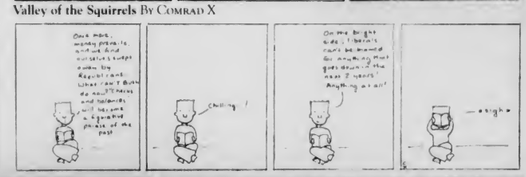
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler



The Freshmen By Eric Leger

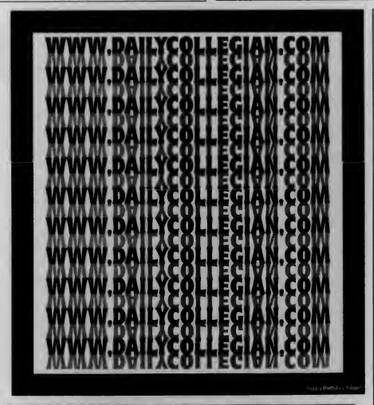


Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day



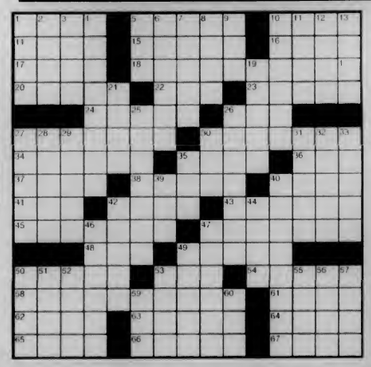
"Ready are you? What know you of ready? For eight hundred years have I trained Jedi. My own counsel will I keep on who is to be trained!" -Yoda

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 57 LOW: 38	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33	HIGH: 49 LOW: 31

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – You should surround yourself with people who give you continual affirmation – whether they know it or not.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may have to wait throughout the day for the information you need.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your ideas may be challenged today; and it's important for you to hold your ground.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Contact from someone far from home will inspire you to do something that is uncharacteristic.
PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – If you find that you're talking to yourself today, you'll surely want to listen because your telling yourself something important.
ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – Someone may be taking you seriously today when you are just playing around.
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Stay on track today despite any attempts the competition might mount to pull you away from your desired course.
GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – Take care that you don't attempt to say something directly opposite to your body language.
CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – What usually would have been a clear cut situation will get a little fuzzier.
LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – You can prove yourself an excellent listener today if you stop being so stubborn.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – Take care that you don't blow your own horn today.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You can score a number of points if you simply cater to the needs of a loved one.



Atlantis
41 Belmont Walk, Amherst 253-9015
DRINKS AT 9, LAST SEATING AT 9
AMHERST'S HOTTEST NEW NIGHT-CLUB AND RESTAURANT WITH DJs SPINNING VINYL SIX NIGHTS A WEEK, 10:30 TILL 1 AM.
TUESDAY: Greek Night
WEDNESDAY: Hip Hop and Top 40
THURSDAY: Hip Hop and R&B
FRIDAY: "House On The Rocks"
SATURDAY: Hip Hop / Reggae
SUNDAY: Drum & Bass

ACROSS
1 Tubular pasta
5 Yakked
10 Dove into second
14 Idyllic spot
15 Acid in proteins
16 Halo, of sorts
17 Shoal
18 Caller's annoyance (2 wds.)
20 Web site
22 Open meadow
23 Fluff, as hair
24 More accommodating
26 Falstaff's prince
27 Discernment
30 "Odyssey" nymph
34 Give comfort
35 Wacky
36 Melancholy
37 Join forces
38 Making do
40 Kind of eagle
41 — — moment's notice
42 Stagehand
43 Free from doubt
45 Positive
47 Woolgatherer
48 Insurance go
49 Swells, as a river
50 Blizzard
53 Koan discipline
54 Hunt
58 Be persuaded (2 wds.)
61 Have a hunch
62 Circle size
63 Al — of Indy fame
64 Natural impulse
65 Repair
66 Economically disadvantaged
67 Fail to win

DOWN
1 None
2 Theory
3 Football stands
4 Boundlessness
5 Quick punch
6 Charm
7 More sensible
8 "Omnoco Flow" singer
9 PC system
10 Prudently
11 Moon goddess
12 Subj. of rollovers
13 Wide valley
19 Tiber locale
21 Yearning sound
25 Limey's toast
26 Closet items
27 Asimov of sci-fi
28 "48 Hours" lead
29 Clean energy
30 Tin container
31 Choir selection
32 Ointment
33 More unusual
35 Pep
39 Reunion crowd
40 Arrogant
42 — globulin
44 Goose formations
46 Tailor's need
47 Instilled
49 Be frugal
50 Fraudulent scheme
51 Zoomed
52 "May it not be an —"
53 Region
55 Space precedes
56 Chair parts
57 MOMA artist
59 Compete in a 10K
60 Like a dessert

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Six Bean Soup

Chicken Tetrazzini

BBQ Beef Sandwich

Curried Vegetables (vegan)

DINNER

Six Bean Soup

Grilled Pork Chops

Turkey Divan

Grilled Portabella Mushroom Steaks (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Technician	Esther Danig
Copy Editor	Glen Straub
Production Supervisor	Scott Cirusu
Production Staff	Sarah Lloyd Elizabeth Bishop

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass takes A-10 title

Despite loss, Minutemen bring home first place

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It wasn't a big bump in the road, but it was a bump nonetheless.

URI	2
UMass	1

The Massachusetts men's soccer team dropped a 2-1 decision to Rhode Island Saturday in the last regular season game for both teams. While the Minutemen me the top seed for this weekend's Atlantic 10 Tournament, they no doubt didn't intend to end the regular season in such a fashion.

DESPITE A LOSS ON SATURDAY, YURI MORALES AND HIS TEAMMATES FINISHED ATOP THE A-10 STANDINGS.

The Rams outshot the Minutemen 21-16, and despite sonic inspired play in the early part of the second half, UMass found itself outplayed by Rhody – a team that needed to win just to keep its playoff hopes alive.

With a Percy Belleh goal in the 86th minute, Rhode Island took a 2-1 lead and held off a late UMass charge for the win. Belleh found himself underneath a ball that popped up in traffic, just inside the 18-yard box, and beat UMass goalkeeper Enzo Altomare on the far side for the go-ahead tally.

The Belleh goal capped off a second half surge by the Rams. Down 1-0, Rhode Island tied the score when sophomore Sasha Gotsmanov one-timed a crossing feed from senior Peter Benevides past Altomare at 77:30. His goal came on the counter attack from a UMass scoring chance generated when senior Yuri Morales fed classmate Jeff Deren on the right side of the penalty box.

"We had a couple of chances," UMass Head Coach Sam Koch said, "but they had a lot more than we did. We just didn't play well."

The game was scoreless for the first 68 minutes, until Morales took a cross from junior Polly Myers on an end run, held the ball patiently while the Rhode Island defense overcompensated and blasted the ball past URI keeper Dean Ruddy.

The early parts of the match weren't without drama, however.

UMass put pressure on Ruddy early on, when Myers worked a give and go just before the 13 minute mark, but the shot was saved. URI countered 10 minutes later, when it earned a corner kick that was kept out by a heroic defensive effort from UMass junior Devlin Barnes, who hugged the left post and kept at least one shot from crossing the line before clearing it away. The Rams received another corner just seconds later, but it was dispatched on the first touch by the Minutemen defense.

Altomare also 3upped in for the Minutemen, making a diving stop to his right at 55:30 for one of his three saves on the day.

Myers gave the game some excitement at 58:30, when a loose ball forced Ruddy off his line and into a foot race with the speedy UMass forward. Myers reached the ball first, and put a shot toward the goal from 35 yards out, but managed only to hit the side of the net.

"The first half, we struggled a little bit," senior Jeff Deren said. "In the second half, we got back to basics and just played the way we usually play. Once we got a rhythm and got into the flow of play, everything came easier for us. We created a couple more chances."

With the amount of time before a goal was scored, tensions ran high and play became chippy, resulting in a card for each team – to URI's Mohamed Keita at 27:59, and to Myers at 88 minutes.

"It was a game they had to win," Koch said, "and it was a game we wanted to win. I give them credit. They did what they had to do."

The loss came on an already emotional day for the Minutemen, who honored the nine seniors on the team in pregame ceremonies.

"You want it real bad," Deren said. "It's the last home game you're ever going to play in the stadium. It's over and done with now, and you can't have it back. All week, all morning, your entire four years here, you think about, what's it like, the last home game of your senior year, and here it is."

While the loss leaves a bitter taste in the mouths of the Minutemen, Koch saw an upside to Saturday's defeat.

"The great thing about today is that we hadn't lost in 12 games," Koch said, "and we forgot how we got to where we were, so this was a good wake up for us."

Deren agreed.

"This happened last year, we lost the last game of the season. This is really a wake up call for us, to let us know what teams are going to be like in the tournament next week."

It came with a bitter taste, but the Maroon and White still took the regular season Atlantic 10 title, and square off against George Washington on Friday as the tourney's top seed.

JUNIOR DAN COLWELL AND THE MINUTEMEN WILL BEGIN THEIR SEARCH FOR ANOTHER TRIP TO THE NCAAS AS THE NUMBER ONE SEED IN THE A-10 TOURNEY.

Alfond heartbreaker

Maine wins nailbiter in Hockey East debut

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ORONO, Me. – Nearly one year ago, the Massachusetts hockey team marched into Tsongas Arena for a matchup against UMass-Lowell, which was riding the scorching play of goaltender Cam McCormick. The Minutemen outplayed the River Hawks, dominating them for most of the latter part of the game, but could not solve McCormick, who set the school record for consecutive shutout minutes in a 1-0 victory.

Maine	1
UMass	0

One year later, it was a different team, different venue, different place, but the same result, as the Minutemen (2-4-0, 1-3-0 HE) arrived in Alfond Arena faced with the task of solving rookie sensation Jimmy Howard, but went home on the short end of a hard-fought 1-0 contest against Maine (6-1-1, 1-0-0 HE).

"We played real hard," UMass Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "We were a little bit careless, kind of running around silly in the first period, but we were a little bit more responsible in the second and third."

Howard made 20 saves for his third consecutive shutout, setting a Maine record by not allowing a goal in 187:23, breaking the previous mark set in 1996 by Blair Allison at 147:53. Howard has allowed just four goals this season, and improved his goals against average to a microscopic 0.85 and his save percentage to .959.

"His composure is exceptional, I'm really happy for him," Maine Head Coach Tim Whitehead said of Howard. "He's worked very hard and has had a great positive attitude, and I think that's one of the reasons he's been successful, and he's just going to get better and better. He'll work hard, and good things will continue to happen to him."

Colin Shields scored the only goal of the night for the Black Bears, his eighth in as many games this season. Shields came in on a three-on-two break and took a shot from a near-impossible angle. He found a hole short side that nicked off the inside post and in past UMass freshman goaltender Gabe Winer.

"It was a good shot, a tough angle shot," Winer said.

"We've been very anxious to get into Hockey East," Whitehead said. "The first four weeks have been non conference, we wished we had two games this weekend, but we only had one, so it was a little bit like football, you prepare all week for one game, but we played well, I thought the effort was there from both teams."

Winer was incredibly solid in the contest, saving 24 of 25 shots he faced to keep the Maroon and White step for step with Maine, which has now defeated UMass in all 18 contests it has hosted between the two teams. He received conference honors for the second week in a row, bringing home the Hockey East Defen1ive Player of the Week Award.

"I think saves, like hits, can energize a team," Winer said.

The worst victims of Winer's magic were senior Lucas Lawson and freshman Greg Moore. Lawson was denied twice in the first period, busting past the Minuteman defense and cutting to the front of the net. But his backhand stuff was neutralized by Winer's left pad as he moved across the crease. Less than five minutes later, Lawson was forced high by the freshman goaltender, and he put the puck over

Turn to HOCKEY, page 7

Freshmen Howard, Winer steal the show in Orono

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ORONO, Me. – If you're a fan of high-octane, lamp-lighting hockey, then let's just say that this weekend's game between Massachusetts and Maine would not be your cup of tea.

Gabe Winer and Jimmy Howard established themselves as two of the brightest stars in Hockey East Saturday night, as they wowed the Alfond Arena crowd with save after spectacular save in the Black Bears' 1-0 victory over the Minutemen. The highly touted rookies turned aside 44 of 45 total shots in contest.

"I thought it was a great hockey game, close all the way," Maine Head Coach Tim Whitehead said. "If you're a fan of goaltending, it certainly was a thrill tonight."

The matchup was a far cry from last season's trip to Orono, in which the Maroon and White was thrashed twice by the eventual national runner-up. The Black Bears scored seven goals in each of the weekend's two games, as the goaltending duo of Mike Johnson and Tim Warner was pelted throughout the weekend.

But Winer would ensure history would not repeat itself, as Colin Shields' sharp angle laser was the only attempt that would scrape the netting.

"He just sniped it," Winer said of the Scotland native's NHL-caliber blast.

From the start, the freshman showed the poise of a crafty veteran, keeping the Bears off the scoreboard and the Minutemen in the game after the first period, a vital part of playing in any hostile barn.

Winer totaled five saves through 20 minutes, including a beautiful pad stop on speedster Lucas Lawson just outside the crease, but it was his stop on junior Todd Jackson that perhaps was the most crucial save of the night.

Late in the second period, a UMass turnover on the power play allowed Jackson to break in alone from center ice on Winer. The junior tried to elude the Minuteman backstop by deking to his backhand and fitting the puck top-shelf, but Winer would have none of it. By turning aside the shorthanded attempt, the UMass hopes for victory remained in tact.

It's no surprise, however, that Winer (Hockey East Defensive Player of the Week) and Howard (HE Rookie of the Week) were able to muster up such out

Turn to GOALIES, page 7

GRAHAM LINGE/COLLEGIAN

GABE WINER EARNED HOCKEY EAST DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK HONORS FOR TURNING ASIDE 24 MAINE SHOTS ON SATURDAY.

Lewis, Wildcats stun Minutemen

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

DURHAM, N.H. – New Hampshire's Stephan Lewis has a history of beating on the Massachusetts football team. Heading into Saturday's contest with the Minutemen, the senior tailback had earned a pair of Bill Knight Trophies, given to the most valuable player in the UMass-UNH contest.

UNH	31
UMass	14

Now Lewis will have to clear some more mantle space, as he added Knight Trophy number three this weekend for his dominating performance in the Wildcats' (3-6, 2-5 Atlantic 10) 31-14 win over the Minutemen (7-3, 5-2 A-10).

Lewis ran 47 times for 186 yards and two touchdowns and caught five passes for 50 yards and one touchdown in the victory.

"I said earlier in the week that if he got it 40 times, we were going to be in trouble and that's basically what happened," UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple said after the game.

"He's a great player," Whipple added. "I think anybody in the country probably could have had three touchdowns against us today... we didn't make him work for it. That's probably what's most disappointing."

In his final three games against the Maroon and White, Lewis has carried the ball 107 times for 701 yards.

"He's had a great career and certainly UMass has had a lot to do with his career," Whipple said of Lewis, who has gained more than 20 percent of his career games rushing yards (703) in his four career games – 10 percent of his career games played – against UMass. Lewis has rushed for 3487 yards in 40 games in his college history.

"I'm playing UMass there[is nothing special [that changes the way I play]," Lewis said. "But a lot of the guys joked with me earlier and said that they wished we could play UMass every week if I was going to come out and play like this."

The Wildcats jumped out to a 7-0 lead after UMass freshman quarterback Tim Day fumbled a snap on his own three-yard line and UNH recovered.

"That gave [New Hampshire] the momentum," Whipple said of his team's first of five turnovers.

Day was starting in place of junior Jeff Krohn, who was sidelined after suffering his second concussion in three weeks against Delaware last week.

Four plays after the fumble, Lewis pounded the ball in for the game's first points.

After a UMass three-and-out, the Wildcats drove down the field to the Maroon and White eight-yard line, but quarterback Mike Granieri's pass attempt to Lewis was picked off by Anton McKenzie and taken 96 yards for a touchdown and a tie game.

UNH answered right back with a long, 12-play, 65-yard drive that took up 4:13 and ended with Lewis running up the middle for his second score.

The Wildcats then picked off Day when receiver Joe Bruce tipped a pass up in the air and linebacker E.J. DeWitt hauled it in. Granieri hit tight end Carl Betz three plays later to put his team up for good.

Day was uninterrupted three more times in his first collegiate start. But No. 16 refused to make that an excuse for his play.

"I have to take some responsibility after that," Day said. "I can't sit here and say that [I struggled] because it's my first start."

With a 31-7 lead at halftime, the Wildcats played very conservatively in the second half. Granieri attempted just nine passes after the break – mostly on third downs, while Lewis ran the ball 23 times for 99 yards.

UMass cut the lead to 31-14 on a seven-yard touchdown pass to freshman running back R.J. Cobbs, but couldn't get any closer as the Wildcats were able to run out the clock and cause the Minuteman offense to make mistakes.

Cobbs was one of the few bright spots of the game for the Maroon and White, as his 16-carry, 78-yard performance gave him 791 on the season, a new record for freshmen rushing yardage in a season.

Whipple said that he's just going to try to move right past Saturday's ugliness.

"I just count this as an off week," the Brown alum said. "Nobody got hurt and we didn't hit anybody."

The Minuteman offense certainly seemed to have the week off, as the team's time of possession reached just 18:58 to UNH's 41:02.

"We did a very good job of handling the football for the amount of snaps we had," Wildcat Head Coach Sean McDonnell said after his team ran off 92 offensive plays.

RIVETING ROSES
ARTS PAGE 5.
HAPPY 21ST?
ED. OP PAGE 4.
STORM WATCH
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FORTY-NINE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.13.02

SGA to discuss student support

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A Resolution and Enactment in support of transgender bathrooms is on the agenda for tonight's Student Government Association Senate meeting.

The Resolution and Enactment will ask for the SGA's support in designating transgender bathroom facilities on campus as well as requesting that action be taken by the Administration to install such bathroom facilities. The Resolution was first addressed and then later written, by the Public Policy and Relations committee.

"The meeting should be interesting," Speaker Dan Saunders said. "I know it's a really sticky issue and it also deals with public safety. We support all students short, tall, pink, purple and if it helps students feel more comfortable and safe then I'm all for it."

Debate over the issue has yet to be overruled, as members of the Senate expressed the controversy behind the issue. Saunders explained that he felt the motion will call for debate, but was unclear as to what the University's overall policy was on the bathroom facilities.

"It's going to spark some interesting debate," Saunders said. "I'm not sure on the University's stance, but we don't want people to have to hide who they are, and we are in no position to tell people how to live their lives."

Associate Speaker Matt Pelnar agreed by explaining that he felt the Resolution and Enactment would be controversial within the Senate because some Senators are opposed to the idea.

"I think it's going to be pretty controversial because not everyone is a fan of the idea," Pelnar said.

Additional motions on the agenda include dealing with the Finance Committee and funding allocations.

Other topics the SGA will discuss is a meeting taking place this Friday with SGA members from the University of Massachusetts Lowell, Dartmouth and Boston.

Members of the SGA Executive Cabinet as well as Senate will be meeting with the other SGAs in a joint effort to discuss matters affecting all the UMass campuses.

"It will be good to get on the same page as the other Universities," Saunders said. "Hopefully we can put together a stronger coalition and work together for a long time."

Members of the SGA Executive Cabinet and Senate will also be meeting with union leaders today to discuss student well being. After last weeks Board of Trustees meeting, members of the SGA expressed concerns regarding the unions message toward the board.

"After the trustee meeting we were a little uncertain of what message they were sending," Saunders said. "We're going to sit down and make sure we understand where everyone is coming from."

Issues surrounding student fees and overall student morale will also be discussed. Saunders expressed concern regarding where the money would be coming from if the Commonwealth of Massachusetts did not overturn their vetoed pay increases.

"There wouldn't be a union without students and if they don't get their money we can't let students get hit with more fees," Saunders said. "We just want to ensure that students won't get hit more than they already have been."

The Senate will convene tonight at 7 p.m. in room 174 in the Campus Center.

Iraq might refuse resolution

IRAQI PARLIAMENT MEMBERS VOTE AGAINST THE U.N. RESOLUTION ON ARMS INSPECTIONS DURING THEIR SECOND DAY OF EMERGENCY SESSION IN BAGHDAD TUESDAY. THE PARLIAMENT RECOMMENDED REJECTION OF THE U.N. RESOLUTION ON WEAPONS INSPECTORS, SAYING THE FINAL DECISION RESTS ON IRAQI PRESIDENT SADDAM HUSSEIN.

By Walid Saleh
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) – Iraq's parliament recommended Tuesday that President Saddam Hussein reject the new U.N. weapons inspection resolution, but the Iraqi leader's son offered a way out – make Arabs part of the U.N. team.

Odai Saddam Hussein's proposal, which echoes one from the Arab League, didn't impress Washington. The United States insists Iraq accept the U.N. resolution without quibbling in order to avoid war. The final decision rests with Saddam, who must respond to the United Nations by Friday.

"There's nothing in this resolution that is negotiable," Sean McCormack, President Bush's spokesman, said in Washington.

Bush scoffed at the Iraqi parliament's rejection of the U.N. resolution.

"If Saddam Hussein does not comply to the detail of the resolution, we will lead a coalition to disarm him," Bush said Tuesday in Washington.

U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan said he would be happy to accept Iraq's response to the U.N. resolution anytime before the end of the day Friday, the U.N.-imposed deadline.

"We haven't fixed any precise time, but I think everybody will be satisfied if we got a letter ... by the end of the day on the 13th," Annan told reporters.

Iraqi representatives, who must pledge loyalty to Saddam to earn a place in the 250-seat parliament, voted unanimously Tuesday to recommend rejecting the U.N. resolution.

Parliament Speaker Saadoun Hammadi described the vote as "a message to the United States that the people of Iraq are united behind their leadership, and it also shows that the people of Iraq know that in the U.N. resolution ... there are major allegations which are baseless."

The parliamentary resolution went on to say the "political leadership" should "adopt what it considers appropriate to defend the Iraqi people and Iraq's independence and dignity, and authorizes President Saddam Hussein to adopt what he sees as appropriate, expressing our full support for his wise leadership."

Russia's Interfax news agency quoted Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Yuri Fedotov as calling on Baghdad "to exercise self-control and pragmatism" by accepting U.N. Resolution 1441, which would open the way for the return of weapons inspectors to Iraq.

In the clearest such statement yet from France, Foreign Minister Dominique de Villepin said on France-Inter radio that force would be used against Saddam if he does not cooperate with U.N. weapons inspectors. France had opposed making the recourse to force automatic.

Meanwhile, The New York Times reported Tuesday that Iraq has ordered large amounts of atropine, a drug that can be used to counter the effects of nerve gas, mainly from Turkish suppliers. The Times, quoting Bush administration officials, said the United States is pressing Turkey to stop the sales.

"If the Iraqis were going to use nerve agents, they would want to take steps to protect their own soldiers,

Turn to IRAQ, page 4

Registering with SPIRE

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Pre-registration over the phone at the University of Massachusetts is a thing of the past. WISE has been retired. In fact the days of "pre-registration" are gone. Beginning tomorrow the first students, primarily seniors, will log onto the new student information system segment of PeopleSoft, known as SPIRE, and register for their spring semester courses.

Access to the WISE system was discontinued at 5 p.m. on Sept. 27. The following morning at 6 a.m. a staff predominately fueled by OIT personnel involved in the Student Information Systems (SIS) Project began around-the-clock work to convert the 36,697 student records from the old system, WISE, to the new SPIRE. The work concluded on the morning of Sept. 30 at 4 a.m., so that the staff could begin testing the system, which went online Oct. 1.

Conversion of student records meant taking students' course and demographic records from the Legacy system, located in Information Technology Services at the President's Office to SPIRE, enabling students, faculty and 250-300 staffers to access course registration information.

"We brought over 1.6 million enrollments," Rosio Alvarez, the associate chancellor for Information Technologies and Planning, told the Campus Chronicle. "That's 40-some courses per student. Of those, there were only 1,096 errors. That's about .07 percent."

According to Alvarez the records of approximately 200,000 inactive students remain on the Legacy system.

"We'll have to partition those out and bring them over in pieces over the course of the next six to eight months."

Sometime this month SIS will convert Student Financials to SPIRE, followed by Financial Aid in February.

The transformation from WISE to the PeopleSoft program and SPIRE has consumed the SIS Project's energy since the beginning of this past summer when they began conducting training sessions for University staff.

"The most difficult and time consuming part of the SIS Project was converting the legacy data into PeopleSoft. The volume and complexity of the data was enormous," Heidi Dollard, the project manager for Student Information Systems, told the Campus Chronicle. "Over the next year we will be converting a total of 225,000 unique student records and over 4.5 million enrollment records. The catalogue and schedule conversion is complete, and includes over 176,000 course records and over 256,000 course sections."

Login information and passwords were mailed to 25,000 students on Oct. 9th. Students who have not yet received their information, or who have had trouble logging into or using the SPIRE system are advised by Alvarez to call OIT with questions as quickly as possible.

Because the registration screens are integrated with a class search ability, there will be no printed book of course schedules for the spring semester. SPIRE will allow students, following the completion of their registration, to view and if desired print their unofficial transcripts and predicted course schedules. Available through the same function will be the ability to view any outstanding holds the University has on their record. These holds will now be called "service indicators," and will give detailed instruction on how to resolve them.

Once students have received their logons and passwords they will also receive a notice from the registrar as to when they will be allowed to begin their registration.

"Each student is assigned an 'appointment window'; the length of the window depends on the student's degree credits, so seniors are given a longer period which starts sooner than freshman. The earliest window starts Nov. 14; the shortest window starts Nov. 26 at noon. The longest period is 21 days and the shortest is nine days. Once a student's window opens, it stays open until Dec. 5 at 5 p.m. when pre-registration for all students is over. A new window opens every half-hour during most work days between Nov. 14 and 25," Dollard said.

"We must 'ramp on' students to the system in this manner to spread the registration activity over the entire period. The system cannot handle all 25,000 students at the same time. Also, those students closest to graduation must have first access to course seats."

Alvarez went on to explain why it will no longer be referred to as pre-registration.

"We don't call it 'pre-registration' because once they [students] sign up, they are guaranteed the course," she said.

In addition to students being guaranteed the courses they sign up with, the programs confirmed registration abilities eliminates weeks of wonder if one will be granted their courses or whether they will in fact be registered in any at all. The new program also enables faculty to watch their course rosters develop as students sign-up. Professors will also be able to enter grades directly online. By the second week of October, faculty were able to see current rosters for the semester in progress now.

Other programs that will take the place of WISE include the source of all directory information about and for students; employees, campus guests, data files for the libraries; OIT account management and the UCard offices as well as departmental systems across the University.

Registration for students begins tomorrow at 9 a.m. with seniors. Juniors will follow beginning on Nov. 18, sophomores on Nov. 21, and freshman Nov. 25.

Contact the Help Desk at 545-9400 (option 2) or visit www.oit.umass.edu/spire with SPIRE related questions or problems.

War Times editor speaks

By Courtney Charles
COLLEGIAN STAFF

People hear about weapons of mass destruction but don't really know what they mean, Max Elbaum, editor of the newspaper War Times and author of Revolution in the Air said to a group of about 50 last night in the Campus Center.

"We live in dire times and we are on the verge of some catastrophic times in the Middle East," said Elbaum. There is a definite human dimension to the consequences of unleashing the massive violence of war, according to Elbaum. People are maimed and killed, the cancer rate increases, and water and plant life suffer, Elbaum explained.

According to Elbaum, the next few months are urgent. They will affect the shape of years to come, Elbaum advised the audience to go to a vigil, protest, or to an extra meeting, and talk to people about the war.

"If you don't set your sights on what you need to accomplish, you will never accomplish it," said Elbaum.

Iraq and the Middle East have not recovered from the Gulf War, said Elbaum. Five minutes after the Iraq resolution passed in the United Nations, representatives from every country besides the United States and Britain declared that this was not a pretext to go to war with Iraq, according to Elbaum.

"The agenda of the Bush administration is to create a new Roman Empire. They are hell-bent on going to war," said Elbaum. "They want to send the message to the world that if you defy New Rome, you will be punished."

According to Elbaum, the administration plays on the tremendous fear among citizens for personal security.

America's message is the dehumanization of the enemy, which allows people to feel it is acceptable to commit atrocious things, he said.

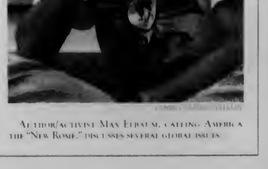
"The message is that an Iraqi life, a Filipino life, an African life, is not of the same value as a white American life," said Elbaum.

Elbaum discussed the escalating years of Vietnam on the campus of the University of Wisconsin

"In 1965 you could get beat up for handing out leaflets against the war in Vietnam," said Elbaum.

Elbaum said he wants to position his newspaper as a credible anti-war voice.

Five days ago in Florence, Italy, 400,000 people marched in protest against the war, Elbaum said and a month ago 400,000 people marched in an anti-war protest in London.



According to Elbaum, the U.S. doesn't always hear what happens around the world, but the world media takes note of what the U.S. does. He said the world is watching to see if an anti-war movement grows in the U.S.

Members of the audience found the speech enlightening.

"It was very informative." said Geet Dhondt, a graduate Economics student. "It was a good was for people who don't know about the war and the anti-war movement to get information."

"I think more people should have come," said Jess Nelson, a freshman Equine Industries major.

"We need a sense of vision and a confidence that things can change," Elbaum said.

AUTHOR/ACTIVIST MAX ELBAUM, CALLING AMERICA THE "NEW ROME," DISCUSSES SEVERAL GLOBAL ISSUES.

Nuclear activist speaks at Smith

By Mark Ostroff

In a filled Sage Hall auditorium at Smith College last night nuclear activist Dr. Helen Caldicott gave her talk entitled "The New Nuclear Danger," while promoting her new book with the same title.

A pediatrician by profession, Caldicott became a leading spokeswoman in the nuclear freeze movement when it included speaking with heads of state such as Ronald Reagan and worked as a consultant on the days of the Gulf War, according to Caldicott.

Caldicott's visit tonight addressed her concerns about the current policies of the Bush Administration, and focused on the proliferation of nuclear danger in a world "consumed by fear and other forms of concern to incoming test missile."

What I'm concerning tonight will determine your future and whether or not you have a future," Caldicott

In the country about the Pentagon's role, Caldicott criticized the Bush administration for emphasizing the dangers of nuclear terrorism, and the Pentagon can play a [illegible] to counter nuclear [illegible] named the Advanced Hypervelocity Penetrator was sent [illegible] including reading "It's a [illegible] the Pentagon's arsenal of this kind of [illegible] "collateral damage," make light of human casualties, while words like "skin" and "baby" add human qualities to a nuclear weapon.

"The minds of these men running this country should be psychoanalyzed," Caldicott said. "And, if necessary, then should be removed on an emergency basis."

While discussing the role of the Pentagon, Caldicott also expressed concern about the role of the media in situations of war. According to Caldicott, media outlets corrupted by corporate and government influence also have a role in downplaying the nuclear danger, while actively hiding vital information from Americans.

As a reference for her argument, she looked back to a 1995 incident in which former Russian president Boris Yeltsin, had contemplated a nuclear counter-strike against the U.S., due to immediate panic from an incoming test missile.

Caldicott said that the U.S. was only seconds away from nuclear war, but the incident was not given any priority considering that The New York Times had reported the incident in the back pages, next to the obituaries.

"The New York Times and the media are determining the fate of Earth," Caldicott said. "Our deaths are irrelevant to the Pentagon."

Later in the evening, Caldicott touched on her fear of escalating danger, brought on by what she believes to be an excessive nuclear capability of the U.S. She said that the excessive nuclear capability of the U.S. could theoretically destroy the world 77 times over.

Caldicott argued that this kind of capability is a bad influence on other nations like Russia, China, and North Korea, who are still trying to measure up to U.S. capability.

"Everyone wants to copy America," she said.

Another topic that was brought up was the Bush Administration. According to Caldicott, Lockheed Martin not only holds sizeable contacts with the U.S. Government, including projects for space militarization, but includes people like Lynne Cheney, Vice President Dick Cheney's wife, on the board of directors.

Another concern of hers is how much influence Lockheed Martin holds over the media. According to Caldicott, Lockheed Martin supports The Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank that had worked in the past with The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Times and other media outlets.

"I'm reminded of Germany," she said. "It's a very, very dark time."

Her last topic for the evening was about the war in Iraq, which she also accuses the media of downplaying. Caldicott argued that the U.S. had already been engaging in a form of nuclear war when, in Iraq, shells of Uranium-238 were used in the fighting.

According to Caldicott, the media and the Pentagon had covered up the extent of the damage in Iraq, which included the poisoning of civilians in the form of cancer and birth defects.

"My colleagues stand at the front of their beds, weeping, because, from American sanctions they have no drugs to help treat the children with leukemia," said Caldicott. "But Americans don't know that."

Before ending her talk, Caldicott also made the same claim about Afghanistan, where she said that 1000 tons of Uranium-238 was used in the wars.

"That's called 'evil,'" Caldicott said.

Poetry reading today

By Kelly Farrell
Collegian Correspondent

People passing by the main entrance of Bartlett Hall today may be wondering why there is a gathering of over 30 to 50 students and professors reading and listening to lines of racial, sexual, and political humor and terror.

The Creative Writing Honors course taught by Eric Abbott organized this reading of nearly 20,000 lines of epic poetry from The Battlefield Where the Moon Says I Love You, by Frank Stanford. Other UMass faculty and students will be joining in the reading, which is estimated to take over 16 hours and 30 participants to complete. The event will begin today at 8 a.m. and will continue until after midnight.

The reading was inspired by a similar event years ago, and brought to life again by Abbott who is also currently a Master of Fine Arts graduate student.

"Poetry, especially an epic poem, is about community," Abbott said. "Being a part of something, being involved in something beautiful...as opposed to implicated in something like war. This is something we can be proud of as a culture."

Abbott, with the help of his creative writing students, decided to organize the event after reading about a similar all-night marathon reading of "The Battlefield" at Brown University in 1983. Today, 19 years later, students and professors, similar to those huddled around a campfire years ago at Brown University, are reciting Stanford's story. The story is actually a nearly 400-page narrative poem with little punctuation and no chapter breaks.

The students and professors are reading, as poet C.D. Wright wrote in the foreword of the book, "in an African-American vernacular of the rural South," and from the viewpoint of a generation or two before ours. They are attempting to keep Stanford's tone while reciting his stories about "freaks" as he calls them, such as the "world's smallest man," and moments from his journeys, "where the country is silent and the water is still," and "death that points out your undone fly and wants to zip it up."

People interested in hearing the poem are welcome to go inside the main entrance of Bartlett Hall and listen to the reading.

Diversity Calendar

Wednesday

The Latin Student Association's Open Meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. All Latin, Spanish and Caribbean students are welcome. SASA will be holding a workshop on Friday with MEChA, SASA and ALPFA among others. Call 256-5498 or 549-6600 ext. 2247 for more information.

The Islamic Association of Students and Faculty (IASF) will host a discussion titled "Islam and Christianity" at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 163.

The Muslim Students Association

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Getting involved

Exercising your rights

With War Times editor Max Elbaum's arrival on campus last night, the University of Massachusetts kept up a longstanding tradition of opening dialogues within our community when controversial issues arise either at home or abroad.

While Elbaum's talk comes from a particular (anti-war) point of view that everyone may not agree with, the fact that he spoke on campus is undeniably a positive thing.

Current event issues such as the potential conflict in Iraq should be discussed on our campus by as many different groups of students as possible. There is no wrong opinion in the debate, the important part is having an opinion in the first place.

Our campus is in a constant state of disagreement. Anti-war factions disagree with groups looking to maintain peace with force. Pro-Israel groups clash with groups like the Palestinian Action Coalition. Groups dissent on issues involving money, politics and social issues, both on campus and on a broader scope.

This is fine. In fact, it's healthy. One of the beauties of living in the United States is that we have the rights to freedom of the speech and the press – rights that are often sorely under appreciated and underused. While some may not agree with Elbaum's anti-military, anti-capitalistic, anti-Bush messages, the very fact that he can speak them makes our country better than many others.

Sadly, events discussing political issues on our campus are often very poorly attended. Last night's speech, even though it was sponsored by the Office of ALANA Affairs, the American Friends Service Committee, the Program on Social Thought and Political Economy, Solidarity, and the Western Mass. Palestinian Action Coalition drew less than 60 people.

This is nothing new. Organizations from within the University community rally on the Student Union steps frequently, drawing only handfuls of people. The recent rally in favor of keeping bilingual education in Massachusetts also was poorly attended.

Sunny Suchdev, an organizer in the Office of ALANA Affairs involved with Elbaum's visit to campus said Monday, "If we do believe that we're living in a democratic country, the way that should work is a grassroots democracy. That means mobilizing from the bottom up, going to rallies, making sure that our government represents us."

The Collegian could not agree more wholeheartedly. There are many worthy things to mobilize for. It is within our rights as American citizens to push for any cause we want.

As students of the University of Massachusetts and as citizens of the United States of America, The Collegian encourages the student body to play a more active roll in the world. Students, get educated. Realize that there is more to the world than keg parties, homework and Frisbee for you here at the University.

Just get involved. Doing so is one of the surest and proudest ways of expressing our rights.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
Is the internet one confusing jumble to you?
Try something with clarity.
www.dailycollegian.com
We're the dot in the com.

It's my birthday and I'll cry if I want to

FRANCES CARR

Goodbye closed doors, hello old age. I turned 21 this weekend and I couldn't be more conflicted. Friday night, the eve of my birthday, I was visiting my friends at Boston College. Our plan was to go to a friend's on-campus apartment until 11:30 p.m. and then head over to a nearby bar to ring in the big one legally. We stopped along the way at a liquor store and one of the two 21-year-olds among us got each of us a four-dollar bottle of Andre sparkling wine, while us 20-year-olds waited in the shadows.

We hopped on the T and were soon on the BC campus, while Andre hid in a box beneath a coat in my friend's arms. We weren't 50 yards away from our destination when the box started to break. The rest of the crew seemed not to notice what was happening and kept walking. My friend struggled to regain control of the case and handed me one of the bottles. I quickly tucked it under my jacket. It was 10:45 p.m. I wasn't legally allowed to be holding the bottle for another hour and 15 minutes. Naturally a touch paranoid and fully aware of BC's tight policies on underage drinking, I thought to myself in passing, "what if I got busted less than two hours before my 21st birthday for being in possession of alcohol?"

No sooner had the thought crossed my mind when I noticed over my right shoulder a blaring white light pointed in my direction. A cop on a motorcycle pulled up beside my friend and asked what was underneath the coat. My heart started racing. All I could think was, 21 years of stellar conduct and careful behavior culminating in an arrest a mere hour before legal eligibility. The cop pulled over to the side to park his bike. My friend leaned in close, saying "keep walking." And I did. Unscathed, I caught up to the rest of the group.

Granted I didn't get into any trouble for possession, nor have I ever, but the fact that it's possible seems so ridiculous. Why should I not be able to do something one day and able to the next? This age, 21, a silly number of years, is so arbitrary. In most countries all you need to buy booze is a little bit of money and the capability to decide what you're thirsty for. Sixteen and in France I bought a beer at McDonald's and thought I was the coolest cat in the world. That's it, I suppose; the rite of passage is what we are celebrating.

For as long as we have had a taste for Grandpa's old cough medicine, we have been waiting for the fateful day when we turn 21. Then once we do, we have no more major birthdays to look forward to. Maybe 25, as one friend suggested, when I will legally be able to rent a car. But when will I ever really want to rent a car? Perhaps when I am on a business trip or on a family vacation, but at this point I shudder to think about either one of those things. And after I hit 25, I am closer to 30 than 20. Yikes.

"I bought a beer at McDonald's and thought I was the coolest cat in the world."

So now I'm 21, big whoop. One of the perks I have inherited the perpetual role of beer wench in the house I share with three 20-year-olds. Since Saturday, I have been sent on what seems like 4,000 runs, not one of them inspired by a personal desire for drink on my part. I am paying my dues as all of us do, I suppose, and for my friends I am happy to do it. But here's the kicker: the restraints have yet to end. I have been denied from three places because, guess what, on your 21st birthday, your license expires, thus making it invalid.

The clerk of a liquor store in South Amherst asked me if I had backup on Monday. I reacted with an even mixture of snootiness and shock. "Are you serious?" I asked. He proceeded to explain the obvious and I countered with an explanation of my inability to get a new license as of yet because the RMV was not open on Sunday or Veterans Day. He was unaffected by my argument and sent me on my way.

This birthday comes at a very fragile time. I am in the midst of my first mid-life crisis. I can literally see my youth slipping away with each passing day, specifically on the heels of this birthday. I am noticing creases in my face resembling wrinkles, my back has been aching, my obligations never cease, I am constantly busy and all of the sudden it's T-minus two years until I hit the "real world."

I remember having just gotten my license and blasting "Jack and Diane" while cruising in my car. When John Cougar Mellencamp sang, "Hold on to 16 as long as you can. Change is coming 'round real soon, make us women and men," the waterworks never failed to flare up. I tried to heed his advice but I couldn't hold on forever. The carefree days of my childhood are long since gone, but I'm starting to realize it all at once.

Frances Carr is a Collegian Columnist.

3 Arizona Republic. Dist. by UFS Inc.

The tears in the prayer book

DAN YAGUDIN

"Hi, radio host? I am looking for my brother. His name is Alek Sirkin, and he should be in his seventies now. We lost track of him in the forests of Ukraine in 1941."

They say that you know a country's heartbeat through its media – the art it produces, the music it listens to, but most importantly, by what it is talking about, through its TV and radio stations. If you judged Israel by what I heard on Israeli radio that Tuesday afternoon, you'd probably think Israel's heartbeat stopped sometime in World War II.

For two hours a week, one of the major Israeli radio stations dedicates its whole airtime to phone calls from people searching for relatives, friends, and acquaintances that they lost in the war. The calls come from all over Israel and span the globe: a Greek man who lost touch with his siblings in the destruction of the predominantly Jewish city of Salonika, Greece; an ex-partisan fighter seeking a long-lost brother in arms; other former inhabitants of Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Hungary, Germany and others who, after 60 years, do not want to let go of hope to find their lost loved ones. Maybe someone is listening. Maybe someone knows. Maybe there is a chance for one last happy reunion before it is their time to depart from this world.

The destructive storm that swept through Europe did not pass over my family. In my home there is an old prayer book with many scratches and tears. We have a few like it. My mother has always refused to re-bind or repair it, but I never really thought about why until recently.

The prayer book was published in Austria, close to where my mother's family was from, in what is now Slovakia. On the inside cover my great-great-grandfather wrote an inscription in Czech and the year: 1919. On a different prayer book someone else from the family started counting years, every year at the start of the Hebrew new year. The count abruptly ends at 1941.

We don't know what happened to the book in the following few years, and maybe it is better that the story remains untold. We do know what happened to the family: most of them were sent to Auschwitz and never returned. A few of the prayer books made it through the war with scratches and tears. I think my mother sees the prayer book's story as the story of the family. The scratches are our scratches, and the tears are the gaping holes left by those who are no longer with us. The holes and the scratches – one cannot cover them up. Not with glue, not with rebinding, not now, not ever.

"The scratches are our scratches, and the tears are the gaping holes left by those who are no longer with us."

At the end of the war, when my grandmother returned home to Bratislava, she found that she was the only one in the family to have survived. She met and married my grandfather, and together they decided that Jews had nothing further to look for in Slovakia or Europe, for that matter, and they left for Israel in the late 1940s. The next inscription in the front cover of the book is a note in Hebrew from my grandfather's father, congratulating the couple on the purchase of their first apartment in Israel: "I give you this book in memory, and may it guard you in your new home." The year is 1964.

The inscription in Hebrew, with its many spelling mistakes, betrays the fact that Hebrew was not my great-grandfather's first language, nor his second. But from the fact that it was written in Hebrew she spoke to my grandparents in their native Slovak) and from its optimism, the message of hope is clear. It was the hope of great-grandfather Aladar that maybe in this country, the Jewish country, the couple would live a life of peace.

I keep flipping through the prayer book. On one of the last pages is the outline of faded lipstick, remnants of a moment when one of the women in my family pressed the book to her lips after Yom Kippur, the highest Jewish holiday. The outline shows only the lower lip print, as if the kiss was given in a hurry, or under apprehension.

Despite my great-grandfather's blessing, the inhabitants of Israel have had to fight many battles for their right to exist as a sovereign nation. One such war started on the eve of Yom Kippur in 1973. Maybe the kiss was given, heavy-hearted, on that fateful day.

"I've been trying to find my cousin for a long time now. Maybe this week will be my lucky week," said one of the callers. But in reality, most of the callers to the radio show will not find the people they are looking for. Those people are most likely long gone, and their remains are scattered, unburied, across European soil. With this in mind, I must demand, as my parents have, their parents have, and their parents have, the continued existence of Israel as a Jewish state for my people. I do this in the hope that for my children, the cracks and tears in our prayer books will be remnants of a distant past, rather than a sign of the future to come.

Dan Yagudin is a Collegian Columnist.

The curse of the cougar

McKENDRY

Saturday morning I overslept, again. Over the past two years, it seems every time I have a WMUA Sports broadcast to do on the road early in the day (i.e. before 1 p.m.), I get a late start. November 9th was no exception. Skipping the shower, I was up and out of Amherst by 8:30 a.m. My destination was Durham, N.H. and the University of New Hampshire.

Feeling I could not be late yet again, I drove faster than usual, even for myself. Averaging a full 30 miles over the speed limit on Route 2, and almost the same margin on Interstates 495 and 95, I made it from UMass to UNH in two hours. While I'm very comfortable driving fast, I know that I was taking some increased risks. That being said, thoughts of potential disaster are kept out of my mind. I'm not helped at all in my driving abilities by thinking about what's the worst that can happen.

The irony is that those thoughts of a vehicular mishap should have been very fresh in my mind.

On Thursday the Austin curse struck again. James McGonagle, an alumnus of my high school, class of 2001, died from injuries sustained in a car accident. A goalie for the Williams Lake Timberwolves in Canada's Junior A Hockey League, Jim had lost control of his car on black ice Tuesday evening while driving in British Columbia, crashed, went through the windshield, and landed in water. By the time he was discovered, he'd been underwater so long that he was in a coma, from which doctors had no idea if he'd recover. Life support was turned off two days later. He was 19.

"On Thursday, the Austin curse struck again."

I didn't know Jim personally, though he was a friend of my brother's. But anytime a life is lost at a young age, especially in such a horrific fashion, it is tragic.

I should explain what I mean when I write of the Austin curse. Austin Prep, my former school, has had an unfortunate recent history of students, both current and former, dying young. Paula Barraza, class of '94, died of an asthma attack seven months after graduation while on vacation. Steve Demarco, class of '95, was killed in a car accident in Arizona 14 months after he left high school. Michael Sullivan, class of '98, and a friend of mine, was nearly killed in a skiing accident January of our senior year. As it was, he did spend four days in a coma and then a month in a rehabilitation hospital. Jeff Flores, class of 2002, died in a car accident on his way home from an after-prom party, less than two weeks before graduation. The school also lost a beloved teacher at the relatively young age of 51 last fall. And now Jim McGonagle.

Granted, four students over nearly a decade is not an overwhelming number. However, our high school is not very large. My graduating class was only 79 students. My brother's class this year will be larger, but still only in the low 100s. For a school that is like a family, losing one person is hard enough. However, the frequency of students dying, or coming close to death, definitely makes one think.

Perhaps that's the reason my friends and I refer to the Austin curse. Like all curses, it is a simplified way to explain that which is unexplainable. I don't believe any bad omens hang over the small little Catholic school north of Boston; the school provides too much good. Still, the idea of the curse does cause me to think things over. Why are so many fellow Cougars passing into the great beyond so soon?

All this brings me back to my escapades this past Saturday morning. I easily could have been thinking about what happened to Jim and wondering whom the curse would strike next. It could preoccupy my thoughts and cause me to drive slower than I normally do, fearing that I may be the next victim. It could cause me to reevaluate every action I undertake, measuring its merits against its risks. But it didn't.

If I, or any one of us for that matter, let our minds get clouded with the preoccupation of death, life loses all joy. I'd be a morbid freak all the time, and would probably lose all my friends. Death can happen at anytime, as nothing is pre-determined. Curse be damned, I'll still drive a little fast, take my risks climbing like a monkey in my back room at work, and play street hockey with the same ferocity I always have.

And hopefully I won't be the subject of a memorial service any time soon. If I am though, don't blame the curse. I was just living my life the way I wanted.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.13.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Riveting Rosey

"I WANT TO MAKE A BLUES ALBUM, I WANT TO MAKE A FOLK RECORD, JUST DO WHATEVER I WANT TO DO," SAYS THE INDEPENDENT AND AMBITIOUS ROSEY. HER ALBUM, HEY CHILD, IS IN STORES NOW.

Rosey opens up about music biz and Child

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

On Tuesday, Nov. 5, I had the opportunity to conduct a phone interview with Island Records recording artist Rosey. The 29-year-old singer called me directly from her home phone and, after a brief delay (she had a visit from the Fed-Ex man) we got started.

When I answered the telephone, Rosey, bless her soul, sounded extremely tired. In fact, throughout the interview she sounded exhausted and with good reason. She had just come off from a Microsoft-sponsored tour off the East Coast. In fact, one of the tour stops she had planned was at the Iron Horse in Northampton, a city she has visited on numerous occasions. (Unfortunately, the tour stop never came to be.)

She may have sounded tired, yet she was also extremely personable, answering my questions with open candor and no hesitation whatsoever. The whole interview had the feel of a conversation rather than an actual interview.

Rosey (real name: Nancy Joy Kaye) was a Communications major who graduated from Emerson College and soon got a job in radio. Soon thereafter she became a talent scout for A&M Records, until her boss saw her playing guitar outside one day and told her to go pursue a musical career of her own. The free spirit saw it as the perfect opportunity to make something of her dream. She quit, and headed out with the guitar, playing on the street corners of various major cities. After six years of working menial jobs to pay for her dream, she was signed and recorded her debut, Dirty Child, released earlier this summer. (Interestingly enough, Rosey wanted to work for Peter Gabriel's Real World Records.)

For Rosey, there are no highlights on her tour; so much hard work goes into her career that she soaks up every minute of it. She's very happy with the kind reviews she has received (she feels "lucky ... very blessed").

As Rosey says, she feels as though she has a rainbow over her head. According to her, the record industry is composed of "such hard players" who think with their wallets rather than their minds. Because of her rave reviews, she feels as though she has been able to keep the record company's attention.

"I think, I know, that in this industry they will compare you to somebody else ..." Rosey responds when I ask her about her feelings toward comparisons to artists such as Beth Orton. But she's flattered with the comparisons. "At least I get to be compared to artists whom I admire." If Rosey could collaborate with any artist she wanted she would want to work with Bjork, but "one of my dreams is to work with Buddy Guy." Guy is one of her favorite artists. Beck is one of her contemporary influences because "he is able to make any kind of record he wants" which she "admires very much."

"I want to make a blues album, I want to make a folk record, just do whatever I want to do," she says as a way of describing what she wants to do musically.

When I mention the eclectic influences that inform the breathtaking beauty of Dirty Child, Rosey describes the Eastern European vibe of her music, and the way world music informed "the kind of rhythms she enjoys." She says that the album is a blend of rock and roll, the blues, urban influences and dance music.

"I like to make people dance. I think if you get people grooving that can be really great," she says of her affinity for beat and rhythm. "Overall, I think people like the fact that I mix it up."

Rosey does mix it up, as Dirty Child overflows with the varying textures of funk, folk, rock and world beat. Hers is a melting pot of musical styles that writhes and slinks through the headphones. The hardest song for Rosey to craft was "Beautiful" which used a four-piece orchestra. The vamp part Rosey sings at the end tripped her up initially, but once "I got it, I fell to the ground. I had no breath in me."

Rosey is not shy about success. I asked her about her feelings if she became a multi-platinum selling superstar.

"That would be the most wonderful gift... that would allow me to do more of what I want to do artistically, which is to make the kind of music I want to make ... if I had one hit on this record, it might give me financial security ..." she says.

Rosey ignores fears of the label trying to box her in if she became successful; if she was a popular artist, then she could renegotiate her contracts and gain more creative control.

"I'm lucky because I'm older, and I've already been through so much crap. At this point, my life really revolves around wanting to be happy, wanting to be at peace."

She is remarkably grounded for a (potential) pop star, and worries about the younger stars who are not fully aware of who they are.

Turn to ROSEY page 6

Plot of Punch-Drunk Love utterly relatable

By Matthew Despres
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PUNCH-DRUNK LOVE
Directed by Paul Thomas Anderson
Starring Adam Sandler and Emily Watson
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater in Northampton

HEY, DON'T HOG 'EM ALL! SALESMAN BARRY EGAN (PLAYED BY ADAM SANDLER, ABOVE) TRIES TO BREAK FREE FROM THE CYCLE OF TORMENT IN PUNCH DRUNK LOVE.

As Barry Egan, the blue-suited, suitably blue focus of Punch-Drunk Love, Adam Sandler works from the corners. He phones from their shadows, peers around and chases love through a maze of them, and on a larger scale, lives life on a sloping arc that can never quite push itself around the bend and into the open. Egan is stuck in a moment – one that has drawn on for some 30 years. His cycle of torment is sustained by seven sisters, whose taunts of "Gay Boy" and willingness to expose his insecurities have left the novelty salesman in a precarious emotional limbo between sanity and chaos.

Things break open for Egan early one morning in a remarkable and curious series of events that engage the best and worst of his psyche. Before he can blink, Egan is tip-toeing around the edges of a potential romance (Watson, in a wonderfully sincere turn), sidestepping the fallout of a call to a phone-sex service, and circumventing a marketing scheme with a ploy of his own that one-ups corporate creativity. All are potential avenues of escape he sorely needs; all, however, are also riddled with obstacles his fragile personality must find ways to maneuver in and around.

Turn to PUNCH page 6

What constitutes rock music?

ROCK'N OUT
With Samara Marbiestone

What exactly is rock 'n roll?

That's kind of an open-ended question, but I think that I can come up with a better answer than the editors of Rolling Stone. They recently came out with a special on "Women in Rock," in which they named female performing artists that don't have a rock 'n roll bone in their skinny bodies.

Sound special? Maybe it would be if all of the women they listed were actually rock artists. They named artists such as Britney Spears, Mandy Moore, Michelle Branch, Jewel, Shakira, Lil' Kim, Tori Amos, and other artists that have nothing to do with rock 'n roll. What the hell were they thinking when they came up with this list? These performing artists are mainly compiled of pop artists, rap artists, Latin artists, and other music genres that are almost the complete opposite of the definition of rock 'n roll.

I must say that if I were an editor at Rolling Stone, I would be really embarrassed right about now. Yeah, it's real swell that they took the time out of their rockin' schedules to create a feature about how fabulous women are. Don't get me wrong – they are fabulous, but please get your genre straight. The feature shouldn't be called "Women in Rock;" it should be called "Women in Pop."

In this same feature, another argument was brought up that got me a little pissy. The editors said that "rock radio won't even touch female artists," which is true. You know what though? There's a reason for that. Let me tell you what it is.

Yes, I'm a Women's Studies minor and all, but the reason why rock radio "won't touch" female artists, is because there aren't any good female rock artists out there at the moment. Britney Spears is not a rock artist. Neither is Michelle Branch or Mandy Moore. Just because there are a lack of decent female rock artists doesn't mean that Rolling Stone should prove their feminist side by fishing for female artists that have nothing to do with the genre. Whatever happened to female rock goddesses such as Janis Joplin and Grace Slick of Jefferson Airplane? Britney Spears may have covered music by Joan Jett and the Rolling Stones, but that doesn't make

Turn to ROCK page 6

Character depth the saving grace of Focus

By Lauren DeFilippo
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

AUTO FOCUS
Directed by Paul Schrader
Starring Greg Kinnear, Willem Dafoe, Maria Bello, Rita Wilson
Pleasant Street Theater

"A day without sex is a day wasted."

That is the motto of Robert Crane, the lead character of director Paul Schrader's new film Auto Focus. The movie is based on the 1999 book Auto Focus: The Murder of Bob Crane written by Robert Graysmith. Auto Focus depicts the life and untimely demise of celebrity Robert Crane in a Scottsdale, Arizona motel room in 1978. Those who expect a heaping dose of raunchy sex and graphic nudity will be disappointed. In spite of this, the film has depth of character that more than makes up for the lack of pornographic content.

The biopic stars Greg Kinnear as Robert Crane, and Willem Dafoe as Crane's seedy friend John Carpenter, also known as "Carpy." Crane is introduced as a popular deejay in Los Angeles. He is depicted as a family man, married to his high school sweetheart Anne (Rita Wilson) and loving father of three children – two girls and a boy. Crane does not smoke or drink and goes to church every Sunday. His only vice, at least in his wife's opinion, is his hidden collection of pornographic magazines, and his fascination with photography.

A great deal of the film is spent constructing an image of Crane's life before he becomes completely immersed in his addiction to sex, and eventually alcohol. Little time, however, is spent exploring the consequences for his character once he has hit rock bottom. Initially, the unfurling of Crane's character is slow, but picks up more speed as the film progresses. This progression from the collection of pornographic magazines to engaging in multiple extra-marital affairs, in addition to the creation of personal sex tapes, is set into motion and accelerated when Crane meets an intriguing Sony sales representative named John Carpenter (Dafoe) on the Hogan's Heroes set. Carpenter latches onto Crane's existing interest in photographs and expands on it by introducing him to the latest technology in home video.

Throughout the film, Crane never truly comes to terms with his addiction, or even his relationship with Carpy. He lives in denial, considering himself normal because as he asserts consistently throughout the film, "sex is normal." He sees the world through his own pair of rose tinted glasses, amassing video equipment and sex tapes to feed his destructive personality, all the while losing his professional credibility. Due to his multiple indiscretions, Crane was seen as more of a liability than an asset. These indiscretions not only affect his career, but also destroy two marriages. Despite his denial of his deviant and amoral side, Crane can consciously be judgmental of Carpenter's seemingly homosexual interests. This simultaneous affirmation of his own deviant behavior, but intolerance of Carpy's suggested interests illustrate Crane's detachment. This idea is also explored when it is revealed that Crane's addiction has reached a level of absurdity where he must keep "records" (including an annotated photo album of breasts) of his indiscretions in order to maintain their context.

In contrast, the film seems to attempt to tie up its loose ends in a cursory manner by quickly escalating from Carpy and Crane's discussion about which city is good for dominance (for those who care, in the early 1970s, Atlanta was the place to be) to Crane's unfortunately ironic death, some 15 screen minutes later.

Auto Focus is a film full of metaphors. Naturally, some are more successful than others. The illustration of Crane's addiction is successful. The addiction to sex is represented through the complete and total mechanical nature of his actions. There is no romance. There is simply the act. The sexual encounters are not represented as sensual experiences, but technical, nearly obligatory sequences. Although the film is centered in large part around sex and addiction to it, it is not any more or less sexually explicit than any other film. It is more suggestive than anything else.

In comparison to the addiction metaphor, the visual metaphorical devices employed by the filmmakers are significantly less successful. In truth, they are so subtle they almost evade perception. If the goal is to represent the two sides of Crane's personality – the put-together family man and the deviant sex fiend – visually, there is a natural inclination to do so through conflicting stable and frenzied movement. Following with this idea, when Crane is put-together, the visual should be clear and steadily focused. As Kinnear deftly allows his character to become enveloped by his vices, the visual should be contrastingly blurry. However, this device is only effectively applied only once throughout the film. There is however the effective use of this same device to a different end. Crane's real life is represented as very clear and focused. By contrast, his often confused and conflicted deviant persona is represented as gray and blurred recorded images.

The film itself contained quality performances from both Kinnear and Dafoe, who was pleasingly eerie and at times indiscernible. However, the film lacks resolution, much like Crane's real life. In that respect, it might quite possibly be the most accurate account thus far, despite some of its narrative shortcomings. B- (Sony Pictures; Rated R for strong sexuality, nudity, language, some drug use and violence; 107 min.)

BASED ON THE 1999 BOOK AUTO FOCUS: THE MURDER OF BOB CRANE, THE FILM ADAPTATION DEPICTS THE SAD DEMISE OF CELEBRITY ROBERT CRANE.

GET PAID TO GO TO SCHOOL. TALK ABOUT ROLE REVERSAL.

The U.S. Air Force will pay for you to continue your education while you serve your country as a nurse. Through selection into the Air Force Institute of Technology program, you could earn your advanced degree in as little as two years and get paid to do it. You'll be part of an elite team of medical professionals who have chosen to serve their country in this proud institution. To learn more about Air Force Nursing, please visit airforce.com or call 1.800.423.USAF to request more information.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

■ Punch

continued from page 5

Confused yet? Just the point. So is Egan, and the resulting narrative followed by Punch-Drunk attempts an intimate engagement with the audience, highlighting his attempts to deconstruct life's compound mysteries. It's a clever card for the filmmakers to play, and one we can all relate to: choice and opportunity as the human condition we all suffer through. In some ways, Punch-Drunk is the longhand attempt at a solution, a show of how often life settles in with little regard for our own concerns.

Which, of course, leaves the door wide open for the typical, brash late we've come to expect from Sandler. Here, though, in a surprising show of restraint, he doesn't quite step through. The rage is present, but director Paul Thomas Anderson trims the randomness, offers motivation and provides us, as viewers, the opportunity to linger a moment after the fact, a subtle acknowledgment of human flaw that quite effectively garners our sympathy. Egan deconstructs his environments physically (and violently) when his emotions prove too resilient and dense for understanding. His outbursts, however, translate less as unsettling last stands as they do tragic displays that move us to feel for him.

The changes Sandler displays are more reactionary than intrinsic; the chaos in his comedy has finally been given a palette that can translate his intentions, tie the loose ends and radiate something back of substance. At its best, Punch-Drunk Love unfolds with real-time sensibilities, unaware of its immediate direction yet brave enough to take the steps in getting there.

Anderson, for his part, is refreshingly devoid of pretension; his long shots and methodic edits allow the scenes to mature naturally, and his use of color speaks as succinctly as much of the dialogue. The colorfully washed-out fade-outs and transitions are projections of Egan's best intentions; much like the myriad of colors that bloom in the scene where he excitedly hunts down his pudding in the supermarket, his feelings are expressed alternatively, imaginatively and downright mysteriously.

Also impossible to ignore is Jon Brion's music-box score, which marches assuredly every step of the way alongside Sandler's weathered portrayal of Egan. In an industry of overindulgence, Punch-Drunk Love strikes a harmonious ratio of subtlety and understatement as strength. A- (Rated R for strong language including a scene of sexual dialogue.)

■ Rock

continued from page 5

her automatically initiated into the world of rock. If anything, it pushes her further from the privileged title of "rock goddess."

Let me throw a brain-teaser at you to make things a little more interesting.

I know I'm making fun of the editors of Rolling Stone for numbly assuming that just because a woman is a musical artist that also means that she's a rock artist.

Well, guess what.

The media would never call pop artists such as Justin Timberlake and Nick Carter rock artists, so why call Britney Spears and Mandy Moore exactly that?

So, what's my point? It seems that male musical artists are properly classified in their proper categories. Lil' Bow Wow is considered a pop artist, and Chris Cornell is a rock god. Never would anyone dare to mix genres, but why do people automatically do that for women?

Now that's something to think about.

I would really appreciate it if the words "rock" and "Britney Spears" or "Shakira" are not put in the same sentence, just because there aren't many female rock artists, that doesn't mean that one should pretend that female pop artists are also rock artists. I'm assuming that the same isn't done for men because there's a surplus of male musical artists, and that it's cool to put them in their proper categories because there's enough to go around.

So yeah, Rolling Stone – do me a favor. Don't call pop artists something that they're not. Rock is not pop, and please don't confuse the two. You wouldn't do it for anything else, would you? Don't call a spoon a fork because there aren't enough forks to go around.

Samara Marblestone is a Collegian Columnist.

www.dailycollegian.com

■ Rosey

continued from page 5

A hopeless romantic, Rosey is in love – or at least she is seeing someone. But the important thing for her right now is that she learns to love herself, or, as she says, "every relationship will be found."

"It's hard to be in relationships, because I never around often enough," she says.

Rosey's songs "Love" and "Afterlife" have appeared on the soundtracks to Bridget Jones' Diary and Shallow Hal. Rosey loves to hear her songs in the movies; for her, it was good because it gave people a chance to hear about her. And a lot of people have heard about her; her audiences are an eclectic mix as her influences. She's currently working on a video for "Beautiful" and has written about 100 songs looking to make a home on a potential sophomore disc. As far as radio stations go, she has luck with certain markets, but "in the end it all comes down to the big freakin' game... its all about how much money the record company is willing to spend..."

She continues to express her disdain for current radio.

"It's sad because back in the day... in one day, there was just people who loved music and put it on the radio," she says. "It's a whole different game."

Among the acts she likes on current radio include the Foo Fighters, Coldplay and Incubus. She's a fan of the songs that touch her.

She offers advice for people interested in a music career.

"[One must be] in it for the right reason ... music ... has to be the channel for them to open up ... when people get caught up in thinking what they can get as a musician ... the reality is that you are not going to get money, most of the time ... you really have to love music. Might as well find something else that can sustain your lifestyle and play music on the side ... you have to find people who support you [i.e. managers] ... if you don't have those people you really can't get anywhere."

It's a hard game, she explains, so you got to have fun.

Elder statesmen lead Raiders to victory

This week's 500th "Monday Night Football" saw highlights, memories and the continued murkiness in the AFC race.

The Oakland Raiders destroyed the Denver Broncos 34-10 at Mile High, er, Invesco Field behind the play of AARP members Rich Gannon, Jerry Rice and Rod Woodson – with each breaking or improving upon an NFL record.

Gannon set a single-game record with 21 straight complete passes in the contest. He finished the day with 34-for-38 for 352 yards and three touchdowns.

Woodson returned an interception 98 yards for a touchdown. The former Pittsburgh Steeler and Baltimore Raven extended his record for picks returned for a score to 13.

Meanwhile, every time Jerry Rice makes a catch, he is extending a few records, but with two touchdowns and 103 receiving yards, Rice became both the first player to score 200 touchdowns and broke Walter Payton's record for total yards from scrimmage.

The Oakland win makes the AFC especially ugly, as no conference team stands out as the Super Bowl favorite and only Denver (6-3) and San Diego (6-3) have more than five wins. It also shows that Oakland may have some life left for a run at the playoffs. Let's not hold our collective breath.

Anyone want to take control? Anyone? Hello? Bueller?

Not only is the AFC without a favorite, most of its divisions don't have clear-cut favorites.

Any team in the AFC East could easily take control over the next few weeks. Three teams (Miami, New England, Buffalo) are tied for the lead with 5-4 records while the Jets are just one game out at 4-5. Miami desperately needs to hold on while Jay Fiedler gets healthy – something that seems impossible with the way Ray Lucas is playing under center right now.

The AFC North and South are three-team races with Pittsburgh out front in the North at 5-3-1. Baltimore and Cleveland are close behind at 4-5, but neither team seems to want to play well enough to become a force. The South is similar with Tennessee and Indianapolis sharing the lead with 5-4 records while Jacksonville is holding on, one game back at 4-5.

The West will probably get one or even both wild card berths at the end of the season as San Diego and Denver are sharing the division lead at 6-3 while Oakland seems to be gaining steam at 5-4. Even Kansas City at 4-5 is definitely within striking distance of a shot at the extra entry.

First half awards part two

Offensive Rookie of the Year – Clinton Portis – Denver – RB

Portis is the easy choice here. The latest in a long line of solid Denver running backs, Portis has gone for 612 yards on 128 rushes, good for a 4.8 average. He is sure to become the next Bronco (after Terrell Davis, Olandis Gary and Mike Anderson) to break the 1000-yard mark, barring any weird circumstances.

Defensive Rookie of the Year – Julius Peppers – Carolina – DE

Peppers was considered a project when the Panthers selected him early in last year's draft. Experts said that he had the potential to be the next great NFL pass rusher, but no one expected him to be the man this soon. Peppers has 10 sacks already this year, just four and a half shy of Jevon Kearse's rookie record. Check him out if the Panthers are ever on a TV near you, you'll be seeing the next Bruce Smith or Reggie White.

My fantasy team

Another good week for Lonesome Sundays as my team enjoyed the services of Tommy Maddox and Plaxico Burress, who had amazing fantasy days that were certainly helped by the game going the full extra 15 minutes in overtime. My team has now jumped up from last in the division two weeks ago to third this week, just one game out of first place.

If this was college football...

Here is how my top 10 would look:

1. Green Bay (8-1)[Last Week: 1] – The Packers are far and away the best team in the NFL right now, as evidenced by their dominating record. Brett Favre seems to be playing his best and they didn't miss a beat after losing both starting running back Ahman Green and his backup Najeh Davenport in Sunday's 40-14 drubbing of the Lions.

Green Bay can actually clinch its division title next week with a win over Minnesota and losses by Detroit (to the Jets) and Chicago (to the Rams).

2. New Orleans (7-2)[Last Week: 3] – New Orleans took advantage of a second half Carolina collapse this week for win number seven. I have trouble pushing teams down for tough games that they pull out, so the Saints remain ahead of the rest of the 7-2 teams. This week's game against Atlanta should show if the Saints are tumbling or just coming off a speed bump.

3. San Francisco (7-2)[Last Week: 4] – The Niners made it three straight with a surprisingly low-scoring 17-13 win over Kansas City. Amazing that the team managed less than 300 total yards against a defense as bad as the Chiefs. The San Francisco defense still worries me, but has a chance to prove itself next week against a very solid San Diego offense.

4. Tampa Bay (7-2)[Last Week: 5] – I love Jon Gruden, but still don't like Tampa much for this year. That 7-2 record puts the team high up on the list, though. The Bucs' game next week against Carolina – which hasn't won since starting out 3-0 – should up them to 8-2.

5. Denver (6-3)[Last Week: 2] – One week after I label them as the team to beat in the AFC, they get hammered by the Raiders and they retain the top ranking of any AFC team. Portis' emergence as a legit NFL running back has made Brian Griese better and Shannon Sharpe's ageless dominance certainly hasn't hurt, either.

6. St. Louis (4-5)[Last Week: NR] – Be afraid. Be very afraid. Now that Marshall Faulk has been getting the ball and quarterback Marc Bulger has filled in admirably for the injured Kurt Warner, the Rams are on a major hot streak and are winners of their last four. The only problem is whether there is a QB controversy when Warner returns and if so, will it hurt the team's morale?

7. San Diego (6-3)[Last Week: NR] – San Diego suffered a tough loss to the red hot Rams, but they hang in at number seven, as I feel that the combination of a strong defense, the running of LaDainian Tomlinson and the mistake-free ball of Drew Brees should get this team into the playoffs. If they can take down the Niners next week, you'll start to hear some Super Bowl buzz about them from the "experts."

8. Philadelphia (6-3)[Last Week: NR] – The Eagles are frustrating me. They play great one week and then get slammed the next. Take this week's 35-13 whipping at the hands of Indianapolis, who had a rookie running back named Mungro rush for 114 yards. That can't be good.

9. Atlanta (5-3-1)[Last Week: NR] – I am a Michael Vick fan. I probably always will be. He made an amazing play to force an overtime against Pittsburgh Sunday and will probably win four or five MVP awards over the next 12 years. The Falcons' defense keeps me from having any faith in them to even win 10 games, but an easy schedule may get them into the playoffs.

10. Oakland (5-4)[Last Week: NR] – I hate to do this, but any time you go into Denver and take down the Broncos, you deserve recognition. The Raiders didn't just win, they annihilated the home team Monday night. Maybe the formaldehyde finally kicked in.

The above line makes no sense, I know. Next week's I Hate You game between the Raiders and Patriots should be a heck of a watch.

Gimme pick of the week

Take the Packers (-6.5) this week at Minnesota. This should be a pounding and Green Bay just got medical clearance for running back Ahman Green, who will start.

The race for Byron Leftwich, Maurice Clarett, or whoever else...

Now that Cincinnati won its first game, the 0-fer watch has been replaced. I'll keep an eye on which teams are heading in the right direction...for the choice at the very top of the 2003 NFL Draft. Marshall quarterback Byron Leftwich and Ohio State running back Maurice Clarett, who is just a freshman, are two names that are constantly appearing on teams' wish lists.

The Bengals bounced back this week with a loss to Baltimore. As the only team with just one win, Cincy certainly has the inside track on the No. 1 pick. Its pick would likely be Leftwich, as the combination of Jon Kitna, Akili Smith and your mom certainly hasn't worked out for them this year.

Falling in behind Cincy are the expansion Houston Texans, the Minnesota Vikings, and the Chicago Bears – who were a playoff team last season. Nice job by all three teams to lose by seven points or less. Special props go out to the Bears, who lost to New England on the Pats' last drive.

As far as the draft goes, the Texans and Vikings would probably look at Clarett or another running back as they both have solid, young QBs, but the Bears would definitely prefer Leftwich or another signal caller.

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist. Pig's Skinny runs every Wednesday.

OAKLAND RAIDERS WIDE RECEIVER JERRY RICE (80) FALLS INTO THE END ZONE AFTER A 54-YARD TOUCHDOWN CATCH AGAINST DENVER BRONCOS CORNERBACK PEPPER O'NEAL (24) DURING THE FOURTH QUARTER OF THEIR MONDAY NIGHT NFL GAME IN DENVER. IT WAS RICE'S SECOND TOUCHDOWN CATCH OF THE NIGHT, GIVING HIM 201 IN HIS CAREER. THE RAIDERS BEAT THE BRONCOS, 34-10.

■ notebook

continued from page 10

The Wildcats still are tied for 10th in the league, with playoff implications being a distant thought.

Homecoming knock-off

When Delaware looked on its schedule and saw a game at Maine in the second week of November, visions of a harsh trip, a harsh crowd and harsh weather likely got into its head.

It's a shame that Mother Nature didn't seem to take notice of the calendar, as a near-60 degree day arrived in Orono at the same time as the Blue Hens, breaking the Black Bears' 11-game home winning streak by virtue of a 37-13 triumph.

Sidney Haugabrook iced the game for Delaware with a 41-yard interception return for a touchdown, and made nine tackles, earning A-10 Defensive Player of the Week honors for his efforts. Antawn Jenkins ran for 76 yards and a pair of touchdowns, while Andy Hall threw for 146 on 10-of-19 passing in the game.

The Black Bears had severe problems on the ground, where they totaled 83 yards on 32 carries, and QB Jake Eaton was tops with 29 yards on his 12 carries. A pair of fumbles and an Eaton interception plagued Maine, who outgained Delaware through the air 236-146.

The Blue Hens could afford to keep things on the ground in the second half as Maine spotted them a 20-0 halftime lead. Oft-maligned kicker Scott Collins was perfect on the day, nailing four extra points and a trio of field goals.

While Delaware is essentially out of the playoff hunt at 4-4 in conference, Maine is still very much alive and will more than likely get at least an at large bid into the Division I-AA playoffs if it should win out. However, this has not been the same team since Stefan Gomes and Paris Minor were kicked off the team, and this week-end's voyage to Richmond could be a tough one for the Bears.

Tough place to play

The toughest place for opposing teams to visit might just be Parsons Field in Brookline. Now that Northeastern has a solid team and a quality surface, no team can pencil in a 'W' on a trip to NU.

Add Villanova to the list. The Wildcats hit a major speed bump in their quest for a National Championship and even a spot in the I-AA playoffs with a 38-13 drubbing at the hands of the Huskies.

It was all about returns for NU as Art Smith got the home squad out to a roaring start by bringing back the opening kickoff 100 yards for a 7-0 advantage. Neil Anderson added to the return yardage by scampering 90 yards for a touchdown after an interception.

Tim Gale paced the offense with 123 yards on the turf and three touchdowns, including a pair in the second quarter that sent Nova into the locker room on the short end of a 28-7 score.

Turnovers were the name of the game for Northeastern, as they were the beneficiaries of a pair of VU fumbles and two picks by Brett Gordon. Gordon went 30-for-44 on the day for 310 yards. Shaz Brown hauled in nine passes for 94 yards and a score.

NU's Shawn Brady barely had to break a sweat in the game, attempting just 13 passes in the game for 84 yards.

Villanova will need a lot of help to get into the postseason picture, with three conference losses to teams ahead of it in the standings. However, with wins against Rhode Island and at Delaware, the Wildcats could sneak into the postseason. The Huskies travel to New Hampshire and then host James Madison to finish out the season.

Walkover of the week

Looks like William and Mary might have been a touch upset about being embarrassed against Villanova a couple of weeks ago. The Tribe scored early and often, using three Dave Corley touchdown passes to vault out to a 34-6 lead after 30 minutes.

Corley went 18-for-26 for 259 yards on the day, including four completions for 117 yards and a touchdown to A-10 first team lock Rich Musinski. Jonathan Smith ran for 78 yards and a pair of scores, while A-10 Rookie of the Week Steven Hargrove went for 105 and a touchdown of his own – a 59-yarder that was the season-best for William and Mary.

URI managed just 44 yards through the air, as newcomer Ray Barker went just 2-of-10 in the contest. Chad Campbell broke 100 yards on the ground for the Rams, but it was not enough to spark the offense.

Rhody has emerged as the league whipping post and will be lucky to win another game. The Tribe finish up against state rivals James Madison and Richmond, two games that are vital for the team's playoff hopes to remain alive. With three overall losses and losses in all tiebreakers, another loss would most likely have William and Mary on the outside looking in.

Hey, didn't you used to be a contender?

Hofstra and Richmond were once the league powerhouses, two teams that were nearly a guarantee to give a team a hard time. Nowadays, both teams are limping along as the season trudges forward. With the Pride's 26-16 victory, it upped its A-10 victory total to three on the season.

Trevor Dinmie carried the ball 24 times for 89 yards and a touchdown, while Vemba Bukulu added 61 yards of his own on the ground. Ryan Cosentino went just 11-of-18 through the air, but hooked up with Ohio State transfer Ricky Bryant for a key 71-yard touchdown with less than a minute to go in the first half.

Both teams do have a chance to play the role of spoiler over the next couple weeks, however. Hofstra heads north to face UMass with a chance to knock the Minutemen out of the playoffs. Richmond faces two of the other three teams tied for first in the conference, hosting Maine this week before hitting the road against William and Mary.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS: REACH US AT SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

apply now for the new, expanded

CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROGRAM

Criminal Justice Concentration
Department of Sociology

Earn a Certificate in Criminal Justice

For students who plan a career in some aspect of the criminal justice system: police officers, probation and parole officers, paralegals, public and private criminal attorneys, district attorneys, judges, etc.

Applications are now being taken for the program.

A wide variety of courses are scheduled for 2003, including new classroom and online courses in domestic violence, crime and forensics, criminal violence in America, international criminal justice, organized crime, and cyber crime.

Courses offered Winter Session 2003:

SOCIOL 241 Criminology (online)

SOCIOL 394F Crime and Forensics (on campus, M-Th, 6-9 p.m.)

SOCIOL 395K Domestic Violence (online)

For more information, and to apply to the program, contact Prof. Anthony Harris, Sociology Department, Thompson 524, 545-0475.

UMASS

To register for winter and spring courses, go to www.umass.edu/contined or the Division of Continuing Education Registration Office, 358 N. Pleasant St.

Priority will be given to registered Criminal Justice Program students.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheap heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-0565 or come by Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt. Quarky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to UMass or NoHo. $700 with heat 433-3922.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Apartment for Rent Start 1/1 2 bdrm. In Sunderland $820 utilities included on Bus Rt Call 665-2359

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

94 Chevy Cavalier, AT, 2 Door, Purple, 105k, AC, AM/FM, $1900, 587-0906 dundas@cs.umass.edu

91 Acclaim Luxury Edition needs work $350. 545-0547

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off services with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

INSTRUCTION

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING www.university-bartending.com classes start soon 1-800-U-CAN-MIX Space is limited!

LESSONS

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwares.com 584-7750

LOST AND FOUND

Cat found Umass Campus Black & white domesticated with flea collar

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

2 roommates needed Spring semester only Beautiful house right past Amherst College on Bus line 350/ mn 256-3390

TRANSPORTATION

NEED A RIDE HOME FOR THANKSGIVING? Catch a Deluxe Chartered Bus to the Buffalo Area & Buses leave on Tues. Nov 26th or Wed. Nov 27th. Returning to UMASS on Sun. Dec 1st. Round Trip Fare $49 Visa & Mastercard accepted. Visit www.BeanTownBus.com or call 1-866-423-2686 for more details

Air Taxi, transportation in/ out of Northampton Airport to your destination. L & E Air Charter (401)-524-1697

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group- Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

4	CBS/3
5	NBC/4
6	Fox Sports Network
7	PBS/57
8	HBO Cinema
9	WB/22
10	UPN/38
11	TV Guide Channel
12	FOX/61
13	ABC/40
14	NBC/22
15	International Channel
16	UMATV
17	HBO Signature
18	HBO Family
19	ESPN
20	ESPN 2
21	UVC-19
22	ESPN Classic
23	Outdoor Channel
24	CNN
25	CNN HL
26	Weather Channel
27	Learning Channel
28	History Channel
29	A & E
30	Discovery Channel
31	Discovery Health
32	Food Network
33	NASA
34	Home & Garden TV
35	Travel Channel
36	Lifetime
37	CNBC
38	Tech TV
39	BET
40	CMT
41	USA
42	TNN
43	MTV
44	MTV2
45	VH1
46	TNT
47	TBS
48	E! Entertainment
49	Sci-Fi Channel
50	Court TV
51	Nick at Nite
52	Comedy Central
53	Cartoon Network
54	Game Show Network
55	TV Land
56	FOX Family
57	Univision
58	Galavision
59	Telemundo
60	College TV Network
61	C-SPAN
62	C-SPAN2
63	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

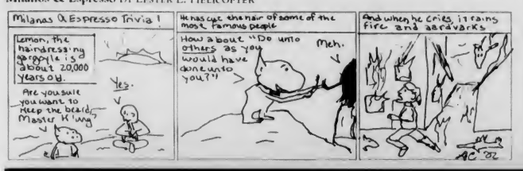
to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

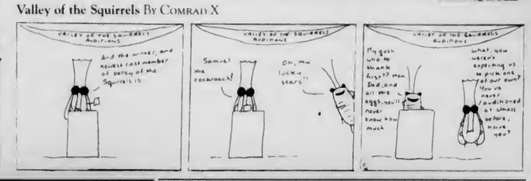
College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

The Freshmen By Eric Leger

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro



Mr. Gnu By Travis Dandro

Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"The dead know only one thing: it's better to be alive."

-Full Metal Jacket

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 40 LOW: 32	HIGH: 52 LOW: 31	HIGH: 40 LOW: 33

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Be wary of taking anything for granted today, you might miss out on something.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Act on your instincts and don't be afraid to take risks.

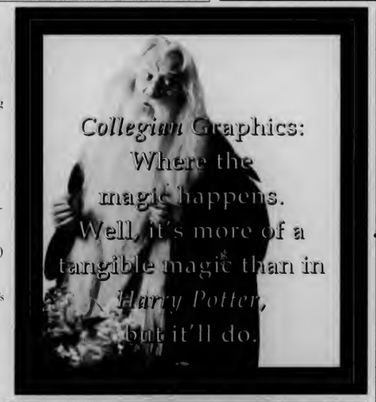
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – An old-fashioned approach to a new and unexpected dilemma is likely to pay off with surprising speed.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Anxiety over your workload will keep you from enjoying a hidden opportunity today – unless you lighten up!

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – Don't get carried away with your self today. A little subtlety, style, and grace go a long way toward impressing others.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – Physical and mental activities have much to offer you today.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Someone close to you is likely to be quite edgy and irritable today.



GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You must take a personal interest in someone else's affairs today if you are going to help at all.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) – You must remain on top of things as they develop today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't misuse your own popularity today. Give others the time of day.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It may be up to you today to do those things that you thought were someone else's responsibility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – This is a good day for solving financial problems as best you can.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Barley Soup

Chicken Burrito

Popcorn Shrimp

Garden Vegetable Chili (vegan)

DINNER

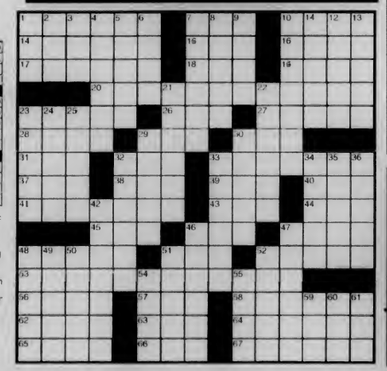
Vegetable Barley Soup

Extra Crispy Fried Chicken

Meatloaf with Gravy

Native American Stew (vegan)

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Wed: Reggae Night
Thurs: Flying Lessons
Fri: Irish Scisiun
Sat: Ray Mason Band
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 — warming
7 Make a typo
10 Chuck wagon dinner
14 Brass band event
15 Mermaid's domain
16 Jazzy — Horne
17 Dodge
18 Road crew's need
19 Plays a role
20 Shower attire (2 wds.)
23 Nomad's beast
25 Legal thing
27 Consent to 28 During 29 Mongrel
30 Bout ender
31 Sinbad's bird
32 Basketball hoop
33 Clumsy
37 Not their
38 A Gabor sister
39 Before marriage
40 Baby babble
41 Expand
43 Rorem or Beatty
44 Mouse predator
45 Seine
46 Furrow
47 Bart Maverick's brother
48 Kind of cuisine
51 "I knew it!"
52 Clock parts
53 Ford innovation (2 wds.)
56 Avoid
57 Fall mo.
58 Tends a plant
62 Small pull
63 "— Baby Baby"
64 Not awake
65 "The Cherry Orchard" girl
66 Barnyard animal
67 Himalayan guide

DOWN
1 Family MDs
2 Regulation
3 Crude metal
4 Like a fish hook
5 Tylenol competitor
6 Bold look
7 Rolle of "Good Times"
8 Hits the books
9 — avis
10 North Atlantic port
11 Happen again
12 Free
13 Tack
21 Roosevelt successor
22 Chattered
23 Health-food buy
24 Love affair
25 Very small
29 Tropical cat
30 Peep
32 Use a coupon
33 Summer flower
34 Mall lor Plato
35 Galley slave
36 Clumsy oafs
42 Feeler
46 Musical beat
47 Ladybug or scirats
48 "— la vista!"
49 Wan
50 Loan-sharking
51 Metalmaking giant
52 Grind, as teeth
54 Oaf
55 "— — framed!"
59 Poetic contraction
60 Sales agent
61 Resort

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Z	U	T	I	D	A	W	E	D	S	L	I	D
E	D	E	N	A	M	I	N	O	A	U	R	A
R	E	E	F	B	U	S	T	I	G	N	A	L
O	A	S	I	S	T	E	A	S	E	A	S	E
A	N	I	C	E	R	H	A	L
I	N	S	I	G	H	T	C	A	L	Y	P	S	O
S	O	O	T	H	E	S	A	N	T	S	A	D
A	L	I	V	E	X	I	N	C	R	A	L	O
A	T	A	G	R	I	P	E	V	O	L	V	E
C	E	R	T	A	I	N	D	R	E	A	M	E	R
E	M	O	T	R	I	S	E	S
S	T	O	R	M	P	E	N	S	T	A	L	K
C	O	M	E	A	R	O	U	N	D	F	E	E	L
A	R	E	A	U	N	S	E	R	J	U	D	G	E
M	E	N	O	N	E	E	D	Y	L	O	S	E

11-26-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Andy Vogt
Photo Editor	Daniel Davies, Jr.
Copy Editor	Andrew Merritt
Production Supervisor	Lizzy Nielsen
Production Staff	Scott Pihl, Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATELLO

Dodging Stormy weather

Dacko wins in first appearance

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It took nearly 35 minutes into the game but a slick passing guard Ebon Pegues from half-court that sailed into the entire Nor'Easter Storm defense landing in the hands of a running Nekeia Smith for the easy layup made one thing clear. Marnie Dacko, the new Massachusetts women's basketball head coach was a presence in the eyes of the players.

Straying away from the time management plan of last year that ball and shamed the players' potential talent, the Minutewomen experimented with their new tangled run-and-gun style Friday night in an exhibition against a group of ex-New England collegiate players called the Nor'Easter Storm. Despite 22 turnovers from the Maroon and White, Dacko picked up her first win in Amherst, 72-50, over the Storm.

"I thought [the new offense] went pretty well," senior co-captain Jen Butler said. "It took some time getting used to but we are all adjusting well."

Sophomore Kate Nesbitt had 15 rebounds and double-digit assists.

A 22-7 run that started at the 9:27 mark of the second half guided UMass past a potentially embarrassing preseason loss at the Mullins Center to the Storm, who have been defeated by an average of 24 points in three games it has played against collegiate squads this season.

"I am happy it's under our belts," Dacko said. "The biggest concern is the layups, it was, are going to run to have to make your layups. If we had made about seven more baskets in the first half, it's not even a contest."

One Minutewoman that didn't seem to miss any of her layups was the woman in the middle Butler, who scorched an extremely tall Storm squad – fielding five players over six-feet tall – to the tune of 19 points and 19 rebounds in 32 minutes of action.

However, Dacko was unhappy with UMass' first half, which was marred by sloppy play and bad decisions. Its biggest lead of the opening frame was only seven, which came right before the halftime buzzer after sophomore point guard Katie Nelson nailed a three from the top of the key with 30 seconds left – giving UMass a 36-29 lead at the break.

The Storm even took a lead in the period when it went on a 12-0 run in the middle of the first half take to a 22-16 edge but UMass countered to tie the score at 24. Another three-pointer from Nelson at the 3:07 mark helped the Maroon and White regain the lead at 25-24.

"I was shooting pretty well in the first half but I kind of cooled down in the second," said Nelson, who had 15 points in 33 minutes played. "I tried to practice my jump shot over the summer. I like this offense because I get a lot of open looks."

It was the first chance for Nelson to lead the new offensive patterns set by Dacko and although her shooting tapered off in the second half, her prowess let the Minutewomen build a lead as high as 25.

"We are a running team so I like this offense," she said. "I like to push the ball up to my teammates and we were doing it well in the first half, but we got a little sloppy at times."

The sloppy play added up to 22 UMass turnovers, a stat which jumped off the page for the new head coach. Despite the fluid run-game the Maroon and White was only able to muster up 17 assists in the game.

"It's annoying to me. I would have preferred 22 assists," Dacko said. "They were unforced errors and decision-making is going to be the key.

"We forced a lot of backdoors but we never got the backdoors I was looking for. That is something we would like to see 10 points a game from. It is just learning your timing and finding a chemistry."

Contributing positively to the passing game was Pegues. The senior's efficient play in the second half was the catalyst behind the extended UMass run. Uncharacteristically, Pegues tallied 10 assists along with 15 points on 7-for-15 shooting.

In the end, the Maroon and White victors over the Storm came down to what UMass knows best – defense. In the last seven minutes of the game, the Storm were held to only six points – giving them very little chance to tighten the gap.

"Defensively we played better in the second half," Dacko said. "Bringing it a little up-tempo, switching to a man-to-man defense got us going."

But Dacko feels that there is still a whole lot more to work on before the regular season starts against Sacred Heart Nov. 22.

"[Nor'Easter] didn't come out and roll over a dime," she said. "They kept fighting us but we were fighting ourselves more than anything. We'll use this as a learning tool."

Co-captain Jen Butler backed up 19 points and 19 rebounds against the Storm in the exhibition victory for the Minutewomen.

Minutewomen knock off BU

By Reid Davenport
COLLEGIAN STAFF

After a scrimmage meet last weekend, the Massachusetts women's swim team was able to improve its record to 1-1 Saturday as it edged out Boston University in a 153-147 decision.

The Minutewomen captured six individual events and one relay in a close meet. Junior Christen Dexter led the way with two first-place finishes. She won the 100-yard breaststroke with a time of 1:08.65 and the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:24.51. Also victorious were senior Catherine Getty, junior Lauren Rowell and freshman Aimee Bourassa. They were first in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:55.64, 100-yard backstroke in 1:01.25 and 500-yard freestyle, timing in at 5:15.74, respectively.

The Minutewomen's 200-yard medley relay team of junior Diana Alberti, senior Lizzy Boyle, Rowell and Dexter won in a time of 1:51.37.

"This was a normal BU meet," said Head Coach Bob Newcomb. "These [BU] meets have always come down to the last relay. Overall, I was proud with how the team performed.

"We have a few standouts on the team," Newcomb continued. "Christen Dexter struggled in her first meet, but has greatly improved. Sophomore Colleen Wasson has improved since last year. Freshman Aimee Bourassa is going to be a force for the team and senior Kate Allers is one of our more experienced divers."

One of the goals for the team, as previously noted by Newcomb, is to at least reach the fourth place spot in the Atlantic 10, which it has again been predicted to finish in by the coaches' poll. Regardless of the poll's prediction, there is a feeling within the team that they have the ability and experience to do better.

"I think the coaches' poll of us is accurate," Getty said. "But we have the depth and experience to push ourselves a few places up. Luckily, we have no injuries or people cramping up to ail our improvement."

"After the first few meets I have a positive outlook," Newcomb added. "The team has an amazing bond and they work together great considering they have so much to concentrate on when they swim. On top of that, we have a good amount of experienced swimmers in the breaststroke, which means we can switch them into other events."

The Maroon and White will have a week off before competing in a dual meet at St. John's on Nov. 23 at 1:00 p.m. According to Newcomb, the week off will be no vacation for the team.

"The team is in for a tough week of practice," Newcomb said. "We'll be doing test sets and just really working over everything this week, the main focuses for practice being turns, timing, and just overall conditioning. The following week we will probably back off them slightly as we get closer to the meet."

Smith's three wins lead UM to first triumph

By Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN STAFF

On Nov. 10, 2001, the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team dismantled Boston University, 223-73. On that day, then sophomore Conner Townson set a Joseph R. Rogers, Jr. Pool record in the 200-yard butterfly.

This season's match was no different as UMass was a heavy favorite over the Terriers and the Minutemen cruised to an easy victory over BU, 181-113.

"We always seem to step up more against them than anybody else, because they're an old rivalry within the state," sophomore Dylan Smith said. "We do our best out there against [BU]."

There was a trio of performers that shined in the meet. Smith dominated his competition by capturing three first-place finishes – the 100-yard backstroke (54.80), the 200-yard backstroke (1:57.14), and the 100-yard butterfly (52.37). Smith was considered UMass' top returner this season after a breakout freshman season.

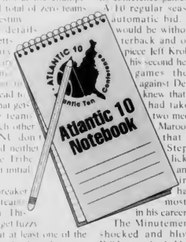
"The training in the pool has been pretty insane. I guess that's only way to get fast," said Smith, who was given All-Atlantic 10 honors in the 2001-02 season.

The other two athletes within this trio, senior Matt Keane and sophomore Matt Woodward, each contributed with a pair of wins. Keane won the 1,000-yard freestyle (9:58.25) and the 500-yard freestyle (4:50.37). Woodward was victorious in the 100-yard breaststroke (1:01.26) and the 200-breaststroke (2:16.94).

Following the lead of those three, the rest of the Minutemen were able to take away three more first-place finishes. Senior Rob Bellamy won the 200-yard freestyle (2:00.30) while sophomore Glenn Ginnish finished first in the 200-yard butterfly (2:16.94). The 200-yard medley relay team of junior Connor Towson, sophomore Ryan Matthews, Smith and Woodward was also victorious on the day with a time of 1:38.20. In total, the Maroon and White complied a total of eight first place finishes.

The versatility of the roster is showing early this season. In meets against UNH and BU, a variety of different swimmers have earned the team points, though Smith, Woodward and Keane are the only swimmers to take first-place finishes in the last two contests.

"We always have different people contributing in different meets," Smith said. "It's good to know that there's a bunch of other guys on the team you can count on, no matter who it is."



The squad will get a rest for this week, and its next meet will be against St. John's on Nov. 23. St. John's was one of only three non-invitational losses for the Minutemen last season.

Championship still up for grabs

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

With two weeks left in the Atlantic 10 season, absolutely nothing is settled. Four teams are tied atop the conference standings as many as five squads still have a legitimate shot at the championship and a grand total of zero teams control their own destiny.

Here are the details: Maine, Massachusetts, William and Mary and Northeastern are all 5-2 in conference play. The first tiebreaker in the conference is head-to-head records, but that gets thrown out if the teams have not played each other. Since Maine and NU don't play each other and neither do UMass and the Tribe, that gets thrown out initially.

The second tiebreaker is records against teams from the top down. This is where things can get fuzzy.

Let's assume that at least one of the four teams wins both of its last two games. That would eliminate Villanova, who already has three conference losses. Any team that loses one of its two games will also be eliminated.

The team that is most likely to win the conference, should it win out, is UMass. If the Minutemen defeat Hofstra and Rhode Island, they will win the championship under the following conditions: Maine winning out, or Northeastern losing one game. The Minutemen win all tiebreakers over William and Mary and Maine, but do not hold advantage over the Huskies because of the 42-17 loss in September. Additionally, Maine holds tiebreakers over all teams except the Minutemen. Northeastern will likely take the conference title if the Minutemen do not, as they hold advantage over the Tribe and UMass.

So if you understand all that, it's relatively impressive. Stay tuned for more info over the next couple weeks.

Hopefully things will be a little clearer.

Maroon and White Lewis's favorite colors

UMass marched into Durham, NH knowing that winning the rest of its conference games would mean an A10 regular season title and an automatic bid. It also knew it would be without starting quarterback and offensive centerpiece Jeff Krohn, who suffered his second head injury in three games the week before against Delaware. Lastly, it knew that New Hampshire had taken the previous two meetings against the Maroon and White and that running back Stephan Lewis was licking his chops in anticipation of facing the team he has posted the most success against in his career.

The Minutemen limped home shocked and blown out by the Wildcats, who held the ball for twice as long as their opponents in the first half and converted a pair of Tim Day interceptions into touchdowns en route to a 31-7 halftime lead.

Three huge plays made the difference in the game for UMass, and spelled the difference between victory and defeat. A fumble by Day at his own three-yard line led to UNH's first score on a Lewis one-yard plunge. The Wildcats then had a second and goal from the five and QB Mike Granieri fired a ball that bounced off Minuteman Corey Potter's hands and fell into Carl Betz's for a touchdown. The final play was a Day interception with under a minute to play that UNH turned into six on a 32-yard score to Lewis.

Lewis took home the Bill Knight Trophy – given annually to the game's MVP – and also won Atlantic 10 Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Turn to NOTEBOOK page 7

Delaware's Sidney Haugabrook returned an interception 41 yards for a TD as thrown to lead the Blue Hens to a 47-14 victory over Maine.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FIFTY ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.14.02

Rejuvenated

DuBois library gets second chance

By Barbara Lotto and Ashley Dolan
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENTS

Students enveloped in heavy winter coats compete with the icy wind tunnel that surrounds the towering brick edifice in the center of campus almost every day.

The physical weight of their books and the psychological stress of impending exams pull them to the library at this time of year. But what they are faced with is not the same picture of the library that they have seen in past semesters.

Library patrons are now greeted by yellow caution tape on the broken revolving door, shortened hours of operation and a longer wait for library assistance due to staff cutbacks.

All of these inconveniences are products of this semester's $5.4 million slash to the W.E.B. Du Bois Library's total budget. In late September, however, Chancellor John V. Lombardi announced that the campus would commit $3.1 million to the Library's acquisitions budget, used for the purchase of books, journals and electronic resources.

"We already feel like we've hit the bottom and we're bouncing back up," said Emily S. Silverman, an administrative staff member and reserve librarian at the library. "We lost $4.5 million. The campus restored 75 percent of that... bringing the budget back to the level it was at two years ago. That was huge for us to get that money."

The library was forced to discontinue $1 million in journal subscriptions this semester, which is seen as a serious problem by some students. "The cuts to journals and the other resources effectively keeps people from engaging in current affairs," said Adam Meringolo, a junior social thought and political economics major.

The additional money will keep the library from having to cancel any more journal subscriptions. The budget level is still not at the level of previous years, which leaves the library administration at a disadvantage. "Research libraries like us need to get an increase each year to keep up with inflation rates [of books and journals]," said Silverman. "We will have gaps. We won't be able to restore what we've lost."

Director of libraries Margo Crist said that getting the money from the Chancellor was a huge step for the campus, but emphasized that we have to realize it is not new or additional money. "We just have less of a cut to feel the loss," she said.

The Library had to discontinue its participation in a program involving the New York Times Book Review as a result of the cuts as well. In this program, the library receives a copy of the book review one week prior to its release, and purchases the books in advance to have them readily available to the public.

Despite all the bad news, said Anne C. Moore, head of reference services, "It is a tremendous thing for this campus to come up with any money at this time. It's amazing."

To compensate for the loss of paper reference materials, the library has enhanced its online database to accommodate students' needs. More electronic texts are available, and interlibrary loan is devoting more technology to get out-of-library material quicker, said Silverman. Crist added that there has been a provision of content as well.

In addition, the library launched a new program

Turn to LIBRARY, page 3

PHOTO TOUCH-UP BY JASON SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

Drug bust

UNIVERSITY POLICE DISPLAY THE VARIOUS CONTRABAND AND STOLEN GOODS CONFISCATED IN A MAJOR DRUG BUST THAT ORIGINATED FROM A WARRANT ISSUED FOR THE POSSESSION OF A STOLEN LAPTOP.

UMPD arrests two, confiscates drug cache and $24,000 in Kennedy tower

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts Police forces arrested two students in Kennedy residence hall early Tuesday morning, seizing $24,000 in cash, a large amount of marijuana, individually wrapped baggies of marijuana and other related drug paraphernalia.

The $24,000 taken represents the largest cash seizure in 30 years at the University, according to UMPD spokesman Jim Lyon.

UMPD Patrol and Detective Units came across the large amount of cash and drugs while executing an unrelated search warrant for a stolen laptop computer at 7:10 a.m. The computer was believed to be in the room after an investigation developed by Officer Gregory Oravec beginning with the report of the stolen laptop from a room in Coolidge last April.

According to Oravec, when officers arrived in the room, both students were sleeping. Oravec said that drugs and paraphernalia were mostly out and in the open. "The room was a mess," he said.

The two roommates were immediately arrested and charged, Steven Y. Nguyen, 20, of Southborough, Mass. Was charged with receiving stolen property valued at more than $250, possession with intent to distribute a Class D substance (marijuana) and possession of a Class D substance. His roommate, Yuta Nakamura, 22, of Singapore was charged with possession of a Class D substance.

"There's still more to go on the investigation," Lyons said. "There might be other charges [filed]."

Officers secured the room at that time and obtained a search warrant from Hampshire District Court for the drugs. The warrant was executed at around 1 p.m. yesterday, with a large amount of additional marijuana, paraphernalia and the cash found during the search.

UMPD Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor said, "I think it was excellent police work."

She also expressed concern with yet another drug incident occurring on campus.

"Obviously, $24,000 is a lot of cash," she said. "It puts residents at risk at that residence."

O'Connor said, "We've had a number of armed robberies, all drug related. We had six or seven last semester, one earlier this semester."

"The problem is pretty widespread," O'Connor said. "It's not one particular residence hall."

In the armed robbery earlier this semester, which occurred on Sept. 21, two men allegedly held up a seventh floor Coolidge residence hall resident at gunpoint.

UMass police subsequently arrested the robbery victim, Dustin M. Gaunt, 19, of Glastonbury, Conn., for possession of a class D substance, marijuana, with intent to distribute.

According to O'Connor, police seized $11,000 in cash from a dormitory room in a separate incident in a resident hall last spring.

24,000 DOLLARS IN CASH, VARIOUS TYPES OF MARIJUANA PARAPHERNALIA, AND A LARGE QUANTITY OF MARIJUANA ARE SOME OF THE MANY ITEMS THAT WERE CONFISCATED FROM A 7TH FLOOR DORMITORY ROOM IN KENNEDY.

PAC calls for UMass divestment with protest

By Justin Chellman
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The Palestine Action Coalition (PAC) had a rally yesterday at Noon on the Student Union steps at the University of Massachusetts.

Members of the coalition and its supporters carried white paper banners on with names of Palestinians killed by Israeli soldiers in the recent months. Behind these people were various Palestinian flags with the words "Free Palestine" written on them.

The rally was motivated by a UMass divestment campaign. The speakers explained divestment as a political tool developed during the 1980s when students adopted an anti-apartheid movement against the South African government.

Students discovered that their universities were investing in companies that supported the South African government. The Students protested the involvement with those companies stock and requested that the university divest.

The speakers representing the PAC called for the students of UMass to petition the University not to invest in companies that support Israel. The reason given was that, by supporting these companies, UMass is supporting military actions against Palestinians by the Israeli military.

The PAC also stated that college's and universities are some of the nation's largest investors, with multi-billion dollar portfolios and are better able to pressure the larger business community to change the nature of their investments.

The PAC stressed that Palestine, despite what some may believe, wants a peaceful solution to the conflict and that by supporting divestment here at UMass you are able to voice opposition to the violence and put pressure on Israel to find peaceful solutions.

According to Jonathan Elsberg, one of the speakers from the PAC, during the student movement in the 1980's concerning divestment in relation to South Africa, UMass was involved and had written into its policy that it would not invest in companies that supported the government in South Africa.

Now Elsberg says that it is no longer a written policy at UMass and he wants to re-institute its ethical investment policy. The PAC made a request to the University about a month ago to see exactly what UMass is investing In. Although the PAC doesn't have an exact list of all companies that the University has invested in, the PAC assures that because they are entitled to this information it is only a matter of time before they can compile exact data.

The PAC also spoke about Palestinians as victims of vio-

Turn to RALLY, page 2

■ rally

Stanford presents epic

Poetry reading spans 16 hours to midnight

By Kelly Farrell
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

After 16 hours and over 40 readers, the marathon reading of the epic poem "The Battlefield Where the Moon Says I Love You" came to a close in Bartlett Hall last night at around midnight.

Eric Abbott, a Master of Fine Arts student and English teacher, organized the reading of Frank Stanford's poetry with the help of his honors Creative Writing class, English 354.

Chris Pine, junior in English, towed the line of readers, beginning at 8 a.m. on Wednesday with the first of over 15,000 lines of poetry. He began with Stanford's opening words, "tonight the cars on the trees are swords in the hands of knights."

Throughout the reading there was a steady stream of new audience members, gathering as many as 30 students and professors at different times throughout the day. The audience laughed at lines such as one of Abbott's favorites, "I'm a horse confused on the highway." The audience let out a sigh upon hearing, "We all know what he [Jesus] is up to shacking up with all those town girls...and drunk as six hundred dollars."

"It's just such a different way to convey something so controversial," said Rachel Vogel, junior Comparative Literature major regarding the sexual and facial content in the poem. "It makes it so much more dramatic."

"I thought it was awesome," said Heather Comtois, a junior English major. "It makes me want to read the epic."

Three different English classes stopped by throughout the day to listen to the reading. Abbott said many people stopped by without knowing what was going on. They would stop and ask about the reading, he said, and many said upon leaving that they would like to read "The Battlefield" themselves.

"I didn't know exactly what it was. I just sat down and really got into it," said Shannon McKeon, a sophomore in English. "I think it's excellent," she said of her first impression of the book and the reading.

"He [Stanford] has a way with words," said Risa Larsen, a UMass alumni. "He wrote with a meaningful segue of images with a rhythm that isn't obvious but adds to the content. I'd like to read the whole thing," she said after reading a segment of the book at the marathon poetry reading.

Malkie Schwartz, a junior majoring in English, brought the long event to a close sharing Stanford's final line with Abbott and the remaining students, "...If you think I'm going to tell you what else I saw, you're crazy as hell."

Abbott was inspired to organize the event after reading about a similar event at Brown University in 1983. Similar to the UMass reading that ended early this morning, Brown students and professors received security clearance and huddled around a campfire to read "The Battlefield" 19 years ago.

"It's The Odyssey of our time," Abbott said of the epic that tells stories of journeys that convey modern American social problems. "I appreciated hearing it told by over 40 different people – to hear it fresh every 15 minutes."

A STUDENT READS FROM FRANK STANFORD'S 20,000-LINE POEM, "THE BATTLEFIELD WHERE MOON SAYS I LOVE YOU," IN BARTLETT HALL. THE POEM STARTED AT 8 A.M. AND FINISHED AT MIDNIGHT.

Email News at news@dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

As an engineer in the U.S. Air Force, there's no telling what you'll work on.
(Seriously, we can't tell you.)

United States Air Force applied technology is years ahead of what you'll touch in the private sector, and as a new engineer you'll likely be involved at the ground level of new and sometimes classified developments. You'll begin leading and managing within this highly respected group from day one. Find out what's waiting behind the scenes for you in the Air Force today. To request more information, call 1-800-423-USAF or log on to airforce.com.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

SGA votes on new restrooms

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Debate and more debate led last night's Student Government Association Senate meeting as members questioned the idea of gender-neutral bathrooms on campus and in residence halls.

The Restroom Revolution brought forth the issue. The group is composed of undergraduate students, graduate students and faculty on the University of Massachusetts at Amherst campus. The group requested with the recommendation of the University Policy Committee, that the SGA support their movement as they present it to the administration.

"Creating gender-neutral bathrooms doesn't limit them, it extends them and it's worded so that that administration will work with the students to make this work," Restroom Revolution member Ed Kammerer said. "I don't think it's unrealistic to enact such a thing if the State of Massachusetts can."

However, members of the Senate disagreed, questioning safety as well as the comfort levels of all individuals on campus.

"I think it's a bad idea and I'm concerned with the safety of women on this campus," Senator Dave Falvey said. "I feel that it's taking women's safety away. Basically I feel that it's a very big safety concern and putting women in a more vulnerable position."

Kammerer responded by explaining that by putting in gender-neutral bathrooms would be giving students the choice. Kammerer further explained that they are asking for one gender-neutral bathroom per building.

"In gender-neutral bathrooms it's no ones room except for people to be themselves," Kammerer said. "Generally gender-neutral bathrooms increase foot traffic and I don't think it will decrease safety."

Members called for further debate on the issue, again questioning safety as well as addressing the idea of presenting bad publicity for the University.

"This has nothing to do with sex or gender it has to do with making some people feel comfortable and the comfort of some is not as important as the comfort and safety of others," Senator Matt Progen said.

Kammerer again responded by explaining to the Senate that by instating gender-neutral bathrooms, people would not be required to use them, but to have the choice. He further stated people can and do feel uncomfortable in sex segregated bathrooms.

"This would not require people to use these bathrooms, the main point is that you can still use sex segregated bathrooms if that makes you feel comfortable," Kammerer said.

The motion, which requested the support of the SGA and that the administration actively and effectively try and find solutions to this problem was called by a roll call vote. The motion passed with 34 in favor, 12 against and 4 abstentions.

A motion to allocate $1,200 to the National Society of Black Engineers was also brought before the Senate by the Finance Committee. The money would be used to help fund a job fair the group would be attending this weekend. The Senate passed the motion.

A final motion presented in last night's meeting requested a resolution on behalf of the Senate to work and promote the fiscal well being of the University. Members expressed the need to create a coalition to promote funding within the state legislature.

"What we want to do is form another coalition like last years Save UMass and endorse it around campus," Chair of Public Policy and Relations Adrienne Girard said. "What we hope to do is make it more student run and set precedence."

The motion passed unanimously.

■ library

continued from page 1

through the Boston Library Consortium (BLC) on Nov. 12 called "BLCASK 24/7." The program is a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week chat service with reference librarians across the United States and in other countries. The service is available even on holidays. It is good for last-minute research because it allows librarians to push web pages to students, and send them Excel worksheets and PowerPoint slides.

"First and foremost it's about the users, and those are mostly students," said Silverman. "We have to provide access to the undergraduate population. That's what the library is all about."

The additional money to the acquisitions budget will not help to solve some of the library's biggest problems, however. "Main complaints have been that the hours are too short, there aren't enough people to help, and they [students] have to wait longer at service desks," said Moore, as she gestured toward the student suggestion box located on the main floor.

The 25 percent reduction in the Du Bois Library's hours was a result of cuts to the operations budget. It will not be affected by the $3.1 million increase in the acquisitions budget. The library acknowledges that the reduction in hours is still a serious problem and a legitimate complaint. "Weekdays we open at 9 a.m. and people are lined up outside to get in," said Silverman. "It makes me sick."

"The hours really suck," said Jason Bissonnette, a senior astronomy and math double major, who is also the manager of the 16th floor computer lab in the Du Bois Library. "We've had to cut our hours back [in the lab]. We can get some workers in but not all of them until the actual library opens. You're looking at a loss of two hours a day."

When it came time to determine what hours to cut, it was a difficult decision for Crist to make. The good news for students is that the library will be able to remain open during its usual extended hours during finals period, due to additional funding and support from the Provost's Office. "We've had to do some prioritizing with the loss of hours that are needed most," said Crist. "I don't know when we'll be able to restore those. It is recognized as an issue on campus. We're all working on it. It's not something that's being ignored."

This semester the library opens at 9 a.m. instead of 8 a.m. and closes at 11 p.m. instead of midnight on most weekdays. The library is open for only seven hours on Saturdays, and doesn't open until 2 p.m. on Sundays. It is open for a total of 73 hours a week, at least 25.5 hours less than any other college within the Five College System, as compiled by Bill Hector Weye of the Communications department at the University of Massachusetts. Weye's data also indicated that the UMass library is open for the fewest hours each week compared to five other peer institutions. This included the University of Connecticut library, which is open 24 hours longer each week than the Du Bois Library.

The Physical Sciences and Engineering Library, located on the second floor of Federle Graduate Research Center, suffered the largest reduction in hours out of the three libraries on campus. Because of this, the Research Library Faculty Senate Council is taking a targeted look at students' needs in the sciences this year, said Crist. She said that increased use of the library's online environment is a good way for students to access information.

The library is in the midst of completing several other projects, mostly involving relocation and consolidation of service points. One of the reasons for having to condense library materials is that cuts and lack of funding to hire new staff, combined with early retirement cost the library about 35 staff members, leaving 125 personnel, said Silverman. This called for the library to merge service points and also contributed to the cut in hours.

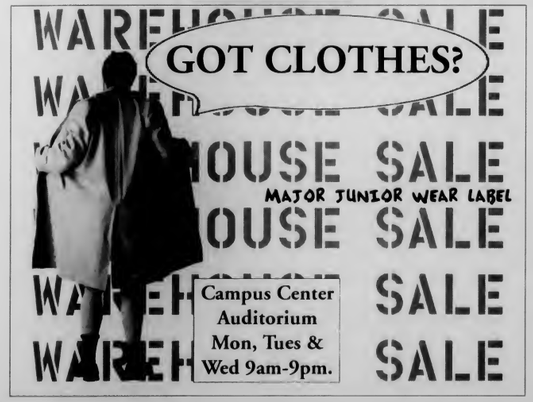
All of the current periodicals have been relocated to the main floor, which is actually a project that was planned years ago, said Crist. In addition, the music listening has been relocated to Reserves on the third floor. Government document reference and general reference have also been combined. Crist said that she hoped to make relocations that would be least inconvenient to students.

The room on the Main Floor that previously housed the library's microform collection is now home to stacks of current periodicals, multiple copy machines and one large desk for library staff.

Philip Kidd, a sophomore exercise science major, has been working at the library since the beginning of last year. Each day, he deals firsthand with the frustration facing library patrons since the move began. "No one knows where anything is anywhere, there's so much confusion all the time," said Kidd.

A desk replacement project is planned for spring, which Crist predicts will be "a fairly major disruption." It will be done to repair many of the water problems that have existed for years, she said. The following year, internal changes will be made for a more user-friendly space and more public space within the Library. "The building is not as friendly and flexible as we'd like it to be, but this opens up some opportunity," said Crist.

Crist is dedicating a continued effort to listen to the students and work in everyone's best interests. "This campus will have to decide what the Library will be as a part of the future of UMass-Amherst," she said. "We're going to minimize the damage. We're going to be the very best library we can with the resources we have. We're here for the students."



WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Miller Lite 24 cans $13.99 + dep.
Busch Lite 24 pack Bottles $9.99 + dep.
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St., Rt. 9 584-8174

Wireless Choices
Any of these phones FREE with $39.99 plan
Sony Ericsson T68LX · Nokia 1260 · Panasonic EB-TX320
OR
Get a big discount on "Any phone" If you open a one year account
$29.99 plan with $30 discount
$39.99 plan with $50 discount
$49.99 plan with $65 discount
$59.99 plan with $85 discount
$80 + plan with $110 discount
AT&T offers unlimited nights & weekends.
Nextel offers unlimited direct connect.
65 University Drive, Unit #4 Amherst, MA 01002
(right next to the HangarPub)
Phone 549-2075
Fax 549-4315
AT&T Wireless NEXTEL

UMass Amherst Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships
$2,000!!
Applicants must be full-time sophomore and junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Four scholarships will be awarded and each recipient will receive $2,000. A complete application must include a resume, an unofficial academic transcript, essay and a letter of reference.
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS AMHERST
Applications must be completed and returned to the Alumni Relations Office by Friday, November 22nd at 5 p.m.
For more information, please contact Melanie Corbeil at 545-2317 or mcorbeil@admin.umass.edu

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Boston wins bid; must now plan wisely

It was announced yesterday that the city of Boston has been selected to host the 2004 Democratic National Convention, holding off competition from New York, Detroit and Miami as potential sites.

The announcement, leaked in the early afternoon by the Associated Press, went on to state that Boston won the bid with a pledged $49.5 million financial package, including some $20 million in cash commitments. Having never hosted a national political convention before, Boston likely shifted popular thought in its favor by pledging cash before the convention had been awarded, an unprecedented move.

"Cash makes a louder statement than promised in-kind services," said Democratic senior counselor Michael Meehan, in an interview with The Boston Globe.

It does, in every situation, and for the Democrats, Boston spoke the loudest.

Now, what for Beantown?

On an individual basis of local interest, the announcement certainly draws Massachusetts Senator John Kerry more prominently into the fold, virtually assuring the Democrat 'home-field' advantage if he enters the Presidential ring, a move that speculation and popular opinion have long had him making. Kerry would have the immediate satisfaction and benefits of a town already largely in his favor; the launch of a campaign could very well lend him in a familiar, albeit larger, spotlight come 2004.

The convention (and, more appropriately, the time leading up to it) could also prove to be a launching pad for other political careers; those looking to forge favorable political identities will no doubt busy themselves around the skirts of the convention. What good can come out of that, if any, remains to be seen.

There are also the financial possibilities, and the potential for an economic influx by elevating, though briefly, the opportunity for employment and city morale. Simple math would seem to say that the number of individuals expected to sweep into the city that week will be emptying their pockets on the range of normal living expenses. The time will, pass, however, and Boston must play this one right, therefore upping their status as a major player in the national convention scene, political or otherwise, for the foreseeable future.

As important as the Democratic convention will be in the short-term, both literally and symbolically, its true merit will be judged on how Boston both handles and parlays it into a negotiating device for the future. A remarkable opportunity has been placed in the lap of the city; whether it was meant to be, or not, is the question.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

SPIRE for Dummies

JAMIE LOO

I spent the morning during class in the tech-support department of a computer software company. Aside from hearing colorful language from the surrounding cubicle, I discovered I'd heard the dumb questions people would call in with. Many of them had obvious answers. The other day I logged onto SPIRE for the first time and had trouble finding classes. So now that I've finally figured it out, I think myself to be a SPIRE expert.

If you're online with your registration appointment and you're going to register over the next 24 hours, and you don't know what you're doing, go get help. Save yourself a phone call to OIT and read this.

Here are the nuts and bolts of finding classes on SPIRE in one easy to read article (as opposed to 5 pages of propaganda on how you should use SPIRE and how it will work for you). First, pre-registration is important. More than just securing a spot in class, I don't understand why the vast majority of the student body doesn't pre-register. Most of us have a hard enough time getting classes that fit pre-registration, let alone waiting until add-drop to options dictated by class left. Well, now I can. I've pre-registered for every class I've had in during add/drop because all I have to do is drop the ones I don't like and add the ones I want. Pre-registration is the best gift since Santa Claus.

Combined with having a light pre-registration load, you have many easy options for add-drop. I suggest pre-registering as many classes as you can, dropping only the ones you don't like. Then, during add-drop, you can add classes without having to worry about losing your spot in the ones you already have.

> "...all of your fellow classmates will be sitting in front of their computers over the next few weeks, clicker-happy."

When you register you'll actually be able to see the number of seats left in a class. This eliminates the headache you'll get in the middle of winter break when that lovely blue paper comes in the mail telling you that you are registered for a course you've never attended and cancelled. Then again seeing an empty number of seats could cause more problems. I mean, your phone has probably survived pre-registration beatings on numerous occasions, but will your monitor or laptop? Probably not. If you don't get in, never fear. Some classes will have online waiting lists, and there's still always a chance during add/drop.

As much as you probably love staring at the Course Catalog on SPIRE, don't be fooled by it. Just because there's a description doesn't mean it's being offered next semester and staring at the screen for prolonged periods of time will not suddenly produce the name of the professor or the meeting times. That information is under Class Search, which doesn't do much until you figure out what other options to click on. If you're rushing through it, it's easy to screw up. First, make sure you have the correct semester and click on Basic. This will bring you to another search page, where you can pick a department and see all of the classes being offered for the semester for that department. There is also a link to a list of courses that fulfill the general education requirements as well. When it comes to this feature, I actually miss the pre-registration booklet. At least with the book you could see all the classes being offered right in front of you. Now you'll have to click backwards and re-enter information under each department in order to see their classes. The pre-registration booklet could also be carried around in your backpack for light reading at the PVTA stop (when one cannot find The Collegian of course).

Call me old fashioned, but I'm going to sincerely miss the phone registration system. As I write this I haven't physically pre-registered for classes yet and I'm slightly worried. PeopleSoft has already proven itself to be slightly evil; people that work on campus only get checks every other Friday. Oh, and it also screwed up files at Cleveland State University in 1999. No biggie.

Times are changing, and I need to shut up, log on and deal, or risk not graduating in May. I will nostalgically register at 12:45 pm and think about that familiar automated voice that I won't get to hear anymore. The voice that used to tell me, "The action you requested cannot be processed. The class you selected is overenrolled..." Now all I can do is gawk at the computer screen at the ZERO seats left in the class I need to graduate.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

The red tape diaries

MARK OSTROFF

It's a Friday afternoon in the summer of 2001. I get an e-mail that day from an American liaison for my school abroad, telling me that I needed to send some records to him. "Ok," I thought, "No big deal." I then take the first of what will become many walks to Whitmore.

"I need my records faxed to this number."

"We can't do that."

"Why not?"

"Because the guy who uses the fax machine isn't here today."

"Ok then. Will this man be here on Monday?"

"He should be."

They wouldn't let me fax them myself. Apparently, faxing is something that has to be left to trained professionals. I sent an e-mail to the liaison, for him to expect my records on Monday instead.

That same evening, I had left for Salt Lake City. One week later, I got a call saying that Moscow was still waiting for my records. I was leaving Utah Sunday morning, anyway. I flew to Boston and had bussed out to Amherst to try to have my records faxed.

I arrived at Whitmore and they gave me the same excuse as last time. All that waiting for the mysterious "fax man" was too much for financial aid to handle. I proceeded to yell and implement a one-man sit-in and advised them to call the police for a resolution, because I wasn't moving. They finally gave me my documents and I faxed them myself.

While I was in Russia, I found out that the International Programs Office didn't know what country I was in, or whether or not I was even a UMass student. In their records, I was a Florida State student, living in Spain. Health Services had on record that I was traveling to the Soviet Union. Imagine that: a building full of medical doctors who don't even know whether or not Communism has collapsed. Scary.

After coming back from Russia this past summer, telephoning Whitmore was useless. After doing the math, I realized I spent less money on gas, driving to Amherst, than the actual times I tried to call them from Boston.

The first two times I tried to go there, they were closed "from the extreme heat." My girlfriend called me from her office in Moscow and her colleagues started to hysterically laugh at me when they heard about it.

When the weather was cooler, I was personally told that they could not reenroll me because they needed some proof that I was in the country... I never thought Whitmore could be so existential.

After this passing dilemma, I had sent Whitmore a document that they needed from me. They lost the document four times before I personally showed up and made them search for the faxes and mail I sent them. They finally found all four copies that I sent them.

> "I never thought Whitmore could be so existential."

"Can you make sure that these get processed?"

"The guy who processes them isn't here today."

"Will he be here within the next week?"

"Hopefully."

It took the benevolently professional "fax man" over a week to take a single piece of paper and, dare I say, put it in a folder.

After years of dedicated drunken painting and scraping, UMass had mercy on me and let me move to Brown Hall. Things were good, but classes were starting to heat up. I decided to take a night off of studies, one Saturday.

A friend had invited me to a party, but we decided to start the night off with a little drinking in my room, before heading off to the back woods to charm the Mt. Holyoke girls and mock their Hampshire counterparts. My friend planned on calling me at 9:30. The phone rang at 9:45. Who could that be? I'm sure it's my friend. Who else am I expecting to call at this time? Henry Kissinger?

"Hello?"

"Hello, is Mark Ostroff there?"

"Who is this?"

"This is the Brown Hall resident director's office."

(FIA? My friends and I have a long history of making these kinds of calls to each other as a practical joke. So, I went along with it.)

"No, I'm sorry, Mark passed away."

"He passed away?"

"Yes, he [expletive past tense verb] to death."

"When did this happen?"

"Just now." (Giggling like an idiot)

"Mr. Ostroff, please come down to the cluster office. What you are doing is not funny."

I inquired whether it was my friend playing a trick on me or if it really was a guy that thinks someone could [expletive verb] to death. Actually, the latter was correct.

After a yell-down for my tasteless behavior toward the housing bureaucracy, I asked why they would do something as mercilessly stupid as making me move to some other floor on a Saturday night at 10:00 p.m. They claimed that the room that I was in was supposed to be left empty. After an hour of phone calls and yelling, I kept my room.

Conclusion: I was right and they were just plain nuts.

At this school, there is so much red tape that students are known to transfer and save themselves the trouble of dealing with backward administrative measures. Don't worry folks: a logo on the water tower, a statue and a raise for Bulger are ways that this university tackles such problems.

Mark Ostroff is a Collegian Columnist

The real political spectrum

CAREY

The recent victory of the Republican Party in the mid-term election has sparked a fever-pitched alarm amongst the leftist community. Most talk about moving to Canada, or salivate over the fantasy that Republican oppression might result in a miraculous proletarian coup not seen since the sixties. However the significance of the Republican victory seems a bit overplayed in my opinion. A unique aspect of American politics is that it provides an illusion of choice. Bipartisanism doesn't exist in politics; it only exists in the individual beliefs of the public. Midterm elections are really more of a consensus of beliefs held by the voting public (of which I'm not a part of.)

The true Democrats and Republicans are not found in Washington DC, but in the public individual. Politicians adopt a name of one party or another, and exploit the supporters in the name of careerism. As a person with some political insight I'm often asked whether I consider myself to be politically left or right. Normally, I laugh and try to explain that I prefer not to affiliate with either of these two bi-polar evils.

There are two types of right-winger in the world: those who are completely disillusioned with what really goes on in the world, and those that understand the evils ways in which it works, and simply don't care to do anything about it. The majority of right-wingers make up the latter. Generally they're too busy being obsessed with guns, fundamental religious worship and supporting illogical laws that infringe on their own personal freedom to be concerned with reality. If these people are intelligent they stubbornly choose to remain ignorant. In a brighter world they wouldn't be allowed to vote at all, but expected to do nothing more than concern themselves with sports, labor, personal reputation, and anything else that might comprise their ignorant little lives.

The other type of right-winger is probably the most dangerous. These right-wingers fully accept the rotten world and don't care to fix it. Their indifference makes them shrewd politicians. And they can often easily exploit the gullible public to fill both political ranks in Washington with the "right men."

In the opposite direction we have two types of leftist. There are some types of liberals who are morally well informed and who are on a fruitless quest to "save" the world. The best they can hope for is to meet failure, before they're hopelessly altruistic ideals gets them into serious trouble. Their intentions are good, but their efforts are tragically out of sync with the way the world turns. This is as close anyone comes to having laudable intentions in politics, and for this it is easy to portray them as being crazy and eccentric. A typical downfall of most liberal intellectuals is their inability to understand how much their radical beliefs (though legitimate) alienate them from the general public. When liberal intellectuals attempt to act on their beliefs they're often stunned by the lack of public and financial support. This more often than not leads to their eventual failure. However, I think these liberals could be more successful if they concentrated their efforts on one radical idea at a time rather than shocking the American public with a wave of leftist ideology.

> "They talk about throwing down the walls of conformity, but fail to adequately explain why this is a positive action, or what exactly a wall of conformity is."

The other type of lefty is a detestable hypocrite. They preach self-acceptance and expressive liberty, but are socially exclusive towards those who buy certain brands of "mainstream" clothing, and who bath on a daily basis. Completely out of touch with their own movement, they think they can change the world eating a tofu diet and writing Idiotic slam poetry. They are seldom well read, but proudly wear a thin disguise of intellectualism. They talk about throwing down the walls of conformity, but fail to adequately explain why this is a positive action, or what exactly a wall of conformity is. For them, the solution to politics and life is simple, and if they only had the articulation to explain it to other people then, according to them, the world would be a better place.

This is basically the spectrum of public political belief, as gray as it may seem. It's wrong to wash your hands of the whole political scene, but at the same time there's nothing grand about being affiliated with the whole rotten process. The best thing a citizen can do is to be well informed, keep an open mind, and make decisions devoid of the pitfalls of human nature.

Robert Carey is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.14.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

NIFF THE NORTHAMPTON INDEPENDENT FILM FESTIVAL

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

NORTHAMPTON – Film festivals are meant to do more than gather a cross section of films into a one-week itinerary. They are reminders of the sheer magical power of cinema. The eighth annual Northampton Independent Film Festival took place downtown last weekend, Nov. 6-10, and a film critic couldn't have been happier (or more tired). Sitting in those theaters, I was in awe and rapture. I was watching movies transport me, once again, away from the real world and into a whole new universe.

The festival couldn't have picked a better film to kick off with. Made-Up is an utterly winning romantic comedy about age and beauty and the connections (and disconnections) between the two. Brooke Adams (the original Invasion of the Body Snatchers) bites into what could be a career role, playing Kate, a 50-something divorcee and ex-actress being profiled in a documentary being made by her film student sister (played by Adams' real sister, and screenwriter, Lynne.) Her husband has left her for a younger, blond haired bimbo, and her image-obsessed daughter has become nearly as obsessed with becoming a cosmetologist and giving her mom a makeover.

As filming progresses and gets farther from being a documentary, Kate meets and slowly falls for a local restaurateur/aspiring actor (Tony Shalhoub, Adams' real-life husband and the movie's director), hired to play her "love interest." Adams gives a fully felt performance as a middle-aged woman trying to deal with her place in an image obsessed world; Lynne Adams' script and Shalhoub's direction are so light-fingered, never delivering the themes in ham-handed fashion.

My favorite film at the festival this year was called Pipe Dream, and it may be one of the wittiest, most incisive romantic comedies of the year. Martin Donovan, the dour Hal Hartley regular who is like the indie world's answer to Ralph Fiennes, gets to play something he hasn't quite done before; he gets to be a romantic lead. And Donovan proves to be a charming and wily romantic leading man.

Donovan plays David, a New York plumber, who, in an act of desperate hubris, pretends to be a hip indie director to meet women. He recreates himself as David Coppolberg, and he sets up fake casting calls using pages of script from his neighbor Toni (Mary-Louise Parker). But David bits a snag. Soon, buzz begins to snowball around the project, and, despite himself, he directs the project, with Toni feeding him instructions via headphone.

The plot is a silly sitcom creation, but it's just believable enough to work. Pipe Dream has the form and essence of a mainstream Hollywood romance (some of the conflicts seem forced), but it dares to be deadpan, witty and funny. The movie has a wry, perceptive spirit of intelligent larkishness. The movie repeatedly touches upon the way people are perceived; as a plumber, David is virtually unnoticed, yet because he has the cache of indie-hip credibility, he becomes a wanted man. The relationship between David and Toni has a screwball zinginess, and the Pipe Dream script is filled with the kind of sharply written humor that has all but evaporated in this brave new world of toilet humor.

Easily the worst film at the festival was Don't Ask, Don't Tell, a spoof of z-grade 50s sci-fi movies and the military's non-stance on homosexuality that wants to be What's Up, Tiger Lily? but recalls more than anything, the witless buffoonery of this year's Kung Pow! Enter the Fist. The filmmakers have taken footage from the Peter Graves' Killers from Space and recorded a new soundtrack telling the tale of a macho military man made gay by aliens from Uranus. The jokes consist of nothing but gratuitous F&A, limp political satire, easy ethnic slurs and dated references to past hits like Apocalypse Now. The movie wants to be as sophisticated and sharp as a "Mystery Science Theater 3,000" sketch, but it comes across as an "MST3k" sketch gone horribly awry. The jokes are meant to prod our politically correct sensors, but director Doug Mills only showcases the rudimentary sense of humor of a third grader. Don't Ask, Don't Tell is a movie for anyone who still thinks Mad Magazine is the height of clever satire.

No recent movie I've seen has captured the aimless, stop-and-go rhythms of the young slacker's life more acutely than Andrew Bujalski's Funny Ha-Ha. From the fumbling, awkward attempts at intimate connections to the drunken parties and the menial jobs, Bujalski captures every realistic, painstakingly mundane moment of everyday life. The movie follows Marnie (quietly luminous Kate Dollenmeyer, in her one and only movie), a pretty young woman drifting through life with a crush on her long-time male friend Alex. At times, Bujalski captures the mundane all too well and the movie comes off as static and enervated. There is a sense Funny Ha-Ha would have been better suited as a short film rather than a feature length production. Yet Bujalski knows how to craft a movie in which everything seems to have sprung form the tap of the real world. And every step of the way, Dollenmeyer draws you in. With her lopsided smile and large round eyes, she has the beauty of an It Girl actress, yet she also acts with the vulnerability, soulfulness and naturalism, marking a born star.

The film festival also played host to one of the most ambitious and spectacularly reviewed films released by a major studio this year. Spirited Away is the latest anime creation from Hayao Miyazaki, the creator of films such as Princess Mononoke and Kiki's Delivery Service. Chihiro (voice of Daveigh Chase, who gave the vocals to Lilo in Disney's Lilo and Stitch and plays the creepy ghost-girl in The Ring) is a 10-year-old scared of moving to a new town. At a rest stop, she wanders away from her parents and winds up trapped in another world, run by an evil witch and inhabited by an endless array of spirits. Chihiro's parents have been magically turned into pigs, and the girl gets a job at the local bathhouse in order to find a way to save her family.

Spirited Away has a majestic grandeur missing from many of the animated films released nowadays. The images are full of awe and wonder, and Miyazaki's painterly visuals are a gorgeous, ecstatic tribute to the power that two-dimensional animation can still have. Miyazaki refuses to use computer animation, instead relying on old-fashioned techniques, and the images have a nearly tactile vitality. That said, Spirited Away, at over two hours, goes on too long. Despite Miyazaki's bravura skill in weaving a fantasy as breathtaking as this, Spirited Away manages to start sputtering out. Still, it has more life than a lot of Disney's recent output.

Documentaries were also a big part of the NIFF output. Bill Haney's The Gift of the Game is a funny look at how a bunch of former pro-baseball players traveled down to Cuba to reinstate a youth baseball league created by Ernest Hemingway that folded after Castro came to power. The movie is narrated by novelist Randy Wayne, who deftly creates portraits of the baseball pros helping him on his quest. They travel to Havana, loaded down with over 4,000 pieces of equipment and traverse the countryside looking for the former players of Hemingway's team. Haney is adept at drawing a nostalgic picture of the communal spirit of the sport. What he doesn't do, unfortunately, is develop any personality for the Cubans. As they are shown, the Cubans are nothing more than symbols for we-are-the-world unity; they are an exotic other, joyful in their poverty because they have baseball. It would have been nicer – and it would have carried more resonance – had Haney done more than give a cursory glance to Castro's fascist regime and the economic blight surrounding the poor rural Cubans. The Gift of the Game is crisply edited and entertaining enough, but it's undone by its shallow, if good-intentioned, liberal humanism.

A better documentary could be seen in Adrift. Tom Curran III's lyrical, haunting, poignant dissection of a late parent's lin-

Turn to FILM, page 7

MICROLOGY

Dedicated to the subtle science of microwave cookery in all its forms and varients

WITH JESSICA PELLETIER

Hey, guess what? It's been miserable outside for a good three days now, and I think a little comfort food is in order for us all. And what could possibly be more comforting than the presence of a large steaming bowl of meat and a side of potatoes? Nothing that's right, good answer. Except, perhaps, a thick slice of creamy pumpkin cheesecake and a cold glass of milk. Let's begin this concerto of excellence in ground meat with the mixing of a pound of ground chuck with the egg of one chicken, three quarters of a cup dried bread crumbs and a quarter cup of diced onions. A quicker way to mix these ingredients together is by squishing the food in a Ziploc bag and kneading it until the meat paste has decided to combine itself into a big pink clump. Squish in loaf pan and make sure you're free of beef cracks (or else you'll be left with a crumble mess) and cover with wax paper. Cook at full power for five minutes.

At the end of cooking time, drain the beef and make a sauce with one tablespoon of brown sugar, a teaspoon each of Worcestershire, mustard and ketchup. Finish with a pinch of garlic salt and baste your meat. Recover with wax paper and cook for 20 minutes at half power. Should you not trust the wattage of your microwave, finish the loaf at full power just to be safe. Cover the pan with foil and allow it to stew in its juices until you plan on digging in.

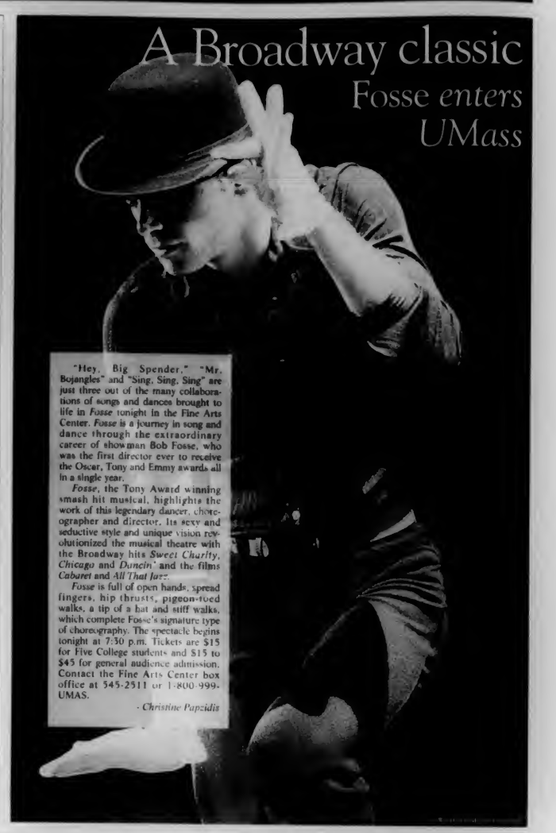
Whereas meat is nothing without potatoes, Betty Crocker sells double serving packets of instant potatoes that require butter, milk and fifteen minutes to creamy, starchy bliss.

Meatloaf ingredients:
1 lb. of ground beef
1 egg
3/4 cup of dried bread crumbs
1/4 cup diced onions

I'm not including step-by-step detail on how to make these things...it would be like typing 60 lines on how to make the perfect Easy Mac. You already know how to do it and explaining it would be like horseflys bites - irritating and totally unnecessary.

Now, for the creme de la creme: pumpkin cheesecake. This recipe requires the use of a stove, but the amount of amazing that this cheesecake is, defies description. Grab a large mixing bowl and add sixteen ounces of softened cream cheese, a half-cup of white sugar and a teaspoon of vanilla. Beat until lump-free and add two eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition.

Mission accomplished? Then add half the filling into a ready-made graham cracker crust and save the other half for the pumpkin filling. Add a teaspoon cinnamon and nutmeg to the remaining batter and beat in a half a cup of pumpkin pie filling. Spoon the pumpkin layer onto the top layer and swirl with a butter knife to achieve that marbled fancy look that just screams, "Hey, look at me; view how competent a cook I am through my swirlie cheesecake pastry."



In a preheated 325°F oven, bake the cheesy goodness for 35-40 minutes or until the middle is set. Chill overnight or for three hours if you're really not into waiting that long. Top with whipped cream and pecan halves for an optional garnish.

I'm out of here for now; my hands have gone temporarily numb due to typing and the lack of heat in this basement, and I fear hazelnut coffee is my only salvation. Next week let's talk about cooking terms and where they came from. Think about it, if someone threatened to end your life unless you knew what mire poix was, would you still be living today?

Jessica Pelletier is a Collegian Columnist.

A Broadway classic

Fosse enters UMass

"Hey, Big Spender," "Mr. Bojangles" and "Sing, Sing, Sing" are just three out of the many collaborations of songs and dances brought to life in Fosse tonight in the Fine Arts Center. Fosse is a journey in song and dance through the extraordinary career of showman Bob Fosse, who was the first director ever to receive the Oscar, Tony and Emmy awards all in a single year.

Fosse, the Tony Award winning smash hit musical, highlights the work of this legendary dancer, choreographer and director. Its sexy and seductive style and unique vision revolutionized the musical theatre with the Broadway hits Sweet Charity, Chicago and Dancin' and the films Cabaret and All That Jazz.

Fosse is full of open hands, spread fingers, hip thrusts, pigeon-toed walks, a tip of a hat and stiff walks, which complete Fosse's signature type of choreography. The spectacle begins tonight at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 for Five College students and $15 to $45 for general audience admission. Contact the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

- Christine Papcidis

Guess who's coming to dinner?

On Thursday, November 14, four great restaurants and their chefs will be here to prepare your favorites

Great Wall Restaurant at Worcester DIning Commons

EASTSIDE at Franklin Dining Commons

Goten In Wonderland Of Japan at Hampshire Dining Commons

BUB'S BAR-B-Q at Berkshire Dining Commons

Presented to you by

University of Massachusetts Food Services

YOUR CAMPUS MEAL PLAN

Resident MEAL PLAN

8 Mile soundtrack falls short of the film's quality

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACK
Music From and Inspired By the Motion Picture 8 Mile
Shady/ Interscope

Eminem's acting debut, 8 Mile, is a supremely good movie, a well-worn tale told with electricity and gritty intelligence. The movie is great, and one would hope a soundtrack compilation accompanying it would be similarly electrifying. But the 8 Mile soundtrack is a mixed bag of the vibrant, the mediocre and the just plain bad.

Not surprisingly, the album comes alive on the tracks headlined by Slim Shady himself. "Lose Yourself," the pounding, ferociously riveting first single, has already barnstormed radio. The song is Em at his best. His rhymes burst forth in a torrent, and his flow is slippery smooth over his lyrical prowess. The production is a dead serious affair, a beat-heavy dramatic backing to Eminem's vocal talents. His lyrics, which encapsulates the story of 8 Mile, feature a first in Em's music: he inspires, with the lines "You only get one shot/do not miss your chance to blow/ the opportunity comes once in a lifetime, yo."

The operatic "Rabbit Run" is nearly as good. Short, fast and without a traditional hook-and-verse structure to it, the song may put off a few who expect a more traditional Eminem song. The beats are downright experimental compared to Em's other songs, with heavy Gothic backing and ticking clock production. Tension wires itself through the song, and Em's decision to avoid a completely explosive follow-through is an interesting and successful gambit.

The rest of the album is up in the air. Xzibit puts his pitbull growl to good use on "Spit Shine," and Macy Gray adds some slow-groove funk with "Time of My Life." Jay-Z's "8 Miles and Runnin'" (featuring Freeway) loops and smokes. Underground rapper 50 Cent contributes two songs and consults with Eminem and Obie Trice on "Love Me." (No, it's not a love song.) Cent's "Places to Go" is awful, but he redeems himself later with "Wanksta" the hip-hop track that has rightfully gained him attention in the underground world.

If half the album is decent, the other half is terrible. "Wasting My Time" by pop-rock group BOOMkat (led by Em's co-star Taryn Manning) has three strikes to it: it's too low-watt in energy, it's lyrically cliché and feels out of place on this almost entirely rap-oriented album. Nas' "U Wanna Be Me" is skeletal; Rakim's "R.A.K.I.M." suffers from the opposite problem, as it feels cluttered and overproduced. And tracks from Obie Trice, Gangstarr and Young Zee feel like rejects from D-12's hideous Devil's Night. Ironically, D-12 contributes "Rap Game" which is superior to most of the material on its own album.

It's probably not a huge surprise the soundtrack is a mixed bag – to anticipate a level degree of quality from a varying number of musical acts is a myopic expectation. But quality acts such as Nas should have put in more effort than what they contribute. Bad acts like Young Zee should have been eliminated, and everyone should have followed Eminem's lead and put effort in crafting a more than half-decent album on the whole.

■ film

continued from page 5

gering – and not always positive – effects on their children. Curran, an award-winning cameraman, strings together footage from old home movies, interviews with his family, and eerily evocative cinematography with his own narration to sketch in a portrait of his father, a charismatic, ambitious politico who left Boston to become a D.A. in Alaska. Tom Curran Jr. was a loving father, but also an overly driven one who pressured his children to succeed. The ripple effect his life and death had on his children, as shown here, as more gut-wrenching power than Lifetime channel inauthentic dramas like White Oleander and Divine Secrets of the Ya-Ya Sisterhood could ever hope for.

The NIFF had far too many films for one lonely critic to see over the course of less than one week, but it gave an honest selection of the good, bad and sublime. It did the thing a film festival should do: it made one forget a world beyond the one of movies existed outside the

www dot daily collegian dot com

Work. Leisure. Work. Leisure. Work. Leisure. Why not have both?

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002

What does a job at Ernst & Young give you? The best of both worlds. After all, the focus of our business has always been its people, and we are devoted to helping them realize their career goals while encouraging their personal aspirations. The result is you'll be challenged, but you'll also be rewarded. Maybe that's why we've been named one of the "100 Best Companies to Work For," four years in a row. So why not bounce on over and see for yourself?

ey.com/us/careers

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

■ Hofstra

...SHE'S A DANGER EVERY WAY IN HIS FAST REGULAR ... AGAINST HOFSTRA

Champs looking ahead to Raiders

By Howard Ulman
ASSOCIATED PRESS

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) – The Patriots' Lawyer Milloy started talking about what Oakland's mood might be like when the two teams play for the first time since their much-debated playoff game last season.

"It's been evident..." he began. Then he paused. Then the talkative strong safety backpedaled, leaving the thought hanging.

"I'm not even going to talk about last year," Milloy said Wednesday. "That's last year, you know."

Everybody knows.

Even Patriots running back Kevin Faulk pretended to forget about the game: "I don't think I remember what happened last year."

The subject might be taboo with a pair of 5-4 teams that have rebounded from four-game losing streaks and are playing a critical game Sunday night. But the memory is strong.

The game last Jan. 19 was played in a heavy snowstorm and ended in heated debate when a replay reversal with less than two minutes left in regulation led to Adam Vinatieri's 45-yard field goal that tied the game with 27 seconds left. Vinatieri kicked a 23-yarder in overtime to help the Patriots win it 16-13.

More famous than the Vinatieri's clutch kicks was an apparent fumble by New England quarterback Tom Brady on his team's winning drive. The play initially was ruled a fumble, but after a video review, the officials said Brady was trying to put the ball away when he brought it down, and that the miscue was an incompletion.

The episode introduced the term "tuck rule" to the football vernacular, and made the refs extremely unpopular in Oakland.

The rule states that "any intentional forward movement of his arm starts a forward pass, even if the player loses possession of the ball as he is attempting to tuck it back toward his body."

Brady nearly had the ball tucked back into his body when Charles Woodson knocked it loose and teammate Greg Biekert recovered. The Raiders grousted about the ruling after the game – "I feel like we had one taken away from us," Jerry Rice said – and during the offseason.

Like Milloy, Brady prefers to look ahead.

"I think I've heard enough 'tuck' for the last eight months," Brady said, adding that the officials "got the call right."

And the Patriots went on to win the Super Bowl.

Raiders coach Bill Callahan has said he doesn't want to talk about last year's game. Too much emphasis on it could hurt his team.

"It might distract them a little bit, but they're a veteran team," Patriots center Damien Woody said. "I'm sure they're going to be well-prepared."

Both teams had to modify their game plans last season because of the snow, and Milloy thinks the Raiders could have handled the conditions better.

"It slowed us down last year," he said. "They played well in the snow."

Sunday's game is in Oakland, so the conditions shouldn't matter. Milloy expects the game to be as physical as if their last meeting wasn't so dramatic.

"I'm not going to feed off of last year," he said. "I'm not going to fall into that trap."

Woody said he's sure the Raiders are thinking about that game, but "we're not worried about all the calls and everything that happened in last year's game. I'm sure that's on their mind, but for us it's just another business trip."

The playoff win was the last game played at Foxboro Stadium, which was torn down and replaced by Gillette Stadium.

On Sunday, the Patriots must play in front of the Raiders' raucous fans, who haven't forgotten the way their team's season ended.

"I've never played there, and I hear the fans are rowdy and they're crazy," Patriots linebacker Tedy Bruschi said. "That's just something we're just going to have to block out.

"It's a black-hole stadium, but it's a green field of grass and those are always the same."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Emergency Closing Policy — Finals, Closing, and Parking, Amherst Campus

Closing Options*	Delayed Opening: Until 11:00am (exam period 10:30am)	Closed All Day	Closed During Day	Cancellation of Evening Activities
Watch or Listen... When	starting at 6:00 am	starting at 6:00 am	when decided	starting at 2:00 pm
	STAY TUNED TO YOUR RADIO FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION
To	Amherst (WFCR, WMUA, WRNX/WPNI) – Greenfield (WHAI) Northampton (WHMP) – Pittsfield (WBRK) Springfield (WHYN, WGGB-TV, WWLP-TV) – Campus Dorms (HSCN) (see alphabetical listing below for frequency numbers)
What will be affected	Classes – Day Care – Offices – Activities – Textbook Annex – Meetings – University Store – Convenience Stores – Continuing Education – Bluewall – Hatch – Snack Bars at Physical Plant, Whitmore, and Hampden
What won't be affected (Unopposed ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL will report to work)	Dining Commons – Health Services – Hotel – Police/Security – Coffee Shop – Physical Plant – Conference Services – University Operator. Other areas as pre-designated (consult your Department Head)
Athletics, Fine Arts, and Mullins Center	Athletics, Fine Arts, and Mullins Center events will take place as scheduled unless a separate announcement is made on local radio stations. Athletics Information: Sports Information Hot Line 545-2439 Fine Arts Information: 545-2511, 545-0192, or 545-0480 Mullins Center Information: 545-3001
Bus Service	Buses will run unless announced separately on local radio stations. Call 545-1633 for recorded message or www.umass.edu/bus for details.
Library	Same as University
Academic Calendar	Delayed Opening Until 10:30am	The Library will make every effort to open. Call Library Hours Hot Line: 545-0414
and Intersession
Exam Period
Sat/Sun/Holiday	Listen to radio or call Library Hours Hot Line: 545-0414
Information	Call Emergency Closing Hot Line 545-3630, watch Housing Service Cable Network (HSCN), or go to WWW.UMASS.EDU.

* If there is no vertical line, the information applies for each option

AM		FM
WAIN	1340	WHMP	99.1
WHAI	1270	WHYN	93.1
WHMP	1400	WMUA	91.1
WHYN	560	WRNX	100.9
WPNI	450

WGGB – TV Channel 40 WWLP – TV Channel 22

RESCHEDULING OF FINAL EXAMS ON OFFICIAL SNOW DAYS - FALL 2002

In order to reschedule final examinations in case of snow, two alternate exam periods have been devised. They are 6:30 p.m. and 8:45 p.m. each exam day. The use of these alternative periods in the event of closings is outlined below. This policy goes into effect ONLY if the University is officially closed. The snow day Hot Line is 545-3630. If the University is open, all exams are expected to take place as scheduled. Each faculty member should inform his or her class of the planned time and location of the rescheduled final exam in the event of a snow day. All rescheduled exams will be held in the same location as published in the final exam schedule

If the University is closed until 10:30 a.m.

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm same day
10:30 am	held as originally scheduled
1:30 pm	held as originally scheduled
4:00 pm	held as originally scheduled

If the University is closed all afternoon and all evening:

8:00 am	held as originally scheduled
10:30 am	held as originally scheduled
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day

except:

1:30 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 21
4:00 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 21

If the University is closed all day but open in the evening:

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm same day
10:30 am	rescheduled to 8:45 pm same day
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day

except:

1:30 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec 21
4:00 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec 21

If the University is closed all day and all evening:

8:00 am	rescheduled to 6:30 pm next exam day
10:30 am	rescheduled to 8:45 pm next exam day
1:30 pm	rescheduled to 6:30 pm exam day after next
4:00 pm	rescheduled to 8:45 pm exam day after next

except:

1:30 pm Dec. 19	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 21
4:00 pm Dec. 19	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 21
8:00 am Dec. 20	rescheduled to 8:00 am Dec. 21
10:30 am Dec. 20	rescheduled to 10:30 am Dec. 21
1:30 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 1:30 pm Dec. 21
4:00 pm Dec. 20	rescheduled to 4:00 pm Dec. 21

AMHERST CAMPUS

In effect from 12/01/02 to 04/15/03

The Amherst Campus Parking Snow Policy allows OVERNIGHT parking (1:00 a.m. to 7:00 a.m.) and parking during a snow emergency closing period.

OVERNIGHT PARKING (1:00 a.m. to 7:00 a.m.) ...

PARKING ALLOWED

Lot 24 Lot 62 Lot 25 (north of roadway to Yellow lot only)
Lot 30 Lot 63 Lot 32 (west of Lincoln Avenue only, closest to Prince Dormitory)
Lot 41 Lot 65 Lot 43 (excluding Thatcher Way (except at meters))
Lot 42 Yellow Lots Lot 46 (except at meters)
Lot 52

PARKING NOT ALLOWED

Lot 26 Lot 60 Lot 25 (south of the roadway to Yellow lot)
Lot 27 Lot 64 Lot 32 (east of Lincoln Avenue only)
Lot 31 Lot 66 Lot 45 (except by special permit only)
Lot 33 Lot 67 Any camper trailer (excluding Southwest horseshoe)
Lot 34 Lot 68 All parking meters, including Fearing Street meters
Lot 35 Lot 71

SNOW EMERGENCY PARKING – ESSENTIAL PERSONNEL ...

During a snow emergency closing period, essential personnel who report to work may only park in the following areas:

Lot 23 (west of Southwest)
Lot 25 (west of Physical Plant and north of roadway to Yellow lot only)
Lot 30 (adjacent to Power Plant)
Lot 31 (south of Engineering and Lederle Graduate Research Center)
Lot 32 (west of Lincoln Avenue only, closest to Prince Dormitory)
Lot 34 (south of Isenberg SOM)
(south of Morrill Science Center)
Lot 63 Worcester Dining Commons lot only (west of Worcester DC)

PARKING ALLOWED – ONLY WITH APPROPRIATE PERMIT

Lot 21 Lot 47 North Village
Lot 22 Lot 49 Lincoln Apartments
Lot 29 Lot 50 Any posted reserved space
Lot 44 Lot 54

SUGGESTIONS / IDEAS FOR PARKING "SMART" ON A SNOW DAY ...

1. Use the UMass bus service.
2. Car pool rides whenever possible.
3. Walk if possible.
4. Have someone drop you off.
5. If space is not available in your assigned lot, go to either Lot 25 (north of roadway) or Yellow lot (both west of Physical Plant). During snow conditions, it is not possible to Lot 62 guarantee normal lot capacity will be available.
6. If you receive a parking citation and believe it was improperly issued, you may appeal it at Parking Services within 21 days from the date issued. Appeals can be submitted in writing, appealed in person to the Hearing Clerk, or emailed (hearings@admin.umass.edu).

University Productions and Concerts Presents
Passion for Peace
Junoon
Admission is FREE
Thursday, November 14th - 8:00 PM • Campus Center Auditorium
Advanced tickets available Nov 11th at Tix Unlimited for more info visit www.geocities.com/upcpromos or www.junoon.com

Newbury Comics
$8.99 CD
Howie Day In-Store peforance at Newbury Comics!
Saturday November 16th
at 1 pm
HOWIE DAYAUSTRALIA
Newbury Comics
50 Main Street
Amherst
413-256-8840

SENIOR KELLY SICKAVISH (LEFT) AND THE MINUTEMEN HAVE WON TWO OF THEIR LAST FIVE GAMES. THEY HAVE LOST THE OTHER THREE GAMES BY JUST ONE POINT EACH – TWICE IN OVERTIME.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

been by a single goal.

Furthermore, Lowell, like the Maroon and White, fields an extremely young team with 14 freshmen in its lineup, as well as a goaltending corps that had never seen collegiate action prior to this campaign. But with a seasoned group up front, including one of the conference's most talented lines, Lowell still has enough firepower to create havoc for the opposition.

"I think that they have a different situation," Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "Their players that have been steering the boat have been older, so that experience gives them that advantage."

Lowell's top trio of seniors – Ed McGrattie, Stephen Slonina and Peter Hay – have carried the offensive load so far, as expected. The line has amassed 38 points this season, an average of over four points per outing. But while lighting the lamp has been plentiful for the Hawks, the young netminding tandem of Dominic Smart and Chris Davidson has been far from stellar, with an unimpressive 3.97 GAA and an .854 save percentage, goaltending.

But the River Hawk offense has kept the team afloat, as evidenced by an upset win at Colorado College and a thorough dissection against Rensselaer. And with down-to-the-wire losses against Hockey East powerhouses Boston College (4-3), New Hampshire (4-3) and Providence (6-5 in OT), the Minutemen will undoubtedly have their hands full in both matchups.

"Their coach, Blaise McDonald, is a very good coach, and he'll have them ready to compete," Cahoon said.

"Every team we play in this league is tough," the third-year coach added. "It's [the coaches'] job to give them a scheme that succeeds, but it's the players' job to come prepared to compete."

This past Saturday, the Minutemen dropped a tough 1-0 decision to Maine in Orono, despite the exceptional play of freshman Gabe Winer, who earned Hockey East Defensive Player of the Week honors for his 24-save performance.

While UMass was unable to obtain its first career victory on the road against the Black Bears, the effort it displayed was more than evident to its leader.

"I thought they hung in there right through the last couple minutes," Cahoon said. "It gave us a measurement that we're closer to being in the mix than in the past."

Winer has played every single minute for the Minutemen since the third period of the team's season-opening loss to BC. Since his debut, the rookie has posted a 2.45 GAA, including a 2.10 average in Hockey East contests, good for third in the conference. But Cahoon said that his young goaltender's streak of consecutive minutes will not be infinite.

"Certainly, Gabe's not going to go the distance," Cahoon said, but added that the decision for each game will be "day-to-day."

GMs lay groundwork for future deals

By Josh Dubow
ASSOCIATED PRESS

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) – Despite the fact that nearly all of baseball's general managers and a handful of agents are together this week, only one notable player has changed teams so far.

The Chicago Cubs beefed up their catching Wednesday, acquiring Damian Miller from Arizona for two minor leaguers. But the lack of dealing isn't from a lack of trying.

"We've talked to a lot of people this week. But 99 percent of what we talk about doesn't lead to anything," Diamondbacks GM Joe Garagiola Jr. said. "This one just happened to work out."

Most of the work being done at the general managers' meetings is setting the stage for the next two months.

Teams have started preliminary trade talks – finding out which opposing players are available and which of their own players are coveted. Agents and teams have also expressed interest to each other to hold more significant talks in the next few weeks, possibly at next month's winter meetings.

But except for the Philadelphia Phillies, who made contract offers to free agents Jim Thome, Tom Glavine and David Bell on Tuesday, most teams are moving cautiously.

"It will be a slower-developing market, which is what we anticipated coming out here," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said. "Teams have contracts they would like to trade to change their configuration."

Arizona and Colorado have talked about swapping outfielder Larry Walker and third baseman Matt Williams. The Rockies are also exploring to see if there is any interest in over paid pitchers Mike Hampton and Denny Neagle.

Florida, which is looking to unload Charles Johnson and Preston Wilson, could be interested in Hampton.

The Mets might be willing to take on Neagle as long as the Rockies take back one of New York's undesirable players: Jeromy Burnitz, Rey Ordonez or Roger Cedeno.

Even the usually free-spending Yankees are looking to slash payroll. GM Brian Cashman is under orders to save money and is looking to deal Raul Mondesi, Rondell White and Sterling Hitchcock.

"I have a lot of ideas floating around," Cashman said. "I'm just waiting for responses."

So far, the Phillies have been the most aggressive team this offseason. They offered Thome a reported five-year, $75 million contract. Glavine about $30 million for three years and a three-year contract to Bell.

But the Indians are still hopeful they can keep Thome, the top hitter on the market despite offering the slugger a four-year package believed to be worth between $40 and $48 million.

"The only thing they can offer Jim more of is money," Indians GM Mark Shapiro said. "If it comes down to that, we'll probably lose the player. I still feel Jim Thome is a player who values more than that."

The cost-cutting Braves have only offered Glavine a one-year deal, worth about $9 million. That could force the two-time Cy Young award winner to leave Atlanta after 16 years.

Glavine was 18-11 with a 2.96 ERA this season and has 242 career wins.

"The chance today of Tom Glavine leaving Atlanta is a very real possibility," said Gregg Clifton, Glavine's agent. "Six months ago that wasn't the case. But today, the chance that Tom Glavine will play with another team is a very viable possibility. It's not just smoke."

Clifton has also talked to the Yankees and Mets, while Texas has expressed interest in the pitcher.

Cashman has other decisions to make first, including whether to exercise Andy Pettitte's $11.5 million option for next season by Friday.

For now, the Mets and Phillies are the most aggressive teams.

Clifton said Glavine would probably visit Philadelphia next Thursday and Friday and thinks the Mets could make an offer soon. Glavine wants to see who the Mets hire as pitching coach before making a decision.

"It was more discussion. It was a step toward a potential offer," Clifton said about his meeting with Phillips. "I think the Mets were very serious."

After a couple of weeks of talks, the Cubs and Diamondbacks were able to make a deal. Arizona sent Miller to Chicago for left-hander David Noyce and outfielder Gary Johnson.

Miller, 33, batted .249 with 22 doubles, 11 homers and 42 RBI in 101 games last season for the Diamondbacks, who won the NL West.

"He's a good handler of pitchers and has done a good job for a long time," Cubs GM Jim Hendry said. "He was in the All-Star game last year and part of a world championship team and a strong contributor."

There was only one other deal made: Oakland acquired right-hander Roy Smith from Cleveland on Wednesday for cash considerations.

Also Wednesday, the NL champion San Francisco Giants hired manager Felipe Alou to replace Dusty Baker.

The 67-year-old Alou inherits a team that came within six outs of a World Series title. He was fired by Montreal in 2001 and was a bench coach in Detroit last season.

"When I received the first notice that I might be the guy, or the club was interested in me, I was really shocked," Alou said. "I was working with a team in the Dominican Republic and was far from major league baseball."

Baker, meanwhile, is close to wrapping up his deal to take over the Chicago Cubs.

"I'm sure we'll have discussions today and tonight and hopefully work our way to a conclusion shortly," Hendry said.

LIQUORS 44
EVERYDAY PRICING!!
COORS LIGHT & COORS 30 PACK $18.49
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 30 PACK $10.99
HEINEKEN 24 CASE $18.99
BASS ALE & GUINNESS DRAUGHT 12 PACK $10.99
SAM ADAMS 12 PACK $10.99
SMIRNOFF ICE 12 PACK $10.99
MAGIC HAT 6 PACK $5.99
½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99
C K MONDAVI $11.99
BELLA SERA PINOT GRIGIO $9.49
TWIN VALLEY WINES $6.99
CITRA WINES $5.99
BERINGER'S FOUNDERS CHARDONNAY $7.99
FAT BASTARD SHIRAZ $7.99
CARLO ROSSI $6.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 80 PROOF $18.99
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD $18.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN $13.99
CUTTY SARK SCOTCH $25.99
JACK DANIELS $17.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFFERED $11.99
GOLD TEQUILA $14.99
ROMANA SAMBUCA $16.99
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

PURE ENERGY
PROFESSIONAL DISC JOCKEY SERVICE
Over 13 Yrs. Experience
Specializing In: Weddings • Jack and Jills • Anniversaries
Reunions • Night Clubs • College & High School Functions
EXPERIENCE THE PURE ENERGY DIFFERENCE
Great Music • Great Prices • Great Personality
D.J. BOB Paulin
Amherst 253-3329 Turner Falls 863-8548

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Four Seasons Liquors
Red Bull 3 for $5.00
Bud Light 20 pack Bottles $12.99 + dep.
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St Rt. 9 584-8174

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

DISCOVER the WORLD!
Have the Adventure of a Lifetime... while you serve in one of over 70 developing countries around the globe in programs in
PEACE CORPS
Education, Business, Environment, Agriculture, Health & Community Development
Visit the Peace Corps Recruiter
Office: 481 Hills South, UMass
Telephone: 545-2105
Email: peacecorps@educ.umass.edu
Apply online: www.peacecorps.gov

POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
at North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $79.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing to Insurance Companies
(One mile North of UMass)

SALE!
3 DAYS ONLY...FRI/SAT/SUN • NOV 15, 16, 17
Table Top Picture Frames
Buy 2, Get 1 FREE
Free item of equal or lesser value
Great for Holiday Giving!
Lots of styles...
metal • wood • glass
collages • albums
fashion • gift • home FACES
main st., northampton
open til 10 • th, fr, sa

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheap heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-0865 or come by Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000 - $2,000 this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 apartments in house for rent. Four bedroom and 5 bedroom. Full Kitchen, Parking, heating included, laundry facility. $1400 and $1500 413-563-1888

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt. Quarky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to UMass or Nolo. $700 with heat 433-3922

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included Available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights?

AUTO FOR SALE

Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

95 Honda Civic Coupe 2 door 99,000 miles 5 Speed AC Very Good Condition B/O over $500 BOB 253-9333

94 Chevy Cavalier, AT, 2 Door, Purple, 105k, AC, AM/FM, $1900, 587-0906 dundas@cs.umass.edu

91 Acclaim Luxury Edition needs work $350. 545-0547

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455 Spring 2003

EMPLOYMENT

Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed: $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@guitarcenter.com 584-7750

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Looking for female to take over lease Share bedroom in Apt. Uptown $250/ month. Dec. or Jan. through May 508 274 9289

2 roommates needed Spring semester only Beautiful house right past Amherst College on Bus line 350/ mn 256-3390

TRANSPORTATION

NEED A RIDE HOME FOR THANKSGIVING? Catch a Deluxe Charter Bus to the Boston Area!! Buses leave on Tues, Nov. 26th or Weds, Nov. 27th. Returning to UMASS on Sun, Dec 1st. Round Trip Fare $49 Visa & Mastercard accepted. Visit www.BeanTownBus.com or call 1-866-423-2686 for more details.

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties!

TRAVEL

Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group- Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicurRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

3	ABS #3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS #57
7	HBO Cinema
8	WB #22
9	UPN 38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX #61
12	ABC #40
13	NBC #12
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC #19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Good vs Guard
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Hitory Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	House & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Anime Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

AZANNASALE

Thursday November 7 through Saturday November 9.

$10 off Mavi , Seven , and Joe's jeans.
$10 off Steve Madden, Diesel, Franco Sarto, Mia footwear.
Sale on Urban Outfitter sweaters.
Sale on Jewelry.

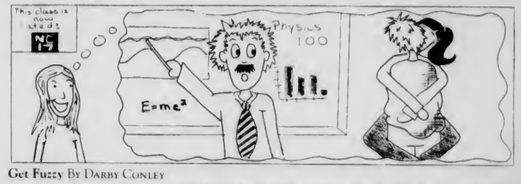
ZANNA

AZANNASALE www.zanna.com

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

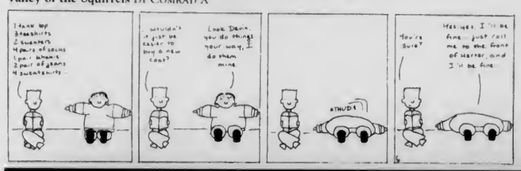
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Calm Yourself By Joey Russo



Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Bouncing Ball Of Sunshine By Rex Champsey & Anthony J. Yong

Quote of the Day

"You can walk, you can talk, you can fight, but inside you've got something to write / In your hand you hold your only friend, never spend your guitar or your pen."

-The Who

Amherst Weather

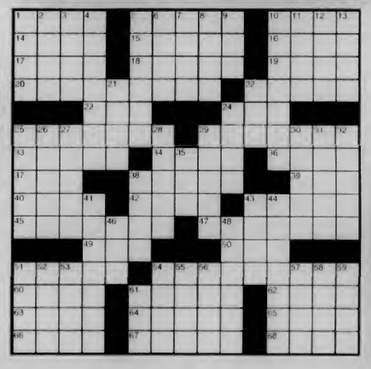
Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 36	HIGH: 56 LOW: 28	HIGH: 47 LOW: 22

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov.21) – If it's a feeling of greater freedom you're after, you may have it, but only after you sacrifice something of value to you.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – Take care you don't become too judgmental; if you do, Pearl Jam will read you the Riot Act (which, incidentally, was released on Tuesday).
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – A private investigation mounted in the nick of time yields some surprising answers.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) – You may be surprised by a development involving a friend or loved one.
PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – A social situation is likely to evolve quite naturally from the work environment.
ARIES (March 21 – April 19) – A promise comes your way from someone who has been out of the picture for some time. You will want to weight the pros and cons before acting on it.
TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – You must watch the clock throughout the day; time just ain't on your side. Just Mick Jagger's. Sorry.
GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) – You're going to want to get more detailed answers to a tricky question than those offered to you by the experts. Just listen to Rock n' Roll kids; everything you need to know, it's all there.
CANCER (June 21 – July 22) – You may be trying to do too much at one time; don't you think you ought to rest? It just may be time for you to lay your head down, tonight.
LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) – A little more care should be taken when dealing with people you don't know well. Someone may not understand your own way of doing things.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) – Your prospects are exciting, but there is only so much you can do at this time before exhausting yourself. Pacing is essential.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) – You'll have a chance to explore a new way of doing things with someone who inspires you to cut loose and trust your gut feelings.

I woke up this morning and decided I want to be a duck when I grow up. A real quack.

Collegian Graphics Rocks!



ACROSS
1 Office fill-in
5 Movie parts
10 Distort
14 Bombay nanny
15 Occasion
16 Machu Picchu builder
17 Succotash bean
18 Irk
19 Seabird
20 Kind of sauce
22 Single-file line
23 Orange pekoe
24 Large parrot
25 Opens
29 Paperwork (2 wds.)
33 "— Rae"
34 In the distance
36 O.K. Corral gunfighter
37 Hoover's org.
38 Ramp alternative
39 Lobster eggs
40 Uhl- bill
42 Proceed
43 Cut of beef
45 Birk
47 South Seas wraps
49 Upper limb
50 Mumm. bigge
51 Crabchels dinner
54 Thanksgiving pie
60 Nope (hyph.)
61 Sound
62 Cay
63 Gambling stake
64 Sermon enders
65 Dozes off
66 Rock covener
67 Selling point
68 Blow hard

DOWN
1 Baby soother
2 Qatar ruler
3 Nursery word
4 Ghost
5 Echo
6 Finished
7 Ogle
8 Begrudge
9 Canonized Mlle
10 Place
11 Trouser part
12 Pantyhose color
13 Taper off
21 Composer — Bartok
22 Math proof abbr.
24 Deborah — of old films
25 Hungry
26 Greatheartedness
27 Quick
28 Jaded
29 Police busts (2 wds.)
30 Statesman — Burr
31 Pitchfork part
32 Fencers' blades
35 Blower
38 Dog paddled
41 Hits the sack
43 Nestling place
44 Rumbling
46 Exist
48 Confront
51 Pacific island
52 Cry of dismay
53 Scoreboard data
54 Autumn flowers
55 "Et tu" time
56 Softball team
57 Genesis hunter
58 Heidi's mountains
59 — pilot
61 Trap-routing org.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	L	O	B	A	L	■	E	R	R	■	S	R	U	B
P	A	R	A	D	E	■	S	E	A	■	L	E	N	A
S	W	E	R	V	E	■	T	A	R	■	A	C	T	S
■	■	■	B	I	R	T	H	D	A	Y	S	U	I	T
C	A	M	E	L	■	R	E	S	■	A	G	R	E	E
A	M	I	D	■	C	U	R	I	■	E	K	O	■	■
H	O	C	■	R	U	M	■	A	W	K	W	A	R	D
O	U	R	■	E	V	A	■	N	E	E	■	G	O	O
B	R	O	A	D	E	N	■	N	E	D	■	O	W	L
■	■	■	N	E	T	■	F	R	U	I	T	■	E	T
H	A	U	T	■	A	H	A	■	C	E	A	S	E	S
A	S	S	E	M	B	L	Y	■	L	I	N	E	■	■
S	H	U	N	■	O	C	T	■	W	A	T	E	R	S
T	E	R	N	■	O	O	H	■	A	I	S	L	E	E	P
A	N	Y	A	■	H	A	M	■	S	H	E	R	P	A

11-27-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Oriental Beef and Vegetables

Chicken Cutlet Sandwich

Teriyaki Cashew Tofu (vegan)

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

RESTAURANT NIGHT

W- The Great Wall
F- Eastside Grill
H- Goten
B- Bub's BBQ

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matt Despres
Photo Technician	James Schaffer
Copy Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	Jolene Rousseau, Scott Pihl

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Major recruit will play for Lappas in '03

By Jim Pignatiello

The Massachusetts men's basketball team announced yesterday that Ara Bowers, a 6-foot-4, 200-pound shooting guard from St. Benedict's (N.J.) Prep School has signed a letter of intent to play for UMass next season.

Bowers, who is ranked by ESPN as the 32nd best prep national prospect for the nation, and 44th by PrepStar, is one of the highest rated recruits brought in by Head Coach Steve Lappas to date.

The Lowell Mountain-sized UMass fever Wake Forest, Rutgers, DePaul and Pittsburgh.

"We are really excited to sign Ari," Lappas said of his latest recruit. "He's a player who will really fit into our system. Ari is a tremendous athlete and a gifted offensive player.

"I personally look up toward to having him in our program because he's a special talent," Lappas added. "Ari's shooting, but he also has the ability to hit the lane, creating for his teammates is a huge plus."

As a junior under Dennis Hurley at St. Benedict's, located in Newark, N.J., Bowers led his squad to a 22-7 record and the New Jersey state championship. Bowers, a native of Wilmington, Del., averaged 16 points per game and earned first team All-State honors.

Bowers also earned All-Tournament honors at the PowerMac and Semi-Duck on the Beach events last year as well. He capped a two-time Bob Cousy Tournament of Champions Most Valuable Player.

In a highly publicized high school matchup last year, Bowers, St. Benedict's, took to sure NBA first rounder LaBrandt Jackson, St. Vincent-St. Mary's squad. Bowers outscored Jackson, 21-18 in the game, but James squad pulled out the 67-66 win.

Bowers' commitment to UMass next year and join an extremely deep and talented backcourt led by the reigning Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year, junior Anthony Maclean, as point guard. This season's highly touted rookie, Stephane Lasme, recent transfer, junior Marcus Cox and freshman League Canada player, sophomore Kyle Wilson, will form an extremely solid backcourt for the Minutemen.

Bowers signed his letter of intent on Wednesday, the first day of the early signing period.

All or nothing

FRESHMAN GUARD ARI DAY FOR BOWERS IS SECOND ON THE MINUTEMEN WITH 25 ASSISTS FOR THE YEAR, BUT HAS YET TO REACH THE END ZONE.

Minutemen must win out for a chance at the I-AA playoffs

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

Last week, the Massachusetts football team marched into Durham, N.H. knowing that it could walk away with an Atlantic 10 title if it won the final three games of its season.

Now, after getting dropped 31-14 by UNH, the Minutemen face a must-win.

The Maroon and White will play host to Hofstra on Saturday, and while it still sits in the driver's seat for the conference championship, it no longer controls its own destiny for the title.

"The repercussions of not playing well last week are that we might not have a great season," Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "We've had a good season, but I don't think anyone's here to play 'good,' that's not what we're all about. So that's why it comes down to Hofstra."

The Minutemen may again be without the services of junior quarterback Jeff Krohn, who missed last week suffering the after-effects of his second head injury in three weeks against Delaware.

"He's better," Whipple said. "He was better last night. He's going to do more. It's really not anything we'll know for sure."

Krohn's replacement would be true freshman Tim Day, who performed admirably in relief of Krohn twice this season, but struggled significantly against New Hampshire, throwing four interceptions and fumbling a snap. The Wildcats turned UMass turnovers into 21 points in the first half.

"I think it's the same as what we said last week and that's that [Day] is not the key to winning the game and he's not the key to losing the game, it's everybody around him," Whipple said. "His performance will be markedly improved if our guys are ready to play.

"I think he's getting better every time he takes a snap," he continued. "He's better prepared because he played a whole game. I think he's better prepared."

One of the main concerns about the team's performance was the fact that the defense allowed 31 points – by far its worst outing since allowing 56 points to Division I-A powerhouse North Carolina State on Sept. 28. In its previous five games, the Minutemen defense had allowed just 53 points.

"I think that's the strength of our team is that we have to play good defense," Whipple said. "We have to win the games like we did against Villanova, Delaware and Maine, which was out-rush them and have fewer turnovers. That's not the style I would normally prefer to play, but we've practiced that way for the last couple weeks and that's what gives us the best chance to win the game."

The Pride is not the team it once was, going just 3-5 in conference and 4-6 overall. The 2001 A-10 champions lost a significant amount on offense, as the power trio of the passing game – quarterback Rocky Butler and receivers Kahmal Ros and Charlie Adams – were lost to graduation. However, Hofstra has come on as of late, winning its last two games.

"They are very, very good," said Whipple, who has a career record of 1-3 against the Pride. "Defensively, they remind me of Delaware, Maine, Northeastern – they have the same kind of athletes."

The biggest question for Hofstra is certainly the passing game. Ryan Cosentino had thrown just one pass in his career entering this season for a team that over its previous six seasons had entertained the service of Giovanni Carmazzi and Butler, both of whom were among the best signal callers in the A-10.

Turn to HOFSTRA, page 8

A hole in the middle

Brand's injury will keep him out Saturday

By Jim Pignatiello

The Massachusetts men's basketball team started its first scrimmage of the season last night, opening with a 5-on-0 drill against the Nike All-Stars. Head Coach Steve Lappas and his players should have learned a lot from Saturday's exhibition as they struggled to build upon that strong 34-point second half that led to a 61-49 win.

Instead, they will have to deal with playing without one of their most important players as they prepare for a regular season that begins against 2001 NCAA runner up Indiana at the Maui Invitational on Nov. 25.

With an ankle injury, sophomore Micah Brand will sit out of Saturday's exhibition against the Coaches vs. Cancer squad and his eligibility for Maui is still up in the air. Brand, who averaged 4.5 points and 3.5 rebounds per game last year, scored 15 points and hauled four steals in last week's full-team No. 40 will be missed in a front-court that is severely lacking in experience.

Fellow sophomore captain Jackie Rogers, who led UMass against the Nike All-Stars with 14 points and eight rebounds, is the only other Minuteman with in-game college experience capable of playing the center position.

Sophomore Gabe Lee, who sat out last season to fulfill academic requirements, will be one of Lappas' options under the basket.

Gabe Lee is a relentless player, who plays hard and is very athletic," Lappas said.

Lee, who is 6-foot-9, played 10 minutes against the Nike squad. No. 4 scored four points on 2-for-2 shooting from the field, grabbed two rebounds and blocked one shot.

Freshman Massamba Kouyate, who stands at 6-foot-8, is also likely to see time in the post Saturday.

"Massamba is a warrior," Lappas said. "He can shoot the ball from 15 feet which helps in our style of play, but he can also post up. He's a tough kid and he goes in there and battles. Massamba plays hard, and you can't substitute for that. If you play hard, you can learn on the job."

Kouyate saw eight minutes of action against the Nike All-Stars. No. 21 scored one point (one for two from the charity stripe), and grabbed a pair of boards.

Also expect junior point guard Anthony Anderson, who Lappas hopes will carry some of the offensive load this season, to take more shots Saturday than he did against the Nike team. Anderson attempted just three shots from the field last week.

"[Anderson taking just three shots from the field] wasn't by design," Lappas said. "I really wanted to see him [shoot the ball]...He's such a smart player. It's not like he's making bad decisions when he's not shooting the ball."

Anderson, who is the reigning Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year, placed second on the team in scoring last year with a 10.0 points per game average.

RAHEEM LAMB AND THE MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM WILL PLAY THEIR FINAL EXHIBITION GAME SATURDAY AT THE MULLINS CENTER AGAINST THE COACHES VS. CANCER ALL-STARS.

Sister schools set for battle

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

The battle for the Alumni Cup is always a hard-nosed, grind-it-out affair. Just look at last year's clashes between the Massachusetts and UMass-Lowell hockey teams. The three contests were decided by a grand total of two tallies.

And with both clubs exhibiting many parallels, fans can expect this year to be just as ferocious.

The two sister schools begin a home-and-home set tomorrow night at the Mullins Center, with a showdown at Tsongas Arena to follow the next evening. The Minutemen and River Hawks have had similar situations out of the starting blocks, as both squads have played solid hockey but have had very little to show for it. The two clubs have combined for seven conference losses, but five of these losses have

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

FRESHMAN JAMES SOLON AND THE HOCKEY TEAM CAN EVEN THEIR HOCKEY EAST RECORD WITH TWO WINS OVER UMASS-LOWELL THIS WEEKEND.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEEKEND EDITION

FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FIFTY-ONE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.15.02

ARTS PAGE 6 THE RIGHT TO BEAR ARMS ED/OP PAGE 4. JOURNEY LIVE SPORTS PAGE 10

Faculty Senate discusses Athletic Dept. budget

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

Despite a $1.1 million budget cut to the University of Massachusetts Athletic Department's budget last year, the expenditure of the department had actually increased since the cuts.

Nelson Lacey and Carol Barr, co-chairs of the Athletic Council, presented the Athletic Council's annual report to the Faculty Senate at yesterday's meeting. Secretary to the Faculty Senate Ernest May summarized the report as being a "very thorough financial report."

Lacey spoke about the focus of the Council over the past year and on the achievements of the Athletic department and its various teams before opening the floor up to questions.

Senators asked how the cut was handled by the Athletic Department.

"What played out," said Lacey, "is that the Athletic Department absorbed about $1 million of the cuts it needed to following the elimination of teams from 29 to 22."

According to Lacey and the report, the Athletic Council's agenda for the past year consisted of discussion on how to deal with the cut, loss and "reactions thereof" of seven intercollegiate teams from the department as well as additional budgetary constraints and cuts. The spring brought further work for the Council when then Athletic Director Robert Marcum announced his decision to take early retirement, forcing the Council to work quickly to hire a new AD before the fall.

"The summer hiring of our new AD Ian McCaw wrapped up a very tumultuous year for our department," Lacey said.

Lacey spoke to the issue of maintaining the athletic facilities and the lack of competitive equipment. He said that in the area of facilities the University is "not a leader." Lacey said that the achievement of the University was shown this year again when UMass was awarded the Atlantic 10 Cup for the sixth time in eight years.

"This allows us to conclude that our coaches do a lot with not a lot of resources," said Lacey.

Lacey asked for the senators to look at the department's revenue and expenses. Senators questioned how the departmental figures had not dropped but in fact increased from the 2002 fiscal year.

"It appears that the trust fund revenue has grown," asked Senator Brian O'Connor. "Where does the funding for the Athletic trust fund revenue come from?"

Lacey handed off the responsibility of answering this question and others to the principal administrative officers present, including Chancellor Lombardi.

Interim Deputy Chancellor John F. Dubach took the question.

"The income from the fee increased while operating fees from other places went down," he explained. "There is no new money involved there."

Further questions from the floor followed with one senator responding to the explanation by saying, "Students shouldn't have to pay the increases."

Joyce Abel, the Director of Academic Budgets, took the floor to explain how the Athletic depart-

Turn to SENATE, page 3

NELSON LACEY, CO-CHAIR OF THE ATHLETIC DEPARTMENT, ADDRESSES THE FACULTY SENATE.

Student struck by car

Fourth incident this semester

DANIEL KOZLOWSKI

A UMASS STUDENT WAS HIT WEDNESDAY ON EAST PLEASANT STREET NEAR THE ENTRANCE TO ORCHARD HILL. THIS WAS THE FOURTH PEDESTRIAN ACCIDENT SINCE THE SEMESTER STARTED.

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

A car struck a University of Massachusetts student crossing East Pleasant Street at around 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

According to witnesses on the scene, the student, Van Meter resident Jared R. Cariddi of North Adams, sustained a broken leg and head injuries in the crash, according to witnesses on the scene.

Cariddi is the fourth student injured in a pedestrian accident this year.

"I was jogging on East Pleasant Street," said Amy Orlandi, a witness and Van Meter resident. "The guy was crossing the road from the other side."

According to Orlandi, the driver, 30-year-old Kimiko Olf of Boston, never slowed for the pedestrian and appeared to have not seen him at all.

"He hit the windshield," Orlandi said. "This kid is 6-foot-5, the whole windshield was smashed. He flew off and landed on the sidewalk right in front of me."

The report filed by Amherst police stated that Olf said she never saw Cariddi and that he "was thrown 25 to 35 feet from the point of impact."

According to the report, the pedestrian was walking north and "failed to use care in crossing the street. The pedestrian walked into the northbound lane and was struck by the vehicle."

Orlandi said that there was "definitely a broken leg," and that Cariddi was also bleeding from the head.

She said that she briefly communicated with Cariddi.

"I basically told him to stay still. He was in pain, obviously," she said.

The accident occurred on East Pleasant Street near the Orchard Hill entrance by the water towers.

Orlandi said that Olf "couldn't even move. She was frozen, panicky, in shock."

According to Orlandi, Olf was reaching for her cell phone when Orlandi approached the car. She said that Olf was visibly shaking. Orlandi said she asked Olf to pull her car over to the side of the road, as it was backing up.

Cariddi was taken away by ambulance with a neck brace, according to Orlandi.

The accident, the fourth in three months at the University, renews concerns of pedestrian safety on campus. Cars hit pedestrians on University Drive near the Horseshoe twice and on Commonwealth Avenue earlier this semester.

In each of those accidents, the victims were hit while crossing the street in a crosswalk.

The incident also increases the total of the busiest year for pedestrian accidents since 1999.

According to a report published by the UMass Pedestrian Safety Committee, there were eight accidents that resulted in pedestrian injury on campus in 1999. One of them resulted in the death of a pedestrian, with Allison Liustig of Shrewsbury, Mass. dying from severe injuries sustained in an accident on Governors Drive on March 3, 1999.

Campus safety officials eventually placed a traffic signal at the Governors Drive intersection where that accident occurred.

the weekend with arts & living

Sweet power of song: University Chorale and Women's Choir to perform

The University of Massachusetts's longest-running choral group, the University Chorale, along with the 28-member Women's Choir, will perform works from around the globe, including areas such as Polynesia, South America, France, India and the United States. The concert will be Sunday, Nov. 17 at 4 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

Under the direction of Professor F. Wayne Abercrombie, The University Chorale will perform Gabriel Fauré's Cantique de Jean Racine, Ivor Davies' setting of six prayers taken from 20th Century French poet Carmen Bernos de Gasztold's Prayers from the Ark (in English translation), a Villa-Lobos piece entitled To The Moon and Victor Paranjoti's Dravidian Dithyramb. Also being performed will be Steven Hatfield's Ka Hia Mauu, which the composer refers to as an "unscholarly crazy quilt of texts and chants from Tahiti, Tuamotu, Rapa Nui (Easter Island), the Marquesas and the Northern Mariana."

This year's Women's Choir is described by director Danica Buckley as "very enthusiastic and hard-working. They have beautiful voices and exude tremendous spirit." The Choir will be opening with "Sweet Power of Song" by Beethoven, with text by Scottish poet Joanna Baillie. The performance will feature the piece "And Ain't I a Woman" by Sandi Pearlee based on text by Sojourner Truth. The song, remarked Buckley, is "a powerful piece. It is particularly good for young women because the message is empowering." Pearlee wrote the work for the Northfield Mount Hermon Women's Choir under the direction of Sheila Heffernon. Heffernon is currently studying for her Ph.D. at the University's Department of Music and Dance.

"I am hoping many students will come to the concert and see their fellow students displaying their fine musical talents," Buckley said. "We have three choral groups on campus, and people are welcome to audition (painlessly) at any time. There are 20,000 students at this university – we should have 200 or more people in these three choirs together. You can sing in choirs from age 8 until age 80 or so – the choral experience is a joyful experience. Students are welcome to email me at sopranocon@hotmail.com for more information. In the meantime, see you at the concert."

Tickets are $5 for students and children under 18 and senior citizens. Tickets are $10 for the general public. Tickets can be purchased at the Fine Arts Center Box Office or by calling (413) 545-2511.

-Melissa A. Thompson

spotlight event
The Sonya Kitchell Band performs at the Iron Hourse tonight at 7 p.m. Tickets are $10 and can be purchsed at the door.

COURTESY LISA METCALF

CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

By James Schaffer

"What is your favorite Collegian comic?"

Adam Sutton
Sophomore
Undecided

"Get Fuzzy because it is funny and witty and makes you laugh sometimes."

Katie Clark
Sophomore
SOM

"Friends Don't Let Friends Drive with Kulak"

Marie Brown
Senior
Sports Management

"College Ruled because some of the jokes are funny."

Arianna Mickee
Freshman
Legal Studies

"Get Fuzzy"

Steve Hoeschele
Freshman
History

"Highbrow -- they don't run it anymore, but I liked it a lot when they did."

Ian Gendler
Junior
SOM

"College Ruled"

Alternative Spring Break class being offered next semester

By Lindsay Kirkham
COLLEGIAN CONTRIBUTOR

The University of Massachusetts Alliance for Community Transformations (UACT) is sponsoring and organizing The Alternative Spring Break (ASB) program that utilizes community service as a medium for creating greater understanding of one's community.

The sixth annual program has two components. The first facet is a four-credit spring semester honors course entitled "Grassroots Community Development" run out of the Anthropology department. Students study about practices of grassroots organizing and the social issues out of which these groups have originated. The course ultimately prepares students for spring break, when they will travel to an economically disadvantaged community where they put "classroom into action," Anthropology Professor Arthur Keene declared.

Through extensive interaction and sharing with the community members, students hope to gain a broader understanding of their struggles, approaches, history and culture. They also perform physical work, lining the week ranging from roofing and light carpentry to planting a garden or playing with kids.

While we do continue to Habitat for Humanity, but we offer more of a learning opportunity as we reflect on the experience afterwards," Natalya Weinstein-Roberts, the program's Outreach Coordinator, said. "Going into the situation, we are not insensitive to the impoverished, lower-class surroundings that many college students aren't accustomed to."

This program is also unique in the fact that it is entirely student-run. There are no professors, rather students facilitating discussion, based primarily on student participation. "This program gives you so much more of a say [than a traditional class]. I found it really empowering," Weinstein-Roberts said.

This year, 40-50 students are expected to participate in the ASB. Although travel plans are not solidified, they will most likely journey to Virginia where they will provide labor, monies and research in exchange for the learning experience. At a more local level, a group of 10-12 ASB alumni will take part in community service in Holyoke over the course of the week.

"It's really about building a partnership with UMass and another community in the United States; we call it co-learning," Weinstein-Roberts said.

For those interested, the opportunity is open to all students on campus, from all majors. The application consists of five short questions and can be obtained by going to E23 Machmer Hall, or via e-mail at: uact@ anthro.umass.edu The application deadline is Nov. 25.

Yoga in Action Saturday

By Amy O'Neill
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Art of Living Club will be sponsoring their bi-weekly "Yoga in Action Day" Saturday, Nov. 16 beginning at 12 p.m.

The club will meet at the Campus Center in room 917, where members will do yoga and meditation and later go on to the Center for Extended Care, a retirement home on University Drive.

"[We will be] talking with senior citizens, gaining their wisdom and whatever else they have to share," Ari Weinberg, member of the Art of Living Club and participant on their six-person College Team, said.

According to Weinberg, the idea for these different community service events came about because they felt yoga wasn't being acknowledged in areas other than their courses and weekly meetings.

"We wanted to incorporate community service with yoga," Weinberg said. "It is another way to feel energized and refreshed through yoga."

The events have turned out a crowd of about 15 in previous weeks with people other than registered club members included.

"You can still go to the event as long as you are affiliated with this University," Weinberg said. He also noted that they are trying to arrange it so the other students in the five-college area can participate as well.

The Art of Living Club is a sponsored Graduate Student Organization (GSO) dedicated to "reduce the stress in and enhance the quality of our daily life." Weinberg said that their club newsletter list is currently at about 700 people and continues to grow.

They offer several workshops at least once a month throughout the semester, which teach many exercises including an ancient breathing technique meant to release stress. The workshops run for three hours a day for six days, and cost $75 for students and $130 for faculty and staff.

In addition to these workshops, the Art of Living Club also offers "free mini-yoga and guided meditation sessions" at various dorm locations on campus. Last week they were featured at Southwest in the Pierpont Lounge.

Saturday's event will go until 6 p.m. and spaces are still open for those interested in participating. People interested must RSVP before the event by calling 367-9682 or via e-mail at umass.yoga@yahoo.com. Dress for the event is casual. To find out about other upcoming events including free courses and the next six-day workshop, contact the Art of Living Club at the above number or e-mail address.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1911, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

AMHERST HAIRSTYLISTS
Haircuts and Clipper Cuts
Grand Opening Special $10 until Nov 21
$20 Shampoo & Cut, $15 Student Rate
Highlights & Color from $45
40 Main Street, Amherst
253-1200
Walk-ins welcome

PURE ENERGY
PROFESSIONAL DISC JOCKEY SERVICE
Over 13 Yrs Experience
Specializing In Weddings • Jack and Jills • Anniversaries
Reunions • Night Clubs • College & High School Functions
EXPERIENCE THE PURE ENERGY DIFFERENCE
Great Music • Great Prices • Great Personality
D.J. BOB Paulin
Amherst 253-3329 Turner Falls 863-8548

DISCOVER the WORLD!
Have the Adventure of a Lifetime... while you serve in one of over 70 developing countries around the globe in programs in
PEACE CORPS
Education, Business, Environment, Agriculture, Health & Community Development
Visit the Peace Corps Recruiter
Office: 481 Hills South, UMass
Telephone: 545-2105
Email: peacecorps@educ.umass.edu
Apply online: www.peacecorps.gov

New Gen Ed Science Course
"The best course I ever had."
www.bio.umass.edu/biochem/mydna
MY DNA
No prerequisites
Check it out online!
Register now - My DNA - Biochem 100

Stanford University prof. talks on Holocaust art

By Morris Singer
COLLEGIAN STAFF

John Felstiner, professor of English and Judaic Studies at Stanford University since 1965 and author of several books, spoke Wednesday at Memorial Hall, on the topic "'Still Songs to Sing': Holocaust Art, Music and the Translating of Poetry."

Felstiner, who received a Truman Capote Award for Literary Criticism for one of his books, has written such works as: Selected Poems and Prose of Paul Celan, and Paul Celan: Poet, Survivor, Jew.

The talk, which lasted about two hours, touched on his previous books, and also focused on the subject matter of the course which he teaches at Stanford entitled, "Imagining the Holocaust."

Felstiner said that his course started out solely as a literature course, but over time evolved into a course about poetry, artwork, photographs and most of all music of the Holocaust. He said that very little is known about the music that came out of the Holocaust, and stressed its importance, in conjunction with other media, as a tool for learning about that portion of history.

"I came to believe there was no studying the Holocaust, [and that] there certainly was no understanding it," he said.

For this reason, Felstiner noted that his course is about "imagining" the Holocaust through a variety of artistic forms.

Felstiner said that in order to study history, "knowledge is what we need, or perhaps some substitute for knowledge." Felstiner considers art as this substitute.

Felstiner feels that it is amazing that, during the Holocaust, people were dying, yet continued to make art. He cited that only one in seven people survived Terezin, Hitler's model concentration camp designed to appease the Red Cross, yet he said that just one week would feature multiple performances of both theatre and music, daily.

There was so much art in Terezin that one prisoner said that, for a moment, the captives could forget their "involuntary imprisonment." This is what Felstiner calls "the power of art over matter."

According to Felstiner, he feels that art is so important that if one witness says, "I lived for a day on that," then that is enough for him to feel the importance of art in the storytelling of the Holocaust victims.

Felstiner also says that the profound impact of the Holocaust on these artists is what makes the stories they tell so effective. To expand on this notion, he used the works of Paul Celan, who was imprisoned at Terezin.

After reading the translation of one of Celan's poems, he commented, "We might wonder what it takes for a teenager to come up with such utterance."

Another reason Felstiner feels that art and music are so important is because they survived even the execution of its creators. In a particularly moving moment, he played a CD of a string trio written by Terezin prisoner Gideon Kline. After the end of the piece, Felstiner told the end of the history of Kline. Felstiner said that within days of completing that piece of music, Kline was shipped eastward by train and executed at a Nazi death camp.

John Felstiner's was the second in a series of lectures brought to UMass by the Department of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies. It was sponsored by the Departments of English and Comparative Literature and the UMass Translation Center.

The next lecture in the series, titled: "Virtually Jewish: Reinventing Jewish Culture in Europe," will take place on Tuesday, Nov. 19 at 4 p.m. in 301 Herter Hall.

Bush suspends N. Korea oil deliveries as penalty

By Edith M. Lederer
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) – Key U.S. allies late Thursday backed a Bush administration decision to suspend oil deliveries to North Korea as punishment for its secret nuclear program.

The decision was announced after a day-long meeting of the four parties that operate the 8-year-old oil assistance program – Japan, South Korea, the European Union and the United States.

The allies coupled the suspension with a condemnation of North Korea for violating a 1994 agreement with the United States and its treaty obligations to remain nuclear-free. They also warned that North Korea's future relations with the four parties "hinge on the complete and permanent elimination of its nuclear weapons program."

President Bush made the decision to suspend oil shipments Wednesday night, ahead of Thursday's meeting of the four members of the Korean Peninsula Energy Development Organization, known as KEDO, which runs the program.

A statement from KEDO's executive board said the suspension would begin with the December shipment and "future shipments will depend on North Korea's concrete and credible actions to dismantle completely its highly enriched uranium program."

"In this light, other KEDO activities with North Korea will be reviewed," said the statement read by South Korean Ambassador Sun-Sup Chang, who chairs the board.

At the White House, senior administration officials celebrated their allies' agreement to "condemn" the North Koreans outright and unequivocally demand immediate elimination "not steps to begin elimination," noted one of the officials of Pyongyang's nuclear program.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, also underscored the KEDO member countries' threat to cancel other interaction beyond the oil program, including economic aid and construction projects.

KEDO was founded after North Korea signed an agreement with the United States in 1994 pledging to become a nuclear weapons-free state.

In exchange, the United States promised to provide more than 500,000 tons of heavy oil per year.

Bush decided to suspend the oil shipments following North Korea's acknowledgment last month that it was secretly developing a uranium-based bomb. His only concession was to agree to allow a vessel already en route to North Korea to deliver what would be the last U.S. oil shipment unless Pyongyang decides to dismantle its nuclear weapons program.

The four KEDO members condemned North Korea's nuclear weapons program and demanded that it be eliminated "in a visible and verifiable manner."

They accused North Korea of violating the 1994 agreement, its obligations under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, and a joint declaration with South Korea on the de-nuclearization of the Korean Peninsula.

"North Korea's program...threatens international security and undermines the international non-proliferation regime based on the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty," the KEDO statement said.

North Korea's future relations with the United States, the European Union, South Korea and Japan "hinge on the complete and permanent elimination of its nuclear weapons program," it said.

Before the suspension was announced, Secretary of State Colin Powell told a news conference in Ottawa, Canada: "North Korea has to end this program that we discovered to enrich uranium. We're all united on this prospect."

In addition to South Korea's Chang, the meeting at KEDO's midtown Manhattan offices was attended by U.S. Ambassador Charles Pritchard, Ambassador Jean-Pierre Leng of the EU and Japanese Ambassador Katsunari Suzuki.

The governments in Seoul and Tokyo had been recommending that the shipments continue because they are concerned that North Korea could retaliate by reviving a plutonium-based nuclear weapons program that it froze in 1994.

Powell, while ruling out renewed talks with North Korea for the time being, said last week he does not object to Japanese and South Korean contacts with the North. He noted that the two U.S. allies are within range of the North's considerable military might.

The Bush administration has sought to move in lockstep with Japan and South Korea on North Korea policy, but at times this goal has been elusive, particularly given the contrasting views between dovish South Korea and the more hawkish Americans.

North Korea acknowledged its uranium bomb program on Oct. 4 during a meeting with U.S. officials in Pyongyang. In late October, North Korea offered to negotiate a non-aggression pact with the United States, but Powell has said there can be no discussion until Pyongyang dismantles its nuclear program promptly and verifiably.

Associated Press reporter Dilshika Jayamaha in New York contributed to this report.

e-mail news at thedailycollegian@yahoo.com

■ senate

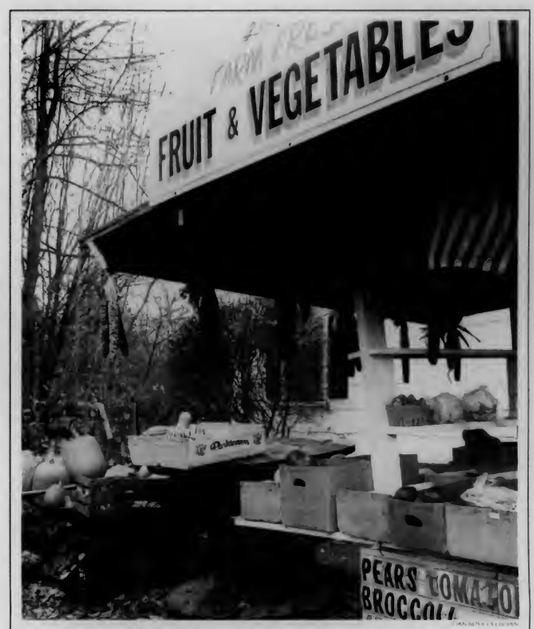
continued from page 1

ment had managed to spend more.

"This year's $65 increase to the Athletic fee was necessary. Because of it, the University gave less money to the Athletic department. Hopefully, there will be no fee increase next year," Abel said.

"Of the $1 million cut, a portion was given back to paying coaches severance fees, and a one-year, one-time deal to continue financial aid for students on cut teams for the following year, so as not to cut those students off at the knees," she said. "Scholarship costs for all student athletes went up this year when curriculum, infrastructure, and room and board fees went up."



A representative from the libraries posed the next question asking who had authorized the increase in the athletic fee.

"Who authorized the increased fees to go to athletics to basically bail out the athletic program," she asked. "Who authorized the bail out and who decided not to bail out the library?"

Other senators followed suit, standing up to address the issue of who had authorized spending the revenue from the increased fees and on what.

Senators asked the administrative officers present how the "faculty [could] get more input as to which fees go up."

O'Connor noted that as a member of the University Board of Trustees, he had believed last year that what the board approved was a blanket fee increase, and that they had not determined where the money would go.

Farm Fresh

A local farmstand sells farm fresh fruits and vegetables on North Pleasant Street

Write for News

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003

Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710 www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services 1.800.648.4849 www.ststravel.com

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS

Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

Wireless Choices
Any of these phones FREE with $39.99 plan

Sony Ericsson T68LX
Nokia 1260
Panasonic EB-TX320
OR
Get a big discount on "Any phone" if you open a one year account
$29.99 plan with $30 discount
$39.99 plan with $50 discount
$49.99 plan with $65 discount
$59.99 plan with $85 discount
$80 + plan with $110 discount
AT&T offers unlimited nights & weekends.
Nextel offers unlimited direct connect.
65 University Drive, Unit #4 Amherst, MA 01002
(right next to the HangarPub)
Phone 549-2075
Fax 549-4315
AT&T Wireless NEXTEL

GOT CLOTHES?
HOUSE SALE
MAJOR JUNIOR WEAR LABEL
HOUSE SALE
SALE
SALE
Campus Center Auditorium
Mon, Tues & Wed 9am-9pm.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Gays in the military:

Get with the times

Linguists are in high demand by our Nation's military. The position is a highly specialized one, requiring a high mental capacity and much specialized training. Specifically, our country needs people who know the Arabic language. When the war on terror began over a year, any person who knew anything about Arabic was a highly-sought commodity.

The military began to step up efforts to train as many qualified people as it could in the language of those thought to be our new enemy. This year at the Monterey Institute, a language training center for the U.S. government, only 365 people graduated from a class of 516. And even though the numbers keep increasing everyday, shortages are still a problem.

Donald Hamilton documented the problem to Congress in a report for the National Commission on Terrorism, stating: "We face a drastic shortage of linguists, and the direct impact of Arabic speakers is a particular problem."

Why then would the Army dismiss six people who are in such high demand? The answer: because they are homosexuals.

Six linguists trained in Arabic, two educated in Korean and one skilled in Mandarin Chinese, were all dismissed from the Army over the past year due to their sexual orientation. News of the dismissals, which took place between Oct. 2001 and Sept. 2002, just broke this week.

Our military has a very outdated policy of "don't ask, don't tell" when it comes to a soldier's sexuality. In the case of these nine, seven were dismissed after telling their superiors. The other two were discovered together after curfew. The logic and various reasons behind coming out to one's superior can be debated. The fact remains though, that a group of trained, qualified soldiers, who the Army is in short supply of, are now without work due to a technicality.

This is not the first, nor will it be the last, time that the military's policy towards homosexuals has created a controversy. What does it say about the priorities of our country when we are engaged in a war, lacking in regards to a vital component of our battle plan, and we discharge some of the very people we need, simply because of who they are attracted to in their personal lives.

Defendants of the military's policy cite instances of what could potentially transpire if gays were allowed into the military and how they may try to take advantage of other soldiers. This argument is as baseless as the reason that openly gay athletes aren't accepted because they might stare in the locker room. In each of these instances, people who have a fear or disgust towards homosexuals, mask their feelings by hiding behind dumb excuses.

"It's not a gay-rights issue. I'm arguing military proficiency issues — they're throwing out good quality people," said Alastair Gamble, in an interview with CBS News. Gamble was one of the nine soldiers dismissed. Both he and Robert Hicks, who were dismissed after being discovered in Gamble's room during a surprise inspection, have applied for other federal jobs where their language skills could help fight the war on terror. Neither of them was hired.

Desperate times call for desperate measures. It's time for the military to grow up and join the rest of the world, and realize that a person's sexuality is a private, personal issue, and that's it.

Information from CBS News was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

© 2002 Peter Neal

I'm keeping my gun

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

After all of this fuss about the sniper and all those who were killed and the families that were affected and after the release of Michael Moore's new movie Bowling for Columbine, the debate about gun control policy has begun to grow again.

I remember thinking about the sniper a few weeks ago when I was in the D.C./Montgomery County area when he/they where somewhere between victims eight and nine. I don't remember exactly looking at the roadsigns as I walked through the area thinking I might catch a glimpse of the sniper on the run.

There is no doubt that gun control is an important issue in American politics and many people have strong feelings about it. This is one of the issues in national politics that has featured much emotion and strong feeling. It also seems as though it is one of those issues that creates debate and most people feel it is an issue that needs to be addressed.

So last week I wrote a letter to the BIC Corporation in Milford, Conn. asking them to fully refund me for the package of pens which I bought made by their company. I legitimized my demand by telling them that I failed an English paper of argument if their pen misspelling half the words on the paper. I have yet to hear back from the BIC Corp.

Did this touch a nerve? No, of course not, such a story is ridiculous and just plain stupid. How could I possibly blame a pen for making a spelling mistake? It is obvious that the person holding the pen is responsible for the mistake, not the pen or the maker of the pen.

We live in a society today in which a large amount of people believe that guns are responsible for killing people and use this statute to build their convictions on gun control policy. We should not remove guns from our society. I do concede that guns make it easier for a person to commit a crime. In fact there are statistics showing that guns help criminal commit crimes. This is no surprise.

When thinking of gun control policy, a simple equation comes to mind regarding crime: Intent to kill, injure or persuade plus the handgun plus the soon to be victim equals injury/death. Many simply look at the equation and believe that removing the handgun would prevent the death of the victim, which is the ultimate goal of the policy reform.

This would be true to an extent. In the short term the lack of a gun would prevent the killing temporarily. But the intent to kill or commit the crime remains. This means that there is nothing stopping the criminal from getting a knife and attempting the same crime. And if we remove the knife from the equation, what stops the criminal from using his hands and brute force?

"How could I possibly blame a pen for making a spelling mistake?"

Regardless of the weapon used, the best way to lessen the number of those who die of violent crimes (again, the goal of the gun policy reformists) would be to change the way people think about each other. Removing the gun from the equation will not remove the hate nor will it remove the intent to commit a crime against society.

The right to bear arms is guaranteed by the Second Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and I believe that each and every person should have the right to carry arms to protect themselves as long as they comply with the proper regulations.

This was a right given to us when the constitution was drafted. This happened after the Revolution. In this war, if the people did not have firearms, they would have stood no chance to successfully revolt against a strong, repressive government. We should have the right to bear arms, not only for protection against criminals but also for protection against repressive government.

If we want to lower the number of deaths among society in the long term, removing guns is the wrong way to go about it. Programs should be instituted to teach children from youth about the danger of guns and getting involved with people or places where guns are present. We live in a society today that allows children to watch movies in which people mow each other down with machine guns and play video games in which there character gets shot up and lives to play more and more levels only until the "game" is over.

The problem is that too many people are growing up thinking life is a game. Our society glorifies rappers that preach about how they hate everything and want to shoot everything up, the "thug" or the "gansta" is they way to be, yo. If we teach children from their youth to love and respect each other, to forgive each other, to stay away from drugs and gangs, and to allow the justice system to work without vigilantes running around, then maybe we can live in a world where fewer people will think about killing another person.

When we are prepared to change the way people think we will be prepared to lower the number of violent deaths that happen in our society today, and in the future as well.

I don't own a gun, but if I did, I'd want to keep it.

Yousef Munayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

What a flat tire did for me

McCARTHY

It is rare that I get a good night's sleep here. I cannot recall ever waking up naturally or at least by the buzzing of my alarm clock without being woken up previous to that. Every morning I am woken up by noises startling ones. There are no little birds perched on a tree branch outside my window chirping in the morning breeze; it is actually the complete opposite of that.

The problem is that the bus stop is right outside my window. Starting at 6:30 a.m. there is the harrowing sound of the bus slamming on its brakes while it comes to its complete stop. A while after that are the sounds of garbage trucks. With their loud annoying beeping they are sure to let me know they are driving in reverse, right next to my window.

By now it has become part of the morning routine: waking to the screeching sounds that echo in my ear.

Apparently there is a new heating system in my building. Unfortunately, I would not know that if they did not tell me in the beginning of the year. As the system starts up, it makes sure to let you know — another nice melody to listen to as you are lying in bed. It sounds like two metal pipes being struck against each other.

You would assume that the heating system is old and needs replacement, not brand new, not by the sound of it at least.

The system definitely works though, once the banging comes to a halt you immediately feel the rise in temperature. You need to sleep with the window open because it is so warm in your room. Because of the heat forcing me to keep the window open at night, I will never cease to be woken up by the morning buses.

This year walking to class has become just a little harder than last. There are two busy areas on campus that have been put out of service for the students to use to get to class. The sidewalk on either side of North Pleasant Street has been blocked off with bright orange fencing. You can detour through the School of Management or along the front of the Fine Arts Center. An officer now directs crossing the street, and the buses and other vehicles have a hard time getting through with all the hustle and bustle of the pedestrians, which causes a bit of a traffic delay.

Also under construction are the stairs by Morrill. Many people walked these stairs day in and day out as they made their way around campus. It is a convenience to have that walk through there. Now, students have to walk around Morrill, which for some could be an inconvenience, depending on in which direction they are headed.

Behind Van Meter dorm there is a water tower. A U Mass logo is in the process of being painted on it. I am all for school spirit, but there are budget cuts going on. Talk of money problems was such a big issue last year that speakers came in during classes and students were encouraged to write to state representatives. I definitely think that a logo on a water tower is not necessary at this time, not when the money could have been put toward a better use, something a bit more important for the University.

"There are no little birds perched on the branch outside my window chirping in the morning breeze..."

There are a few complaints I have about campus. As I was deciding what to incorporate this with, I realized that what had happened to me over the weekend would tie it all up.

This weekend I went to visit a friend. He drove me back to school and once here realized there was a nail in his tire and it was flat. The flat tire was inevitably going to make him late for work. Most people would be really angry and it would ruin their day if they had a flat.

Instead of flipping out, we walked together to town and got some breakfast as the tire was being fixed. On the way back we decided that it had worked out nicely. Even though getting the tire fixed cost money and time, we got to hang out for longer than we expected and had a good time out of it.

You might be wondering how this ties into my complaint? Well here's how: In all of the things I mentioned that bother me, or how inconvenient something is, I have come to realize that it could always be worse. No one ever wants to be late for work, but you cannot help it if you get a flat tire; it is out of your control.

It could have been worse, we could have been in an accident, and that would not only ruin our day, but could have changed our lives. Yes, it is annoying to have to walk a different way because of construction, but who cares; you are getting a little exercise. I wish my room wasn't so hot, that way I could close the windows, but at least we have heat. I guess it could be worse. As for the water tower, with the soon-to-be logo, the money could have been spent in an even more unnecessary way, although it would have been nice to know money is being used wisely.

There are two morals to the story here. The first being that you shouldn't concentrate on things that are out of your control because they will only bother you. The second being that we shouldn't complain about things that bother us as much as we do, like I did in this column.

Ultimately, if it doesn't change too much of your life, then it isn't that big of a deal anyway. It is a good thing I had that flat tire incident. It made me realize things could always be worse.

Caitlin McCarthy is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor:

To the Editor:

As one of the union speakers at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Trustees, I wish to apologize for the heckling of Student Trustee [William] Powers from a few members of the audience.

In my opinion, it showed disrespect for an elected student official. The demonstration organizers did not anticipate this and were sorry to see it happen.

Feelings among the campus employees are clearly running very high, however. People are really angry over what's happened with their contracts. With feelings running so high, incidents like this are bound to happen occasionally.

But we will try as hard as we can to minimize them in the future. After all, employees and students – and families and alumni – have much work to do to hold things together here and advocate forcefully, as we did last spring, for this campus that we all cherish.

Ronald Story
Professor of History
President, Massachusetts Society of Professors

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Gilad Skolnick's letter to the Editor from Wednesday, Nov. 6. His letter is wrought with errors in his rebuttal of Uri Strauss.

The premise of the letter by Mr. Skolnick is that Israel is no less of a democracy than the United States, and that the United States requires a "character" of its nation in a similar way to that which Israel requires of itself.

Quite simply, this testimony is unfounded and erroneous. Democracy is not reliant on whether or not a state has an official religion, which, despite Mr. Skolnick's implications, the United States does not. However, a democracy is dependent on the unrestricted ability of a people to govern themselves by election. This is hampered in Israel by various laws, not the least of which are those that require a "Jewish character" of the country.

These laws are tantamount to the so-called Jim Crow laws of the United States in the first half of the 20th century. The aforementioned laws restricted the African American segment of the nation from voting and freely expressing themselves in such a way as to preserve the "white character" of the state.

Mr. Skolnick also states that Arabs in the West Bank are not allowed to vote due to Mr. Arafat's dictatorship. The nature of Mr. Arafat's rule in the embryonic Palestinian state is not an issue here. The issue is, however, that the state of Israel is restricting certain minorities of its populace from participating in its "democracy." Further, the characterization of Palestinians as Arabs is erroneous, and Mr. Skolnick should either learn the correct demographics and ethnicities of the region or kindly spare us his misinformation.

The implication that Arab members of the Knesset should not be allowed to travel abroad, to Syria for instance, or to encourage Palestinians to actively pursue freedom and independence, regardless of whether it may or may not be considered terrorism, is evidence that Mr. Skolnick is no great believer in freedom of speech and for that matter, no great expert on the way a democracy works. It seems odd that on the one hand Mr. Skolnick should advocate limitations on freedom of speech and belief, and on the other attempt to defend democracy's ideals.

Mr. Skolnick seems to have confused his history of the development of the modern Israeli state. If Mr. Skolnick were to ask, today, many of the Palestinians occupying Palestine in 1948, I am sure he would find that few, if any of them, would qualify their departure from "Israel" as voluntary. You see, the majority of these people were loaded on buses by armed Israelis and shipped out of the area to become Israel in 1948. This was no more voluntary than the forced departure of Native Americans from their land in the early history of this country.

Further, it seems that Mr. Skolnick has absolved Israel of its own terrorist past. Yes, Israel was brought to nationhood by terrorism. It is probably the most successful campaign of terrorism the world has ever known. Israelis, though, would not consider Ben Gurion a terrorist, nay, a freedom fighter, nor would they consider the bombing of the King David Hotel that killed 91 an act of terrorism on the road to Israeli statehood.

Acts like this one should be considered when we discuss our relationship with Israel. It should not be forgotten that we are a people that believe in the struggle for freedom and should not lose sight of this when we focus on the crescent of civilization. Remember, "tyranny anywhere is a threat to peace everywhere."

Ben Farley
UMass student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING Weekend Edition

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.15.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

© 2002 RANDOMHOUSE.COM

AN UNSEEMLY CHEMISTRY AND RAW PASSION FOR LIVE ENTERTAINMENT WAS EVIDENT AT GOOD CHARLOTTE'S PERFORMANCE AT LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL.

Good Charlotte live up to their name

By Meghan Healy
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

GOOD CHARLOTTE
Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
Nov. 7

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — With the exception of a few nervous parents, the crowd at Good Charlotte's show seemed to be strictly under driving age. The line wrapped completely around the block that Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel sits on. Some fans had been there for hours. At 7 p.m. the doors opened, allowing the masses of blue-haired, spiked collar-wearing teens to flow into the venue.

At around 8 p.m., right when the kiddies were getting restless, the lights dimmed and opening act Halo Friendlies took the stage. Hailing from Orange County, Calif., the all-girl group filled a 45-minute set with trite punk rip-offs about break-ups, boys and girl power. The fact that their sound was bland and unimpressive didn't stop the audience from trying to get into it.

Crowd surfers and mosh pits overtook the masses. At the close of their set, one of the singers, a cheap Britney Spears knock-off with an eyebrow ring, expressed her thanks to Good Charlotte for bringing them on tour. They then announced that they would be playing their last song and received the most applause they had all evening.

After surviving a grueling half-hour intermission, Homegrown took the stage. Unlike their predecessors, Homegrown brought something worth hearing to the stage. A blend of poppy choruses and ska riffs, the three boys, also from Orange County, were full of energy and enthusiasm. Homegrown strayed slightly from the typical subject matter of punk music, with socially conscious songs about race relations and the perils of depression. They managed to capture the attention of the restless fans and prep the crowd accordingly for the main act.

When Homegrown vacated the stage, a large group of roadies overtook it and began preparing for Good Charlotte. A shorter intermission of about 15 minutes allowed them the time to set things up and the show really got underway.

Good Charlotte fans may tend to be young, pushy and abrasive, but when their band takes the stage they are dedicated to only one thing: living the show. For a brief moment, the crowd is Lupo's fell silent. Somewhere a recording was struck up, blasting the eerie vignette "A New Beginning," a haunting instrumental that not so coincidentally opens Good Charlotte's newest album The Young and the Hopeless. Moments later the band — Paul, Billy and brothers Benji and Joel, walked on to a deafening welcome of screams, cheers, and admissions of undying love.

They wasted no time getting right into the music, playing the aptly titled "The Anthem." The upbeat declaration of Good Charlotte's love of their occupation sent the crowd into an uproar of singing and screaming. "This is the anthem, put all your hands up," lead singer Joel commanded, and dutifully his fans obeyed.

Playing a few more tracks off their recently released EP, like the broken home anthem "The Story of My Old Man" and "Girls and Boys," a tune about the length boys will go to in order to impress girls who only want two things anyway, "cars and money," the band filled the tiny club with amazing energy.

"Who wants to hear an old one," guitarist and supporting vocalist Benji asked. The crowd unanimously approved. The boys played old favorites such as "Seasons," "East Coast Anthem" and "Walkoff Worldwide." Until he announced it, midway through the show, no one would have known that Joel was violently ill.

He apologized for his sickness and let brother Benji take center stage and sing lead vocals to instant classics "My Bloody Valentine" and "The Day That I Die," carefree ditties about murder and suicide, respectively.

The performance gave fans a chance to appreciate the talent of the band as musicians and performers, rather than simply a voice for a vet to be heard generation. Benji showed himself to be a solid guitar player, and lead guitarist Billy also demonstrated a clear capability to rock. Bassist Paul easily kept up with his spastic, musical counterparts. Though the boys of Good Charlotte may not demonstrate phenomenal musical talent they unmistakably have something too many musical prodigies do not: an undeniable chemistry and an earnest love for what they do.

After an hour and 15 minutes on stage, the boys retired but the crowd wouldn't let them remain away for long. They returned after a few minutes for the customary, but in this case well-earned, encore. For the finale, the now visibly ailing Joel and his crew pulled out all the stops. A power-packed rendition of the band's most well noted song "Little Things" brought down the house. Coupled with the desperate cry "The Young and the Hopeless," the encore left little to be desired.

Both songs assert the band as a formidable contender in the future realm of popular music and their performance proved their ability to spar with the best of modern punk bands.

Live at Folsom justifies Dave Matthews massive appeal

By Lisa Potter
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
Live at Folsom Field: Boulder, Colorado
RCA

The Dave Matthews Band, the number one touring band in America, recently released its fourth live album, Live at Folsom Field: Boulder, Colorado. This is one band which is widely know for its energetic, sold out concerts that can't be missed by any esteemed fan of music. Even if you are not a big DMB fan, its live albums demand a certain level of respect, both from the music industry and the public alike. With 21 tracks (two and a half-hours of live music), this is the longest and most energized live album to date. It's an album that is sure to deliver everything that the band's fans have grown to expect. About one-third of the songs are tracks from the triple-platinum 2001 album, Everyday, DMB's best selling studio album. There is something on this CD for everyone, old and new fans alike.

Live at Folsom Field features such classic DMB favorites as "Ants Marching," "Two Step," and "Crash Into Me," and new hits such as "Bartender," "Angel" and "I Did It." Each song is strong enough to stand alone as a unique piece, slightly different from any version that even the biggest DMB fans have heard. If you have never been to one of the band's concerts you're missing out, but this album is about as close as it gets to putting you there without waiting for them to come to your hometown. Not only is this album comprised of some of the band's best work, but it puts you right in the action with a live audience, which is heard interacting with the band throughout this jam-packed concert.

Much of the material on Folsom Field hadn't yet been formally released at the time of the CD's recording, in July 2001. Songs such as "Bartender" and "Digging a Ditch" would later be released on Busted Stuff, however, it is obvious that these Dave fans had already been familiar with such songs.

These are just a few of the songs on this album that are being released as five recordings for the first time.

One of the most notable tracks of the album happens to be a 14-plus minute version of "Angel." The first song of disc two, "Angel" includes everything that makes this band such a successful touring group. With multiple solos and guest singers, everything once again comes together perfectly.

Just as it is progressively becoming more common at the band's performances, both crowd and band work off each other in such songs as "Everyday" and "Warehouse." The band mixes its classic "#40" with "Everyday," thus creating a version of "Everyday" that is becoming standard in many DMB performances and is a fan favorite. The mixture of old and new helps bring fans of their older music into their new style, and newer fans into the old. These are just a few perks that anyone could hope for, and expect, when attending a DMB show.

Live at Folsom Field is sure to keep current fans interested and lure new ones. The CD leaves the listener begging for more, but be forewarned, this band's success is worldwide, and if you plan to become a lucky concert-goer, plan ahead and get your tickets as soon as they go on sale.

COURTESY AMERICAN APPAREL

DAVE MATTHEWS BAND'S LATEST LIVE ALBUM, LIVE AT FOLSOM FIELD BOULDER COLORADO IS A HIT-LADEN RECORD THAT'S SURE TO PLEASE OLD AND NEW FANS ALIKE.

Six degrees of Kevin Bacon

Moderated by Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Kevin Bacon is supposedly connected to every other actor – past, present and future – by only six degrees. A cult brain-teasing game emerged as part of this theory that is now popular among movie fanatics and novices alike.

The goal is to connect Bacon to another actor by no more than "six degrees" (links in the chain between the two movie stars in question) in as few steps as possible. According to the game's myth, every puzzle has a solution, so try to find just one!

This week's puzzle:
Kevin Bacon & Winona Ryder

The answer will appear in Monday's Collegian.

Anderson book worthy of 'F'

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE F WORD: HOW TO SURVIVE YOUR FAMILY
Louie Anderson
Warner Books

Comedian Louie Anderson takes a turn for the more dramatic side in his new memoir/self-help book, The F Word, which sounds like an amusing and light read. But the celebrity advice book, which is about Anderson's family and how the reader can begin to understand their own (and not about that other "f" word), is far from the comedic wit that people expect from one of America's most beloved comedians.

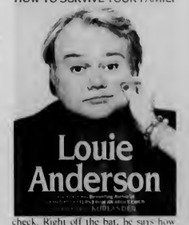
Granted, Anderson's last book, Dear Dad, was a dramatic turn that was effective, pulling on the heartstrings and helping it become a New York Times best seller. His latest offspring, though, is not able to follow in the footsteps of its older brother.

As much as Anderson's family dysfunction is at times humorous, he flip-flops back and forth between anecdotes and "how-to" instructions on healing the tensions and problems within your familial unit. His words on how to improve relationships with one's relatives are insightful, yet they're neither amusing (which his stand-up act at least manages to do on some level), nor do they seem like they will actually work.

After all, if Anderson has as many problems in his family as he says, one would think that his remedies for the problems would not result in his need to write a book on the woes he endures at a family function or when a sibling asks him for money. If The F Word is a form of therapy for Anderson, that's one thing, but it's not a humorous read for the most part, nor is it very helpful. (Then again, I have a good relationship with my family, so I could be completely off.)

Anderson received help in writing the book from a friend of his, but the prose of the writing is not memorable. With two writers on board, the writing should be more skilled and directed; at many times, it starts to feel like you're reading a transcription of an interview. Anderson's voice can clearly be heard in the text, and there is certainly no level of difficulty understanding what he's saying, but there are not many passages that linger after reading them or that stand out above the rest.

Sprinkled throughout the book are pictures of Anderson's family members, or places where he's performed that somehow lend themselves to the idea he is speaking of in that chapter.



Never before have pictures said so much, because they are oftentimes more interesting than whatever topic he is rambling on about in length.

Some are worth a read: the chapters on "Family Escapes" and "Family Pets" are enjoyable, but is there really a need for a short digression on "Functional Families?" I thought the whole point of the book was to focus on dysfunctional ones.

Fortunately, Anderson keeps the chapters brief, and the overall length of the book short. With more pages, he might have been able to really expand on many of the ideas that actually had some gusto, but it only seems like he was writing it to cash a check. Right off the bat, he says how he is in debt, so what's a reader to think when they reach the back cover?

With his career not where it used to be, and his eviction as host from the game show "Family Feud", Louie seems to be in a state of helplessness.

As much as I wanted to enjoy the book, I can only think of one less-than-positive "f" word to describe it.

Passion for Peace rages the Campus Center

IUNOON PERFORMS IN THE CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM LAST NIGHT DURING THE UPC SPONSORED PASSION FOR PEACE PROJECT.

By Scott Enright
Collegian Staff

IUNOON
Campus Center Auditorium
Nov. 14

Iunoon's passion for peace mission thrashed the half full Campus Center auditorium last night at a University Productions Concerts effort to spread peace.

"We did this show to support peace on campus and abroad," said Simbi Akintaghe, a senior Legal Studies major and member of UPC. "One of the best ways to facilitate peace is through music."

A long caterpillar-like line of chanters grew outside the closed doors of the ballroom. UPC had already distributed more than four hundred tickets.

Sarah Fitzgerald, senior Marketing and Communications double major, is production manager for UPC. She balanced a tiny red radio in her hand as she tried to get members of the band into the eating room for an interview. She explained that this show was a way for students to experience another culture.

"We try to get different styles of music, different genres here ... so everyone can have their own experience," she said. She further added that UPC had been planning this event since the beginning of October and that by making tickets available in advance, members from all five colleges could attend.

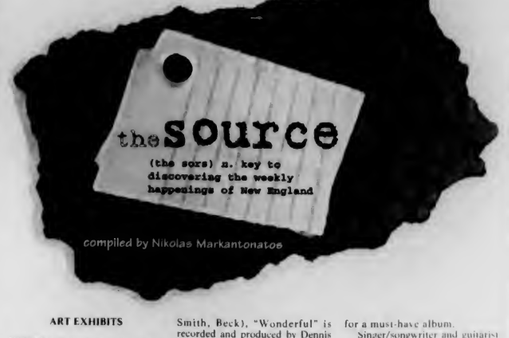
Salman Ahmad, lead guitarist, pranced into the room in a purple and black rock star outfit. He plopped himself down in a chair and began to talk about the politics of their music.

"We come from a part of the world that has had terrorism for the past two decades ... our music started as a reflection ... our region has become a microcosm of the world ... who really knew about Pakistan or Afghanistan before Sept. 11 [2001]?" he asked.

Bassist Brian O'Connell sat silently observing the conversation with percussionist Asiq Ali by his side. The lead vocalist Ali Azmat was not present and the band drummer, Jay Dutamsi, spoke mainly about rhythm.

"Our music, South Asian, is more in the shoulders," he said. "Everything in the upper body."

Before hitting the stage he said, "It is important to make a statement, not just to play music, but to really have something to back up what you are playing."



On stage, the electric guitar backed by the bass ripped open the seams of anticipation that had been sewn by the audience waiting in line. It got quiet. Then — boom! The tablas began to vibrate under the fingertips of Ali. The drum kit joined in and everyone picked up the tempo in unison lifting the crowd into a swirl of intensity.

Ahmad got down on his knees and passionately caressed his guitar. The percussionist, drummer and bassist held the band's composure acting as glue to keep everyone together.

The auditorium was roaring but unfortunately distinct sounds were impossible to hear. The music was more of a blur. Band togetherness loosened up as time rolled on and the musicians used poor dynamics. Their sound was level with no extreme peaks or soft points.

The lyrics were mostly sung in the language of Urdu making it impossible for anyone outside of that culture to understand the meaning behind the music. There was no dialogue and no explanation of why people were being brought together. By the end of the night the audience had lost its diversity.

Band members say that their music is about connecting with their audience and about having a good time. The audience dwindled as the evening progressed proving the event unsuccessful at bringing people of different cultures together to share one experience under the name of peace.

ART EXHIBITS

UMASS – "Islamic Art: Peace and Beauty" is now open at the Augusta Savage Gallery. The exhibit focuses on Arabic calligraphy by M.J. Alhabeeb, an Associate Professor at the Department of Resource Economics. His work is inspired by the ancient and breathtaking Islamic calligraphy traditions.

Alhabeeb has a self-developed experience in painting and calligraphy that extends for more than 30 years. He has had three solo exhibitions and participated in many group exhibitions in the past.

"This exhibition offers a valuable opportunity for the American public to fathom the beautiful, peaceful and bright side of the Arabic/Islamic future for its unique art," Alhabeeb wrote in his press release. "I hope the power of art would be able to counter the daemons and prevalence of the stereotypical view of this culture as primitive and violent."

Hours at the Augusta Savage Gallery, 15 Curry Hicks, are Monday and Tuesday 1 to 7 p.m. and Wednesday through Friday 1 to 5 p.m. while the University is in session. Admission is free.

NORTHAMPTON – B.Z. Reily and Nan Fleming have joined forces in "Outside the Box: A Multi-Media Sculpture Exhibit by Cousins," on display now at the Forbes Library.

Reily and Fleming have made a sculpture mostly from recycled materials. Reily uses a lot of wood and clay, while Fleming favors metal and old books. They have made three-dimensional work in the last ten years, and they've both always been excited by the humorous and persona.

Gallery hours are Monday 1 to 9 p.m.; Tuesday 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Wednesday 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursday 1 to 5 p.m.; Friday and Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 1 to 5 p.m.

CONCERTS

NORTHAMPTON – Rising star Andy Stochansky performs tomorrow at the Ironhorse. The shows feature material from Fire Star Motel, his major label debut on Private Music that reveals Stochansky's melodic and ambient pop sound.

Once a former drummer for Ani DiFranco, Stochansky worked with a number of other critically acclaimed artists to craft Fire Star Motel. "Stutter" is co-produced by Tom Rothrock (Coldplay, Elliott Smith, Beck), "Wonderful" is recorded and produced by Dennis Herring (Cracker, Camper Van Beethoven), and the remaining tracks are produced by Ian LeFeuvre and mixed by Rob Seifert (Eels, Supergrass).

UMASS – The Deafening, Ten Strike and Paper December Orchestra play at Van Meter Basement tomorrow night at 8. Tickets are $4 with a Five College ID and $6 for the general public.

NORTHAMPTON – The Hooked on Swing Society is bringing the Peter Davis Swing Band to the third floor of the Northampton Center for the Arts, 17 New South St., tomorrow from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m.

The Peter Davis Swing Band features original arrangements of jazz classics and a hot horn section. A basic swing dance lesson will be conducted at 7:30.

Refreshments will be served. Admission for the dance and lesson is $12 and all ability levels are welcome. For more information call (413) 247-9396.

WALTHAM – Sweet Aroma Records, an independent record label promoting singer/songwriter Bryan Graves, is sponsoring a concert at Kind Word Café (New Life Metro Church) in Springfield, Mass. tomorrow at 7 p.m.

Admission to the concert is free, however, attendees are encouraged to donate non-perishable food items, which will benefit Lutheran Community Services in West Springfield.

Food items collected at the Bryan Graves concert will help increase the amount of donations Lutheran Community Services receives throughout the year. According to Sweet Aroma Records, such donations are especially helpful as Thanksgiving approaches.

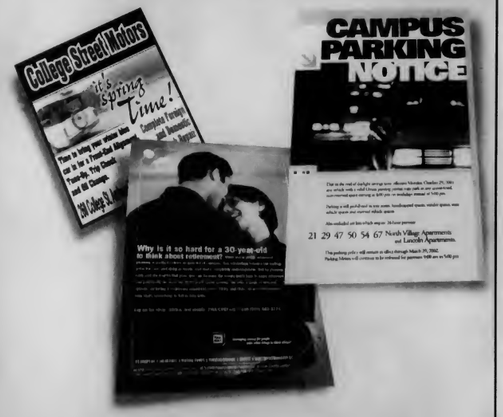
NORTHAMPTON – Melodrome, with special guest Celia, play the Ironhorse Nov. 22. Hailing from Northampton, which has become a hub for many great acts over the years, Melodrome's rock sound exudes tasteful melodies reflecting years of experience.

Melodrome's debut album, The Sidewalk Ends, is a powerful reflection of contemporary rock. The band's sampling technique contrasted with their vintage recording methods makes for a must-have album.

Singer/songwriter and guitarist Robby Baier holds an extensive history in the rock scene. He recently received the Musician's Atlas 2002 Independent Music Award for Best Pop/Rock Artist. Baier's songs have appeared in various films and TV shows over the years including Drowning Mona, The Brutal Truth, "Judging Amy," "Touched By An Angel," "Walker Texas Ranger," and "Robocop." In 1989 Robby was the frontman of the German based rock band Pearls at Swine and signed to BMG Records. Since then Robby has moved to Housatonic, Mass. in the Berkshire Mountains, where he has converted the town's former train station into a recording studio.

Iesko Stahl, bass player and vocalist for Melodrome, has prior history with Baier. Back in Germany they played together in Pearls at Swine. He relocated to New York City in 1997, and has recorded and performed with numerous New York bands, including Punch Havana, Aerosol, Fagen, Stella Soleil, and Thirst.

Guitarist Darren Todd played with Berkshire band Lord Hill; and Sloan, who is currently working on his debut solo CD, toured and recorded with Virgin recording artist Mark Curry.



Advance tickets are $8 and tickets bought at the door are $10.

TICKETS

SPRINGFIELD – Tickets to the Thursday, March 27, 2003 Harlem Globetotters event at the Springfield Civic Center are now on sale. Tickets start at $12 and are available through the Springfield Civic Center Box Office by calling (413) 787-6600 and all Ticketmaster outlets by calling (413) 733-2500. The Burger King sponsored game, "Reclaiming the Game," starts at 7 p.m.

Audiences will experience several new ball-handling routines before every game. At the conclusion of every game, fans are invited to meet the players for a 30-minute "meet and greet" session, at which time each child has an opportunity to meet a Globetrotter.

For the latest news and information about the Harlem Globetrotters and to purchase team merchandise, visit the team's official Web site at www.harlemglobetrotters.com.

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester come talk to Mike, Ruth, or Shannon

or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement
Freshmen and Sophomores are encouraged to apply

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

Write For Arts

Styles by Deborah

Featuring Foil Highlights & Designer Haircuts for Students
Complementary consultation with every visit
$10 off Foils and Style Haircuts with student ID
EXPIRES 12/15/02
$5 off Clipper Cuts with student ID
EXPIRES 12/15/02
63 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

AU's Mackovic scrutinized

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) – A public mutiny by players is rare in college football. Rarer still is a coach choking back tears as he admits he's done wrong.

Such was the spectacle Wednesday at Arizona.

"It has been quite a day," coach John Mackovic said, "quite a 24 hours."

Rumors were rampant throughout the day that Mackovic would step down with two games remaining in the second year of a five-year contract that pays him $800,000 per year. A Tucson radio station even reported that he would quit.

Mackovic, '59, did not resign. Instead, he admitted that he's made mistakes in his dealings with players and assistant coaches, and promised to change.

"This afternoon I have met with my coaches and our team separately to express my feelings and regrets," he said at a packed news conference at McKale Center. "I'm terribly sorry for my part in this turmoil and unrest. I accept full responsibility for my actions and pledge to work tirelessly to mend any fences."

The discontent that had simmered below the surface boiled over on Tuesday night when more than 40 players – about half the team – sought and were granted a meeting with university president Peter Likins to air their complaints about the coach.

For some 90 minutes, the players told Likins of what they believed was Mackovic's unwarranted verbal abuse, and the misery that was Arizona football. The team is 0-6 in the Pac-10, and 3-7 overall.

"It was a feeling that was echoed throughout the team," said senior linebacker Lance Briggs, an all-Pac 10 player the last two seasons. "As soon as I heard it, I said, 'Let's go.' I was one of the first guys to speak and bring it all out into the light. I had a chance to get a lot of things off my chest."

Likins listened, then called athletic director Jim Livengood, who met with Mackovic for nearly two hours to discuss the situation.

"John, in the conversation last night, which I thought was outstanding, understood clearly – we've just got to make some changes," Livengood said. "We need to make some changes so that our players clearly enjoy what they're doing."

Livengood suggested that the players' meeting with the university president had been promoted by "outside forces," an apparent reference to players' parents, boosters, or both. If so, those outside forces will not be pleased that Mackovic kept his job.

Mackovic said the problems stem from his behavior following the team's loss at Wisconsin on Sept. 21.

"I said many things that were inappropriate for that time and place," he said. "Most importantly, I allowed my emotions to get control of me. I've always placed high standards on my conduct, as well as my team's. On that day and on other days, I have failed to live up to my own standards."

Mackovic, reading from a prepared statement, said he knew at the time what he'd said was wrong.

"That same Monday, I made similar comments to our coaching staff, which I have regretted as well," he said. "Again, my actions and inactions in correcting the situation lie squarely on my shoulders."

Mackovic paused to regain his composure, then said, "It was reported that I had told a player as recently as last Saturday that he was a disgrace to his family for the way he was playing. I have made a full and open apology to him and hope he can accept it."

That player was junior tight end Justin Levasseur.

"He just said something about my family that I didn't appreciate. He apologized for it," Levasseur said. "A little late, but he did apologize. ... I don't know if he can change, but I hope he can."

Mackovic, who coached at Illinois, the NFL's Kansas City Chiefs and at Texas before becoming an ESPN analyst, met with his players for nearly two hours. It was, Briggs said, the kind of give-and-take the team had never experienced before with the coach.

Arizona has two games remaining, at California on Saturday and at home against Arizona State on Nov. 29. Beyond that, Mackovic faces an uncertain future. Opposing recruiters will use this week's upheaval against him. The discipline of his current players will be scrutinized.

"I'm ready," he said. "Anybody tells me I can't do something, I'm going to set out to prove them wrong."

■ soccer

continued from page 16

GOALKEEPER ENZO ALTOMARE HAS POSTED AN IMPRESSIVE 11-2-2 RECORD IN 15 REGULAR SEASON GAMES.

creates a two-fold task for the Dukes. Not only do they have to play at the top of their game in their first postseason appearance since 1999 if they hope to beat a tough Richmond squad, but they have to do so in from of a raucous crowd of Spider supporters that could possibly add up to 3,000-plus fans. A tough task nonetheless, Koch knows that the Dukes are capable of pulling it off.

"[Duquesne] is very tough," Koch said. "They're quick off the ball, and they close well defensively. They present a lot of matchup problems, and a lot of that has to do with their speed.

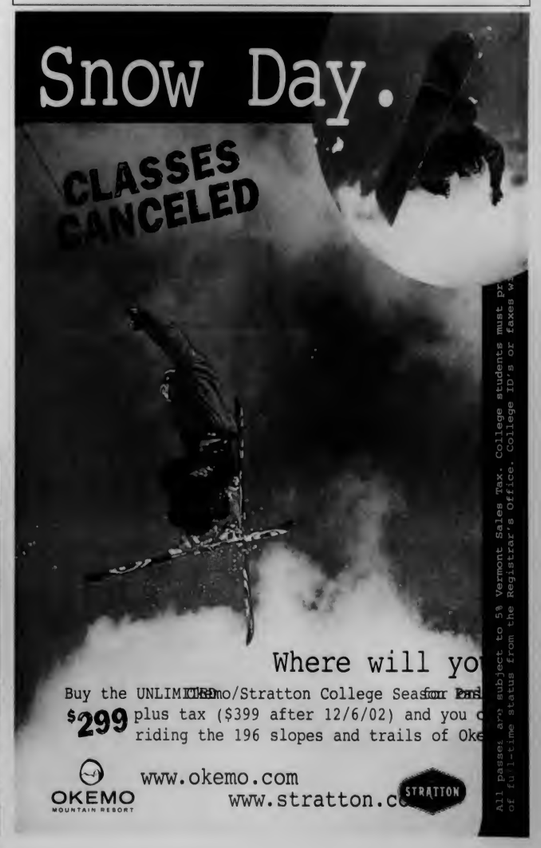
"They're big goal scorer (forward Damien Pottinger) is an exceptional athlete. He is a true offensive player, and if he gets on track then they are tough to beat."

For Richmond, a team which scurried into the postseason with a flurry in winning seven of its final 10 games, it hopes to do what both the Spiders and the Minutemen were unable to do against the Dukes: and that is net the equalizer. The Spiders tied Duquesne 1-1 Oct. 4, yet one side will have to budge this weekend. This marks the Spiders' second consecutive trip to the postseason since joining the league in 2001. The hosts will also look to avenge last year's final game loss to the Minutemen in the championship, in a game that was decided on penalty kicks.

"Richmond has some good athletes," Koch said. "They played us very tough, and they have the advantage of playing in front of their home crowd. They are going to be tough to take out for us and the other two teams in the tournament."

"This is our time to shine," Deren said. "We've established ourselves as the team to beat by winning the postseason last year and winning the league this year, so we need to go out there and play like we can. It's our title to defend and teams are going to need to outplay us to beat us and take it."

Friday's first semifinal between Massachusetts and George Washington kicks off at 5:30 p.m., with the Duquesne-Richmond matchup to follow that at 8 p.m. With a day off on Saturday, the championship game for the 2002 Atlantic 10 Men's Soccer Championship will be held Sunday afternoon.



The Last Hurrah

Doug White is one of the many UMass players who will be honored at Senior Day on Saturday at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Anyone interested in writing for the Sports section should come to the weekly meeting held in the Collegian office on Sundays at 5 p.m.

SPRING BREAK
PARTY VACATIONS
CANCUN ACAPULCO JAMAICA
BAHAMAS FLORIDA S PADRE
BIGGEST PARTIES! ABSOLUTE BEST PRICES!
1-800-234-7007
www.ENDLESSsummerTOURS.com

BARBADOS
SPRING BREAK '03
Get Free Meals, Drinks, Entertainment and Parties with Sun Splash
ARE YOUR READY?
If you are ready for something different... Barbados is waiting for you! Legendary beaches and fantastic nightlife makes Spring Break in Barbados unforgettable.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Snow Day.

Where will yo
Buy the UNLIMITED Okemo/Stratton College Season Pass
$299 plus tax ($399 after 12/6/02) and you c riding the 196 slopes and trails of Oke
www.okemo.com
OKEMO MOUNTAIN RESORT
www.stratton.co
STRATTON
All passes are subject to 5% Vermont Sales Tax. College students must pr of full-time status from the Registrar's Office. College ID's or faxes w

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Get Greek Stuff F.A.S.T! Group orders get great discounts. Lettering, embroidery, novelties. Visit on-line at Connectsports.com 1-800-929-1897 dlantran@aol.com powered

Cheap heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-2865 or come by Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven Campus-Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact Campus-Fundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 apartments in house for rent. Four bedroom and 5 bedroom. Full Kitchen, Parking, heating included, laundry facility. $1400 and $1500 413-563-1888

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt Quarky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to U Mass or Nolfo. $700 with heat 433-3922

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywinecpts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

89 Nissan 240SX Coupe 155k 5speed Grt Cond Sporty $3000 Emily 546-0337

90 Volvo 760GLE Station Wagon, well maintained, extra clean, loaded, 155k, $2950, 582-9103, 585-0599

95 Honda Civic Coupe 2 door 99,000 miles 5 speed AC Very Good Condition B/O over 4500 BOB 253-9333

94 Chevy Cavalier, AT, 2 Door, Purple, 105k, AC, AM/FM, $1900, 587-0906 dundas@cs.umass.edu

91 Acclaim Luxury Edition needs work $350. 545-0547

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

EMPLOYMENT

Interviewing Now!! For Holiday Help and winter Break Work. $15.50 base- Appt. in our busy customer Service and sales departs. PT/FT flex. Conditions Apply. Start NOW or After finals . . . 781-890-7667 617-323-3456

Attn: UMASS Students Holiday break not exciting? Make some cash, Build your Resume and work with our Student team. Call Or apply online. 781-890-7667 (Metrowest) 617-323-3456 (Boston City) www.winter-breakwork.com

Nov. 21, 2002 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a spring 2003 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwaves.com 584-7750

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Looking for female to take over lease Share bedroom in Apt. Uptown $250/ month. Dec. or Jan. through May 508 274 9289

2 roommates needed Spring semester only Beautiful house right past Amherst College on Bus line 350/ mn 256-3390

TRANSPORTATION

NEED A RIDE HOME FOR THANKSGIVING? Catch a Deluxe Charter Bus to the Boston Area! Buses leave on Tues. Nov. 26th or Weds. Nov. 27th, Returning to UMASS on Sun. Dec 1st! Round Trip Fare $49 Visa & Mastercard accepted. Visit www.BeanTownBus.com or call 1-866-423-2686 for more details

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group

TRAVEL

Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK CHEAP!!! Call Logan (413) 210-5778

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT* Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRReam.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/13
4	NBSN
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Cinema
8	WB/20
9	UPN/38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Gavel-to-Gavel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	NET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Telefutura
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m., 413-545-3500
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Quote of the Day

"We're sorta like 7-11. We're not always doin' business, but we're always"

-Murphy McManus, The Boondock Saints

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 34	HIGH: 37 LOW: 32	HIGH: 43 LOW: 29

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Put yourself into the morning for something spectacular today, and, even in defeat, you'll enjoy perhaps more than you had before.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Duties and responsibilities may take you far from home today. You may want to divide a long journey into shorter distances. Be realistic.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Keep plugging away at that stubborn problem, and you'll work it out by day's end. Any lapse of attention or commitment will set you back, however.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Organization may not be the key to success today. Perhaps it is best to "wing it" and react to circumstances instinctively as they arise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You do not want to be wasting time now; once you get started today, you must be efficient in all you do. Be economical; consolidate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You have what it takes – but you must resist the temptation to take what others have. If you do so, you will surely risk all you've been working for.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You will find yourself going off-course a few times today, but you can quickly get yourself back on track if you catch the error soon enough.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Your energy is likely to wax and wane all day, but when the time comes, you should be able to satisfy someone who has been depending on you.

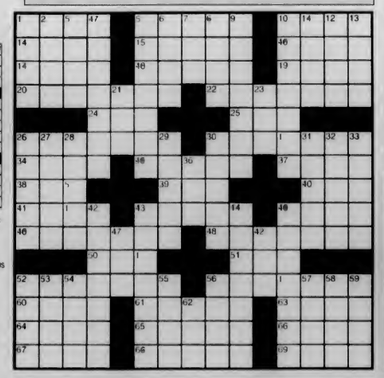
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – A little excitement goes a long way today. In fact, you may be more in the mood for the kind of routine that would bore you at other times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You can delight your family and friends with your antics today, provided you keep things light and lively. Avoid being self-indulgent.

AQUARIUS (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may be unusually sensitive today, and yet, toward the afternoon, you still have to face and obstacle that will demand nerves of steel.

Your comic could go here! Call 545-1809 and ask for Matt Despres for more information.

www.dailycollegian.com



ACROSS
1 Owl's cry
5 Blue Grotto site
10 Signature
14 Regarding (2 wds.)
15 Stuffing ingredient
16 Composer — Stravinsky
17 Lose one's balance
18 Black cattle
19 Havana's island
20 Own
22 Holiday lure
24 Baseball great Mel —
25 Drain cleaner
26 Miners' troughs
30 Outstanding
34 Haul
35 Freeway accesses
37 Rocket housing
38 Mich. neighbor
39 Luau memento
40 Type of overalls
41 Very mean person
43 Not glossy
45 Hudson Bay tribe
46 Ate too much maybe
48 Victoria's realm
50 Guide-schools
51 Pair
52 Beach wear
56 Popular pie
60 'Bonanza' brother
61 Absolute
63 Improve the road
64 Sting he
65 Roger or Dem
66 Frat letters
67 Lagers
68 Zoom
69 Family rooms

DOWN
1 Padlock mate
2 Norwegian port
3 Plodding of blues
4 Loam
5 Relies —
6 Beathe and Blyth
7 Greedy one
8 Chase away
9 Skirs
10 Pocket change
11 Flu symptom
12 "— Dick"
13 Eventful periods
21 Common abbr.
23 Deli bread
26 Takeoff
27 Sword thrust
28 Kind of conservative
29 Side dish
30 Malice
31 Virgo's neighbor
32 UFO passenger
33 Weaning vestments
36 Ran into
42 Arctic tribe
43 Seance holders
44 Lentiled
45 Sounded like a pony
47 Shiny metal
49 Junk food buy
52 Rum-soaked cake
53 Teen fave
54 Mustard greens cousin
55 Cease
56 Explorer — Marquette
57 "Kiss Me —"
58 A Karamazov
59 Famed loch
62 Familiar digit

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

T	E	M	P	■	R	O	L	E	I	S	■	S
K	E	W	■	A	M	A	H	■	E	V	E	N
T	■	I	M	A	■	P	E	V	E	■	F	E
R	N	■	C	R	A	N	E	■	P	R	Y	■
■	T	E	A	■	K	E	A	■	■	Q	U	E
U	N	B	O	L	T	S	■	R	E	D	T	A
P	E	■	N	O	R	M	A	■	F	A	R	■
F	B	I	■	S	T	A	T	E	■	R	O	E
E	L	E	G	■	W	E	N	D	■	T	O	N
D	E	F	R	A	U	D	■	S	A	R	O	N
G	■	■	A	R	M	■	■	C	E	O	■	■
G	O	D	S	■	M	I	N	C	E	M	E	A
U	H	U	H	■	A	U	D	I	O	■	S	L
A	N	T	E	■	A	M	E	N	S	■	N	A
P	S	O	S	■	A	S	S	E	T	■	G	U

11-15-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Spring Vegetable Soup

Corned Beef & Cabbage

Fish & Chips

Spinach Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Curried Chick Peas (vegan)

DINNER

Spring Vegetable Soup

Veal Parmesan

Boston Scrod

Tofu Fajita (vegan)

Daily Staff
Matt Brady
James Schaffer
Ken Campbell
Shannon Farrington
Gerald Auger
Erika Earl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Minutemen top seed in A-10 Tournament

Will play GW in first round

By Mike Marzelli
Collegian Staff

The team's 11-0 regular season record this weekend needs to stand for little more than the sample of the opponents the Richmond who visited the East Coast – this program is made from Market Stadium for the 2002 Atlantic 10 Men's Championship.

While Massachusetts looks to build off of the momentum it created in winning its first conference title since 2000 and first outright crown since the 1994 campaign, the task of repeating as tournament champions will surely be a difficult one. The top-seeded Minutemen will face fourth-ranked George Washington in the first semifinal, while third-rated Duquesne clashes with host and second seeded Richmond in the other.

"This is what it all comes down to," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "You work your whole season for the shot to play for the championship, and anything less is disappointing."

In the Colonials, the defending champions face a squad that finished 11-8-0 overall this year and return to the postseason following a one-year hiatus. GW managed to squeak into the tournament through the backdoor as it finished its conference slate even with Rhode Island at 7-4-0, but took the tiebreaker by virtue of its 3-2 triumph over the Rams on Nov. 3. If that score seems familiar to the Maroon and White, it is likely to do with the fact that UMass managed to edge the Colonials by the same score just two days earlier, in a game which featured two goals from leading scorer Jeff Deren, including the game-winner.

"They're a tough team," Koch said. "They play hard, and they always play us tough. We were fortunate to come away with the 'W' the last time we faced them, and we'll need to play better if we hope to beat them again."

While George Washington enters the weekend fresh off of a mini two game winning streak which saw them record the aforementioned victory over Rhode Island and post an impressive 2-0 blanking of Richmond, the Minutemen will begin play following their first loss in nearly two months. In losing to the Rams at home this past Saturday, UMass' quest for the A-10 regular season title seemed as if it could be derailed. However the Maroon and White would not see its hopes dashed as word of Richmond's loss to GW reached Amherst. Koch knows though, that his team cannot rely on anything but itself this weekend if it hopes to repeat as champions.

"We didn't play like we were capable of against Rhode Island, and that won't cut it this weekend," Koch said. "We have to play like we're capable of and not sit back and wait for things to happen or for other teams to make mistakes.

"If we play like we can, we should be able to put ourselves into position to win."

Friday's second semifinal seemingly

Turn to SOCCER page 7

TWO-TIME ATLANTIC 10 PLAYER OF THE YEAR JEFF DEREN WILL LEAD THE MINUTEMEN INTO THIS WEEKEND'S CONFERENCE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Championships held at the University of Richmond

UMass Weekend Schedule

TIME HOME VISITORS

Friday, Nov. 15

Home
Ice Hockey vs. UMass-Lowell (7 p.m.)

Away
Men's Soccer at A-10 Championship (vs. George Washington) (2 p.m.)

Saturday, Nov. 16

Home
Football vs. Hofstra (12 p.m.)
Men's Basketball vs. Coaches vs. Cancer All-Stars (7 p.m.)

Away
Men's and Women's Cross Country at NCAA Regional in The Bronx, N.Y. (11 a.m.)
Ice Hockey at UMass-Lowell (7 p.m.)

Sunday, Nov. 17

Away
Men's Soccer at A-10 Final (1 p.m.)

Sox won't say if Epstein is a candidate

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox have narrowed the candidates for general manager and will get to him one by early December, but they won't say if assistant GM Theo Epstein is under consideration.

No new names have emerged since their top choice, Oakland general manager Billy Beane, agreed last Saturday to take the job then turned it down the next day to stay near his daughter on the West Coast.

At least seven candidates were interviewed. Red Sox president Larry Lucchino refused comment Thursday when asked if he is considering the 28-year-old Epstein, who joined the Red Sox last March 24 as assistant to interim general manager Mike Port.

Epstein was director of baseball operations for the San Diego Padres, where he worked with Lucchino.

When asked about Epstein, Lucchino said, "I'm not going to talk about any particular candidates today. Thanks for the suggestion."

One of Lucchino's first acts when he and John Henry completed their purchase of the team last February was to fire general manager Dan Duquette and promote Duquette's assistant, Port.

Port and Epstein represented the Red Sox at baseball's general managers' meetings, which ended Thursday in Tucson, Ariz.

"We're certainly under five" candidates, Lucchino said Thursday. "It's possible that lightning could strike in the last week or two of the search because, remember, we said the winter meetings" were the target.

"That's essential," he said. "That's when the real business of baseball begins to be conducted in earnest."

Lucchino said he conducted second interviews with some candidates by telephone.

In addition to Beane, those interviewed include Philadelphia assistant GM Mike Arbuckle, New York Mets assistant GM Jim Duquette, Baltimore adviser Mike Flanagan, Cincinnati director of player personnel Leland Maddox, former Chicago White Sox general manager Ron Schueler, and Port's special assistant, Lee Thomas.

Port also was a candidate, but Lucchino didn't say who remains under consideration.

Epstein's youth could hurt him, but Lucchino said, "experience in the front office of a baseball team, we put that right near the top of the list [of qualifications], but it does not necessarily have to be as a GM, but it does have to be substantial front office experience."

Epstein and Beane worked together briefly on arranging compensation to Oakland after Beane agreed to a deal estimated at $15 million over five years. Red Sox owner John Henry had no hard feelings over Beane's change of heart.

"You have to tip your hat to the man to turn down what he turned down to stay with that organization. It shows you what a great organization that is," Henry said. "I was very surprised. We had a deal, I think, that we were all, including Billy, celebrating over.

"He would have been, I think, a great general manager for the Boston Red Sox. I've always admired that [Oakland] franchise and I think it would have been a real blow. So I think things worked out the way they should have."

Since Beane's rejection, a few new names "have surfaced," Lucchino said, "but, by and large, we think we've got a good pool of candidates to choose from."

A stunt for all the right reasons

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

Picture 7-foot-7 Manute Bol on skates.

Indianapolis ice general manager Larry Linde did more than that. Earlier this week, he got Bol's signature on a Central Hockey League contract and then started measuring the rest of him for a uniform.

Never mind that Bol played pro basketball, not hockey, or that all his previous experience with ice is the kind that fills a glass.

"A company told us they have a size 16 skate and our equipment guys have been putting together extra-long sticks," Linde said Thursday. "We're making progress."

Indianapolis' next Central Hockey League game is Saturday against the Amarillo Gorillas. Linde wouldn't say whether Bol will take the ice for the ice, but in the tradition of showmen, he said to stay tuned.

"All I can say is we hope to have Manute in uniform and sitting on the end of the bench," Linde said.

This is hardly the first time someone has threatened to pass off a freak show as real sport.

But trust us (for the moment, anyway), it's also one of the few times it's being done for the right reasons.

Baseball fans might remember that St. Louis Browns owner Bill Veeck sent a midget named Eddie Gaedel – wearing uniform number 1/8 – to the plate as a pinch-hitter in a real game.

It was 1951 and Veeck had a terrible team in a town the Cardinals already owned. Before Gaedel went up to bit, Veeck told the 3-foot-7 batsman that if he actually swung at a pitch, a sniper hidden in the stands would take him out.

But Veeck did right by Gaedel, too. He took out a $1 million insurance policy in case anything went wrong. Nothing did – Gaedel walked on four pitches – and Veeck later employed the tiny stage actor in some zany, off-the-field work as well.

Boxing fans, too, have known the dubious pleasure of epic mismatches through the years.

And what's pro wrestling, really, if not the nightly refuge of borderline personalities with pectorals to die for?

So when Linde said he had a deal with Bol, it was easy to assume the worst.

Bol is 40 now. His joints are swelled by rheumatism and he weighs 225 pounds, 20 above his playing weight. His last NBA payday was seven years ago. He's so low on money that Catholic Charities pays Bol's rent and he relies on friends to help make ends meet.

And just a few months ago, Bol fought (and beat) former football player William "The Refrigerator" Perry in a bout on the same televised celebrity boxing show that included Joey Buttafuoco squaring off against John Wayne Bobbitt.

So this stunt, like all those, is about money, too.

But it's what Bol does with that money – what he did with most of the money he made in 11 NBA seasons – that makes this stunt different.

He gives it away.

Bol, the son and grandson of Dinka tribal chiefs, grew up in the Sudan in the 1970s during a brief lull in the civil wars that have ravaged his homeland for much of the last 50 years.

He didn't play basketball until he was 15, then walked three days from his village to join his first team. Six years later, after stints in college and minor-league basketball, he entered the NBA as the tallest player. He left as anything but a freak.

Bol blocked 397 shots in his rookie season, still the second-best total ever. He was part comedian and part nobleman, someone that good buddy Charles Barkley remembered "always wanted to be looked upon as dignified."

But he was also consumed by the civil war that returned to the Sudan. Bol testified at congressional hearings in the mid-90s against the Islamic extremists who controlled the Sudanese government, and sent $3.5 million of his own money to fund a rebel movement in which his relatives fought one of the most repressive regimes in the world.

After his NBA retirement, a peace treaty was announced in the Sudan and Bol returned home, hoping to play a role in the new government. Instead, he became a virtual prisoner. He bribed his way out of the Sudan last year and only made it back to the United States in March.

That part of Bol's story, and his continued work on behalf of the Ring True Foundation, a charity he set up to aid Sudanese refugees, has just started getting out.

That's where the $35,000 he pocketed for fighting Refrigerator Perry went. It's where his first – and probably only – paycheck from the Indianapolis ice will be headed, too.

Because whatever Linde says publicly, he's telling friends Bol won't set foot on the ice during a game and that the stunt is a way of helping Bol and his cause.

The general manager hasn't figured out for how many games he'll have Bol greet fans, but Linde already knows what will happen to the skates and stick afterward. They'll be auctioned off, and the money donated to the Ring True Foundation.

There's Rock Down Under Art/Page 5
Suffering with SPIRIT Ed/Op page 4.
Sacked! Sports/Page 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ★★★★★ ISSUE FIFTY-TWO ★★★★★ 11.18.02

Authorities stop man from hijacking plane

By Ezra Aygin
Associated Press

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Security guards on Israel's national airline El Al overpowered a man who tried to hijack a flight from Tel Aviv to Istanbul on Sunday.

None of the 170 passengers on board the Boeing 737 was harmed and the plane landed safely, said Oktay Cakirlar, an official at Istanbul's Ataturk International Airport.

The semi-official Anatolia news agency identified the hijacker as Tawfiq Fokia, a 25-year-old Arab with an Israeli passport.

Cakirlar said El Al Flight 581 sent out a hijacking signal as it approached Istanbul but the suspect was overcome.

"No one was injured," Cakirlar told The Associated Press by telephone. "The terrorist is in custody at the police station at the airport."

Turkey's private CNN-Turk and NTV televisions quoted police sources as saying that the alleged hijacker was an Israeli Arab and was armed with a knife.

The television reports said the man was overpowered by two Israeli security guards aboard the plane.

He reportedly first threatened a flight attendant with a knife and tried to approach the cockpit but he was overpowered by two security guards, one posing as a passenger, CNN-Turk television said.

"We heard people saying there was fighting and half a minute later it became clear that from row five or six a man ran amok toward the pilot's cabin, attacked a stewardess and tried to enter the cockpit," an Israeli passenger on the plane told Israel army radio.

"We saw a stewardess running like crazy from the front of the place to the business section...She was terrified," said the passenger, Menachem Binet.

Security guards "threw him to the floor with his legs spread and his face to the floor. The passengers were hysterical but the flight attendants were very cool, they calmed us down," he said.

At the airport, passengers could be seen going through security checks, where they were frisked, and passport control.

El Al is widely regarded as world's most protected airline, but also one of the most threatened. From the late 1960s into the 1980s, El Al planes and passengers were subjected to shooting attacks, hijacking and bombing attempts.

El Al's formidable security includes armed guards at check-in, on-board marshals and extensive searches of luggage. Passengers are told to arrive three hours ahead of flights to allow enough time for the security checks.

On the Fourth of July, an Egyptian immigrant Hesham Mohamed Hadayet, opened fire at the El Al ticket counter at Los Angeles Airport, killing two people before he was shot dead by an airline security guard. Nothing was found to link the incident to terrorist groups and the motive remained unknown.

Hadayet, however, had previously told U.S. authorities that he was falsely accused of being in a militant Egyptian group that the United States now lists as a terror group.

The first and last successful hijacking of an El Al plane was in July 1968, when a flight from Rome was seized by members of the extremist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and forced to land in Algiers. Passengers and crew were held hostage there, with the last of them not released until five months later.

A September 1970 hijacking attempt failed when sky marshals shot and killed one hijacker and captured his accomplice. After that, Palestinian groups hijacked other airliners flying to and from Israel, including an Air France plane that was forced to land at Entebbe, Uganda, in June 1976. The hijacking ended in a rescue operation carried out by Israeli commandos.

Tight security has also thwarted attempts to put bombs aboard El Al planes.

In April 1986, a Jordanian, Nezar Hindawi, planted a bomb in the hand luggage of his pregnant Irish fiancee as she was about to board an El Al plane at London's Heathrow airport. The bomb was detected by El Al security. Hindawi was sentenced to 45 years in prison.

UMass joins 'Key Players'

Sport Management class reaches out to community

BOSTON CELTICS DIRECTOR OF COMMUNITY RELATIONS WAYNE LEVY ADDRESSES A ROOM FULL OF STUDENTS DURING A SEPT. 25 MEETING FOR THE 'KEY PLAYERS IN KIDS' LIVES' PROGRAM. THE PROJECT IS A SEMESTER-LONG PROJECT AT UMASS FOR STUDENTS IN THE COMMUNITY RELATIONS IN SPORT CLASS IN THE SPORT MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT.

By David Grant
Collegian Correspondent

University of Massachusetts Sport Management students have teamed up with the Boston Celtics, News Channel 40 and community leaders in the Springfield area to recognize men of color who have made significant contributions in the lives of children.

Todd Crosset, a Sport Management professor explained that these men play a role that is often overlooked.

"These men of color are loving fathers, teachers, mentors and community leaders that just don't get recognized," Crosset said.

According to Crosset, the image of men of color is not viewed this way by a large portion of the community.

Many students in the class have had good experiences.

"It's a chance to learn how to build relationships with people in the community," said Jasmine Zamanian, a senior Sport Management major. "It's chance to learn for the future."

Crosset said that more importantly, through the efforts of the students, these men are finally being recognized for their work in the community.

The program, called "Key Players in Kids' Lives," will honor 10 men of color as ambassadors that have done outstanding work in the community of Springfield for an entire year. These men represent and symbolize all individuals of color that do good work with organizations and make a difference in kids' lives.

Conceived by Crosset and UMass alumnus Wayne Levy, director of community relations for the Boston Celtics, the program works hand-in-hand with a Sport Management class entitled "Community Relations in Sport."

Nine students enrolled in the class, along with a teaching assistant, are responsible for implementing all aspects of the program. Students that took Crosset's class in the spring semester of 2001 laid out the strategic plan.

The class is an experiential learning experience that challenges students to simulate working for a sport franchise. Students are responsible for developing and implementing every step of the program. The process "has been challenging, rewarding and frustrating at the same time," said Mike Davidow, a senior Sport Management major.

The students are responsible for four main components of the program: marketing and sponsorship, finance, operations and media relations.

"The class is more like a business meeting," said Crosset.

"In an effort to reach out to Western Massachusetts, the Boston Celtics are utilizing the class to implement their community relations effort," Danielle MacLean, a graduate student and TA for the class, said.

The program works like this: several different agencies nominate men of color. Nine are selected by the agencies and receive recognition for their work. The 10th man is selected via email and through a website linked to News Channel 40.

The Springfield news station is running an advertising campaign to inform viewers to vote, and is setting up a website for individuals to nominate a key player. Sport Management students are responsible for assisting with the website and help in writing the advertising campaign.

The men will be honored at a ceremony in Springfield on a yet to be announced date, followed by a Boston Celtics game, along with 50 children chosen by the organizations. News Channel 40 will air a feature story on them early in December.

The game, on Dec. 18 against the Miami Heat, has been designated as Springfield Day at the FleetCenter to celebrate and recognize the birthplace of basketball.

In addition to honoring the men, an individual chosen from audition tapes from Springfield will sing the national anthem at the game. Crosset and students from the class will be listening to audition tapes as they come in.

Springfield Day marks the first time that the Celtics will present a person from western Massachusetts with an award that is given out at halftime of every game. Crosset said that the honor, called "A Hero Among Us," goes to some-

Turn to PROJECT, page 2

Ice storm freezes region, University community

Iced up trees lead to power outages in region

SNOW AND ICE GLISTENS ON THE STEPS OF THE CAMPUS CENTER YESTERDAY. THE WEATHER CAUSED POWER OUTAGES THROUGHOUT THE REGION AND CAUSED NUMEROUS FENDER BENDERS ACROSS THE STATE

By Dan Lanothe
Collegian Staff

The region's first major ice storm of the year coated the area with freezing rain and some snow Sunday, downing trees and knocking out power to thousands of homes throughout New England.

Snow and ice lasted longer than expected at the University of Massachusetts campus, with rain and ice starting some time after noon on Saturday. The UMass and Hofstra football teams dealt with a mixture of biting wind, and heavy rain and freezing rain playing a factor during the game, which concluded around 5 p.m.

According to the Associated Press, more than a half-inch of ice had accumulated by noon Sunday in parts of northern and western Connecticut, causing more than 130,000 Northeast Utility customers to lose power there.

Several towns in the northwest part of the state set up emergency shelters while more than 100 linemen worked to restore power. About 100,000 customers remained without electricity late Sunday afternoon.

"It's ice, it is wind, it is branches hitting lines," utility spokesman Mitch Gross said to the AP. "It's going to take some time."

Three to five inches of snow had fallen on parts of Maine by yesterday afternoon, causing many trees to sag under the weight of their ice coating.

Central Maine Power spokesman Kevin Howes told the AP that about 15,000 customers were without electricity by yesterday afternoon. Speed limits were also reduced to 45 miles per hour on the Maine Turnpike and I-95 there.

Massachusetts residents reported more than 10,000 power outages in the central and southeastern parts of the state between Saturday night and Sunday morning from ice weighing down limbs and breaking power lines. At least one major accident, in Andover, was reported, along with dozens of minor accidents throughout the Boston area.

Police in Colchester, Conn., are in the process of investigating whether a fatal accident Saturday night may have been related to the storm. State Police Sgt. Gregory Kenney told the AP that there had been numerous minor accidents and several roads closed by downed trees.

"All the affected towns have been advised that the Office of Emergency Management is ready to help if they need any assistance," Dean Pagani, the governor's chief of staff, told the AP.

Three to six inches of snow also fell on New Hampshire, and the storm blew cold rain across Long Island in New York.

Over 7,000 businesses lost power on Long Island, according to the AP. Wind gusts were measured at up to 55 mph on Long Island, according to the National Weather Service (NWS).

The NWS reported that a "second surge of precipitation" would sweep through New England last night, and warned that winds of up to 45 miles per hour had the potential to strip tree limbs weakened by heavy loads of ice off of ice-coated trees.

A mix of ice, snow and rain was expected last night as the evening progressed, with the sun expected to break through around 9 a.m. this morning.

■ Project

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN

COMMUNITY BULLETIN

MONDAY NOV. 18

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HAMPSHIRE COLLEGE- Hampshire College will host the exhibit "Beggar and Chooser: Motherhood is Not a Class Privilege in America" at its main gallery in the Harold Johnson Library Center. The event is free and open to the public. The photographs exhibit is directed toward reclaiming the dignity of and legitimizing motherhood for those denied this status by public opinion and the media. Gallery hours are Mondays through Fridays from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

AMHERST COLLEGE- Professor Robert Dorsett of the Rutgers University Anthropology Department will give a lecture on "The Evolution of Selfish Sex Chromosomes" at Amherst College. The lecture begins at 3:30 p.m. in Merrill 4. Refreshments begin at 3:15 prior to the lecture.

AMHERST COLLEGE- Professor Elsa Haijar of the University of California at Santa Barbara will speak at Amherst College at 4:30 p.m. on "Chaos as Utopia: International criminal Persecutions as a Challenge to State Power." The lecture will be held in Clark House 100.

MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE- There will be a free Five College Women's Studies Lecture by Isis Nusair of Clark University at 4:30 p.m. in their research center at 79-83 College St., South Hadley. The lecture is "Gendered Politics of Location: Socio-political Experiences of Three Generations of Palestinian Women. Citizens of Israel."

TUESDAY NOV. 19

UMASS- Professor Maurille Fournier will lecture on the "Inside the Ribosome Factory. How Our Cells Build Protein Manufacturing Machines" as part of the Distinguished Faculty Lecture Series at UMass. A reception follows each talk with members in the series receiving a Chancellor's Medal. The lecture is in the Massachusetts Room of the Mullins Center at 4 p.m. and is free and open to the public.

AMHERST COLLEGE- Amherst College will host Musik Professor Benjamin Anaya from the Instituto Nacional de Bellas Artes in Mexico. He will speak about Mexican rock and roll and its manifestations in the social movements since the 1960s through the present rebellion of the Neozapatistas that violently erupted in January 1994. The lecture, "Neozapatism and Mexican Rock," will begin at 4 p.m. in the Cole Assembly Room of Converse Hall.

UMASS- Andreas Quale from the Department of Teacher and School Development, University of Oslo, Norway will present his lecture, "The Role of Metaphor in Science: Is the Truth Really Out There?" at 4 p.m. in Room 138 of Hasbrouck Lab at UMass. Refreshments will be available beforehand at 3:45.

SMITH COLLEGE- Smith College will host Michael Marcotrigiano, Madelaine Zadik, Pau Atela and Chris Gole as they present their exhibit "Guided Tour of Plant Spirals: Beauty You Can Count On," in the Lyman Plant House. The tour will begin at 5 p.m. and is free to all.

UMASS- The Office of ALANA Affairs, The School of Public Health, The School of Nursing, the Women of Color Leadership Network and the Everywoman's Center at the University of Massachusetts will sponsor a forum entitled "Beyond Tuskegee: A forum on Racism in Health Care Today" in Campus Center Room 168 at 7 p.m.

SMITH COLLEGE- Smith College's department of Religion and Biblical literature, the program in Jewish studies and lecture committee present Professor Lawrence H. Shiffman of New York University will lecture on "Judaism, Christianity, and the Dead Sea Scrolls" at 7:30 p.m. in the Neilson Browsing Room at Smith College.

WEDNESDAY NOV. 20

UMASS- The Stonewall Center at UMass will present "Break-OUT Night" from 5 to 8 p.m. Pizza is offered, and students are encouraged to drop by to check out the library, surf the internet or just hang out with friends.

UMASS- UMass and the Five College Program in Peace and World Security (PAWSS) present "Pakistan and India Under the Nuclear Shadow," a lecture by Pervez Hoodbhoy. The lecture will be held in Room 133 of the Isenberg School of Management Building at 7:30 p.m. Pervez Hoodbhoy is a professor of nuclear physics at Quaid-e-Azam University in Islamabad and resides in Pakistan.

THURSDAY NOV. 21

SMITH COLLEGE- Smith College will host the panel discussion "Smith Alumnae in the Entertainment Industry" at 4 p.m. in the Alumnae House. The discussion with alumni will center on opportunities in entertainment and the media. Guests include producer Amy Haight, public relations director, Latina Magazine, Carolina Miranda, actress and former dastinne writer Stephanie Braxton. A reception will follow the discussion. The event is free and open to the public.

SMITH COLLEGE- Pervez Hoodbhoy will present his lecture "Are Islam and the U.S. on a Collision Course?" at Smith College at 6:30 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium.

UMASS- The Cuban Cinema Festival will present Life is to Whistle at UMass in Herter Hall Rm. 209 at 7 p.m. The 1998 film is directed by Fernando Perez and has English subtitles.

UMASS- "Suzhou River/Suzhou He" will be presented in Herter Hall 231 at 7:30 p.m. at UMass. The film is an ultra-stylish urban mystery set in contemporary Shanghai. Free for all.

email us: THEDAILYCOLLEGIAN@YAHOO.COM

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1906 as Mass Life. It became the College Signal in 1907, the Boston Collegian in 1914, and then the Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been the independent publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

MAJOR JUNIOR WEAR LABEL WAREHOUSE SALE

Ladies and Men's
30-75% off
original mall store price

3 DAYS ONLY
NOBODY'S PERFECT

Monday 11/18 9-9
Tuesday 11/19 9-9
Wednesday 11/20 9-9
Thursday 11/21 9-5

UMass Campus Center Auditorium
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday 9-9

Peer Health Education

What would tick you off? Getting drunk and...

- ❒ A. Having a friend pee on your floor.
- ❒ B. Waking up to someone you don't know.
- ❒ C. Getting the scoop from your friends about what you did last night.

Get Involved
Make a Difference
Earn 6 credits

Take Com HL 213, Peer Health Education , a 2-semester course that proactively addresses public health issues at UMass.

Call the Health Education Department during pre-registration at 577-5181 to make an appointment to discuss enrollment with instructor.

E-MAIL US:
THEDAILYCOLLEGIAN@YAHOO.COM or visit us at:
www.dailycollegian.com

SPRING BREAK PARTY VACATIONS
CANCUN ACAPULCO JAMAICA
BAHAMAS FLORIDA S.PADRE
BIGGEST PARTIES! ABSOLUTE BEST PRICES!
1-800-234-7007
www.ENDLESSsummerTOURS.com

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003

Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours
1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services
1.800.648.4849
www.ststravel.com

Iraq has knowledge for chemical weapons

By Matt Kelley
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) – Iraqi scientists know how to make chemical weapons that can penetrate military protective clothing, and Iraq imported up to 25 metric tons last month of a powder that is a crucial ingredient to such "dusty" weapons.

Iraq told the United Nations the powder was destined for a pharmaceutical company that a former weapons inspector says was ordered by President Saddam Hussein before the 1991 Persian Gulf War to work on chemical and biological weapons.

The powder, sold under the brand name Aerosil, has particles so small that, when coated with deadly poisons, they can pass through the tiniest gaps in protective suits.

Experts inside and outside the U.S. government say they are not certain Iraq has dusty chemical weapons. Declassified U.S. intelligence documents say Iraq produced a dusty form of the blister agent mustard in the 1980s and used it during its eight-year war with Iran.

If Iraq made and used a powdered form of its deadliest nerve agent, VX, it could kill U.S. troops dressed in full protective gear, according to a 1990 Defense Intelligence Agency assessment. Although the military's protective suits have been improved since then, experts say dusty weapons could penetrate the new suits.

Pentagon officials refused to discuss the permeability of the new suits or whether Iraq has weapons that could pass through them. Such information is classified, they said.

The 1990 DIA document said soldiers could protect themselves by throwing rain ponchos over their chemical suits, which would reduce the fatality risk to near zero. One expert wrote later: "One gets the sense that this was recommended in the face of few other options."

The researcher, Eric Croddy of the private Center for Nonproliferation Studies, said dusty VX would be a serious danger to U.S. troops. VX is so toxic, that, in its liquid form, a drop on the skin can kill within minutes.

"The effects of dusty VX, depending on how it gets in the body, would be somewhat faster," Croddy said. "It's certainly much more injurious and much more of a severe threat."

Dusty chemical weapons are formed by mixing a liquid chemical agent with a fine powder to coat the powder's tiny particles with the deadly poison. The particles' small size allows them to pass through the fabric of a protective suit and any tiny gaps around the seal of a gas mask.

The latest U.S. military protective suits have a layer of charcoal in the fabric to trap any poisons that might penetrate the outer covering, but particles small enough could pass through even the charcoal layer.

"The closest analogy is, no matter what happens when you go to the beach, you still get sand in your shorts," Croddy said.

The poisonous powder also would settle in the tiniest nooks and crannies of buildings and equipment, making decontamination extremely difficult. VX in its liquid form already is a decontamination challenge; the sticky poison is persistent and cannot be neutralized easily with substances such as bleach.

Even if dusty chemical weapons caused no U.S. casualties, they could force American soldiers to work in clumsy protective gear, decontaminate their equipment and avoid contaminated areas, giving Iraqi soldiers time to mount defenses.

U.S. intelligence reports before the Gulf War said Iraq was capable of making dusty VX. They said that during the 1980s, Iraq imported more than 100 metric tons of Aerosil, a brand of fumed silicon dioxide.

The reports said no evidence was found that Iraq had made dusty VX, and U.N. inspectors were unable to find any hard evidence of that.

In September, The New York Times quoted an Iraqi defector as saying Saddam's chemical weapons scientists secretly began producing dusty VX as early as 1994.

Aerosil, made by the German chemical company Degussa AG, has an exceptionally small particle size: 12 nanometers. That means more than 2,100 of the particles strung together would be as thick as a human hair.

U.N. documents show that Iraq's Samarra Drugs Industry sought 25 metric tons of Aerosil last year under the U.N.-run oil-for-food program, and at least some of that order was delivered last month.

American intelligence agencies were not overly worried about the shipment of Aerosil because the substance has many legitimate uses.

Richard Spertzel, a former chief U.N. weapons inspector in Iraq, was stunned when a reporter told him about the shipment. Saddam ordered the Samarra enterprise to work on chemical and biological weapons in 1989, and his government still controls the company, Spertzel said.

"Do you know how much (dusty agent) a kilogram of that stuff makes? A couple cubic feet," Spertzel said. "This gives me another thing to worry about."

Powwow celebrates Native culture

UMass hosted the 24th Annual UMass Powwow yesterday, featuring the Wabeki Lake Singers, Mystic River Singers, Tom Obomsawin and Thorasin Veaux. Above, brothers Jeff (center) and Chris Pegram sing Native American songs with a third unidentified man. All types of people participate in traditional Native American dances. The event ran from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Yoga group gets involved in community

By Ferron Salniker
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The Arts of Living Club sponsored its biweekly "Yoga in Action Day," Saturday, with students participating in yoga and meditation, as well as community service.

Close to 20 students met in the Campus Center at noon. The day of action was developed in an effort to establish a balance between finding personal joy through yoga and providing joy for others through community service.

The event began in a discussion of the significance of yoga and its relation to relieving stress. Participants then practiced yoga, led by Ari Weinberg, member of the Arts and Living Club and participant on their five-person college team.

Participants then went to the Center for Extended Care, a retirement home on University Drive.

Students arrived at the Center and sat for two hours and listened and shared with residents.

"The woman I was with, Annie, had Alzheimer's, she was really friendly and glad to talk with someone," said Jayne Barroll, a sophomore art major and member of the club. "It was sad though, it was a hard experience."

According to organizers, the idea of incorporating community service had always been there.

"With yoga, the mindset is to give to one's self, but to achieve a balance you have to give to others also," said Jahneela Dotson, member of the Arts and Living Club and participant on the five-person college team.

"Service is part of yoga. Poses and the focus on breath is one part, but giving and sharing completes the cycle," said Weinberg.

Students returned to the Campus Center in the late afternoon to reflect on their experiences at the center.

"It's sad because no one comes to visit, people are afraid of death of sickness and of the elderly," said freshman legal studies major Alyssa Simmonds. "It made me wonder what I can do right now to make the most of my time."

The next yoga day of action will not take place until next semester, but the Arts and Living Club does offer a six-day course. The course teaches many exercises focusing on relaxation, purifying the body and breathing. An ancient breathing technique, often used to help cancer and AIDS patients is one of the main focuses of the course.

"The first and last thing you do in life is take a breath," said Dotson. "Everything in between is just series of breaths, the quality of life is totally affected by breath."

The course is also an opportunity to talk in small groups and create friendships. "In the course you learn about all kinds of things that help you through daily life," said Akshave Sikand, a club member and graduate student. "It's like a how to book for life."

The course runs for three hours a day and costs $75 for students and $150 for faculty and staff.

In addition to the course, the Arts and Living Club also offers free yoga and guided meditation sessions at various dorm locations on campus.

This week it will be featured on Tuesday at Southwest/Kennedy in the 19th floor lounge, and on Wednesday at Brown/Cashin in the first floor lounge.

To find out about the course, free workshops or upcoming events contact the Arts and Living Club via email at umass_yoga@yahoo.com or by calling 374-7240.

www.dailycollegian.com

THE COLLEGIAN
IS STILL LOOKING FOR NEWS WRITERS.
Come on down to the Campus Center Basement tonight to inquire and ask for Dan Lamothe.

MCMURPHY'S
Thanksgiving Celebration

• T-Shirts
• Prizes

37 North Pleasant St.
Amherst
(413) 253-0170

DISCOVER the WORLD!
Have the Adventure of a Lifetime... while you serve in one of over 70 developing countries around the globe in programs in
PEACE CORPS
Education, Business, Environment, Agriculture, Health & Community Development

Visit the Peace Corps Recruiter
Office: 481 Hills South, UMass
Telephone: 545-2105
Email: peacecorps@educ.umass.edu
Apply online: www.peacecorps.gov

New Gen Ed Science Course
"The best course I ever had."
www.bio.umass.edu/biochem/mydna
MY DNA
No prerequisites.
Check it out online!
Register now - My DNA - Biochem 100

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

SPIRE: a badly implemented system

SPIRE, the multi-million dollar software, has officially replaced not only WISE, but the phone registration system as well. SPIRE made its big debut last Thursday as students attempted to register for classes.

During the first day of pre-registration there were many disgruntled students. Computer labs were flooded with students anxious to register. No doubt, the phones at the registrar's office and at OIT were ringing off the hook with problems.

To add to the confusion and aggravation, the system went down in the afternoon for about 10 minutes.

One of the primary problems with SPIRE is the credit system used to determine student status. Many students that are seniors, and are double majors, are registered as juniors. Students that are also only a few credits short of the cutoff credit for a certain status, will end up getting a later appointment date.

These are only a few of the possible problems associated with student status on the SPIRE system.

Navigating the SPIRE system for registration is also incredibly confusing. The information sent in the mail gave students very little direction on how to search for classes and not much direction on actually enrolling. This leaves students scrambling to navigate through the system while the number of seats in their classes slowly drops.

The specific enrollment appointment times, which are determined by credit total and seniority is one of the better points of SPIRE, however it is implemented poorly.

These appointment times take place in the middle of the day, causing many students to miss classes in order to register. Students that go to class during their appointment times – especially freshman who are at the end of the period – risk not getting into classes that they need.

And even the seniority system isn't fool proof or entirely fair. While some seniors got to register on Thursday, many seniors are logging onto the system for the first time today.

With all of these problems many of us are left wondering why we couldn't keep the old phone system. Despite its flaws, it managed to cater to everyone on campus in a reasonable fashion.

We at The Collegian understand that SPIRE is a new system. There are bound to be problems in a new network system.

However, much of the system itself has been poorly designed and can be done more effectively.

For example, the system has still not been set for next semester; whenever the system asks for the semester, students need to manually enter the spring semester code. In order to search for new classes, students need to go back and forth through two or three screens to do the actual search, get the code and then go back and enter it to register.

While SPIRE is supposed to streamline the registration process and give older students preferential treatment for getting classes, its first run is discouraging.

The registration period isn't over yet and only time will tell if everything worked out well. The system will need to be updated and fixed in order to gain the respect of students.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority of opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Send your letters to the editor to editorial@dailycollegian.com

Television programming getting worse

CAREY

With midterms over and very little to do last week I was able to catch some more lounging time. Instead of doing anything remarkable, I just watched more television. Whoever coined the term "idiot box" when describing the TV was really on to something. Still, I wonder whether even he would have been amazed and appalled at the amount of junk they would put on it in one day. There are so many shows out today that are almost hard to watch without feeling sick and hollow inside.

I don't want to sound like a cane waving old-timer. But TV has come along way since I first began watching and it is generally not for the better. My first experiences with the box were eating a happy meal while I watched an hour-long block of Sesame Street and Mr. Rogers, everyday after preschool. Today my little cousin watches Teletubbies, or something.

It's a bizarre little show that has Jerry Falwell and his band of fundamentalists up in arms because allegedly one of the androgynous puppet things bares markings of the gay community. Other people tell me that in some shows an eye pops up out of the sky and, like Big Brother begins to survey the puppets things every movement. I have only seen clips of the show, however I do know this.

First, if George Orwell had lived to be a 100 I doubt he could have imagined anything as freakishly strange as the Teletubbies. And second, unlike most of the kids' shows that I grew up with (that featured real people speaking actual words), allowing children to watch the Teletubbies is an extreme waste of time, because its bewildering antics give nothing to a child's developmental growth.

A few age brackets above the Teletubbies is a bunch of poorly scripted drivel that can generally be described as reality-defying action/drama, which revolves around a voluptuous hero with near-mystical power. Cable is filled with these types of shows, Warner Brothers most especially. There must be a big market in attracting fat, prepubescent, soft drink swelling youths to the couch every night. For these shows seem to do that.

I have seen bits and pieces of many of these shows. Normally after five minutes of them, I feel as hollow and meaningless as if I had just wasted a lifetime watching Teletubbies or Star Trek.

The only thing worse than the scripted drivel on TV is the unscripted drivel. This is certainly true in the teen/young adult demographic. I realize there is a faithful contingency of "reality TV" watchers out there that I will never be able to relate with. Every reality TV show I have ever seen seems corny and dumb.

But the sad reality of it is that many people my age are interested in watching five idiots whine about their problems on the shows like the "The Real World" and "Road Rules." In college I have been forced to watch a number of these shows. And I still don't know what is worse, the fact that the teledramatic cast actually thinks they have real problems to cry about, or that so many people are interested into listening them complain about it.

> "...if George Orwell had lived to be a 100 I doubt he could have imagined anything as freakishly strange as the Teletubbies."

But anyway that's how you can go from toddler to teen, and spend it watching thoughtless mind-numbing TV, all in one generation. I shouldn't say that all TV out there is bad. I do like some shows. Our generation may put a lot of crap on the airwaves, but we do have something in the way of a golden age of comedy.

"The Simpsons" was a great show two years ago, but they've gone down hill. I don't have a clue what happened to "The Family Guy," but that was a great one also. I hear the new show by Larry David is good, he's the same guy who did "Seinfeld." Seinfeld was a good show, because it was funny and a lot of people could relate to it. "Friends" is a show that a lot of people can relate to, but it's not funny. If you do not agree, then the next time you're watching it, imagine there's no laugh track. For late night Conan O'Brien is funniest because he's so self-deprecating, but sometimes it is sad to watch a man make fun of himself for an hour.

With my cynical eye it is easy to find the slightest fault with any program on TV, however there is one thing on television that even I can't bash – sports, and more specifically football. Football is a program with all the violent real-life drama I've come to expect being an American. It has drama, action and suspense all rolled into one. And a lot of comic relief is provided, by wondering what senile and idiotic comment John Madden will say next.

Robert Carey is a Collegian Columnist

Striving for continuous harmony

NOONE

"What is happiness to you David?"
— Vanilla Sky

The above quote asks a simple question, yet one that is difficult to answer. My desire for happiness made me relieved to see signs posted around campus advertising the Phi Beta Kappa Psychology Honor Society lecture entitled "How The Psychology of Optimal Experience."

Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi gave a thought-provoking, attention-grabbing speech that kept me taking notes the entire lecture, despite the fact that I was one of the few students in the audience not there due to a mandatory class requirement. The seat to my left was occupied by one of my high school friends who I met at a writing conference years ago. It struck me as funny that the two of us would voluntarily attend this lecture and end up next to each other, yet it made sense because we used to talk about emotional and spiritual issues.

I could feel the positive energy in the dimly lit auditorium and was anxious to hear Csikszentmihalyi speak. An hour passed, and I walked away from the lecture with many new ideas buzzing around my head. Lots of these ideas coincided with the economic theories I have been studying this semester in Political Economy. Ideas such as, "If we're so rich, why aren't we happy..." and "What does it feel like to be completely involved in what you're doing?"

Csikszentmihalyi defined the word "ecstasy" during the lecture, describing it as a Greek word for the extraordinary experiences individuals have outside of daily life. He continued to say that the romantic metaphor of ecstasy is a basic psychological process in which human beings cease to feel that they exist. They become so involved in what they are doing that they fail to notice themselves or anything else.

He used creative people as his guinea pigs when researching this concept since they are often the individuals who give themselves completely over to a single task. Have you ever curled up in bed to write a poem and realized that three hours had passed? Ever started drawing in class and then noticed lecture was over? I have felt similarly when in extremely powerful or happy situations. For example, when you are with someone that you are crazy about, sometimes it feels like a dream, something that must end yet you live for it. Call me a helpless romantic, but I think that idea is more a psychological process than a romantic one.

Let's consider the movie Vanilla Sky. The character of David, played by Tom Cruise, lives his life at the beginning of the movie in a fragmented, materialistic manner where he treats women and friendships carelessly. However, his life (or dreams) really begin when he allows himself to be fully connected to someone else when he meets Sophia (Penelope Cruz). As in everyday life, it is difficult to distinguish the real from the unreal in this film, and I believe this idea of awareness is what Csikszentmihalyi was discussing. It is sad to only be happy in your dreams, isn't it?

I have recently been pondering how can get into this flow that Csikszentmihaly describes. I know how amazing I feel when I actually let myself go and allow my body and mind to be one rather than keeping a safe distance between myself and what I am doing. The realization that external forces such as money are only temporary means of happiness is crucial to entering the flow because it is only then that a sense of serenity can be felt.

Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi uttered very powerful words toward the end of his lecture. He said, "we do not need to live lives of quiet desperation," and, "isn't it a great thing to know that you have the power to change your own life?" Even though the lines of reality and dreams are often blurred and discontent is often felt, simple steps can be taken to make life into a present moment of continuous harmony, rather than a fragmented, meaningless pondering of what could go better in the future and what went wrong in the past.

Katy Noone is a Collegian Columnist.

The sun will rise tomorrow

JACQUET

Just about every small town has one guy that comes to every high school sporting event even though he has no kids on the team. Hollistun is no different, and Mr. Read was that guy. Mr. Read died last week and he will be a notable absence at this year's Thanksgiving Day football game.

Mr. Read lived in downtown Hollistun, and owned a small sandwiching business. He had a married fiance, who I played baseball with. All the high school baseball up through high school Mr. Read never missed a game. He helped coach our school Babe Ruth team in the summer and he always maintained a good relationship with the team.

Mr. Read always had a good joke or story to tell. Even though he led a tortured life, he never approached you without a warm, pleasant smile. Whether he was looking about his own sexual inadequacies or laughing on Jimmy, he was always entertaining and always heightened team morale. Way of life. Mr. Read never had anything but an encouraging word.

He was a disheveled, portly man who never seemed to have. He liked about his love of alcohol and had limited knowledge about the game of baseball. He spoke at great length about the grandiose achievements of Jimmy, who was a marginal athlete at best. If you saw him on the street or at a game you weren't participating in, you'd talk your ear off leaving you to find some appropriate excuse to end the conversation.

When you did escape however, Mr. Read would send you away with a pleasant goodbye. Telling you how nice it was to chat and that he hoped to see you again sometime soon. Always friendly and upbeat. Mr. Read made friends wherever he went, and was well known throughout Hollistun. Never have I heard an ill word spoken of Mr. Read and I don't suspect he actually had any enemies.

But Mr. Read's life wasn't always peaches and cream. When Jimmy and I were in eighth grade, Mr. Read's wife of twenty years divorced him, leaving him to care for their three children. Mr. Read never recovered. Whenever I would sulk after a poor game, he'd remind me, "the sun will rise tomorrow." Then his normally pleasant face would twist into a frown and he'd refer to his divorce, hinting at the pain and anguish simmering inside him.

Seeing Mr. Read expose his emotions made me realize indeed that "the sun will rise tommorrow." If a man who was forced to maintain a family in the face of a painful divorce could remain so pleasant and upbeat, then surely I could endure an, 0-for-3 performance.

But that was the nature of Mr. Read. He was pleasant. He was engaging. He always said the right thing at the right time. He had a way of convincing you that things would get better, even if he didn't necessarily believe it himself. He suffered in silence, so that others wouldn't have to suffer at all. His optimism was infectious, and if ever you were curt or rude to Mr. Read, you instantly felt like a jerk.

I have the dubious distinction of being one such jerk. Five years ago, in the fifth inning of a senior Babe Ruth baseball game against Hudson, I struck out against a pitcher I considered to be a chump. Disgusted, I returned to the bench and tossed my helmet aside while muttering under my breath. Mr. Read, in his usual get-'em-next-time attitude told me not to worry about it. Not wanting to hear the usual Mr. Read encouragement, I snidely said, "Shut up, Mr. Read."

"Don't you tell me to shut up," he exclaimed, loud enough for everyone to hear.

He turned to me, his face in a state of near rage. Stunned, I searched his face for some sign that he was joking. He wasn't, and I realized, along with everyone else in the stands, that I had indeed told the nicest man in Hollistun to shut up. I had never seen Mr. Read explode like this and I suddenly realized that he was entirely justified. I had disrespected him for no reason. My shock quickly turned into shame and embarrassment. Not only had I needlessly yelled at Mr. Read, but an audience had seen the entire episode.

Mortified, I muttered a half-hearted apology and sat at the end of the bench furthest away from Mr. Read. For the rest of the game I avoided Mr. Read and the real apology I knew I'd have to make. Finally, I swallowed my pride and approached Mr. Read to ask forgiveness. Mr. Read noticed me walking up to him with my head down. He smiled, knowing exactly what I was going to say. I stumbled through an apology, but Mr. Read's smile had put me at ease. He accepted the apology, and put his arm around me, letting me know he carried no grudges.

I had been so rude to Mr. Read, and for him to accept my apology so readily was indicative of the type of person he was. He had no interest in making me suffer and prolonging my embarrassment. He knew I was genuinely sorry and he accepted my apology. Mr. Read was a selfless optimist who put the best face on everything. Even with the intense pain his divorce caused him and his family, he remained upbeat and pleasant. He was a lonely man, but he never allowed his own pain to affect Jimmy or anybody else.

Mr. Read isn't around anymore. No longer will he come to watch the kids play ball. We won't be able to hear him talk about Jimmy, or hear his words of encouragement. He won't be there to remind me that a baseball game is trivial in the big scheme of things.

Although Mr. Read is gone, his wisdom stays with me. Time and time again he made me realize my worries were insignificant in light of his own suffering. Every time I get anxious about a test, or a paper or whatever, I just remember what Mr. Read used to tell me. Things don't always bounce my way, but I have to be willing to fight back instead of pissing and moaning. If Mr. Read can walk around with a smile on his face after what he's been through, surely I can shrug off a parking ticket.

Bad stuff happens to all of us, but you have to be willing to find the silver lining. So whenever life is serving you a crap sandwich and you're forced to take a bite, just remember what Mr. Read used to tell me: "The sun will rise tomorrow."

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian Columnist.

Dining hall waste

It has come to my attention that there is an excessive, and at times ridiculous amount of waste created in the dining halls. I work in the Franklin Dining Hall, (I'm the scruffy, curly haired kid who's probably cleaning your table right now as you read this article), and I am amazed at the amount of waste students create. The first, and perhaps most major occurrence of waste that I would like to see is the overuse of dining hall glasses. How often, I ask, do you at home, get four separate glasses and fill them with milk? (I have personally witnessed this balancing act). This is a tremendous waste of water.

JOE WILKINS

Why you ask? Well the answer is simple.

It takes a lot more water to clean four glasses as opposed to one. You could easily take one glass of milk and then (maybe this is too much work for some) get up to refill it as needed. Amazing, I know; I figured this one out when I was three. For those of you who will argue that you need the four glasses in order to attain the four different types of liquids that you require with your meal because of some extraterrestrial diet – let me say this – sometimes we must take one for the team. It is time to think less about our selves and more about our thirsty planet – a difficult task when you live in paradise, I know...

There also is an amazing amount of food waste in the dining halls. Is it such a difficult task to only take what you know you can finish and then – here's that getting up thing again – get up and take some more if you feel the need. Of course some will protest, saying: "But Joe, then I need to take another plate." In response let me tell you that nine times out of 10, you will be full after that first plate of food you eat. How do I know? Because I am human too, like the rest of you. Our stomachs are relatively the same size and can only hold so much. I also know because daily I witness unfinished plates of food. That's right, whole plates of food being thrown out. Many people feel compelled to grab a bowl of cereal in addition to their five course meal already on the tray. These are almost always unfinished along with another four courses, which were only picked at. I am not exaggerating. I witness these food-atrocities every time I work. The dining hall also provides smaller bowls and plates that we can use to take smaller portions for a second food run. The result, again, is less water use.

Some students will ignore this article and think of me as no more than stupidly one of those disgruntled D.C. workers who is under-worked and over-payed. However, your behavior in the dining hall directly affects you, the student. An example of this is that if students threw out less food, the dining hall could take its money and buy smaller quantities of better quality food. When the student body understands this, peace will prevail and the sky will be a deeper shade of blue. So next time you are bouncing around the dining hall in a feeding frenzy, please – take only one glass, take only what you know you can finish, and try not to be just another wasteful American.

Joe Wilkins is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.18.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

THREE DOORS DOWN AVOIDS SOPHOMORE SLUMP

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

HOW DOES A BAND FOLLOW UP ON A DEBUT ALBUM THAT WENT PLATINUM SIX TIMES OVER WITH FOUR HUGE SINGLES RELEASED OFF OF IT WITHIN A YEAR? MISSISSIPPI NATIVES 3 DOORS DOWN FACE THIS DILEMMA. AFTER THEIR ALBUM THE BETTER LIFE WAS RELEASED IN 2000, THE BAND WENT FROM NOBODIES TO FAVORITES IN HEAVY ROCK RADIO AIRPLAY WITHIN WEEKS.

The band is back with a new release, Away From the Sun. A solid record from beginning to end, it features all of the same things that made the 3 Doors act big the last time around.

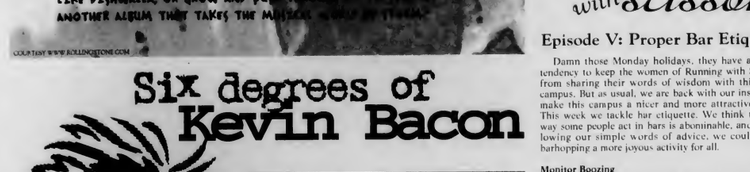
Frontman Brad Arnold's southern-fried vocals are still crisp and soulful. Guitarists Matt and Chris Henderson still layer their guitars, alternating between crunchy riffs and soft notes, depending on the song. Arnold's lyrics still thoughtfully contemplate life, loss and social issues.

Something seems to be missing, though. While The Better Life was anchored with anthems like "Loser," "Kryptonite" and "Duck and Run," no particular song stands out on Away From the Sun musically any more than another.

This isn't to say that the album isn't of high quality. "When I'm Gone" offers the typical contemplative lyrics and sing-along choruses that would have fit in on The Better Life. "Dangerous Game" offers political commentary on violence in the streets much in the way that "Duck and Run," questioned the idea of freedom. "Going Down in Flames" has the same kind of gritty riffs that punctuated "Smack."

The best song on the record is probably "Sarah Yellin'," a story song told from the point of view of a girl getting even with her father's abuse by killing him. "Mother – that man took my soul away/ Father – how could you treat me this way?/ Brother – don't ever let him do this again/ This time it's over, I'm gonna make it end," Arnold sings.

It's quick, it's got muscle and it has a point.



Perhaps to generate more sales with the estrogen set, 3 Doors Down delved back into the ballad bag, which probably could have been expected after the success of "Be Like That" on the Spiderman soundtrack. On Away From the Sun, they offer up "Here Without You," a soft song with harmony between Arnold and his band mates.

Away From the Sun also offers a bonus track, "This Time," Without a doubt, the song should have been featured more prominently on the album. The track is a big departure from the typical 3 Doors material in that it's a gradually building song that leads into swirling, dynamic guitars, rather than the usual three to four minute get-in-and-get-out rocker. It's new for them, and something that they should look into doing more often.

Overall, Away From the Sun offers nothing new and breaking artistically, but it doesn't take any steps backward, either. It's another good, honest, blue-collar rock and roll album with a lot of good points in it.

This leaves the band at a crossroads, though – with no specific tune to hang its hat on from the newest album, the band will either fade into the woodwork such as bands like Dishwalla, or grow and push through it to produce another album that takes the musical world by storm.

Only record sales, fan support and time will tell.

"THIS LEAVES THE BAND AT A CRO[illegible] NO SPECIFIC TUNE TO HANG ITS HAT [illegible] THE BAND WILL EITHER FADE INTO [illegible] LIKE DISHWALLA, OR GROW AND PU[illegible] ANOTHER ALBUM THAT TAKES THE MU[illegible]

COURTESY WWW.ROLLINGSTONE.COM

Six degrees of Kevin Bacon

Moderated by Jake D. Lewis
Collegian Staff

THE NEW MOVIES ROUTE (2 YEARS OR LESS)
Kevin Bacon was in MY DOG SKIP (2000) with Luke Wilson;
LW was in LEGALLY BLONDE (2001) with Reese Witherspoon;
RW was in LITTLE NICKY (2001) with Adam Sandler;
AS was in MR. DEEDS (2002) with Winona Ryder.

THE CLASSICS MOVIE ROUTE (10 YEARS OR OLDER)
Kevin Bacon was in A FEW GOOD MEN (1992) with Jack Nicholson;
JN was in BATMAN (1989) with Michael Keaton;
MK was in BEETLEJUICE (1988) with Winona Ryder.

THE SHORTEST & EASIEST ROUTE
Kevin Bacon was in JFK (1991) with Gary Oldman;
GO was in BRAM STOKER'S DRACULA (1992) with Winona Ryder.

THE OBSCURE (MOVIE-FANATIC'S) ROUTE
Kevin Bacon was in FLATLINERS (1991) with Julia Roberts;
JR was in MARY REILLY (1996) with John Malkovich;
JM was in BEING JOHN MALKOVICH (1999) with Cameron Diaz;
CD was in ANY GIVEN SUNDAY (1999) with Al Pacino;
Al Pacino was in SIMONE (2002) with Winona Ryder.

THIS WEEK'S WILD CARD SOLUTION:
THE "CHICK FLICK" ROUTE
Kevin Bacon was in PICTURE PERFECT (1997) with Jennifer Aniston;
JA was in SHE'S THE ONE (1996) with Edward Burns;
EB was in LIFE, OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (2002) with Angelina Jolie;
Al was in GIRL, INTERRUPTED (1999) with Winona Ryder.

RUNNING with SCISSORS

Episode V: Proper Bar Etiquette

By Melissa Hammel and Lizzy Nielsen

Damn those Monday holidays, they have a horrid tendency to keep the women of Running with Scissors from sharing their words of wisdom with this crazy campus. But as usual, we are back with our insights to make this campus a nicer and more attractive place. This week we tackle bar etiquette. We think that the way some people act in bars is abominable, and by following our simple words of advice, we could make barhopping a more joyous activity for all.

Monitor Boozing

Be aware of how much booze you have consumed. Yes, we realize that it is difficult at bars to keep track of your alcohol consumption. Everyone has been guilty at one time or another of drinking to a point where they get a little wobbly when walking around. However, when you get to this point, walking to a bar and getting another drink, which will be most likely given to you in the form of a full glass, is a bad idea. It is very likely that someone else will end up wearing a portion of your drink, which sucks for you, because you just spent money on that, and it sucks for whoever's shirt that you happened to ruin. If you're wobbling, you're likely to fall into people and spill their drinks. You don't want to be THAT silly drunk, so if you're tanked, have someone else get your drinks. For your own good and everyone else's.

Random acts of kindness

This one was inspired by an act of kindness that the women of Running with Scissors experienced uptown this passed weekend. Just to pass on the love, go uptown and buy some random person a drink once a month. On Friday night, a few girls gave us some free drinks at our table. It brightened up our evening, and look, they're getting mentioned in the greatest Collegian column ever. So spread the love, and the next time you're in a bar, buy some random person a drink. It'll make you happy, and it'll definitely make them happy.

Remember your manners

This is sometimes a bit complicated after you've had a few Grateful Deads, but don't forget that even in bars, you need to use your manners. When walking around the bar, say excuse me. Every so often, there is a mass-drunken roadblock clogging bar walkways. Suppress the urge to shove them, just yell "excuse me" really really loud. Normally this works, and if it doesn't, just try to get the attention of someone around them. Shoving is always a bad idea, and can only lead to violence or spilled alcohol.

Vacate your table

Having a table at a bar is a very special privilege. It has to be earned. If you get there early enough, you are usually lucky enough to get one. However, if you plan on leaving, do not continuously orbit your table. Get the hell up and go because most likely there is someone waiting for your table. The ladies of Running with Scissors were in a crowded bar this past weekend and witnessed some silly individuals who were "planning" on leaving.

Turn to RUNNING, page 6

Half Past Dead graceless and falls short of action hero glory

By Johnny Donaldson
Collegian Critic

HALF PAST DEAD
Directed by Don Michael Paul
Starring Steven Seagal, Morris Chestnut and Ja Rule
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Steven Seagal doesn't exactly kick butt in Half Past Dead, he barely even deigns to move. We're supposed to believe that the now jowly Seagal can still bring down endless hoards of bad guys with lots of fists, but really the guy looks like he's foaming water. There are haphazardly edited shots of hands coming down in a karate chop snap, or leg connecting squarely into a poor unfortunate extra's chest.

Yet we never see Seagal himself do the fighting. What we do see Seagal do is speak in a Zen-zombie monotone and parade around in billowing outfits designed to hide his no longer lithe, lighter's body. By now, Seagal is as convincing as a metal action hero as the Pillsbury Doughboy.

Dead follows the same formula as Seagal's previous Exit Wounds, which paired him with a famous, gravel-voiced hip hop star designed to provide street credit for the faltering star. This time, it's the small-boned Ja Rule, who lacks the gruffly, menacing charisma of DMX. In fact, Dead made me long for the halfway-decent coherence of Exit Wounds.

The movie is a graceless, lumbering catalogue of the new action cliches that have sprouted like so many weeds post-Matrix. There's the murky, blue lit cinematography, the assaultive soundtrack composed of faceless rap, rock and techno tunes; the increasingly unplausible action sequences in which gun-wielding characters jump into the air while sparks and explosions frame them.

There's some sort of preposterous, inane plot involving a high-tech prison, leather clad bad guys led by Morris Chestnut (leached of all charisma) and $200 million in stolen gold brick. In the midst of it all, there's Seagal poignantly trying to hang on to his former action hero glory. Almost proudly incoherent, Half Past Dead isn't a movie you call mindless, it's a movie you call brain dead. [1 1/2 Screen Gems, rated PG-13 for pervasive action violence, language and some sexual content, 99 mins.]

Half Past Dead stars Seagal in acting and physical and script and as Steven Seagal's worst movie ever. Seagal is joined by Ja Rule in the back and Ester Rolle in the middle.

■ running

continued from page 5

but decided it better to take up valuable bar space for an extra 15 minutes.

The Line from Hell

The bathrooms at bars are always gross and waiting in line for the bathroom at a bar is the closest thing to hell many of us will ever come to. However, there is no need to make the experience worse for other people. Here are pretty simple bar bathroom rules to follow.

1. Don't pee on the toilet paper on the floor or anywhere else for that matter. It really isn't funny, despite how it would seem at the time, and if you get so drunk that you miss the toilet completely, it's time to go home anyway.

2. Don't heckle the other people in line. Trying to pick up members of the opposite sex in a bathroom line is always gross and should be avoided at all costs. Chances are if you spot the girl or guy of your dreams in the bathroom line they are likely thinking not of the possibility of dating you but that they shouldn't be drinking so much. Hold off on the social interaction until are back on the bar. And furthermore, don't spend your time banging on the doors of the restrooms trying to send messages to your friends or trying to get someone out of the bathroom faster. The taxis never works and is usually the reason why there is pee on the floor.

3. If someone looks like they are going to throw up, get them to the front of the line. This is a no brainer and you will be thanking yourself for it afterward.

Step Away from the Bar

There is nothing so irritating in a bar environment than not being able to get to the bar itself. The worst kind of enemies pertaining to make it up to the front of the bar and order your drinks and likely the drinks of all the drunk people with you, only to find that other people are blocking the way. Be aware when you snag the bar stools up front that you might block off the traffic behind you. The best way to make friends is not only to move aside but also get the attention of the bartender for others. You avoid getting a flying elbow to the head and help out your fellow bar patrons in the process.

Dress the Part

Thought that you could get through an entire Running with Scissors without any reference to fashion? Well, you were wrong. Fashion is a major portion of any bar experience. The most important part of bar dress is knowing your surroundings. If you are in a bar that is widely known for jeans and tee shirts it is a fairly foregone conclusion not to show up in your tightest pair of black pants ready to party. In a similar vein of thought, you shouldn't show up to a nice bar wearing your old pair of ripped jeans and a dirty shirt. Simply put, try to dress for your surroundings and avoid looking like an idiot.

Bar sing-along

We like everyone else love to sing along to catchy bar tunes, it is one of the best parts about going to a bar. What is not great is singing along to songs that you don't know or making up the words at the top of your lungs. Ditto for dancing on chairs or small tables.

The ladies from Running with Scissors came up with the inspiration for this column while in Charlies with Russ and Tramne, whom we need to thank for the assistance for this column. Hopefully with these tips you will be able to avoid the common bar pitfalls that befall all of us. As usual, call us shallow, but we are always right.

Melissa Hammel and Lizzy Nielsen are Collegian columnists.

■ Offsides

continued from page 10

The Hofstra defense surrounds UMass freshman quarterback Tim Day for the sack on the final play of the game as the seconds tick away at the Minutemen's chance of beating the Pride.

over on downs. Hofstra took the ball down the field, converting on two fourth downs to do so, and took the 31-28 lead on a Ryan Cosentino pass to receiver Marques Colston.

The Minutemen marched downfield in the final two minutes, but a sack of Tim Day at the Hofstra 11 ended the game and, most likely, the postseason aspirations for a team that was looking at the possibility of two home playoff games just three weeks ago.

The question after the game, of course, was whether the Pride players jumped offside on that play or if everyone in the stadium, minus the Hofstra coaching staff and the referees, was hallucinating.

Whipple wasn't entirely sure during the press conference, and tried to downplay the no-call's importance on the game's outcome, but after seeing the tape with the reporters, he looked like a man who had just been robbed.

A lot happened in the game, but that one no-call by the refs turned an entire season around for the Minutemen. One can't assume what would have happened, but the first down on what should have been a penalty would have given UMass first-and-10 on the Hofstra 26 with five minutes left in the game.

Likely just eight to 10 yards out of kicker Doug White's field goal range, UMass extending its lead to seven was certainly possible, never mind a touchdown that would have clinched the deal.

But now we'll never know, as the referees made one of the most boneheaded no-calls the UMass program has ever seen, and the careers of players who make up what Whipple considers one of his best groups in his coaching tenure, will probably end in the regular season.

■ Hofstra

continued from page 12

down and make a decision."

Zullo was just as shocked at the no-call.

"I could have sworn that they made contact or at least were in the neutral zone when the ball was snapped," he said. "It's just one of those calls that didn't go our way."

Hofstra then put together a 13-play, 65-yard drive that included a pair of fourth down conversions inside the UMass 40. Quarterback Ryan Cosentino went 8-for-11 on the drive for 58 yards, and his four-yarder to Marques Colston on a short slant – a nearly identical pass to one that was broken up on the previous play – put the Pride ahead for good, 31-28.

"When we were getting down to the 10-yard line in, they were bringing a lot of pressure, playing man on our receivers, and we were able to get some rushs and work our guys underneath," Cosentino said. "Marcus was open on the one that got batted down and we went back to a similar play on fourth down and were able to get it."

Cosentino finished 34-for-55 in the game, tossing for 364 yards and a pair of touchdowns, while throwing just one interception – in the first quarter by Shannon James. The junior's performance was vital for the Hofstra offense, which got just 43 yards on 28 carries on the day.

"We really, I thought, came back good because we gave them an easy touchdown in the first quarter," Hofstra Head Coach Joe Gardi said. "I thought we played hard on both sides of the ball. Ryan [Cosentino] was really great when it counted, when we needed it. We made great plays, so did UMass. We got a big turnover on the goal line."

That turnover occurred in the third quarter, after the Minutemen had allowed their visitors to score on their first two possessions of the second half and go up 24-14. After UMass went three plays and did nothing, a 30-yard punt by Corey Potter on a fake punt and a 19-yard reverse to Zullo put the Maroon and White on the verge of bringing the game within three. But redshirt freshman R.J. Cobbs fumbled on the next play after running for eight yards, and Garay made the recovery to kill the home squad's momentum.

With the loss, the Minutemen will likely need a lot of help to get into the playoffs. However, should Northeastern and Maine fall next week, a Maroon and White win over Rhode Island would have it in the playoffs. The Minutemen would win a tiebreaker with what could be as many as four other teams.

So how did things get so bad? Just three weeks ago, UMass was coming off a good win over Delaware to improve to 7-2 overall (6-1 Atlantic 10). It was in the driver's seat in the conference – simply win out against three very beatable opponents in New Hampshire, Hofstra and Rhode Island and the A-10 title is back in Amherst.

It almost seemed too easy. And it was.

First, there was news that quarterback Jeff Krohn, one of the best in the conference, if not I-AA, was out for the UNH game after sustaining a concussion against Delaware. UMass' turnovers and Wildcat running back Stephan Lewis killed Whipple's squad, as Day, who had looked so good in relief of Krohn, looked too green for A-10 football. Lewis rushed for over 180 yards and scored three touchdowns in the contest.

The loss dropped the Minutemen to needing help to win the A-10, but still in line for an at-large bid into the postseason.

But this weekend's loss, also without Krohn, drops the team to 7-4 and – even with a win next week at Rhode Island – out of the playoffs, as no team has ever been selected as an at-large team with four losses.

Nevermind that one loss was to I-A power North Carolina State on its home field, or that the last two were without one of the best QBs in the nation, just the number four after that dash is enough to keep you out of the postseason.

It is too bad the selection committee won't see those factors, or the fact that the referees basically killed what could have been a game-clinching drive with a horrendous no-call.

One play, one bit of blindness.

And there's your season.

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist

Wanna write for Arts? Email Jen, Lizzy or Nick at arts@dailycollegian.com

D.P. Dough®
Delivers Calzones
— The Pizza Alternative® —
256-1616
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616
D.P. Dough = Great Calzones + Fast Delivery + Low Prices

BARBADOS
SPRING BREAK '03
Includes Meals, Cruise, Taxes and Free Parties
ARE YOUR READY?
If you are ready for something different... Barbados is waiting for you! Legendary beaches and fantastic nightlife makes Spring Break in Barbados unforgettable.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM Starting at $79.95
at North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates (One mile North of Dillons)
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Companies

Announcing Our New Amherst Site!
27 Pray Street - off Triangle Street
Now Open!
Tapestry Health provides:
• Emergency Contraception • Pregnancy Testing • HIV/STI Testing • Breast Exams • Birth Control • Pap Tests
TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential Family Planning Services Since 1973
8 Locations in Western Massachusetts
1-800-696-7752 www.tapestryhealth.org

Deren's hat trick too little in A-10's

By Andrew Merritt
Collegian Staff

If there was a central theme for the Massachusetts men's soccer team this season, it was the road. The road back to the Atlantic 10 Championship, the road through a difficult pre-conference season, and the way it played on long road trips that took it through the outer regions of the A-10 universe.

GW	4
UMass	3

That road ended abruptly Friday night, when the Minutemen lost to George Washington in overtime, 4-3.

The Colonials took the game in dramatic fashion, when junior forward Arnar Johannsson headed a ball home from the penalty spot with just one second remaining in the overtime session. Johannsson's goal came from the foot of senior Matthew Osborne, who took a pass from junior Jeremy Catlin and served it over to Johannsson.

The goal sent the Colonials to the A-10 Championship game, where they defeated Duquesne yesterday for the program's first-ever conference title.

Senior Jeff Deren notched a hat trick for the Minutemen, his second of the season. With the trick, Deren pushed his season goals total to 22.

Deren scored the game's first goal at 8:53, a low blast to the right corner on an assist from sophomore Martin Burwell.

The Minutemen kept the pressure on GW, with a few solid scoring chances midway through the period, including two corner kicks and two direct free kicks in a five-minute span.

Despite lacking possession in the early part of the match, George Washington was able to tie the game when Johannsson earned a penalty kick after a UMass foul in the box. The lanky, Icelandic forward converted on the PK to knot the game at one.

The Minutemen countered with a series of runs at the GW goal, but it would be the Colonials who would tally the next score, when freshman Steve Brown found Johannsson in the box for a one-timer past UMass keeper Enzo Altomare.

GW took the 2-1 lead into halftime, and held it until the 60th minute, when Deren took a cross from junior Ptah Myers and put it past the Colonials' Eric Lund to tie the score.

UMass gained the control back in the second half, outshooting GW 12-5. The Colonials took a late lead, though, on a goal from Osborne with just 6:30 remaining. The Briton took a feed from senior Michael Goldman and netted it for the 3-2 GW lead.

The Minutemen came back again, winning a penalty kick after a Colonial hand ball in the box. Deren stepped up and scored for the equalizer, and his third score of the game at 89:32.

Overtime saw both teams narrowly miss victory on shots that either glanced off the post or just missed the goal. After nearly ten minutes, with a second overtime session in sight, George Washington ended it on Johannsson's header.

The Minutemen saw their season end on a sour note, and returned to Amherst, where they will await the results of today's NCAA Tournament selection show, which will be shown on ESPNews at 4 p.m.

It's unlikely, however, that the Minutemen will be invited to the tourney. With six losses on the season, including two to Atlantic 10 opponents, one to a team that missed the conference tournament (Rhode Island), hopes for the Maroon and White to receive an at-large bid are slim.

"I think our season's over," UMass Coach Sam Koch said. "Any hopes for us to be invited are very, very slight. Could we have been [in the tournament]? No question."

Despite facing the end of the season, Koch was happy with his crew.

"We played really well," he said. "I'm very proud of our performance, and our effort. It was a wet field, and [George Washington] has two of the best forwards in the league. Obviously, we gave up four goals, and I don't like that, but you have to give GW credit, they worked hard to get open, and those two forwards are lethal finishers.

"We outplayed them, and controlled most of the game," he continued. "If you didn't look at the scoreboard, you'd never know that they won. It was one the best games we played all year."

Unless some good fortune befalls the Minutemen today, Deren, Altomare, Yuri Morales, Derek Rhodes and five other seniors have played their last game in UMass uniforms.

Deren finished his career as the leading point and goal scorer in school history. The Chicopee native scored 115 points and 48 goals as a Minuteman. Deren also set the single-season records this year, with 51 points and 22 goals.

Morales also left his legacy in the record book as the all-time leader in assists (28), as well as a tie for tenth on the all-time points list (60).

As the 2002 season begins to fade, Koch is already busy with the future.

"We have a number of returning players who are ready for the challenge," he said. "I feel bad for the seniors, they had a heck of a run. Now we have to bring in a recruiting class that will patch up the holes."

Koch and his staff will also be busy in the offseason looking for places for the departing seniors to play, including the A-league. Deren has also received calls from unnamed MLS clubs looking for him to try out. The 2003 MLS SuperDraft takes place on Jan. 17.

Junior Dustin Barnes is expected to take on a larger role next year due to eight seniors graduating on the Minuteman squad.

Minutemen take two

Turner nets four points

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Last year's home-and-home weekend series with UMass-Lowell was a nothing short of heartbreaking for the Massachusetts hockey team. Two extremely well-played games, but two losses to show for it.

This weekend, the hockey gods gave UMass something to smile about.

The Minutemen (4-4-0, 3-3-0 Hockey East) survived spurts of sloppy play throughout the weekend to take both contests with the River Hawks (4-7-0, 0-6-0 HE), and with their two wins improved to a tie for third place (six points) in the conference standings. Despite outshouting the Maroon and White by a count of 65-40 on the weekend, Lowell failed to score in the third frame of either battle, and UMass' five final-period tallies proved to be the dagger in the hearts of UML.

UMass	6	4
UML	3	3

This weekend marked the first time that the Minutemen swept a Hockey East opponent since Jan. 7-8, when they logged two victories against Providence.

"It just felt like we weren't getting any bounces in the past, but we're starting to get some bounces now," senior co-captain Tim Turner said. "Guys are capitalizing on them, and we're playing off of each other."

The Minutemen were sluggish coming out of the gates on Saturday night, but two lamplighters in the final 10 minutes helped UMass rebound from two two-goal deficits to defeat Lowell 4-3 at Tsongas Arena. The newly-formed line of Turner, Mike Warner and Chris Capraro tallied seven points on the night, including the final two goals, to lead the Maroon and White to victory.

With the River Hawks holding a slim 3-2 lead after two periods, UMass managed to score the equalizer at 10:59, as Capraro intercepted a failed clear by Hawk defenseman Darryl Green, and sent a perfect centering pass to Turner who fired a laser past helpless UML netminder Chris Davidson. Less than two minutes later, Warner scooted in alone on Davidson, beating him low for the game-winning score.

"Tonight we played a great road game, they did everything they had to do to just hang around and stay in the game," UML Head Coach Blaise McDonald said. "We had a couple of significant miscues [in the third period that resulted in another '1.'"

But it took a while for things to get going, as the River Hawks jumped out to an early 2-0 lead midway through the first period. Freshman Brad King put the puck home right in front of the UMass net for the first goal, and fellow rookie Elias Godoy made a nifty move near the left circle that fooled Minuteman defenseman Matt Fetzer, and his rocket beat Gabe Winer just under the crossbar.

The Minutemen survived a shaky opening frame filled with turnovers. Lowell outshot the Maroon and White 15-6 in the first 20 minutes.

"It could have been 9-1 after the first period," UMass Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "Had [Lowell] capitalized on their opportunities and put four or five away, the lights would have been out."

UML also was the victim of several bad breaks throughout the game. Senior Ed McGuire, entering the affair with a point in 16 consecutive games, clanged a laser off the crossbar 30 seconds into the contest. The River Hawks then had a goal waved off late in the third, as referee John Gravallese blew the play dead on a delayed penalty before a UMass defenseman knocked the puck into his own net.

Friday night, linemates Greg Mauldin and Stephen Werner totaled seven points, as the Minutemen scored three third-period goals to oust Lowell 6-5 at the Mullins Center. Werner scored the first of his two in the final period, as he kept the puck himself on a two-on-one break with Mauldin, beating Dominic Smart to the far side for the game-winner. With two minutes to go, defenseman Thomas Pock tallied an incredible tape-to-tape pass to the streaking Werner, who easily tipped in the insurance goal.

Winer made 59 saves on the weekend for UMass, improving his record to 4-3-0.

"[Winer] was clearly the difference in the game, and probably the weekend," Cahoon said.

Defenseman Thomas Pock tallied four points this weekend in two wins for the Minutemen against UMass-Lowell.

'Toot' worthy of praise after 200th

Massachusetts Head Hockey Coach Don Cahoon and his staff are not ones to harp on awards or individual accomplishments. But with the Minutemen clinching the Alumni Cup (given to the winner of the Massachusetts/UMass-Lowell season series) and Cahoon earning his 200th career win on Saturday, much can be made of the accomplishments of this weekend.

But it is what those things represent that makes them important happening.

By taking the Alumni Cup – Massachusetts's flagship school's first since 1995-96 – with a pair of victories this weekend, the Maroon and White took a crucial four points from a UML team that was a wounded animal having dropped all four of its Hockey East games coming into the weekend.

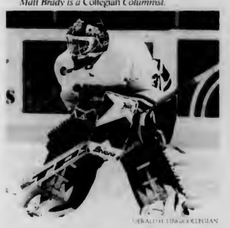
But with the River Hawks' backs against the wall, the Minutemen went straight for the jugular and moved into a tie for third place in Hockey East. Lowell is now stuck deep in the cellar, having already lost one-quarter of its conference games and being in danger of going into break with no points in the conference, as it has only a game with Boston University on Thursday left on its pre-holiday slate.

The Minutemen have missed out on the playoffs two years in a row – mainly a product of not beating the teams with which they are competing for the eighth and final playoff spot in the conference. By taking four crucial points from a desperate UML squad early in the season, the Minutemen have already matched their conference win total from all of last season.

MATT BRADY

More crucially, the Maroon and White knows it can sweep a home-and-home weekend series – something it has not done since Jan. 7-8, 2000 against Providence.

"It's unbelievable, we're playing good hockey right now, and this is one of the biggest confidence boosters I've had since I've been at UMass," said senior co-captain Tim Turner, who had four points on the weekend. "We're going to build off this and just keep going with it."



Two hundred career victories is a nice milestone for any coach to achieve. But it is especially significant for Cahoon, who has taken many a thump along the road to rebuilding a Princeton program that was mired in mediocrity and taking on the challenge of bringing the Minutemen up to par with the rest of one of the top conferences in all of college hockey.

That's why Cahoon is one of the most well-respected coaches in all of college hockey despite the fact that he holds a sub-.500 (200-219-421 career record.

But perhaps the most significant thing about the weekend is that the Minutemen – constantly looked at as playing well but falling just short – played a bit of role reversal in the wins over Lowell. The Minutemen did not play their best hockey, and were actually outplayed for a good amount of the series. As Cahoon pointed out, his squad was outshot in every period of the weekend.

Therefore, logically, when the Minutemen go out and play their best hockey at the right time, they will be one of the most feared teams within one of the best conferences in the nation. And that should make for some exciting times in Amherst.

Matt Brady is a Collegian Columnist.

Freshman goaltender Gabe Winer made 59 stops against the River Hawks this weekend.

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Veggie Potato Skins $5.95 4.48
Nachos Especial $5.95 4.48
Sweet Potato Fries $4.25 3.28
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DCMP Welcome Here
Closed on Mondays
www.judiesrestaurant.com
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

Wireless Choices
Any of these phones FREE with $39.99 plan
Sony Ericsson T68LX
Nokia 1260
Panasonic EB-TX320
OR
Get a big discount on "Any phone" if you open a one year account
$29.99 plan with $30 discount
$39.99 plan with $50 discount
$49.99 plan with $65 discount
$59.99 plan with $85 discount
$80 + plan with $110 discount
AT&T offers unlimited nights & weekends.
Nextel offers unlimited direct connect.
65 University Drive, Unit #4 Amherst, MA 01002
(right next to the HangarPub)
Phone 549-2075
Fax 549-4315
AT&T Wireless NEXTEL

*Save $350 Off Move-In Costs
Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments
FREE HEAT & HOT WATER
Fully applianced kitchens
Washers/dryers available
Pool, volleyball, basketball
Minutes from Umass-On free busline
Call Sugarloaf Estates today!
413-665-3856
Visit us at sugarloafestates.com
*limited time offer

Matchmaker, Matchmaker... Make me a match!
SINGLE SEARCH West & Central Mass
Can Help You Find Your Soulmate!
♥ Designed by a marriage counselor
♥ Easy and affordable
♥ Safe and respectable
♥ Unique two-way compatibility matching system
Contact us for a FREE Consultation & Brochure
www.massingles.com
massingles@aol.com
413-665-3218
Single Search welcomes people from all lifestyles and backgrounds

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Get Greek Stuff F.A.S.T! Group orders get great discounts. Lettering, embroidery, novelties. Visit on-line at Connectsports.com. 1-800-929-1897, dlautran@starpower.net

Cheap heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-2865 or come by Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

*Save $350 Off Move-In Costs Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments FREE HEAT & HOT WATER Fully applianced kitchens Washers/dryers available Pool, volleyball, basketball Minutes from Umass On free busline Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 Visit us at sugarloafestates.com *limited time offer

Apt. For Rent 1/1.2 bdrm. On Rt. 9 1/4 m. from town. $950. 253-3440

2 apartments in house for rent. Four bedroom and 5 bedroom. Full Kitchen, Parking, heating included, Laundry facility. $1400 and $1500 413-563-1888

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt. Quarky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to UMass or Noho. $700 with heat 433-3922.

Sunderland 2 bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

89 Nissan 240SX Coupe 155k 5speed Grt Cond Sporty $3000 Emily 546-0337

95 Honda Civic Coupe 2 door 99,000 miles 5 Speed AC Very Good Condition B/O over 4500 BOB 253-9333

94 Chevy Cavalier, AT, 2 Door, Purple, 105k, AC, AM/FM, $1900, 587-0906 dundas@cs.umass.edu

91 Acclaim Luxury Edition needs work $350. 545-0547

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

EMPLOYMENT

Part-Time Internship. Ad Sales, PR, Distribution. Well Paid Flexible Hours. E-mail ucal@bendnet.com with 'Intern' in subject line.

Politics Got You Down? Clean Water Act is hiring grassroots organizers to help hold politicians accountable! Work on environmental/public health campaigns. Join a winning team and fight for progressive causes you believe in. $345/wk + bonus & bens. Call today!!! 413-584-9830

Interviewing Now!! For Holiday Help and winter Break Work. $15.50 base- Appt. in our busy customer Service and sales departs. PT/FT flex. Conditions Apply. Start NOW or After finals . . . 781-890-7667 617-323-3456

Attn: UMASS Students Holiday break not exciting? Make some cash, Build your Resume and work with our Student team. Call Or apply online. 781-890-7667 (Metrowest) 617-323-3456 (Boston City) www.winterbreak-work.com

Nov. 21, 2002 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a spring 2003 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Spring 2003 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Temporary Help Wanted Nov 17-21 all hours Clothing Liquidation contact kathleenquag@aol.com or 860-982-5922

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate for single w/bath $375/mo w/ heat in putton 2 bedroom w/ male undergrads starts jan. Inquire John at 549-0794 or jburgess@edlab-mail.cs.umass.edu

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services Office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

Looking for female to take over lease Share bedroom in Apt. Uptown $250/month. Dec. or Jan. through May. 508 274 9289

TRANSPORTATION

NEED A RIDE HOME FOR THANKSGIVING? Catch a Deluxe Charter Bus to the Boston Area! Buses leave on Tue. Nov 26th or Wed. Nov 27th. Returning to UMASS on Sun. Dec 1st. Round Trip Fare $49 Visa & MasterCard accepted! Visit www.BeanTownBus.com or call 1-866-423-2686 for more details.

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429!

HOUSE

Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK Atlanta, Cherokee, Holyoke, Mashpee, Mississippi Delta Email: klv@som.umass.edu

SPRING BREAK CHEAP!!! Call Logan (413) 210-5778

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1 800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRReam.com

Act Fast! Save $$$. Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 5
4	NBSN
5	Fox Sports Network
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Cinema
8	WB / 20
9	UPN 38
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVO-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-to-Travel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Channel
29	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	CMT
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	MTV2
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want To place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Questions? Call us at 413-545-3500

Student rate - 50 cents word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

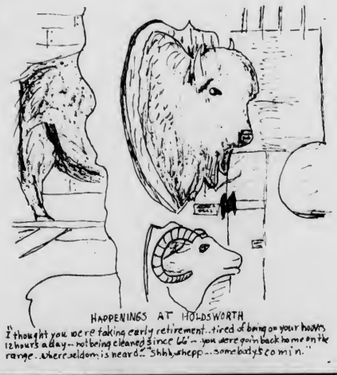
Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Quote of the Day

"It takes a great deal of bravery to stand up to your enemies but a great deal more to stand up to your friends."



-Harry Potter

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 46 LOW: 27	HIGH: 51 LOW: 27	HIGH: 49 LOW: 31

Horoscopes

Geoduck By W.J.S.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) – You might want to double-check your figures today. You'll notice that you forgot to carry the one.

SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – You'll be forced to crush someone with your poisoned tail after they stupidly make fun of "the new scaly kid."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – Don't let someone else's lack of enthusiasm bring you down today. They just suck.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) – Someone is likely to know what's going on inside your head better than you do today. Let the neurosurgeon do her work, she knows how to fix your wiring.

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – Focus on presentability today. You'll want to adopt the right behavior and look your best – particularly during an evening gathering. Make sure your robes are pressed and brushed, and that your goat's head is the freshest available.

ARIES (March 21 – April 19) – Attendance is required in your second class. Make sure you wake up.

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – What begins as a slow process – one that you do not wholly enjoy – is soon to be something that you do with much more gusto. Wink, wink.

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) – You'll be going from one thing to another all day long. Yeah, because that's a specific prediction. Man, I love my job.

CANCER (June 21 – July 22) – You can afford to be more sensitive today. And everyday for that matter. Seriously, you aren't known for your tact, are you?

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) – Want to know a secret? Too bad. I didn't get to be a highly paid astrologist by giving away freebies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) – A social gathering affords more than one opportunity to capitalize on someone else's oversight. Set your phasers on "insult."

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) – Focus on any endeavor that allows you to put your best foot forward – rumba, baby, rumba.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Garden Vegetable Soup

Cavatelli Supreme

Battered Fish

California Chili Nachos (vegan)

DINNER

Garden Vegetable Soup

Chicken Mamou

Southern Fried Steak

Thai Seitan (vegan)

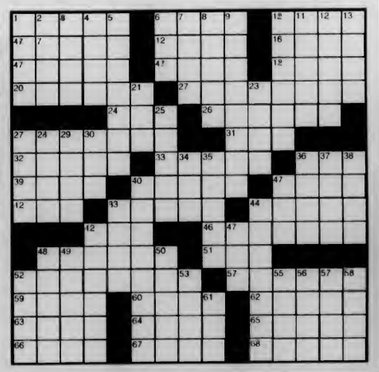
Vegan Cutlets with Applesauce

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Voted Best new Bar/Club in The Valley 2002
MON
All-U-Can-Eat $5.95
8:30-11pm
TUES
TEAM PUB TRIVIA
Put your education to real use!
Win money and prizes
9pm call for details
163 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst
548-6900
"Start Your Own Tradition"

ACROSS

1 Cheap nightclub
6 Favoritism
10 Skin care problem
14 Raring to go
15 Lawyer, briefly
16 Fiber source
17 Mall tenant
18 Come across as
19 Parade feature
20 Vampire's target
22 Massages
24 Veggie-tray item
26 Stud
27 Flambe
31 Fleur-de-—
32 Sharp
33 Holland export
36 Deuce
39 Ink spot
40 Take fright
41 Faculty head
42 Utter
43 Ralph—Emerson
44 Danger
45 Miss Piggy, to herself
46 Cancel
48 Well-versed
51 Travel on powder
52 Nose from the hall
54 Art stands
59 Iron oxidation
60 Rolling — —
(inch)
62 Prove false
63 Nautical position
64 Memo
65 Los Angeles cager
66 US rival, once
67 Mortarboard wearer
68 Come afterward

DOWN



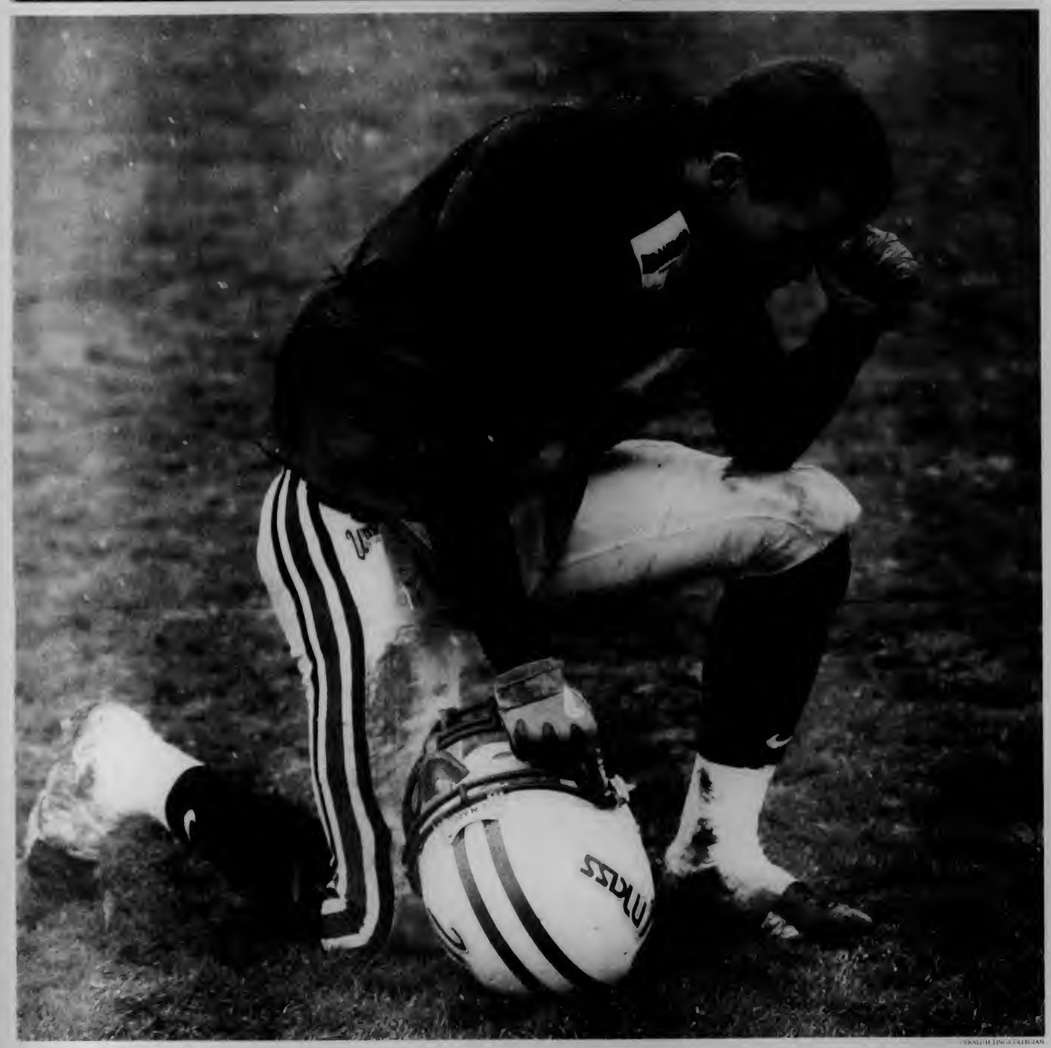
1 Witty remark
2 Promise
3 Borodin prince
4 Mad emperor
5 Sewing machine part
6 College degs
7 Livy's road
8 Finished off (2 wds.)
9 Standing for
10 Monastery heads
11 Go very slow
12 Pram pusher
13 Concluders
21 Dead heat
23 Trickle down
25 Sachet component
27 Prods
28 Bruins ash
29 Warming float
30 "The Addams Family" cousin

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	E	M	S		A	P	I	S	E		B	B
A	V	E	C		F	A	L	L	S		F	R	A	U
L	I	A	R		T	R	O	U	T		A	T	I	S
A	L	L	U	D	E		E	D	I	P	I	C	E	S
				B	U	R	P		E	L	S
F	O	P		M	A	L	T		S	U	B	M	I	T
A	N	A		B	L	E	A	K		B	E	I	G	E
N	E	S	S		L	A	X	E	R		E	L	U	E
G	A	T	E	S		L	I	B	E	R		E	O	N
S	L	E	E	P	S		S	A	G	A		S	O	S
			T	I	C	S		B	A	R	E
H	I	G	H	N	O	O	N		R	E	A	D	E	R
I	D	L	E		T	R	E	A	D		R	A	R	A
F	F	E	D		S	E	R	G	E		T	R	I	P
L	I	A	N			R	O	A	D		H	E	N	S

11-18-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

34 Slurm — Drang
35 Widebeest chasers
36 Garr or Hatcher
37 Ragamuffin
38 Just
40 Wielding a brush
41 Computer key
43 Misfortunes
44 Springy
45 Grumble
47 Small guitar
48 Referee's calls
49 Bites the dust
50 Quartet member
52 Hen's spouse
53 Pocket braid
55 Madonna ex
56 Large deer
57 Place
58 And
61 Newscaster — Koppel



Today's Staff

Night Editor: Melissa Hammel
Photo Editor: Gerald Ling
Copy Editor: Jim Pignatiello
Production Supervisor: Pete Preston
Production Staff: Jennifer DiMeglio, Jennifer Eastwood

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

STAFF PHOTO/COLLEGIAN

HEARTBREAKER

Hofstra sacks playoff hopes

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

Silence.

When Massachusetts football quarterback Tim Day was dragged down by Hofstra's Shaun Kinsley on Saturday, 5,090 fans and 85 football players made no noise. As precious seconds ticked off the clock victory slipped through the Minutemen's hands and likely so did a chance at the postseason.

"When I saw him get sacked I knew we weren't going to have enough time to spike the ball and I knew it was over," said UMass receiver Adrian Zullo (pictured above), the only remaining member from the 1998 Division I-AA National Championship team. "That's when it hit me."

Hofstra	31
UMass	28

Head Coach Mark Whipple reached into the bag of tricks that had brought his team so much good fortune this season. That proved unfruitful this time as the Maroon and White (7-4, 5-3 A-10) was for once on the short end of a costly, unlucky play that was the deciding factor in the Pride's 31-28 victory.

"It's certainly a tough, tough loss for us," Whipple said. "We were ready to play, there's no excuses, we just didn't make enough plays and they made one more than we did. If you'd have told me that they would have scored 31 points I would have said we wouldn't have a chance, because we were going to be very limited, trying to run the ball and not turn the ball over."

Facing second-and-goal from the five-yard line with only 15 seconds to go in the game and no timeouts, Whipple called one more play to the end zone in hopes of evading overtime and winning the game in regulation.

"We told Timmy, 'You've got one look there and if you don't have it just throw it out of the back of the end zone,'" Whipple said. "It's a competitor and he just tried to make a play."

As much as that play stuck in the minds of those in attendance, it was the final play of UMass' previous drive that had most people talking. With a 28-24 lead and a fourth-and-one from the Hofstra 31-yard line, Whipple called for a hard count to try to draw the Pride defensive linemen offsides. When the defense apparently jumped, senior co-captain Maikel Miret snapped the ball and Day pumped his fist in triumph. But then he was engulfed by Daniel Garay and no penalty was called, meaning Hofstra (5-6 overall, 4-3 Atlantic 10) took the ball over at its own 35 with more than five minutes to play.

"That was a tough call," Garay said. "I thought they were going to call offsides on us. But I guess they had moved on the other side of the line and they ran the play at the same time. When it was our ball and we got it back that was big."

According to Whipple, the play did not call for Miret to snap the ball at all, but the school's record holder for consecutive starts took it into his own hands to catch the Pride in the neutral zone.

"We don't ever snap the ball on that play," Whipple said. "If there was contact, it would have been offsides, [and if not] we were going to take a timeout or let it go

Turn to HOFSTRA, page 6

Blown non-call costs the season

JIM PIGNATIELLO

Reporters crowded into the room with UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple after the press conference. They had just been informed that the play was cued up on the game film. No one wanted to miss seeing it.

Minuteman quarterback Tim Day is under center and barks out the call. Three of Hofstra's four defensive linemen jump over the line of scrimmage and UMass captain Maikel Miret snaps the ball at center.

Whipple had just finished trying to convince everyone in the press conference that the play, or lack of a flag on the play, wasn't what lost his team the game, 31-28, but upon seeing the replay, it sure seemed like the zebras cheated the team.

At least, Whipple sure looks like a guy who feels like he just watched his team get shafted.

The play in question was a UMass fourth-and-one on the Hofstra 31-yard line, with the Maroon and White holding a 28-24 lead with just over five minutes left to play. Whipple sent his offense out to try to goad the Pride linemen into jumping offside. If they did, then the Minutemen would have gotten five yards and a first down. While Miret wasn't supposed to snap the ball, instead hoping for contact that blows the play dead, when three players jumped, he snapped the ball to the obvious surprise of the rookie Day, who was tackled for a loss after just standing around following the hike.

Since no penalty flag was thrown, the sack counted and UMass turned the ball

Turn to OFFSIDES, page 6

HOWIE DAY ARTS PAGE 5. BAD BLIND DATES ED/OP PAGE 4. DOUBLE A SHOOTS SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FIFTY-THREE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.19.02

Walk for Light set for tonight

The once-a-semester "Walk for Light" will take place tonight. The walk, which was originally scheduled for last Tuesday, was cancelled and rescheduled because of inclement weather.

Members of the community are invited to meet on the steps of the Student Union at 7 p.m. where they will break into groups to walk predetermined routes on campus, taking note of any safety concerns along the way.

The "Walk for Light" gathers students, faculty, staff and the police department once a semester to identify safety concerns on campus. It is sponsored by the Student Government Association (SGA) and is done in collaboration with the University Police Department and the Chancellor's Committee on Campus Safety, which addresses campus safety issues.

The event began in 1997 and was organized by the Campus Safety Summit, a committee that met to address campus safety issues. They have resulted in the installation of additional police call boxes, more lighting on campus, and the pruning of vegetation for safety purposes. According to an interview in a previous Collegian article with Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor, there were only five call boxes on campus in 1980. That number has jumped to over 100.

Security on campus has been a hot button issue on campus this year. Earlier in the semester, the SGA created a Select Committee on Public Safety to specifically address campus safety issues. The committee is a sub-committee of University Policy.

Previous walks have led to the trimming back of vegetation that could be dangerous to security. A few years ago after a string of attacks by the campus pond, the bushes between Metawampee Lawn and the pond were trimmed back significantly. Another result of the walks is increased lighting in areas of campus that were once dark.

"Student safety is very important to the SGA and to Public Safety," said SGA president Dave Carr.

Carr said past walks have been effective in identifying problem areas on campus and solving them. According to Carr, student input on these walks is regarded very highly by administration and that the problems are usually solved within the semester. Carr hopes the event tonight will be well attended.

- Jamie Loo

FBI questioning of professor challenged

ESTHER DAVIS/COLLEGIAN

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PROFESSOR ROBERT WOLFF, CENTER, LEADS A MEETING IN MACHMER YESTERDAY DISCUSSING THE QUESTIONING OF UMASS PROFESSOR MUSADDAK ALHABEEB BY THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION.

By Bridget Henry
Collegian Staff

Concerned members of the Five College Community met at the University of Massachusetts yesterday to discuss the recent FBI questioning of UMass Associate Professor Musaddak J. Alhabeeb.

Alhabeeb, who teaches resource economics and specializes in the area of financial planning for low-income families, was questioned by an FBI agent accompanied by UMass Police Detective Barry Flanders last month. Sociology Professor Dan Clawson organized the meeting (via an e-mail sent to faculty members) to discuss the threat of UMass faculty being wrongfully interrogated.

Clawson said in the e-mail that the FBI believed Alhabeeb opposed the policies of the Bush administration as a result of a tip from a member of Amherst Community Television (ACTV). Alhabeeb is a member of the ACTV board of directors, which, according to an article published by the Daily Hampshire Gazette, was involved in a controversy involving staff changes this summer.

Alhabeeb said that he thought the complaint stemmed from some of those hard feelings. The officers asked Alhabeeb a couple of questions and stayed no longer than five minutes. He acknowledged to them that he opposed a war in Iraq but denied having any intention of acting against the U.S. government, stating also that they left him with the impression he was under no further suspicion.

Alhabeeb, believed that his ethnicity contributed to his being questioned. However, he was also adamant that the police were just doing their job and that the incident did not bother him.

"It was a very simple incident, very common... I hate to see the story snowball," Alhabeeb said.

The meeting was held in the Sociology Department Conference Room in Machmer Hall. While there were approximately 75 people in attendance, the group was comprised mainly of UMass Faculty and Graduate Students, concerned Northampton and Amherst residents, and Hampshire and Smith College students.

Facilitator Mark Brenner, Assistant Research Professor for the Political Economics Research Institute, recounted the facts that were known at the time then opened the meeting up to anyone who wished to obtain or share information concerning the issue. Clawson was not present until the end of the meeting because he was interviewing UMass Police Chief Barbara O'Connor.

Participants speculated that it was Alhabeeb's Iraqi background that sparked the interrogation. A member of the Consumer Studies Department and colleague of Alhabeeb said that he had never spoke about his political beliefs in the ten years she had known him, adding that he was "quiet and reserved".

An ACTV representative concurred, saying, "Alhabeeb doesn't speak out about his views at all, therefore there must be another reason that led the FBI to target him."

One concerned individual raised the question that the FBI could be targeting people for their ethnic background and nationality, adding that she had heard things about citizens of Middle Eastern decent having to register with law officials and have their fingerprints taken.

"Since September 11, 2001, the US government has been doing basically whatever the hell it wants without the consent of the people," said Sonny Suchdev, of the Office of ALANA Affairs said.

Yaju Dharmarajah, Union organizer of Service Employees International Union Local 509, recounted an incident in which Federal Emergency Management officials came to his residence and asked him plain out if he was a terrorist.

Brenner responded, saying, "Clearly there is something going on that is broader than this incident."

Afro-American Studies Professor Emeritus Robert Wolfe said. "It's very important that we react very powerfully. A very strong reaction from faculty to the new chancellor might encourage him to take actions now that he might not take in two years."

When Clawson arrived, he shared what he had learned in the interview with O'Connor. He said she had confirmed that Campus Police was asked by the FBI to provide a liaison to the FBI task force. O'Connor also confirmed that Officer Flanders works for the FBI while being paid by the University.

According to Clawson, O'Connor did not have the necessary security clearance to know what Flanders was doing while working with the FBI but was very cooperative regarding information she could disclose. Clawson also mentioned that O'Connor had no jurisdiction over Flanders when he is working with the task force.

Participants in the meeting speculated what this could mean for the students and faculty at the University. One individual suggested that under the Patriotism Act and possibly the Homeland Security Bill, liaisons like Flanders could wiretap students and faculty members.

"The University has no jurisdiction over the FBI and that poses a great risk to our faculty," she said.

The statement struck a chord of agreement with the other participants and with Clawson.

COURTESY OF MUSADDAK ALHABEEB

MUSADDAK ALHABEEB

In his email, Clawson said, "Freedom of speech and freedom of inquiry are core principles of a free university. Police and FBI investigation of those with dissenting views threatens the integrity of the university and of the U.S. Bill of Rights."

Participants spent the remainder of the meeting discussing surveillance issues. Jules Chemetzky, English Professor Emeritus encouraged people

Turn to FBI, page 3

Bush waiting for clear violations

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) – The Bush administration is waiting for a clear pattern of violations by Iraq before pursuing a showdown in the United Nations, even as allied warplanes come under repeated attack.

Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld called Iraq's no-fly-zone firing unacceptable. But he also said Monday, "It's up to the president and the U.N. Security Council on their view of Iraq's behavior over a period of time, and those discussions have just begun."

White House deputy spokesman Scott McClellan condemned the Iraqi attacks – at least four in the past few days – as "a violation that would constitute a material breach" of the resolution adopted unanimously by the council Nov. 8 to force Iraq to disarm.

But McClellan, like Rumsfeld, indicated the administration was not taking its complaint to the council, which threatened Iraq with consequences in the event of breaches of U.N. resolutions.

"We have that option," the spokesman said, indicating that a decision had not been made by President Bush. The president repeatedly has threatened President Saddam Hussein with war if he reneges on his assurance that he will comply with U.N. orders to get rid of weapons of mass destruction.

By holding off, the administration defers a potential confrontation with U.S. allies. They were reluctant in the first place to threaten Iraq with force if it did not admit international inspectors and disarm, and they are still disinclined to attack Baghdad.

It also gives the United States and Britain new opportunities to respond to attacks on patrolling aircraft by bombing Iraqi installations.

The United Nations has kept at arm's length from the overflights, which began over northern Iraq after the 1991 Persian Gulf War to protect Kurds and later over southern Iraq to shield the Shiites there.

The U.N. position is that the United States and Britain, not the world organization, made the decision to ban Iraqi warplanes from the areas and to enforce it by patrolling the no-fly zones.

But the U.N. Security Council has committed itself to the search for hidden chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs. Chief U.N. inspector Hans Blix and Mohamed ElBaradei of the International Atomic Energy Agency arrived Monday in Baghdad with technical experts to lay the groundwork for inspections that are to begin a week from Wednesday.

Iraq has until Dec. 8 to provide inspectors and the Security Council with a complete list of all parts of chemical, biological and nuclear weapons programs.

Any Iraqi resistance could produce an instant showdown, but Rumsfeld has said that while it was unacceptable for Iraq to fire at U.S. and British warplanes in the no-fly zones, a 27-member advance delegation that arrived Monday, said his inspection team will conduct a professional and efficient job in Iraq.

SAFA SAWALLA/ASSOCIATED PRESS

HANS BLIX, U.N. CHIEF INSPECTOR, RIGHT, AND MOHAMMED EL BARADEI, HEAD OF THE INTERNATIONAL ATOMIC ENERGY AGENCY, LEFT, WALKS PAST PORTRAITS OF IRAQI PRESIDENT SADDAM HUSSEIN IN BAGHDAD YESTERDAY. BLIX, WHO IS HEADING A 27-MEMBER ADVANCE DELEGATION THAT ARRIVED MONDAY, SAID HIS INSPECTION TEAM WILL CONDUCT A PROFESSIONAL AND EFFICIENT JOB IN IRAQ.

Police log highlighted by huge drug bust

Tuesday Nov. 12, 2002

Wednesday Nov. 13

Thursday Nov. 14

Friday Nov. 15

Saturday Nov. 16

reported in Dwight Dormitory on Eastman Lane. An ambulance was dispatched and transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

12:31 p.m. James Moore was arrested in Dickinson Hall on Hicks Way for a rape that occurred on Sept. 29-Oct. 2 at a Southwest residence hall.

2:09 p.m. A laptop computer was reported found in a trashcan near the Physical Plant Building on Campus Center Way. The caller was advised to bring the laptop to UMPD so it could be determined if the laptop was previously stolen.

2:20 p.m. A report of fraudulent credit card use was reported from Mackimmie Dormitory on Sunset Avenue.

3:24 p.m. Chung Yin Lo, 22, of 15 Beach St., Boston, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue for an outstanding warrant.

7:03 a.m. A traffic stop on Massachusetts Avenue resulted in the arrest of Erik I. Diamond, 20, of 61 East 3rd St. in Brooklyn, NY. Diamond was charged with speeding, possession of a firearm, and operating under the influence of alcohol.

10:12 a.m. PO Alice stopped a speeding car on Campus Center Way resulting in the arrest of Shahzad Sadozai, 22, of 8 Chartwell Cir. in Shrewsbury, Mass. Sadozai was charged with operating with a revoked license and speeding.

12:56 p.m. A caller reported that his parked her vehicle in Lot 12 on Lincoln Way at around 9 a.m. When she came back, the driver's side window was smashed and the CD player was taken.

1:05 p.m. Police arrested Yuta Nakamura, 22, of 1040 N. Pleasant St. in Amherst on an outstanding warrant while he was in the Whitmore Administration Building on Presidents Drive.

1:44 p.m. Vandalism was reported to four cars in Lot 22 on University Drive. All four vehicles had a window smashed out with damage to the center console and the stereo stolen.

5:16 p.m. A subject was reported waving a cane around like it was a sword in the Campus Center. The responding officer reported that the subject will be leaving campus.

8:56 p.m. A caller reported that fog lights and a gas can were taken from his vehicle in the past week while it was parked in Lot 44 on Sylvan Drive.

11:52 p.m. A caller reported that a male was assaulted and robbed by three other males in Washington Dormitory on Fearing Street. The officer on the scene requested for an ambulance for the victim who was struck in the head with a beer bottle. The victim was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital. The suspect, Anthony Giallarise, 21, of 27 1st Avenue in East Islip, New York, refused medical treatment and was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and with unarmed robbery.

1:45 a.m. A disturbance was reported in Lincoln Apartments on Lincoln Avenue. An officer reported that he will be out with a male and female having an argument.

2:01 a.m. Police responded to drug law offenses in Moore Dormitory on Southwest Circle. Thomas John Olson, 19, of 112 Thatcher Rd. in Rockport, Mass. and Rory David Higgins, 18, of 6 Hodgkins St. in Gloucester, Mass. were arrested and charged with possession of a class D substance, marijuana.

VARIOUS DRUG PARAPHERNALIA, $24,000 IN CASH, A STOLEN LAPTOP AND A LARGE QUANTITY OF MARIJUANA WERE CONFISCATED FROM A DORMITORY ROOM IN LUDDINGTON LAST WEEK.

DANIEL P. LOOMIS/COLLEGIAN

2:10 a.m. A vending machine was reported smashed in Cance Dormitory on Fearing Street. An RA reported that she contacted Emergency Housing because there was plastic all over the floor.

3:21 a.m. Amherst Police forwarded a report of a suspicious person near the Fine Arts Center on Presidents Drive. APD reported that a caller stated seeing an individual dressed up like Spiderman. UMass police responded and sent Spiderman on his way.

4:13 a.m. Officers investigated a broken window in John Quincy Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street with blood around it. Emergency Housing was sent to the location. The officer reported that he will be heading to University Microfilm International to check on the residents. A resident stated that his roommate fell into the window.

9:08 a.m. Vandalism was reported to a car in Lot 32 E. on Massachusetts Avenue. Damage to the passenger side window, passenger side mirror, drivers side mirror and antenna were reported. Four traffic cones were found in between several nearby parked cars.

2:20 p.m. An RA in Brown Dormitory on Eastman Lane reported an assault and battery. The victim was in the cluster office at the time of the call.

Turn to POLICE LOG, page 3

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew E. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

GET PAID TO GO TO SCHOOL.
TALK ABOUT
ROLE REVERSAL.

The U.S. Air Force will pay for you to continue your education while you serve your country as a nurse. Through selection into the Air Force Institute of Technology program, you could earn your advanced degree in as little as two years and get paid to do it. You'll be part of an elite team of medical professionals who have chosen to serve their country in this proud institution. To learn more about Air Force Nursing, please visit airforce.com or call 1.800.423.USAF to request more information.

U.S. AIR FORCE
CROSS INTO THE BLUE

MAJOR JUNIOR
WEAR LABEL
WAREHOUSE SALE
Ladies and Men's
30-75% off
original mall store price
3 DAYS ONLY
WARE
NOBODY'S PERFECT
WAREHOU
WAREHOUSE SALE
Monday 11/18
9-9
Tuesday 11/19
9-9
Wednesday 11/20
9-9
Thursday 11/21
9-5
UMass Campus Center Auditorium
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday 9-9
WAREHOUSE SALE

Sorority celebrates anniversary

Sigma Gamma Rho chapter observes Founders Week 2002

By Rahwa Asmerom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A weeklong observance of the eightieth anniversary of the foundation of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Incorporated ended last Saturday.

Founders Week 2002: Faith in Our Future included a variety of events that highlighted the organization's elements and accomplishments.

"Each chapter of the organization sponsors two weeks of events, one in the fall and one in the spring," said Shauna Rigaud, a senior African American Studies and STPEC major and the vice president of the Northeast Region Chapter.

"We hold events throughout the semester and this is a culmination of them which is centered around the week of November 12," Rigaud said.

The significance of the day, according to Rigaud, is that it was organization's anniversary. Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority was founded on November 12, 1922 at Butler University in Indianapolis, Indiana.

"We are the youngest of the first historically Black sororities and we are the only sorority in the Divine Nine to be founded on a predominantly white campus," said Rigaud. Divine Nine, she explained, is the term used to distinguish the nine historically Black Greek organizations.

The celebration kicked off on Tuesday, November 12, with "Cake on the Concourse", where passersby were invited to celebrate the anniversary with a slice of cake as well as information about the organization's programs.

Night of Rhoyalty – A Celebration of Our Youth, was held on Thursday night, November 14, at the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

"This is the second annual Night of Rhoyalty, last year we dedicated it to women and this year it's dedicated to our youth," said Ajara Bomah, UMass student and president of the Northeast Region chapter of the sorority.

The night opened with a singing of the Black National Anthem, "Lift Every Voice" by Rigaud. Community grace was said and food was served.

"People are sick of the DC food and it's not everyone that gets to eat a home cooked meal," Rigaud said. "Not only was it a good dinner, it was also a fellowship where people got to meet new people and socialize."

After dinner, Bomah stated the focus of the organization and its concentration on the youth.

"Our national program focuses on young people, young women and education," Bomah said.

Amanda Cumberbatch, a graduate student in the Social Justice program, was guest speaker for the night. Cumberbatch shared hardships that she faced after coming to UMass at the age of 16 while having two children in school.

"There were times where I hated myself for putting myself through it," she said.

"I had goals for myself and was career oriented. I did it for myself. I did it for my family, and most importantly I did it for my kids," Cumberbatch said.

She had five tenets to achieving goals: finding a good mentor, staying focused, being realistic, challenging oneself and being spiritually grounded.

Her speech was followed by a reading of an original, untitled poem by Astariea Martin, sophomore Journalism major.

A youth step team from the Springfield area named Pretty Smooth Incorporated also made an appearance at the event. The members are from a number of different high schools in Springfield who work with the Kappa League, which is a high school auxiliary group under Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity Incorporated, Rigaud said.

The coordinator of the group, Benjamin Smith, explained that the group was a pre-collegiate program that encouraged education.

"All our members must maintain a 2.5 GPA and we have a record of 100% of our graduates going on to college," Smith said.

Their performance included a set of strolls and steps that received a standing ovation at its conclusion.

Amherst College musical duo T&P also made an appearance, followed by an open mic session where students shared poetry and other creative works.

A fundraising party at the Malcolm X Cultural Center concluded the week, with proceeds benefiting Project Reassurance.

Project Reassurance, Rigaud explained, is a national mission that has come to this campus for the first time since its establishment in 1974.

"We have focused it on a more local level to work on a smaller scale," said Rigaud, giving examples where the organization works with local hospitals, March of Dimes and other support agencies to educate teen mothers about prenatal care and other necessities.

"With the proceeds that we get, we will put together gift bags for young mothers in which we will include baby bottles, pacifiers, clothes and other small things to show a gesture of support."

The bags will be distributed to a support group in Northampton.

■ police log

continued from page 2

An officer was dispatched and took the victim to the station to fill out a report.

10:29 p.m.: Death threats were reported to be made to a student in Grayson Dormitory on Orchard Hill Drive. The incident is under investigation.

11:53 p.m.: A domestic disturbance was reported in Lot 32 W on Massachusetts Avenue. Police arrested Ryan J. Sweeney, 19, of 118A George St. in Medford, Mass., and charged him with assault and battery.

Sunday Nov. 17

3:10 a.m.: Police responded to a report that someone had slashed tires on three vehicles near John Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street.

3:30 a.m.: An intoxicated person near the Malcolm X Center on Southwest Circle was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

4:04 a.m.: A caller reported that four students took the soda machine from Cance Dormitory on Fearing Street. The responding officer stated that the machine was put back.

10:44 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported to in Butterfield Dormitory on Clark Hill Road. AFD transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Compiled by Dan Lamothe

■ FBI

continued from page 1

MARK BRENNER, ASSISTANT RESEARCH PROFESSOR FOR THE POLITICAL ECONOMY RESEARCH INSTITUTE, EXPLAINS WHAT HAPPENED TO UMASS PROFESSOR MOHAMMAD ALHABBEB LAST MONTH.

to never speak to the FBI without a third party present taking notes, in light of his own past experience with accusatory interrogation during the McCarthy era.

Another individual worried that restraints placed on the FBI in the seventies concerning campus monitoring were being lifted now.

"Even now, someone in this room is an informant for the FBI," he said.

Hill Boss, a member of Town of Amherst Human Rights Commission, said, "For a lot of us this isn't a minor issue…it is a threat to freedom and civil liberties here in town and on campus."

Graduate student Vanessa Adel, "I feel very threatened as both an individual and citizen of the United States. The level of increased surveillance and the way in which fear is being used to justify that surveillance and repression makes me fearful for this country and the world."

When the meeting adjourned, participants resolved to focus on gathering and disseminating information, as well as establishing support with both constituents and the administration. Everyone agreed that a united faculty, union, and town response was necessary.

"UMass is located in Amherst," said Political Science Professor Jerry Milleur. "Even though it is separate from the town, it still threatens the Amherst community when things like this happen."

Clawson said, "I don't believe the FBI belongs on campus. I am opposed to the questioning of people regarding their political views under any circumstances, but especially if University staff are involved."

Graduate student Uri Strauss agreed, saying, "Given the history of FBI involvement in undermining democratic movement, including student movements, the fact that they're set up on a college campus is deeply disturbing. The UMass community shouldn't tolerate it."

On the Net: www.gazettenet.com

NEWS HAS A NEW EMAIL ADDRESS...

Send releases, comments, tips and feedback to:

news@dailycollegian.com

www.dailycollegian.com

BARBADOS
SPRING BREAK '03
ARE YOUR READY?
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

WE WANT YOU!

LOOKING TO BUILD YOUR RESUME?

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is looking for highly motivated individuals to work as sales representatives in the advertising department. Applicants must possess strong organizational, interpersonal, and communication skills. Come by Campus Center Room 113 to request an application today!

Peer Health Education

WHAT WOULD TICK YOU OFF?
GETTING DRUNK AND...

❒ A. Having a friend pee on your floor.
❒ B. Waking up to someone you don't know.
❒ C. Getting the scoop from your friends about what you did last night.

Get Involved
Make a Difference
Earn 6 credits

Take Com HL 213, Peer Health Education, a 2-semester course that proactively addresses public health issues at Umass.
Call the Health Education Department during pre-registration at 577-5181 to make an appointment to discuss enrollment with instructor.

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888

*Save $350 Off
Move-In Costs
Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments
FREE HEAT & HOT WATER
Fully applianced kitchens
Washers/dryers available
Pool, volleyball, basketball
Minutes from Umass-On free busline
Call Sugarloaf Estates today!
413-665-3856
Visit us at sugarloafestates.com
*limited time offer

Wireless Choices
Any of these phones FREE with $39.99 plan
Sony Ericsson T66LX
Nokia 1260
Panasonic EB-TX320
OR
Get a big discount on "Any phone" if you open a one year account
$29.99 plan with $30 discount
$39.99 plan with $50 discount
$49.99 plan with $65 discount
$59.99 plan with $85 discount
$80 + plan with $110 discount
AT&T offers unlimited nights & weekends.
Nextel offers unlimited direct connect.
65 University Drive, Unit #4 Amherst, MA 01002
(right next to the HangarPub)
Phone 549-2075
Fax 549-4315
AT&T Wireless NEXTEL

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

The war on terror:

Undefined and unending

Analysts have concluded with near to absolute certainty that an audiotape purported to contain the voice of Osama Bin Laden is genuine.

The tape was played last week on Al-Jazeera, the broadcast company based out of Qatar on the Saudi peninsula. The tape contains Bin Laden's voice, said intelligence officials, describing and applauding recent terrorist attacks, including a bombing in Bali that has been linked to the Al Qaeda terrorist group Bin Laden heads.

The recent attacks he speaks of on the tape serve as evidence that Bin Laden is still alive and still operating from some undisclosed location, intelligence officials report. They further counter notions that the tape has been altered, and are accepting the tape as solid proof of Bin Laden's survival.

But, where does this place the war on terror, the war to end terrorism in the world? After Sept. 11 the United States mounted a full-scale war to end terrorism in the world, with Al Qaeda and Bin Laden as the primary targets and Afghanistan as the playing field.

Over a year later, the primary target has been flushed out, and mingled back in. Bin Laden has been reported as injured, dead and then alive again. The war has dipped in and out of headlines, and has dropped from front pages for weeks at a time.

So where is the war on terrorism, this quashing attack on all things evil? Bush set himself a lofty goal. As former Vice President Al Gore told David Letterman in an appearance this past Friday, Bush said from the start that he had a goal of getting Bin Laden. Gore added that the challenge of locating one man among, conceivably, the over six billion inhabiting the globe is daunting.

This may be the problem. Wars with undefined targets are by that description alone, challenging to execute.

Beyond the search for one man, the war on terror has many other blanks still waiting to be filled in.

Does Saddam Hussein fit the description of a global threat, a terrorist?

A military-driven, angry man? Yes. Hate-filled and ruthless? Also true. But the man has been put in a position of power by some corrupt form of government; he may have terrorized people, his own citizenry, and may continue to do so.

But the squabble we are rearing up for with Hussein and Iraq seems to be missing many of the same attributes of the war against the Al Qaeda network.

There have been no U.S.S. Cole-type incidents, no World Trade Center attacks, no Bali bombings coming from Saddam. There are threats against other countries – the United States and Israel on the top of the list – but these are inter-governmental. It seems to be essentially different from a terrorist-country threat or attack.

So should Saddam be on the top of our list? Should we be waging a new war with another left unfinished? Where do we draw the line when defining an "axis of evil?" Does a hostile nation qualify itself as a terrorist, and are violent acts from a country the same as violent acts from a group of "civilians?"

Unsigned editorials are the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Blind dates: Not all they're cracked up to be

COURTNEY CHARLES

When I was in high school, I used to get butterflies just looking at the guys I had crushes on. And if I had a date with one of them, forget it. I'd be so nervous I wouldn't be able to eat for a week.

But then I grew up. I stopped getting that magical tingle in anticipation of a first date. I've gone on so many now, I don't even really care. Occasionally I even go on a blind date, although you would think I would I have quit that scene after the first few, well, sucked.

I think most of us have endured a blind date or two. I threw myself into a blind date this past Friday. This guy, we'll call him Alf, said he was really attractive to girls. He said he was 5'8". So, trying not to be my usual cynical self, I went all out with my red leather coat and the most stylish shirt I have.

Being a bit nervous, I asked my blonde roommate to answer the door. I told him that I'm a brunette, but I guess he was just confused. When she opened the door Alf just said "nice to meet you," and stared at her chest.

All my roommate said was "I'll get her."

Alf did not look like the way he described himself as. He was not 5'8"

"You probably thought I would be taller," he said. I'm a short one, and in my one-inch heels he was pushing it.

But okay, I can deal with that.

We go to see 8 Mile thinking, "thank God I was at least able to salvage this night by seeing Eminem on the big screen").

The guy on the other side of my date missed the big "love" scene and returned at the end. Alf leans over to this complete stranger and says, "Hey man, you missed the best part."

I think right then I should have left and called a cab. But for some unknown and unfortunate reason I decided to stay. Never again.

We go to get some coffee after the show. We pull into the Dunkin' Donuts parking lot and he turns to me, "I don't have any cash," Alf says. Well, I didn't either, so we sat in the parking lot for 10 minutes. I don't expect the guy to always pay. It isn't the '50s anymore or anything. But he could have asked me if I didn't mind throwing in some money ahead of time.

Knowing that my apartment would not be empty, I bravely said that we could go there. Some of my neighbors were having a party, so I dragged Alf over. I mean, he had given me the impression he was the partying type.

That too, was also false. I ended up babysitting Alf. I introduced him to the people I knew. Then suddenly, one of the most mortifying moments I have lived through occurred.

Alf starts saying that he wants to hear some 'tunes' and approaches my neighbor.

"Yo Kyle, let me be d.j." he says. Then he looks at me. "Hey Courtney, freestyle!" he shouts at me, and proceeds to make a beat with his hands and mouth.

I froze. I mean, what the hell do you do in a situation like that? I've never even imagined a scenario so frightening. But honestly, who could?

I don't know if he was inspired by Eminem in the movie, but he wasn't even close to those skills.

I tried to get him to shut up. Ok, I begged him. Finally he did, but I don't know if the damage had already been done.

"Did I embarrass you?" Alf asks me.

"Uh, only a little bit more than a lot." I reply. So then he goes to leave. I try to tell him not to, but it was really half-assed. He takes two steps and comes back.

"I'm not going to leave you that easily," he says.

Oh God, does the hell and torture never end?

Did I kill Zeus' favorite cow in a past life? I mean, seriously, what did I do to deserve this?

So I painfully try to be polite and pray that this ordeal ends soon.

He starts telling me jokes. Not just lame jokes. These are really offensive and lame jokes. He sees I'm wearing a cross, so he starts in with the Catholic priest business. That was just incredibly tasteless.

Then the racist jokes start. I tell him I'm not racist. So Alf tells me that neither is he.

"That's why they're so funny," he says.

This was about the time I decided I could endure it no longer. I'll admit it, I did a bad thing. I faked being sick and said I needed to go back to my place to have my roommates take care of me.

I run into the bathroom before he can get his coat. My roommates play along. They know what I'm up to.

After about 20 minutes have passed, I go back to the party and have a much better time.

I don't know why I feel the need to go out with people when sometimes I would have a much better time flying solo.

"Did I kill Zeus' favorite cow in a past life? I mean, seriously, what did I do to deserve this."

I think I learned my lesson, finally, about blind dates: Don't do them. This should be one of the cardinal rules of dating.

After this disturbing episode occurred, I talked to a friend about her most awful blind date. Her date lied about having athletic prowess.

She also chose the route of faking being sick. She waited until they had been watching their rented movie 10 minutes, then she faked the return of a previous (and real) episode of food poisoning.

So why do people go on blind dates? I really don't know. What I do know, or think I know, is that nothing compares to dating someone that you know as a real person, and not just a voice on the phone, or on the Internet.

Courtney Charles is a Collegian Columnist.

Homeland under surveillance

DANIEL BARRETT

Misdirection. It remains one of the principal methods employed in both magic and politics. Since the September 11th attacks left us feeling vulnerable and insecure, a parade of menacing enemies has never ceased.

From Osama b. Laden, to Al-Qaeda, to the Taliban, to Saddam Hussein, we are beseiged in the media by enemies from overseas, intent on destroying our American liberty and way of life. As dangerous as these foes may be, by focusing our attentions on foreign powers we have ignored the fact that the most potent enemy of American liberties is not overseas at all: it is in our very midst.

The Homeland Security Act includes a provision which would allow the Total Information Office, directed by former Reagan Administration official John Poindexter, to build an unprecedented large electronic information dragnet to monitor personal information in the search for terrorists, not only in foreign countries, but in the United States as well.

This means that, on top of what the government already knows about you (anything on your passport application, driver's license, judicial records, hidden camera records, etc.), it will now have access to information on anything you buy with a credit card, any email you send or receive, any Web site you visit, any grade you've ever received, any medical prescription you are given, every magazine you subscribe to and any concert, speech, or other event you attend. All this can be accessed without a warrant.

It's called "Total Information Awareness," and it is a reality.

The cause of catching terrorists is a noble one, and no one would argue that the United States should not take steps to defend itself. But are we in so much danger that we must become a surveillance state just to survive? And will this "Total Information Awareness" really help end the threat of terrorism?

The answer is no. For one, terrorists will quickly develop methods of escaping detection from these new measures. A terrorist buying weapons and explosives will not be using their Visa card at the local K-Mart. They will not be sending each other emails that will obviously mark them as terrorists. If there are secret cells of terrorists hiding in the U.S. right now, avoiding detection is not a new or unfamiliar occupation for them.

That terrorists will find ways to avoid detection is not the most pressing concern, however. The real problem is the potential for abuse of this system once it is in effect. "Once you've got it in place you can't control it," as Barbara Simon, a computer scientist and former president of the Association of Computing Machinery, put it. That this kind of far-reaching, all-consuming database has a high potential for misuse, in this administration or in a future one, is easy to see.

Even the leadership behind the Total Information Office is suspect. Poindexter, the man in charge, was found guilty in 1990 on five counts of felony in the Iran-Contra affair. The decision was reversed in 1991 because the government granted him immunity for his testimony. As if a track record of felony wasn't enough, Poindexter has also served as a contractor on one of the projects he now controls.

The Total Information Awareness provision of the Homeland Security Act will, quite simply, turn the United States into a surveillance state. The government will be able to invade your privacy and monitor what you do with no just cause, with no warrant, and with no restrictions. From who you email to what books you buy, all of it will be fair game. It is time to decide what America is really all about. Are we so afraid, of terrorists, of Saddam Hussein, of each other, that we are willing to sacrifice everything we believe in for an unattainable sense of perfect safety? Or will we take a deep breath and realize that, in the process of trying to protect freedom, all we're doing is destroying it?

Daniel Barrett is a UMass student.

Send us your opinions! Bring your column submissions to our office in the Campus Center Basement or e-mail us at editorial@dailycollegian.com.

Letter to the Editor:

To the Editor:

The articles your paper writes do not begin to do justice to how completely awful the new SPIRE system is. It is in fact a complete failure from any user perspective, and the authors of this system should seriously consider a career change. The entire campus community who has had the misfortune of having to use SPIRE will probably help them.

I write this as I wait the usual 1.5 to 2 minutes for each and every 'page load' that has to occur on the SPIRE system. Not only are the page loads slow, you are forced to do a LOT of them. I used to enjoy perusing my various class choices....no more! Now I must have a definite class in mind for every class I want to take, or spend 6 hours on searches finding what is available in my open time slots. It is no longer possible, it seems, to browse through large numbers of course offerings at a glance. But of course, all students know in advance all classes and sections that they want to take, right?

My experience to date: I am a comp sci major, but the user interface of SPIRE is so poor I had to get assistance from the help desk over one issue. Then I spent an hour loading up 3 classes I knew I had to take....at which point the system locked up, and would not go backwards, forwards, let me log out, or save my information. Now I am starting over.

While I was enjoying myself so thoroughly staring at not yet loaded pages this afternoon as you can imagine waste of time, I found one very amusing bug in the system. It seems that sometimes when you initiate a search, the subject area for computer science comes up as "cmp-sci". When this happens (1/2 the time) none of the course numbers you put with cmp-sci will come up. You see, cmp-sci is not the real name of my academic discipline. But approximately _ the time, the drop-down menu does have the real name – cmpsci. When this one appears, I can find all of my classes.

What joy!

While waiting for these interminable delays, time wasters, and uploads, I considered how much UMass student time is being spent on SPIRE that would not be spent on the phone registration system. Allowing 2.5 hours versus 10 minutes times 25000 students, we have spent millions of dollars and are paying higher tuition so we can more effectively waste 7,135 YEARS of student time. Good deal ay? And that's just this semester....

Bottom line folks: any manager worth their salt would not have let a system this bad get out into public use. It should not have been implemented now, or ever if the bugs could not be fixed.

Megan W. Flint
UMass Student

Exploring the, like, nuances of vernacular

ALLISON LESHEFSKY

Hey, like, today is about like, um, you know, the media. We are all aware of the corruptness surrounding our modern yet peculiar word. It is used in our classrooms, at our dining halls, at our frat houses and classrooms. We are all guilty of speaking it at one point or another, if not often.

I am not asking for a confession. I feel there is enough. It seems that as speakers of like, we are often criticized and ridiculed. David Malatesta, author of "Like in Conversational Discourse: A Versatile Device" says, "[Like] should not be considered as a throwaway word reflecting the ignorance of the speaker." This grammatically incorrect, yet frequently spoken word is worthy of a place within conversational English.

There are boundless uses of like within our everyday conversation. It can be used to present new information. I'll put this on like...my credit card. The new information follows the word like, and is preceded by a brief pause. As the focus of the statement, identifying the most significant information in a sentence, I don't understand why they would like, cut the UMass budget.

To mark the focus in questions: Is this the right way to like, the Campus Center? To introduce an unusual notion or situation:

Q: What is the pamphlet about?

A: Like, ending the war in Iraq.

And to introduce a quote: He was like, "Damn, that girl is hot!" The possibilities are endless. It is neither random nor aimless, but rather a coordinated and systemized item that occurs frequently in conversations. Non-standard use of the word like is more commonly seen in adults between the ages of 18 and 30.

These uses of like are often heard and suggest that they are well-suited for conversation. "Like" fits into the same category as other words such as, "you know" and "uh." Words and phrases such as these are frequently used in situations in which the speaker has to formulate what he/she wants to say without having sufficient time to prepare as they do when communicating their thoughts in writing.

Like is used as a weapon for battling the ongoing pressures of conversational discourse. It can be used as a space filler to give time for the speaker to properly formulate his/her thoughts. Also, by saying that what follows will be like what the speaker has in mind, the speaker is suggesting that some thought may be difficult to formulate or hard to express. Like can be a way of asking the listener to listen attentively to what is being said.

Author George Orwell's coining of the term "Newspeak" was a passionate statement of his belief in the power of language. Although this term was mainly used in the political context, his message focused around the sacred use of language. The speaking of "Newspeak" today, would be to deliberately use words that are ambiguous or deceptive in order to control and manipulate public opinion.

Orwell was aware that if language became too abstract, or too vague, then it would lose its ability to convey meaning. If like were to be classified as "Newspeak", then the reason it would work, according to Orwell, is because we as human beings are adept to making meaning from very little. Regardless of its classification or lack thereof, like does have meaning and purpose within conversational English.

"Such a conversational use of like does not lend itself well to a static entry in a dictionary but can be an effective tool used to construct dialogue and consequently make a narration more lively. Like does have a very clearly-defined place in conversation," said Malatesta.

So the next time anybody gives you, like... a hard time about...like, you know, like, then tell them to like... get a life, you know?

Allison Leshefsky is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

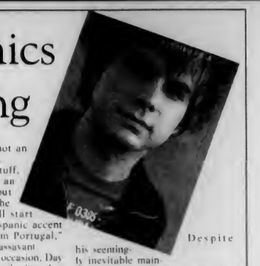
ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.19.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Day fills Newbury Comics with acoustic storytelling

By Lizzy Nielsen
Collegian Staff

On Saturday afternoon, Howie Day took a breather from his busy touring endeavors with woman-angst empress Tori Amos to perform an acoustic set at Newbury Comics.

Day has been on the road promoting the re-release of his album Australia, and has made in-store performances and CD signings a part of his hectic touring schedule. He also received two Boston Music Awards for Best Debut album and Best Male Vocalist recently.



At the tender age of 21, Day writes, plays and performs with the maturity of someone beyond his years. He recently made the jump from the regional to the national circuit when he signed with Epic Records.

The narrow aisles of Newbury Comics were packed with eager fans at noon, one hour before Day was scheduled to perform. Most of the fans in the room clutched copies of Australia and the limited edition lithographs being distributed with each purchase of the album. Sungs from the album were being played over the store's sound system.

Day performed for roughly one half hour. His set included much of his soft, low-key music. This may have helped to keep the crowd of over 80 people from knocking over stacks of CDs and other paraphernalia.

Day performed songs from Australia including "Sorry So Sorry" and "Ghost," and the unreleased track "Madrigal." Day serenaded the audience with his raspy voice – reminiscent of Goo Goo Dolls frontman John Rzeznik – but managed to incorporate a bit of humor in his performance. This is apparently not an uncommon occurrence.

"He says funny stuff, like talking in an Australian accent, but then you'll see him the next night and he'll start speaking with a Hispanic accent and saying he's from Portugal," said avid fan Jenny Cassavant.

On this particular occasion, Day decided to sing about the fact that it was snowing pretty steadily outside, and the audience responded with appreciative laughter.

Day has a bright future as a performer, following in the footsteps of friend John Mayer. Mayer used to open for Day on tour, and Mayer's album Room for Squares has since spawned two hit singles and experienced great commercial success.

Despite his seeming-ly inevitable mainstream success, Day has his feet on the ground. He stayed to sign material for everyone who braved the weather to see him and had a smile and a greeting for all his fans.

Day is performing with Tori Amos tonight at the Tsongas Arena in Lowell. Tickets are still available through Ticketmaster at www.ticketmaster.com.

COURTESY OF WWW.EPICRECORDS.COM

HOWIE DAY PERFORMED HIS ACOUSTIC MUSICAL ACT YESTERDAY AT NEWBURY COMICS IN AMHERST. DAY IS CURRENTLY ON TOUR WITH TORI AMOS AND WILL BE AT THE TSONGAS ARENA TONIGHT IN LOWELL.

Anatomic art

By Scott Enright
Collegian Staff

Anatomy: something every single human being can understand. We all have it. We all use it. Now we all can see it displayed at the grand opening of Peter Bonneau's exhibit in the Student Union Gallery today from 4 to 6 p.m.

Bonneau is a graduating senior receiving a Bachelor's degree in Fine Arts with a personal concentration in painting. For the past few years, he has been loyally active with art at the University of Massachusetts.

Studying the human body in a number of ways has allowed him to share his fascination in this exhibit. "From famous photographs and anatomical charts to live models and self portraits, the human body continues to fascinate me," says Bonneau in his artist's statement.

The exhibit is complex. Scrolls capturing the movement of an acrobatic female hang on the wall. As she springs backwards throughout the artistic timeline, her energy is shown moving with the phases her physical body has assumed.

A sculpted foot and hand stand erect next to each other on a counter in the room. The attention to detail placed into the tendons of the foot screams amazing. The edges of the fingers and toenails cry out to be groomed. Just around the corner, a full nude self-portrait defines the body of the artist on display.

His days of observing medical charts show themselves in one of his pieces hanging on another wall. Not only is it visually complex, it also is labeled, adding a scientific aspect to the artwork.

Some of his work is etched with profound poetry. The terminology he uses mixes with his artwork and captivates the attention of all in the room. The impressive complexity of his poetic sentence structure is broken up by his innate ability to throw humor into the serious contemplation one goes through when following the lines of his creativity.

His work almost shows the hours of blood and sweat he must have gone through to create a collection like this. Bonneau is humble when describing his work. It is clear he wants everyone to find something they like in it.

"I have tried to create a realistic yet emotional representa-

Turn to ART, page 6

Fosse packs FAC

By Christine Papuzidis
Collegian Staff

A black suit with only the whites of the shirt, cuffs, socks and white gloves were shown. This was the extent of the costumes except for those numbers that came from Broadway shows. Fosse was performed for one night only to a packed house this past Thursday night at the Fine Arts Center.

Fosse is a collaboration of numbers choreographed by the late, famous choreographer and showman Bob Fosse. Fosse includes some of his early to late works including film and Broadway shows such as Sweet Charity, Pippin, Damn Yankees, Pal Joey, Dance Me a Song, Chicago and so many more.

I have seen Fosse twice when it was on Broadway, so reviewing this show is hard because nothing matches up to anything that is performed on Broadway. Overall the show was amazing. Each and every number had it's own charisma to every dance step taken. The show had a dark mood because basically all of the dancers are clothed in black.

The show started out with Rodrick Covington on stage singing "Life is Just a Bowl of Cherries." He had such a pure and sweet voice that it sent shivers up and down my spine when he opened his mouth. He sung the majority of the songs presented in the show.

Out of every performance of Fosse I have seen, two specific numbers remain my favorites. "Mr. Bojangles," and Benny Goodman's "Sing Sing Sing." "Mr. Bojangles" is a story song about a character called Mr. Bojangles, and how the singer had met him in a jail cell. The singer proceeded to sing the story of their conversations. It is such a sweet, melodic, simple song. The way they set up the number was very simple yet had a deeper meaning. On the side of the stage stood the singer, on an angle to the audience, standing straight up and singing with a spotlight on him, arms hung at his side. Then in the center of the stage was the character of Mr. Bojangles with torn up clothes, hunched over, simply and slowly acting out the lyrics to the song. Always at an angle with Mr. Bojanges, was Mr. Bojangles "younger" self, who acted full out what the lyrics of the song were telling. The melody and the lyrics made me feel so touched and appreciative.

Benny Goodman's "Sing Sing Sing" is a pretty recognizable tune. There are two parts to the number; the first part included the whole cast of performers and the second part was more focused on individual strengths and talents. The number was incredibly high energy. It is such a fast tempo song with so much going on at once on the stage. Some of the orchestra – the drummer, trumpet player, and flute player – were actually on stage, on top of a high platform. The whole number was a visual masterpiece.

The show was filled with so many numbers; it is impossible to review all of them. Every piece was so much different from the first because of the show being a collaboration of choreography throughout a lifetime. One has to remember that Bob Fosse created his own style of dancing which is recreated in this production of Fosse.

Overall the production was visually, melodically, and choreographically was a masterwork within itself. It had an extremely talented cast, who were full of lasting energy and love for dancing, which is crucial in a show like this.

Schwarzenegger contemplates political role

By Erica Werner
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) - He has been a genetically engineered twin and a pregnant man, a barbarian and a spy, a kindergarten cop and a killer. Now some Republicans are casting Arnold Schwarzenegger as the next governor of California.

Fresh from the Election Day success of a $550 million education measure that he sponsored, the actor has become perhaps California's most promising GOP candidate – even though he is not yet running for anything.

"Arnold Schwarzenegger would do a tremendous amount to reinvigorate the party itself and the image of the party to most Californians," said Brian Todd of Bakersfield, a delegate to state party conventions.

The body-builder-turned-action-hero deflects questions about his political ambitions, but many Republicans expect – and hope – he will run for governor in four years.

The Austrian-born actor considered seeking the nomination against Democratic Gov. Gray Davis this past year. Supporters launched a "T2 in '02" movement, and T-shirts with the slogan were snapped up at the party convention in February. But Schwarzenegger decided not to run, citing his contract to film "Terminator 3," set for release next summer.

Instead, he drafted, funded and starred in TV commercials for Proposition 49, which dedicates as much as $550 million annually to before- and after-school programs. The measure passed by a wide margin earlier this month.

America's most successful actor-turned-politician, Ronald Reagan, blazed the trail a generation ago. Before becoming governor of California and then president, Reagan made the transition into politics as president of the Screen Actors' Guild and a spokesman for General Electric. Other celebrities who have switched to politics include former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood and Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura.

Schwarzenegger's name, wealth and potential to appeal to Democrats and moderates make him an attractive candidate in a state where Democrats outnumber Republicans 45 percent to 35 percent.

"It's pretty clear that right now Schwarzenegger is a strong early front-runner for the nomination," said GOP consultant Dan Schnur. "Proposition 49 was the first primary of the 2006 governor's race if Arnold Schwarzenegger wants it to be."

Schwarzenegger, 55, told The Associated Press: "To me it's a great honor to be considered for those kind of things. I think it's great people say, 'He's the ideal candidate' or 'He can win.' Obviously, it's much better if people say that than if they say the opposite. But I don't have a plan like that."

Blues fans no longer have to 'Wait for' Tedeschi

By Chris Flouton-Barnes
Collegian Correspondent

SUSAN TEDESCHI
Wait For Me
Tone-Cool Records

It has been four years since Susan Tedeschi burst forth from the Boston blues scene to take the country by storm on the strength of a devastating single and a gold-certified album. Since then she has been quite a busy woman, snagging a Grammy nomination, touring all over, and starting a family. But her fans were left wondering when they would ever hear a follow-up to 1998's Just Won't Burn. Well, Susan has given them her answer. "Easy, folks," she seems to say, "you just gotta wait for me!" The pinch paid off, and Susan's new album, released Tuesday by Wellesley label Tone-Cool, is worth the long wait.

With veteran producer Tom Dowd on board and heaps of talented musicians in full support, Wait For Me is a delight to the ears. Susan's heralded voice is heard in a variety of styles and tones, from the intimate shadings of "Wrapped in the Arms of Another" to the raw funk of "Hampnotized." In addition, Tedeschi steps it up a notch with ever-improving guitar work, holding down solid blues leads on tunes like "I'll I

Turn to TENDESCHI, page 6

COURTESY WWW.CDNOW.COM

SUSAN TEDESCHI USES HER MULTI-TALENTED VOICE TO BELT OUT A NUMBER OF TUNES ON HER NEW ALBUM.

COURTESY APOLLONIA.COM

Wait for Me, RELEASED FOUR YEARS AFTER 1998'S Just Won't Burn PROVES THAT TEDESCHI STILL HAS WHAT IT TAKES.

■ Tendeshi

continued from page 5

Found You" and "Hell to Love."

The album opens with "Alosie," featuring Tedeschi's mid-range vocals set against killer horn charts that just pop right out of the speakers. Hints of Willie Mitchell's old Hi sound are heard here, and the soul vibe continues with "Gonna Move," a Paul Penta composition featuring Tedeschi's husband and Allman Brothers guitarist Derek Trucks on guitar. Not including their young son Charles Kahlil, the best Tedeschi Trucks collaboration of session months may yet to be. The Rooftop Music Bringe probably it's favorite track on the album. Tedeschi launches into this gospel number with trademark phrasing and plenty of moxie, and Trucks adds a shimmering soulful slide guitar.

A full-throttle soulful jaunt, Wait for Me, single-lifted from a palette of love, long satisfied and unfulfilled and the pursuit of music, are out there. Tedeschi sings "I'll wait for me for your guide," and that is exactly the group's motto in both her personal and professional lives.

Tedeschi contributes songwriting credits to half a dozen selections and is joined by guests such as rock "n' roll architect Jonnie Johnson, Colonel Bruce Hampton, and New England mainstays Paul Rishell and Annie Raines.

Wait for Me showcases Tedeschi in the best of many lights, from straight-ahead blues, to slow burning ballads, to wrenching gospel turns. What I found most intriguing about this album compared to her previous efforts were the cuts that augmented Tedeschi's vocals with crisp horn arrangements and soul stylings. Whether this portends the direction of her future projects will only be determined by the passage of time. The present finds Tedeschi in fine form, however, exhibiting the technique, expressiveness, and emotion that make her one of the most powerful singers and persuasive artists on the contemporary scene. I hesitate to say the contemporary blues scene, for while Tedeschi cut her teeth on blues and gospel in Boston this recording show exactly why it is difficult to pigeon hole her in that category. Her continued maturation and development though, whatever form it takes will be a positive force for music, in general. And that appreciation of music's ability to eat across boundaries and categories is precisely one of the strongest messages found in Wait for Me.

Tedeshi Trucks Band's New Record Wait for Me

Eminem drops lines and lyrics

Film debut is success for hip-hop phenomenon

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

8 MILE
Directed by Curtis Hanson
Starring Eminem, Kim Basinger, Brittany Murphy and Mekhi Pfeiffer
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Say whatever you want to say about Eminem, this generation's leading pop provocateur, but there's no denying how fascinating the hip-hop star is in his coiled, simmering rage. Eminem is one of the best in his field working today, a hip-hop star with a complete mastery of the form. His rhymes lock and layer in a witty, controlled flurry of threats, taunts and confessionals, and they spit forth in his fluid style of battle-ready turd battle-wears anger.

It's the anger, not the skill, which makes the Real Slim Shady so fascinating. His music has the mask of typical hip-hop bravado and he excoriates his celebrity victims with smirky zeal. But there's a tinge of honest feeling writhing through his rhymes like an electric current zapping at full power. His raps, culled from his life in the poorest parts of Detroit, are portraits of a man held hostage by anger, frustration and hurt, but they are also Eminem's way of exorcising the angst from his system. Few rappers are so willing to lay down their vulnerabilities in the honest way that Eminem does.

Once again, Eminem is exposing himself for his detractors to see, but this time he's doing it on the most damning scale possible. He's making a movie.

Can Eminem act? It's hard to say exactly. What he can do is carve out an arresting on-screen presence. In Curtis Hanson's electrifying and riveting 8 Mile, Eminem plays a role not all that different from his own myth, yet he understands a crucial element of being a pop star on the big screen. Unlike Britney Spears in Crossroads, he isn't playing himself, or a softened version of himself. Here, Eminem does something trickier: he crafts a fully nuanced portrayal of an identifiably real young man.

At the beginning, Jimmy "Rabbit" Smith, Jr. is in what looks like the grottiest bathroom in the Western hemisphere, dancing around to the beat of the hip-hop song coursing through his headphones. His hands stab through the air in that time-honored rap tradition, and Rabbit rehearses what looks like the typical bounce seen at rap shows the world over. Then he leans over the toilet bowl and vomits, his nervous energy making itself uncomfortably physical. He steps on the stage at an underground hip-hop club located in an abandoned building, and then...chokes. He's given 45 seconds to out-freestyle his adversary, and for the first few seconds all he can do is stand there eyeing the crowd before bolting away backstage. (Freestyling is the hip-hop equivalent of a duel, the participants volleying their improvised raps in rapid fire bursts of profane showboating.)

EMINEM PLAYS AGAINST THE TRADITIONAL STEREOTYPE AND SHOWS HIS VULNERABLE SIDE IN THE SURPRISINGLY GOOD 8 Mile.

It's certainly a shock to see Eminem, the crown prince of hip-hop, cut off from the machine gun bluster of his words. It's also exciting. As Rabbit, Eminem gets to cut loose from the moorings of Slim Shady and delivers a performance that is affecting, honest, thorough and engaging.

Rabbit lives in the worst parts of the bombed-out hellhole that is Detroit. (The title refers to the stretch of road that separates the ghettoes from the suburbs.) He works a dead-end job at a metal-stamping factory, and moves back into his mom's trailer after breaking up with his girlfriend. He's torn between two mentors: his friend Future (a wide-awake Mekhi Pfeiffer) hosts the freestyle battles at the club, while local hustler Wink (Eugene Byrd) has promised him free studio time to record a demo. His mom (Kim Basinger) is a drunk sleeping with a man (Michael Shannon) her son's age. Rabbit finds solace in the company of his friends (Omar Benson Miller, De'Angelo Wilson and scene-stealing Evan Jones), and in the affections of a wannabe model (Brittany Murphy) whom he meets by flipping off. Rabbit and the model have sex in the metal factory, and as sparks shower down upon them their love scene takes on an import lacking in most cinematic liaisons. There's isn't about titillate, but about desperate relief from the stagnation of their lives. It's about connection.

FROM POVERTY TO SUCCESS: EMINEM STARS IN THE SEMI-AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL 8 mile WITH BRITTANY MURPHY AND KIM BASINGER

He wants to escape his life through the outlet of rap, yet he can't find the confidence to go on stage and let loose. Yet on the streets, his rhymes burst forth with quick-witted spontaneity. As the movie builds up to its inevitable conclusion – when Rabbit gets on stage to strut his stuff – the movie takes on a wiry vitality. The words fly fast and furious, like a boxer's fists. (The movie is a rap-world Rocky) and the very last scene strikes the right note for the film to end on.

8 Mile could have been a one-off film designed to capitalize on the popularity of Eminem. But Curtis Hanson (the top-shelf director of L.A. Confidential and Wonder Boys) takes the movie very seriously. Eminem has the dead-eyed yearning of James Dean, and Hanson draws sharp performances from the cast right down to the smallest role. Basinger convinces as the kind of slatternly, weary-eyed middle-aged woman who could still snag a younger boyfriend (even if she's asked to deliver a lot of whining) and Murphy captures a balance between desperate longing, askew seamess and rough vulnerability. The racially harmonious relationship between Rabbit and his friends feels genuine, and so does the animosity Rabbit and his enemies, which is based not on racial differences but professional and romantic rivalries. Hanson works with the cinematography of Rodrigo Prieto to turn Detroit, with its hollow husks lining the streets, into the city of lost desire. The only problems occur in some script weaknesses, including scenes that seem designed to make Eminem seem cuddlier than his image currently portrays him (Rabbit doesn't use drugs, and he shakes the hand of a gay co-worker in a calculated sop to the GLAAD crowd.)

8 Mile, in its way, captures the truth of hip-hop more than any other hip-hop film – the way that the music speaks to the inner condition of its followers. And Eminem, the leading poet of the genre, owns the big screen in a way few singers ever could. A (Universal; rated R for strong language, sexuality, some violence and drug use; 111 mins.)

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Styles by Deborah
Featuring Foil Highlights & Designer Haircuts for Students
$10 off Foils and Style Haircuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
$5 off Clipper Cuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

Seven O's
Rt. 116, Sunderland / next to Cliffside Apts
DJ Every Tuesday
Every Wednesday Karaoke
Live Music Every Friday & Saturday
6 Televisions
FoozeBall
Air Hockey
2 Pool Tables
Draft Specials
Bud, Bud Light, & Coors Light
Pitchers $5.00
No Cover Charge w/ Student ID
Free Seven0's T-Shirt for 21st B-Day
Food, Prizes and Live Music after the Game.
Come and Party with US

■ art

continued from page 5

tion of the human body," he says. "There is something in this exhibit for everyone."

His work invites serious thought, contemplation and imagination. "I think that the human body is unique in its universality," he says. "It allows us to perceive a highly complex and diverse world and express a highly complex and diverse creativity of self."

This one-and-one-half year working project can be seen in completion throughout this week in the gallery. The artist invites all to come to the gallery today at 4 p.m. for food, wine and conversation with the man behind the work.

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

UMass Amherst Alumni Association
"Leaders in the Making" Scholarships
$2,000!!
Applicants must be full-time sophomore and junior undergraduate students to be eligible. Applications may be picked up Monday through Friday at the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Four scholarships will be awarded and each recipient will receive $2,000. A complete application must include a resume, an unofficial academic transcript, essay and a letter of reference.
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS AMHERST
Applications must be completed and returned to the Alumni Relations Office by Friday, November 22nd at 5 p.m.
For more information, please contact Melanie Corbeil at 545-2317or mcorbeil@admin.umass.edu

Grudge games over, Patriots push for playoffs

By Jimmy Golen
ASSOCIATED PRESS

The New England Patriots are done with the grudge matches and revenge games.

Now they can focus on trying to win a second Super Bowl title, instead of proving to skeptics around the league that they really deserved the first.

"Last year doesn't have anything at all to do with where this football team is today," coach Bill Belichick said Monday after a 27-20 loss to the Oakland Raiders settled the last in a series of grudges built up over the Patriots' NFL championship run. "I'm not worried about it. I don't care about it. All I care about is beating Minnesota next week."

Even for a Super Bowl champion, the Patriots left an extraordinary number of teams circling dates on the calendar. First came the Steelers, who wanted to show that their loss in the conference championship was a special teams fluke. Then the Jets and the Chiefs, one longtime rival and two teams that figured to be contenders in the AFC.

The Chargers were a team on the way up, looking for something to prove. The Dolphins' victory in Miami put them in first place in the AFC East. The Packers brought Terry Glenn back to Foxboro, where he contributed so little to the Patriots' title run last year. Denver only has the best record in the AFC.

Then came the Buffalo Bills, who wanted a victory so wrongly cast him aside. The Chicago Bears offered an off-week from all the motivational talk, but right behind them was the Raiders.

Oakland has been stewing ever since it was knocked out of the playoffs by the Patriots last year on the now-notorious "tuck rule," when Tom Brady's fumble was overturned by the officials who said he hadn't tucked the ball in after moving his arm forward while pumping to pass. The ruling gave the Patriots back for a game-tying drive, and they won in overtime.

For the Raiders, that made Sunday's game a chance for revenge, though both sides certainly knew that it would barely register on the scales when measured against a Super Bowl victory. This time, Brady did fumble, Oakland did recover and the Raiders did win the game.

"It's sweet," Oakland offensive lineman Frank Middleton said. "It'd be great if we go on and they go on and do it all over again in the playoffs."

For New England to get that far, though, it will have to play more like the team that won its first three games than the one that lost the next four, and five of its last seven.

Working for New England is a bunched-up AFC East, where Miami is 6-4 and the other three teams are a game back. The Patriots, who have already beaten the Bills and the Jets, have the edge in tiebreakers if they can do it again, and also beat the Dolphins in the Dec. 29 finale.

"I wish were in a better position," linebacker Tedy Bruschi said. "Five-and-5 is an average football team, and that's what we are right now. If we're going to make a move, it's got to be fast."

Griese out three weeks

By John Marshall
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER (AP) – Brian Griese's sprained left knee will keep him out of Denver's lineup against Indianapolis next weekend and could sideline him for three weeks.

Broncos coach Mike Shanahan said his quarterback will not practice this week after being injured in a 31-9 victory over Seattle on Sunday. Griese was hurt late in the third quarter when defensive tackle Rocky Bernard rolled into his knee.

The Broncos initially said Griese could be out up to a month, but lowered the estimate Monday after an MRI exam showed a second-degree sprain of the medial collateral ligament.

"It might be a little quicker than we first anticipated with three to four weeks," Shanahan said. "You never know for sure until he actually gets treatment and we see how he reacts to it. But Brian's tough. He'll get back as soon as he can."

Shanahan said the good news was that Griese didn't have much swelling or a dramatic loss of motion that typically comes with such an injury. He said Griese's return will depend on how quickly the ligament stabilizes.

Steve Beuerlein, who threw two four-quarter touchdown passes in relief of Griese, will start against the Colts on Sunday night.

It will be the 37-year-old Beuerlein's first start since the final game of the 2000 season, when he played for Carolina. He missed last season with an elbow injury.

"I've been in this position so many times in my career I know how to handle it, I believe," said Beuerlein, who's in his 16th season. "I'll be very focused and very determined to go out there and keep an even keel. I'm going to go in there confident, poised and ready to execute whatever's asked of me, and hopefully do my job at a level that's acceptable to everybody."

SPRING BREAK PARTY VACATIONS
CANCUN ACAPULCO JAMAICA BAHAMAS FLORIDA S.PADRE
BIGGEST PARTIES! LOWEST PRICES!!
1-800-234-7007
www.ENDLESSsummerTOURS.com

One Love
JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003

Negril and Montego Bay
Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours
1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services
1.800.648.4849
www.ststravel.com

Enjoy a good challenge?
You want a personal life, but you also want a career that challenges you.
At Ernst & Young, you can have both. True, we have high expectations.
And some tasks will no doubt rack your brain. But rest assured.
We help our people face assignments with some remarkably handy tools, such as the most advanced technology, information, and resources, bar none. And with a talented pool of colleagues and mentors by your side, success is closer than you think. And so are the rewards.
FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002
ey.com/us/careers
ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Get Greek Stuff F-A-S-T! Group orders get great discounts. Lettering, embroidery, novelties. Visit us online at CollegeSports.com 1-800-929-1897, allstern@starpower.net

Cheap heating oil! Buy the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-2565 or come by Commuter Services, Rm 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 Bedroom/ Full Bath/ kitchen/ living room/ Dining Area/ $740/ month Puffton Village utilities include. Call Jon 549-1601

Sunderland 2 bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

*Save $350 Off Move-In Costs Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments FREE HEAT & HOT WATER Fully applianced kitchens Washers/ dryers available Pool, volleyball, basketball Minutes from Umass- On free busline Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 Visit us at sugarloafestates.com *limited time offer

Apt. For Rent 1/1 2 bdrm. On Rt. 9 1/4 m. from town. $950. 253-0340

2 apartments in house for rent. Four bedroom and 5 bedroom. Full Kitchen, Parking, heating included, laundry facility. $1400 and $1500 413-563-1888

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt. Quarky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to UMass or NoHo. $700 with heat 433-3922.

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-0600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 585-0599 582-9103

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Nissan 240SX Coupe 155k 5speed Grt Cond Sporty $3000 Emily 546-0337

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Part-Time Internship, Ad Sales, PR, Distribution. Well Paid Flexible Hours. E-mail ucal@bendnet.com with 'Intern' in subject line.

Politics Got You Down? Clean Water Act is luring grassroots organizers to help hold politicians accountable! Work on environmental/ public health campaigns. Join a winning team and fight for progressive causes you believe in. $345/wk + bonus & bens. Call today!!! 413-584-9830

EMPLOYMENT

Interviewing Now!! For Holiday Help and winter Break Work. $15.50 base- Appt. in our busy customer Service and sales departs. PT/ FT flex. Conditions Apply. Start NOW or After finals . . . 781-890-7667 617-323-3456

Attn: UMASS Students Holiday break not exciting? Make some cash, Build your Resume and work with our Student team. Call Or apply online. 781-890-7667 (Metrowest) 617-323-3456 (Boston City) www.winterbreakwork.com

Nov. 21, 2002 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a spring 2003 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate for single w/bath $375/ mo w/ heat in puffton 2 bedroom w/ male undergrads starts jan. Inquire John at 549-0794 or jburgess@edlab-mail.cs.umass.edu

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

[redacted]

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreak-travel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK Atlanta, Cherokee, Holyoke, Mashpee, Mississippi Delta Email: kh@som.umass.edu

SPRING BREAK CHEAP!!! Call Logan (413) 210-5778

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS / 3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sports Network
7	PBS / 57
8	HSCN Cinema
9	WB / 20
10	UPN 38
11	TV Guide Channel
12	FOX / 61
13	ABC / 40
14	NBC / 22
15	International Channel
16	UMATV
17	HSCN InfoChannel
18	ESPN
19	ESPN 2
20	UVG-19
21	ESPN Classic
22	Gavel-to-Gavel
23	CNN
24	CNN HL
25	Weather Channel
26	Learning Channel
27	History Channel
28	A & E
29	Discovery Channel
30	Discovery Health
31	Food Network
32	NASA
33	House & Garden TV
34	Travel Channel
35	Lifetime
36	CNBC
37	Tech TV
38	BET
39	CMT
40	USA
41	TNN
42	MTV
43	MTV2
44	VH-1
45	TNT
46	TBS
47	E! Entertainment
48	Sci-Fi Channel
49	Court TV
50	Nick at Nite
51	Comedy Central
52	Cartoon Network
53	Crime Show Network
54	TV Land
55	FOX Family
56	Univision
57	Odevision
58	Telemundo
59	College TV Network
60	C-SPAN
61	C-SPAN2
62	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

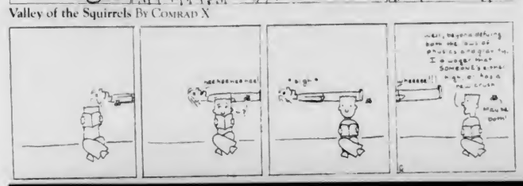
to a Classifieds page near you.

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

The Torques By Ken Fredette



Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

Milanos & Espresso By Lester E. Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"For more than a thousand generations the Jedi were the guardians of peace and justice in the galaxy. Before the dark times. Before the Empire."

- Obi-Wan Kenobi

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 33	HIGH: 54 LOW: 31	HIGH: 52 LOW: 47

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – If you feel you need a break today, someone close is ready to take over.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may lack patience today. Be sure to control yourself and take a deep breathe.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may not be able to keep things from taking an unexpected turn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Take care that you keep both feet firmly planted on the ground.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – You are going to try to solve a problem from the moment you rise today.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – A combination of physical and mental activity will serve you well.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – You can be sure you'll encounter a difficult obstacle this day.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – Take care that someone does not lead you down the wrong path. Mind your steps.

CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – Timing is everything. Focus on internal rhythms while catering to external demands.

LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – You'll start something that may get the better of you if you are not careful.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – Someone will bring a little more excitement into your life today.

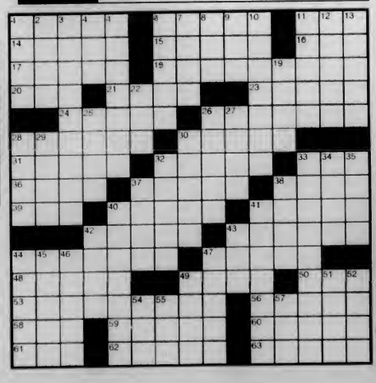
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The pace is likely to speed up unless you take measures to keep it steady.

www.dailycollegian.com

The Collegian is still looking for writers. Interested? Call us at 545-1809.

ACROSS

1 Bass or tenor
6 Kind of committee (2 wds.)
11 Pooch's greeting
14 An inert gas
15 Broadcast again
16 Aloha token
17 December temp
18 Postponed (2 wds.)
20 Bulldogs backer
21 Physicist Niels —
23 Drop by
24 Count up
26 Parched
28 Stayed
30 Reunion attendee
31 Pine source
32 Food processor setting
33 "— bad was it?"
36 Guidry and Howard
37 Feigned
38 Wash out
39 Mo. multiples
40 Processed cotton
41 Highway haulers
42 Fortified
43 Biker's protection
44 Most newspapers
47 — blanche
48 "The Eve of St.
49 Mock fanfare
50 Hitler's stat
53 Vegetable grower (2 wds.)
56 Mop companions
58 Poet's always
59 Sergeant Bilko
60 Boredom
61 Catch a glimpse of
62 A Beatle
63 Philosopher's



DOWN

1 Bouquet holder
2 Vaccine type
3 Spark-plug switches
4 Camp bed
5 Makes possible
6 "— and methlabes!"
7 Letter starter
8 Computer in "2001"
9 Fix a squeak
10 Fissure
11 At — — (baffled)
12 Do a laboring chore
13 Grant's bill
19 Urgent
22 Dilapidated
25 States further
26 Bushed
27 Listen carefully
28 Twisted
29 Oat
30 Put in the microwave
32 Fence pickets
33 Carpenter's racket
34 Comic strip dog
35 Frontier, once
37 Renown
38 Sensed
40 Chiller
41 Mariachi wear
42 Baldwin or Guinness
43 Possessed
44 Invites out
45 Say yes
46 Toughen up
47 Brief appearance
49 Math course
51 Primary color
52 Osiris' sister
54 Part of TGIF
55 Raggedy doll
57 Nurses org.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

J	O	I	N	T	B	I	A	S	A	C	N	E
E	A	G	E	R	A	T	T	I	N	S	P	A
S	I	T	C	O	M	S	E	E	M	B	A	N
T	H	R	O	A	T	R	U	B	D	O	W	N
			D	I	P		P	O	R	T
J	U	B	I	L	E	E		I	T	S
A	C	U	T	E		T	U	L	I	P	T	W
B	L	O	T		P	A	N	T	O		D	E
A	N		M	A	L	D	O		P	E	R	IL
		V	O	I	D		N	U	L	L
F	L	U	E	N	T			S	N	I
F	O	O	T	S	T	E	P		E	A	S	ELS
R	U	S	T		I	N	I	T		B	E	L
A	L	E	E		N	O	T	E		L	A	K
S	S		D	R	A	F		E	N	S	U	E

11-19-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Macaroni & Cheese (vegetarian)

Chicken Nuggets

Vegan Nuggets

Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods (vegan)

DINNER

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Grilled Pork Chops

Turkey Divan

Grilled Portabella Mushroom Steaks (vegan)

Today's Staff

Senior Editor	Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Editor	Esther Dantzig
Copy Editor	Andrew Merritt
Production Supervisor	Melissa Hammel
Production Staff	Sarah Lloyd, Elizabeth Bishop

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

AA answers call

Drops game-high 17 points after challenge

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The game was never in question, just whether the point guard would leave the building alive.

From the opening tip, the Massachusetts men's basketball team's basket seemed twice its usual size. Behind a 16-for-29, 55 percent first-half shooting performance, the Minutemen jumped out to a 22-5 lead and coasted the rest of the way to a 90-60 win over the Coaches vs. Cancer All-Stars.

UMass	90
Coaches All-Stars	60

Junior point guard Anthony Anderson, who took just three shots in the first exhibition – a 61-49 win over the Nike All-Stars – received a special message from Head Coach Steve Lappas during the preceding week of practice.

"I told him in practice if you don't shoot the ball I'm going to kill you," Lappas said. "Tonight I told him if you don't take two shots in the first five minutes, you're coming out."

Anderson responded with five of the first seven UMass points and a 5-for-7 shooting performance from the field that included a 4-for-6 conversion rate from behind the arc. Anderson scored 14 points in the first half – more than double the total of any other Minuteman and finished with a game high 17 points to go along with six rebounds and four assists.

"I thought tonight [Anderson] passed up one or two [open shots], which is good for him," Lappas said.

With senior captain Micah Brand on the sidelines with an ankle injury, it was the rookie class who stepped up for Lappas Saturday.

"I thought it was a very positive step for us," Lappas said. "I was glad to see us shoot the ball better. In the second half our defense was good. In the first half it was fair. I was pleased with the way our young guys played."

Freshman guard Mike Lasme, who struggled at times in the first game, looked much more comfortable in Saturday's contest, especially in the game's more up-tempo style.

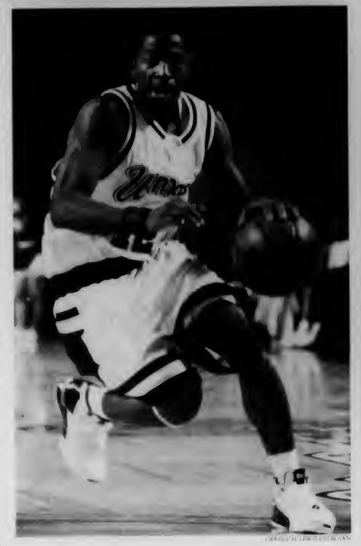
"It was a lot easier today," Lasme said after the game. "Now we [freshmen] feel a lot better."

He also discussed the adjustments that he and his fellow rookies have been making in the preseason.

"We have to execute [better]," Lasme said. "In high school we didn't have to play without the ball."

"Mike's a kid who didn't think this was as hard as it is," Lappas said. "He's a quick learner because he's got talent."

Lasme ended the game with 16 points and five rebounds, while sophomore Gabe Lee, who is a rookie after sitting out last year to focus on academics, chipped in with seven points while filling in for Brand at the power forward. Freshman Jeff Viggiano chipped in with five steals and five points.



Every UMass player logged minutes against the Coaches vs. Cancer All-Stars, with all but sophomore Kole Wilson, who saw 15 minutes of action, but took just one shot.

Junior Paco Kotaridis and freshman Arthur Onuoha, who played just one minute each, both managed to talli scores in the closing moments.

Onuoha was fouled on a shot attempt and sunk one of the two free throws. Kotaridis, meanwhile, nailed a trey from the wing – which caused the entire UMass bench to jump to its feet – including Brand, whose injured ankle was healthy enough for him to hop with excitement.

Certainly good news for the Minutemen, as Lappas thinks Brand will be running in practice soon.

"He'll probably start jogging at some point this week," Lappas said. "I'm hoping he'll get back to practice next Saturday. That's our target. But he could take a step backward."

ANTHONY ANDERSON HIT ALL SCORERS WITH 17 POINTS IN SATURDAY'S 90-60 EXHIBITION WIN OVER THE COACHES VS. CANCER ALL-STARS.

X-Country season closes at NCAAs

By Reid Davenport

Pöck named Player of the Week

THOMAS PÖCK WAS NAMED HOCKEY EAST PLAYER OF THE WEEK MONDAY. IT IS THE THIRD STRAIGHT WEEK THAT A MINUTEMAN HAS WON A CONFERENCE AWARD.

Tallied four points in UML sweep

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

For the fourth week out of the last five, a Massachusetts hockey player has received weekly honors from the Hockey East Association.

Junior Thomas Pöck earned the Hockey East Player of the Week Award for his performance in a pair of wins against sister school UMass-Lowell. Pöck had four points in the two games from the blue line, posting a goal and an assist in each game.

The former forward has shown very impressively since moving back to defense, giving the Minutemen another strong, quick puckhandler to help carry the puck out of the defensive zone. This weekend represented his first breakout point-wise from the defense, and he now has four points in five games played at the point.

"He has some areas that he needs to work on," UMass Head Coach Don Cahoon said. "But he has so many puck skills he gives us a little more of a presence back there."

Pöck initially showed his defensive prowess by quarterbacking the power play, where he has helped the Minutemen increase their efficiency to more than 17 percent. The Maroon and White man advantage has also converted on four of its last 14 man-up opportunities.

The junior was somewhat of a disappointment last year, putting up just 12 points in 23 games in a season interrupted by both injury and a trip to the Olympic Games, where he skated for Team Austria.

When Pöck stepped onto the ice on Nov. 1 against Providence, he had never played a game at defense, and had logged less than a week of practice at the position. Still, Cahoon felt that the junior possessed the stickhandling and skating ability to be an effective blueliner for the Maroon and White.

"He gives us a whole new dimension back there," said Cahoon, who earned his 200th career victory Saturday. "Tommy was great about it; he just wants to help the team."

Pöck joins sophomore Jeff Lang and freshman Gabe Winer as players honored by HEA this season. Lang won Defensive Player of the Week honors after scoring a goal and an assist against Rensselaer on Oct. 20.

Winer earned Rookie of the Week after leading the Minutemen to their first HE victory against Northeastern two weeks ago and turning aside 20 of 22 Providence shots the night before. He followed that up by winning Defensive Player of the Week one week ago when he held the vaunted Maine offense to just one goal on 25 shots in a 1-0 loss at Alfond Arena.

OTEP OUTLOOK ITMAZ LEAD SINGER ARTS, PAGE 5.
COPING WITH LOSS ED/OP PAGE 4.
AT U. FOOTBALL SPORTS PAGE 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEDNESDAY ★★★★★ ISSUE FIFTY-FOUR ★★★★★ 11.20.02

Orchard Hill vandalism causes lounge closings

By Brian Castro
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Due to several instances of vandalism in which furniture and other items were thrown off balconies, the lounges in Orchard Hill have continued to be shut down over the course of the semester.

"These incidents have been a case of disregard for the rules," said Mark Morrison, the Orchard Hill area governor.

Students have gone onto the balconies over the course of the semester and thrown chairs, bottles, trash and even full sized couches over them. On Halloween, a pumpkin was thrown through a car's windshield. After the incident occurred, the lounges were closed for a week.

At least once a semester, with the longest closeout lasting three weeks, incidents like this have occurred. At other times they have been closed for just a weekend.

"Usually these types of incidents happen on the weekends for, the most part, that the closings are simply a safety concern," said Dunc Fordham, Orchard Hill and Central Area Director. "Thankfully no one has been hurt from the falling objects."

"Lately though, it's seems that it's been happening every other week now," Morrison said. "More of these crimes are actually occurring now, and the Residential Director has been really enforcing or cracking down on these incidents."

During this semester, the frequency of these events has led to debate over what measures should be taken. "Short of having guards patrolling the halls, having security measures to control these acts won't help much," Fordham said. "Most of the people who've been caught throwing were residents from the building."

Other measures, such as just closing the balconies, are ineffective since the perpetrators can easily break through the doors.

"There's a tired policy in place in order to deal with this," said Jon Newman, Assistant Residential Director of Orchard Hill. "The first occurrence will lead to 24-hour shut down of the lounges, while subsequent offenses will increase the amount of time these places are closed."

In addition, there has been discussion of setting up a three-strike policy that will lead to closing the lounges for the rest of the semester after three vandalism incidents have occurred.

The Student Government Association is working with the Orchard Hill Residential Director and the Area Director to find a way of dealing with the problem but further discussion is still needed.

"There is no clear policy for the lounges. The Residential Director, for the most part works in discretion, deciding what the punishment is going to be based on their judgement of the situation," said Daniel Saunders, Senate Speaker for the Student Government Association.

"The main important issue is community accountability. There's no sense of community responsibility among the students here, which needs to be infused in these residence halls," Morrison said. "A lot of students see these things happen and they don't report them or stop them from doing these things. Instead of saying, 'you should stop trashing our building' they let them do whatever, thinking 'this guy's just having fun and we should not bust on him.'"

Morrison also noted that the large freshman population in Orchard Hill has also played a big role in these crimes. He felt a cause for this might be that they aren't as rooted in the community and have less sense of community responsibility to report them.

Alcohol and drugs have been involved in causing these cases as well.

"The concern to protect the students is understandable, but this is just unfair to the students who need to use these lounges for studying," Saunders said.

Campus safety addressed in walk

By Jen Hodson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts held its annual "Walk for Light" last night at 7 p.m. on the steps in front of the Student Union.

The "Walk for Light" is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association, and is also organized in collaboration with the University Police Department and the Chancellor's Committee on Campus Safety, a broad-based campus committee established to address campus safety issues. The event is a way for students, faculty, staff, police departments and other interested participants to gather together once a semester and identify the safety concerns on campus.

UMass Police Chief Barbara O'Connor handed out maps of the campus to arriving participants, and she then gave students the choice of which route they would walk. There were four predetermined routes to choose from and participants were asked to take note of any safety concerns along the way. Route one covered the Northeast, Sylvan, and Orchard Hill Residential Area; route two covered the Engineering buildings, Mullins Center, and Campus Garage Area; route three covered the Morrill Science Center, from Health Services to the Orchard Hill Residential Area and back down towards Lederle Graduate Research Center, and route four covered from the W.E.B. DuBois Library to the Southwest Residential Area.

"We've done this the past couple years, the former chief started this and our current chief Barbara O'Connor is continuing it," said Detective Dave Black, an officer of the UMass Police Department. "We do it just to see if there is any dark spots or if there's anyway we can improve night safety. Sometimes the trees are overgrown and need to be trimmed back, sometimes lights are out, sometimes we find a new spot to put lights in. This event is [held by] UMass Police, Environmental Health and Safety, the Physical Plant, Housing, Parking Services, so basically all the departments on campus get together."

Each group was given a clipboard with a list of what safety concerns participants were supposed to look for and how to properly identify them. A few of the following categories were the following: proper lighting; shrubbery that may make walking or biking hazardous; paths and roads with potholes; and any other possible safety concerns that need be made aware to the public safety programs on the UMass campus. During the walk across campus, it was noted by many others in the group that several lights were out or not working, shrubbery was extensively high in dark disclosed areas, and places where call boxes needed to be placed weren't.

"I think this is an excellent start but we obviously have a long way to go, we have other things to do like reforming student security in the dorms and also making sure that the call-boxes all work here on campus," said Dan Pormanter, a UMass student and a member of the Public Safety Committee in regards to the event.

Different leaders or members of the associations led the walk and guided students across the campus on the four different assigned and helped look for safety concerns as well.

"The light poles are marked and if students notice a pole is out and it has number on it, then they can call it into the work desk that way we can get a work order," commented John Roberts, one of the tour leaders of the group.

They are hoping that students will take advantage of this and use it toward their benefit. Roberts also mentioned that 24 new solar powered lights were going to be installed within the vicinity of Lot 25, near Central Residential Area. The solar powered lights are credited as being brighter and better for safety because they do not burn out.

The "Walk for Light" was started several years ago, and has directly resulted in the installation of additional police call boxes, improved lighting on campus, and pruning of vegetation for safety purposes.

CHIEF OF POLICE BARBARA O'CONNOR AND DETECTIVE DAVE BLACK ASSIGN ROUTES FOR UMASS STUDENTS BEFORE THE "WALK FOR LIGHT."

Speakers discuss race, health issues in forum

By Courtney Charles
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The new face of racism in this country is economic slavery, said Jean Swinney, a Ph.D in Nursing and one of the speakers in a forum on racism held last night for an audience of approximately 50.

Other speakers included Frank Robinson, who holds a Ph.D in public health, Martina Robinson, a graduate student, and Edward Bruce Bynum, who holds a Ph.D in psychology. Each speaker addressed issues of race and health care.

In many parts of the world racism is different from what we experience here, according to Swinney. Racism can be demonstrated in many different ways, and affects blacks when they enter hospitals, she said.

"I think health care is a right," Swinney said. "It is not a privilege."

African-American and Hispanic adults ages 18-64 have the highest uninsured rates of any racial and ethnic group, according to Swinney.

African-American women have a lower incidence rate of breast cancer than white women, but African-American women have a higher death rate from the disease, Swinney said.

Martina Robinson spoke to the recurring intersection of poverty, disability, and race. According to Robinson, those with mixed racial ancestry are more likely to be poor and disabled. Statistics have shown, she added, that they are more likely to live in poverty and have a poor diet as well as dangerous working conditions than whites.

According to statistics citing this environmental racism, three out of five Hispanics and blacks live in communities that have toxic waste sites.

Recently, Robinson was a delegate to an international assembly for people with disabilities. Due to disability, she is in an electric wheelchair and lives in a home specifically designed to meet her needs. Additionally, she receives free health care, and an assistant for a certain amount of time every week.

However, Robinson said that 82 percent of disabled people live in underdeveloped countries where they do not even have sidewalks to give them accessibility.

The state government plans to cut an additional $11 million from health care, and in 2003 increase that cut to include eye care.

"If you can't see, how are you supposed to fill out a job application?" Rohinson said.

The problems surrounding race are hard to discuss, according to Bynum. Black is defined differently in every state, he said.

"There are very few things people are willing to kill for, and one of them is racism," Bynum said. The concept of race is so difficult to deal with because of implications with violence, power, control, anger, and repression, he said.

"Socially, we have invented this category called race," Frank Robinson said. This social construct has been used for manipulation and economic gain, he said. Additionally, he said that the idea of race as a construct has been used by public health as well.

"The idea is that if we did not get good care, we would contaminate the population," Robinson said. "We can invent a construct that edges on delusional. Basically, if you're a racist, you're mentally ill."

But according to Bynum, racism and inequalities still persist.

"Racism is here and it's here to stay for a long time, just like war and rape," Bynum said. "Everybody is a variation of an African. We all know that scientifically and genetically, but psychologically it's hard to grasp. It's like trying to tell a fish that water exists."

The racism dynamics to health care are becoming a political issue, according to Swinney.

"There were only two industrialized nations without universal health care, the United States and South Africa during apartheid. Now there is only one," Martina Robinson said.

"If this is the wealthiest country in the world, why is this happening?" Swinney asked.

JANE SWEENEY SPEAKS ABOUT RACIAL INEQUITIES IN HEALTH CARE.

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Wednesday

Thursday

Memorial Hall at 7:30 p.m. to speak about "Earth Democracy: The World Beyond Corporate Globalization."

A screening of The Way Home, a film directed by Shakti Butler about 64 women who come together to share experiences of oppression through the lens of race, will be shown in room 803 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. The presentation is organized by students in the Women's Studies Program as part of the Women of Color Film Series and admission is free.

Thomas Jackson will be in room 163 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m. to speak and screen his film, Greetings from Missile Street, about the effects of U.S. policy of Iraqi people. The event is sponsored by the Radical Student Union and the UMass Anti War Coalition. The event is free and open to the public.

Meet at the Hillel House at 6 p.m. for pizza and then walk over to Bowker Auditorium for the theatre production Pippin. Non-Thespians invited. Come and meet the drama group.

Murder Mystery Night for Jewish first year students at 7 p.m. at Hillel House. Students interested must RSVP by contacting Rachel at 549-1710 or rspinsker@external.umass.edu

Friday

Lajmia Shaina and Jammal Mahmoud, leaders of Muslims Against Terrorism, will speak about the true teachings of Islam and speak out against violence and injustice around the world at Smith College's Wright Hall Auditorium at 7 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Brown bag lunch with Rachel Pinsker, the Jewish Service Corp Fellow at UMass, at 12 p.m. Meet in front of the Blue Wall and bring your own lunch. Rachel will provide dessert.

Shabbat services at 6 p.m. at Hillel House. For more info call 549-1710.

Shabbat Dinner at 7:15 p.m. at Hillel House followed by Pre-Hanukkah text study and singing with Susan Moser at 8:15 p.m. Dinner is free to UMass students not on a meal plan. For more info call 549-1710.

Jewish Grad Group (GAP) will be meeting for Shabbat Dinner in Northampton at 7 p.m. Contact Jonathon for more info and directions at jonathon@podolsky.cc.

Saturday

Delta Xi Phi sorority is sponsoring a performance entitled "Celebrating our Diverse Rhythm" from 8 to 10 p.m. at the Malcolm X Cultural Center in Southwest. $3 entry fee and all proceeds will benefit Face Passage, a battered women's shelter in Northampton. For more info contact Jeanie Gorlowsky at 253-7789.

Sunday

Join Tzedek Hillel in bringing some light to the Jewish Geriatrics Nursing Home in Springfield. They will be celebrating Hanukkah by making crafts and singing with the residents. Meet at Hillel House at 12:45 p.m. RSVP or get more information via tzedekhillel@yahoo.com

Monday

Morning services with Kehilat Hillel Haazinu at 7:50 a.m., in Hillel House Front Room.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Feroilto Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

MAJOR JUNIOR WEAR LABEL

WAREHOUSE SALE

Ladies and Men's
30-75% off
original retail store price

3 DAYS ONLY

WARE NOBODY'S PERFECT

Monday 11/18 9-9
Tuesday 11/19 9-9
Wednesday 11/20 9-9
Thursday 11/21 9-5

WAREHOUSE SALE

UMass Campus Center Auditorium
Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday 9-9

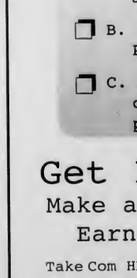
WAREHOUSE SALE

Peer Health Education

What would tick you off? Having unprotected sex and...

❒ A. Contracting an STI.
❒ B. Getting Pregnant.
❒ C. Knowing you could have prevented it.

Get Involved
Make a Difference
Earn 6 credits



Take Com HL 213, Peer Health Education, a 2-semester course that proactively addresses public health issues at UMass.

Call the Health Education Departme during pre-registration at 577-5 to make an appointment to discuss enrollment with instructor.

E-mail news at wasmallwood@yahoo.com
@yahoo.com

SPRING BREAK PARTY VACATIONS
CANCUN ACAPULCO JAMAICA
BAHAMAS FLORIDA S.PADRE
BIGGEST PARTIES! LOWEST PRICES!
1-800-234-7007
www.ENDLESSsummerTOURS.com

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003

Negril and Montego Bay

Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.

From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.

Sun Splash Tours
1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Student Travel Services
1.800.648.4849
www.ststravel.com

Iraq promises to adhere to United Nations resolution

IRAQI FOREIGN MINISTER NAJI SABRI, RIGHT, MEETS CHIEF WEAPONS INSPECTOR HANS BLIX, LEFT, AT THE FOREIGN MINISTRY IN BAGHDAD ON TUESDAY.

By Bassem Mroue
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - Iraq promised Tuesday to meet next month's deadline for disclosing information about banned weapons. Fulfilling that pledge would meet a key demand laid down in the new U.N. resolution aimed at peacefully disarming Iraq.

Differences also emerged Tuesday between the United Nations and Washington over what constitutes Iraqi violations of the U.N. resolution, which authorized the inspection mission.

Following a meeting with U.N. weapons inspectors, Amir al-Saadi, a senior adviser to President Saddam Hussein, told reporters that Baghdad had repeated assurances that it would cooperate fully with the inspection team, which arrived Monday under terms of a new U.N. resolution mandating unrestricted access to all Iraqi sites.

"Within 30 days, as the resolution says, a report from Iraq will be submitted on all the files of nuclear, chemical, biological and missile files," al-Saadi said, speaking in English.

Asked whether Iraq was prepared to grant the inspectors unfettered access, he replied: "Yes, as stipulated in the resolution and as we have agreed with them."

Earlier, Mohamed ElBaradei, head of the International Atomic Energy Agency, said Iraqi officials made the commitment during talks with chief U.N. inspector Hans Blix and other team members Monday.

"We hope that this oral commitment will be translated into fact when we begin inspections next week," he told Associated Press Television News and Egypt's Nile television.

President Bush has threatened military action if the Iraqis fail to cooperate fully with the new Security Council resolution.

Blix and Elbaradei met late Tuesday with al-Saadi, Foreign Minister Naji Sabri; Gen. Hossam Amin, the Iraqi government's chief liaison with past U.N. inspectors; and senior Foreign Ministry official Said al-Mosawi.

Blix and ElBaradei also met Monday with Amin and al-Saadi to begin to discuss arrangements for the inspections.

The U.N. team must verify that Iraq is free of proscribed weapons before the U.N. Security Council will lift strict economic sanctions imposed after President Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait in 1990. The inspections are considered Saddam's last chance to avoid war with the United States, which has said toppling him might be the only way to contain the threat it believes Iraq poses to the world with nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

On Monday as allied warplanes bombed Iraqi air defense systems in the northern no-fly zone. The U.S. military said the attack was launched after Iraqi gunners fired on the jets during routine patrols.

In Washington, White House spokesman Scott McClellan said the Iraqi anti-aircraft fire "appears to be a violation" of the latest U.N. Security Council resolution.

However, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan took issue with that interpretation, telling reporters in Kosovo on Tuesday that "I don't think the Council will say that this is in contravention of the resolution that was recently passed."

The Iraqi military said Tuesday that a U.S.-British airstrike in southern Iraq a day earlier wounded four civilians. The U.S. military did not comment immediately. The allies say they do not target civilians.

Bush has warned of "zero tolerance" of Iraqi infractions, warning they could lead to war. Iraq considers flights over the northern and southern zones a violation of its sovereignty; the Security Council never explicitly approved the operation that began shortly after the 1991 Persian Gulf War to protect Kurdish and Shiite Muslim groups.

Annan's interpretation, widely held within the 15-member Council, is another example of the differences between U.S. and U.S. officials over the inspection program.

The Americans are pushing for early, intrusive inspections of presidential palaces and other sensitive sites, while U.N. authorities are speaking of building trust between the inspectors and the Iraqis.

Mark Gwozdecky, spokesman for the U.N. nuclear controls agency, said the team has come "with a message ... (that) we are on a mission of peace" to overcome Iraqi hostility to the inspection program.

"So we tried to convey this message that 'let's start from scratch, let's cooperate fully and if we do it holds prospect for a lifting of sanctions on the Iraqi people and a peaceful resolution,'" he said.

Gwozdecky said that if the Iraqis cooperate, the inspectors should "have a very good feel" for Iraqi weapons programs "within a year."

The inspectors have returned under a tough U.N. security Council resolution to search for weapons wherever they like and talk to whoever they want to determine if Iraq has banned weapons.

Iraqi officials, though pledging cooperation, have made clear their hostility toward the resolution.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted Iraqi Vice President Taha Yassin Ramadan as saying Iraq accepted the resolution "despite its injustice" to prove it is free of weapons of mass destruction.

"This resolution is an evil American scheme for an aggression against Iraq," INA quoted Ramadan as saying during a meeting Monday with an Austrian delegation.

Saddam's deputy, Izzat Ibrahim, told INA that Iraq will work with inspectors to protect its people from America, but will fight "if war is imposed on us."

Author and journalist of Jewish works speaks

By Morris Singer
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Ruth Ellen Gruber, journalist and author of Virtually Jewish: Reinventing Jewish Culture in Europe, spoke yesterday in Herter Hall about the reemerging Jewish culture of Eastern and Central Europe.

During her lecture, which shared the title of her book, Gruber showed several slides from her travels throughout Europe, using each as a way to mention a particular aspect of the Jewish community within the regions she focused on. She began her lecture by showing slides of abandoned Jewish synagogues and cemeteries that have suffered long-term neglect that occurred during the Soviet Union's existence.

The first of these slides showed an old and abandoned synagogue in Prague, standing in ruins. Around it were modern houses and new developments, but the synagogue itself had not been restored. To Gruber, people who live in the area had completely ignored the dilapidated synagogue in their midst.

"[No one] cares if what was once a magnificently standing building is now in ruins," she said.

According to Gruber, this is the most common fate of the synagogues in Europe. However, other slides showed that synagogues that weren't destroyed suffered just as badly when they were converted to function as housing for other activities. In one case, she showed a slide of a synagogue used now as a laundromat. In another example, a synagogue now used as a video arcade was shown. Gruber said that a small plaque in the arcade designates it as a historic site, but there is no mention of it having once been the home to a Jewish congregation.

"Nothing marks it as a synagogue," she said.

Some of the synagogues featured in Gruber's slides have been rebuilt, but even in those cases Gruber says there has been trouble. She said that once a building is discovered to have been once been a synagogue, it often becomes difficult for the community to determine what to do with it.

"Should it remain ruined – as a monument, [or] should it be rebuilt to house a new congregation?" she asked rhetorically.

Gruber displayed one slide showing a rebuilt synagogue that had, in her opinion, managed to fulfill both purposes.

The synagogue featured the remaining old structure as well as a new addition designed not to look like part of the original. The one wall, which remained after the building's destruction, now formed the only opaque part of a glass-enclosed plaza. For Gruber, the building, which once again serves as a synagogue, additionally serves as a memorial to what once was.

After presenting a number of slides of synagogues, Gruber moved on to discuss the shape of the Jewish communities in Europe on an individual level. She talked about cities that enjoy the presence of Jewish communities and the diversity that the Jewish citizens bring, almost, in her opinion, as a novelty. She even said that some cities encourage Jews to own summer homes, to produce, as she put it, "a seasonal Jewish population."

AUTHOR RUTH GRUBER PRESENTED A SLIDE SHOW TO ILLUSTRATE HER SPEECH ON ANTI-SEMITIC SENTIMENTS IN EUROPE

Gruber commented that Judaism has integrated itself into the culture of Eastern Europe in a secular manner, and that Jewish symbols and traditions have taken on new meaning in non-Jewish culture. She used the example of Klezmer music to make this point.

At a Klezmer musical performance, the kind which in her view is numerous today in Europe, "almost all the people in the audience will not be Jewish," she said.

This fascination with the Jewish culture comes at a time when the Jewish population in these regions is scarce. Most of the Jews who are living in the area, she said, are what she calls "virtual Jews," in that their Judaism provides cultural enrichment for others.

Gruber defines a "virtual Jew" as a Jew who "takes it upon himself to do things that Jews are no longer there to do."

She warned that this trend of "virtual Judaism" is something that could be negative, however, when she asked about the future of this development.

"Do Jews become roadside attractions? Where is this going?"

The lecture was co-sponsored by the Slavic and East European Studies Program and the Department of Journalism. It was the third lecture in a series of four brought to the University by the Department of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies.

The fourth lecture, titled "Cooks/Poisoners, Healers/Killers: Religion/Witchcraft: Jewish Women's Religion in Greco-Roman Antiquity," will take place on Wednesday, December 11 at 4 p.m. in 316 Bartlett Hall.

Write for News! Do it!

www.dailycollegian.com

McMurphy's
welcomes
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

STUDENT TRAVEL
get hyped for spring break '03

Jamaica.....$729
Cancun.....$649
Amsterdam...$509
Paris.....$485
Includes air & accommodations from Boston. Prices are per person. Some taxes & fees not included. Other departure cities and destinations available.

44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL

Wireless Choices

Any of these phones FREE with $39.99 plan

Sony Ericsson T68LX
Nokia 1260
Panasonic EB-TX320

OR

Get a big discount on "Any phone" if you open a one year account
$29.99 plan with $30 discount
$39.99 plan with $50 discount
$49.99 plan with $65 discount
$59.99 plan with $85 discount
$80 + plan with $110 discount

AT&T offers unlimited nights & weekends.
Nextel offers unlimited direct connect.

65 University Drive, Unit #4 Amherst, MA 01002
(right next to the HangarPub)
Phone 549-2075
Fax 549-4315
AT&T Wireless NEXTEL

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE TOD

Free speech:

Except when it offends?

It is not often that the students of Harvard are in need of the assistance of others. This statement is especially true of those in the Harvard Law School. After Monday night's meeting of a Harvard Law School committee though, thoughts might begin to change.

That very committee voted to establish a speech code that would prohibit the use of harassing and offensive language in class. At a time when many colleges and universities are moving away from control over public discourse, Harvard seems to be taking a step backwards.

The Harvard Black Law Students Association and some of the school's professors brought forth the issue initially. As the time a series of racially insensitive incidents had transpired at the school. A student used the word "nig" in an online course notebook and was later defended by a professor. Another professor also made the claim that feminism, Marxism and black studies "contributed nothing" to tort law.

Even though the newly formed Committee on Hearth Diversity has recommended that a speech code be implemented, the plan still has some high-ranking officials nervous, including the school's Dean, Robert C. Clark, as well as its numerous famous alumni, such as Alan Dershowitz. Dershowitz made part of his case against the need for a code by claiming that when members of a minority ask for more of their group on campus, they appear to be self-serving, rather than promoting true diversity.

The case should be an interesting one to watch for all in and around the education field. The policies of many other schools could potentially hinge on how strict Harvard is if it does indeed establish such a code. One such thing is certain though, some semblance of free speech would be affected.

Examining our own campus reveals a diverse background that would probably be split to such a code. There would be those in favor of a code, citing that it would prohibit remarks that are insulting in their nature to minority students. However, there would be others, and probably some from those very minorities, that would feel that their personal rights would be infringed upon.

The Bill of Rights is the document that is the basis for the laws that govern our society. Number one at the top of the list is the right to free speech. This is probably one of the hardest rights to endure in our country.

Yes it does allow people to say whatever they feel about an issue. The flip side is that it also forces each of us to endure the words of another person regardless of how much we disagree with what he said.

The Collegian is not claiming that one should stand idly by while suffering personal attacks. A person must though be willing to tolerate that a person has differing view on a topic, no matter how it enrages them.

College is a place where many go to broaden their horizons and learn the ways of the world. That real world that we will all enter within a few months or years is a very harsh world. There is no code to restrict the opinions and words of our fellow citizens out there. Higher education should be no different. Otherwise, how are we to truly learn what it is like to be free?

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

A little turkey and football between friends

McKENDRY

Monday afternoon I was sitting in the Civil Engineering Computer Lab in Marston Hall enjoying my three-hour class on Geographic Information Systems. While paying attention to what my professor was saying (as we all were – honest), I also was surfing the web for whatever peaked my fancy. While checking the latest news on The Boston Globe's web-site I decided to check the local high school football standings. It was already the middle of November, so the season was basically over, except for the exciting Thanksgiving Day games.

I made my way to the Catholic Central Large Conference to Division 5 and found my alma mater, Austin Prep, right in the thick of things, as they always have been for nearly the past decade. The Cougars currently stand 7-2 overall, with a 4-1 record in conference, just behind undefeated Archbishop Williams (8-0, 5-0 CCL). Checking AP's schedule revealed that the only conference loss had indeed come to the Bishops, so the conference title already belongs to the boys from Braintree.

The runner-up spot for the second straight year is all that had. If anything, it just added to its excitement for the Turkey Day game against Savio Prep. The Spartans and Cougars have been rivals almost as long as Austin's current winning way. Both teams regularly battled for the Division 6 title in the Catholic Central Small Conference. Last season each moved up to the CCL, a division higher. While the Green and White have made a fine adjustment (14-4 over the last two years), Savio has had a more difficult time, going 9-14 since joining the new conference, including an 0-9 mark for the 2002 season. Records don't matter though. Saturday's game is all about rivalries.

Thanksgiving Day high school football games, at least in Eastern Massachusetts, are all about rivalries: St. John's vs. Xaverian, Chelmsford vs. Billerica, Foxboro vs. Mansfield, Needham vs. Wellesley. Even when the game is always one-sided, à la Peabody vs. Saugus, there's still excitement that cold autumn morning.

While the Austin-Savio tradition only dates back a few years, it has had its share of nail-biting games. My favorite game still remains the last game of the 1999 season. At East Boston Stadium, with a playoff berth on the line, the Cougars invaded Savio's home and beat the Spartans 22-21 by stopping a two-point conversion on the last play of the game. Fortunately this year the game is back at home in Reading. That means I won't have to make a drive to Logan Airport on Thanksgiving, which is as much fun as it sounds.

> "In a week, when I drive the 18 miles from my house to 101 Willow Street, it will…be bittersweet."

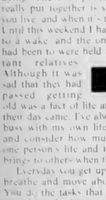
Having the game at home also will help generate a larger alumni turnout. While what takes place on the field is vitally important, perhaps the biggest reason that alumni, such as myself, make the pilgrimage back to high school is to catch up on old friends. With the long weekend, most people are home, and many of us encounter those we haven't seen since last year's game. Some may have siblings still enrolled at the school (my brother is a senior, my sister a sophomore), but for many the only ties to Austin are their memories of the times there.

In a week, when I drive the 18 miles from my house to 101 Willow Street, it will, as it has been each successive year since graduation, be bittersweet. Each year there are fewer students from my class at the games. And each year represents another notch in how far people have grown apart.

I graduated in a class of 79 students, not large by any stretch of the imagination. Yet now four and a half years later, the amount of people who I still even remotely talk to can be counted with the fingers on one hand. I occasionally run into Dorothy on campus, Jason, who works in Boston, Sully, finishing his last semester at UNH, and Amy, who ironically now works at Austin for the development office, are the only three that I see on the good old buddy list at times.

I find those last two statements so sad because I always told myself that I was not going to be disconnected. I said I was going to keep in touch with all the people I knew from high school.



Like most naïve 17-year-olds, I didn't realize how daunting a task that would be. During Columbus Day weekend of freshman year, Jason had a get together at his house for most of the old gang. Everyone shared stories of what the first month or so of college had been like. That was about it. Aside from maybe bumping into each other, or the annual Thanksgiving Day football game, I haven't seen some people since. There are people I saw nearly every day for seven years that I haven't spoken to in over three.

This year will of course be no different. The Cougars and Spartans will kick off shortly after 10 a.m. I'll see a number of teachers I have seen rather recently, alumni whom I haven't, AP will win the football game (hopefully), and then I'll drive home for a big helping of turkey. It may not be a solution to regaining contact with lost friends, but one day a year is better than never. Happy Thanksgiving.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

Collegian Ed/Op: Think About It

From death we rise anew

KATIE LANDERS

I've never really thought about dying. The only process I've ever really put together is you are born, you live and when it's time, you die. Until this weekend I had never been to a wake, and the only funerals I had been to were held for older distant relatives.

Although it was sad that they had passed, getting old was a fact of life and eventually their day came. I've always been too busy with my own life to sit down and consider how much goes into a person's life and the sadness it brings to others when they are gone.

Everyday you get up, you eat and breathe and move about your day. You do the tasks that are a part of your lifestyle, like work and spend time with the people you care about. But you don't really think about hanging out and seeing people as spending time with people you care about. Choices and decisions are often based on the here and now, with the best interest of your self involved. There are times people are generous and do things for others, but the most common practice is to look out for your self.

Then one day you're stopped.

I lost my uncle to cancer last week. He fought long and he fought very hard, and I knew he would pull through. Everyone knew he would pull through. As the cancer got worse this fall, and I got to spend more time with him, I understood that he was sick and maybe he wouldn't beat it, and that sometimes it's just best to spend time with people while you can. He was always quiet but I saw how much he loved his wife and his kids. I didn't think about how it was all going to feel. His death was the first in my family.

Imagine one day not having your high school sweetheart you've been with for 30 years. Imagine losing your father when you're in high school. Imagine watching your son get tired from cancer and leave the world before you. Imagine living without your brother whom you've known your entire life. Imagine losing your best friend.

We were all fortunate to be at the hospital with him for the very end. Cancer is a quiet illness that can sweep through your body in a short time. No matter how bad life gets, when you ask someone how he or she is, usually the person gives the answer, "I'm good." You prepare for how it's going to be, but it just doesn't go as easy as you think it will. I wept this weekend. I was sad that my uncle was gone, but I was sadder for all the people he left behind. You're not supposed to finish your life at 44. I've never been so proud as when I saw the people who came to say one last goodbye. Like I said, I had never been to a wake, and I never imagined it to be anything like this.

> "I've never been so proud as when I saw the people who came to say one last goodbye."

For five days I've been reflecting. Not on myself and not necessarily on my uncle, but on how families and friends come together when the difficult times hit. I thought about how life is this continuous circle and for every person that closes his eyes for a final time, a new life is brought into the world. I feel like our society doesn't think enough about how precious every life is and how much it can hurt. Instead we buss ourselves with priorities that involve money and personal happiness that only make us satisfied for the moment. I do it, and no matter how hard I try, I know that eventually that's how I will think again. But I hope I can keep this time close to my heart.

Everyone in my family will wake up tomorrow. They will get up, eat and breathe and get through their normal routines. Although grief is there, joy comes in knowing that good times have been in the past, and good times will come again. But when you go to bed, and it's dark and quiet, you hear your heart. It makes you think.

If I could, I would make it January tomorrow. Instead of Thanksgiving and the holidays, I would be ready for the deep winter freeze and then the jump into spring. But I can't skip it, and instead can only see it head on. My priorities have shifted this year, and instead of being thankful for Red Sox third basemen and a good deal at the mall, I'm happy to have my family. I'm happy to have my health and the luck that I get even when things are hard.

I wish for everyone to have some luck this holiday season. I wish for everyone to be happy for the family they have next week. Don't think about how awful it would be to lose them, but how great it is to be able to sit next to them. I just found out that when someone is gone, there's a little hollow piece in your heart. And even when it doesn't hurt anymore, there will still be a feeling that something is missing, like an uncle at the Thanksgiving Day table.

Katie Landers is a Collegian Columnist.

Accomplishments are a struggle at UMass

STEPHANIE O'SHEA

The other day my daughter Audrey told me that maybe she'd like to start out with degrees from state schools. Seems to me that to actually graduate from one. This seems like something that getting anything accomplished at the University of Massachusetts, reading an interview involves a decade. I can't write one, implant article about almost any school of choice, thus, anyway. But for my immediate purpose I'll explain the frustrating series of incidents took place to become.

My parents pay for my education, and my dad is the one that takes care of the paperwork and sends the actual check out for me to attend this school. He pays through a service called AMS, which allows tuition, room, board and fees to be paid monthly, as opposed to in one big chunk. In the summer, he figures out the total amount to be paid to UMass, divides it by the number of months and arrives at a uniform monthly fee.

The glaring problem with this system is that the University failed to inform neither me nor my parents of expenses incurred during the semester, such as the computer account fee. Furthermore, we were not aware that I was mistakenly signed up for the $1200+ UMass/Aetna/Hickering Group health insurance. These fees remained secret until I tried to register for classes on SPIRE. I am currently blocked out of the system because I still owe the University a couple thousand dollars. I am freaked out and tense with the fear that other students are taking my spots in the classes that I need.

I have my own health insurance, and wanted to cancel the plan that UMass was trying to charge me for. I went to Health Services and filled out two forms, as well as writing a paragraph about why I did not resolve this problem by a certain date. Doing this was not too bad, but what killed me was when the woman behind the counter nonchalantly told me that this happens to a lot of students, particularly those who pay through AMS, and she was just happy that I was not selling at her. She then wrote "AMS STUDENT" on my form to be faxed to the insurance company and told me that they deal with this formality all the time.

It is incredibly agitating and insulting that this problem is built into the system of monthly billing, and not one employee of UMass or one of its business partners has had the foresight or competence to fix this problem, despite the fact that it is so common. My forms should circulate through the system within a few days.

After accounting for the insurance, I still mysteriously owed UMass over $700. A woman on the phone at the Bursar's Office informed me that my dad probably calculated the month's fee too low, and although he was paying regularly, I still owe money. Then she said the magic words, "This happens to a lot of students." Wonderful! Each customer calculates what he is to pay to AMS each month, but neither UMass nor AMS gives feedback upon whether the amount is appropriate or not. It would make sense to give parents and students more guidance for when they are sitting in their homes trying to work the numbers.

Before my dad writes a check out for over $700 to AMS, he wants proof that the money is actually owed. He asked the Bursar's Office to fax him my account information, but they informed him that this is against policy, and that I can check it on SPIRE, or receive it in person. SPIRE told me that this transaction could not be processed, and I begged the Bursar's office to fax out my information, since I had to go to work, and could absolutely not make it down there before they closed.

The woman on the phone declined, and gave me an attitude when I asked her to read my bill to me line for line. At one point she made the confusing statement that the UMass insurance was on my bill, yet I was not being charged for it. She then told me that she did not really know what the deal was, and snidely told me to just come down there. Eventually my only option was to just hang up and yell obscenities.

The problems concerning my bill are largely unresolved, and there is a good chance that my schedule is going to suck next semester as a result. Thankfully, I am in the Isenberg School of Management, which is decently funded, and has a faculty that will do whatever they can to help me out. I am afraid, however, that I will wind up in a horrendous honors class, because I missed out on the good Commonwealth College courses. I feel badly for the students in my position who are Sociology or Spanish majors, and have to practically compete in cage matches against each other for a seat in class. I also feel fortunate that my parents pay for my education. Surprise charges can be devastating to students that must fund college for themselves.

The motto of UMass is "excellence within your reach," when in fact it should be "students smart enough for private school, but can't afford it." When I visit private colleges, I am stunned by how amazingly smooth everything runs there. Granted, their students pay over $30,000 per year, but UMass is not even giving us the quality that $12,000 should buy.

It is time that we stop being treated poorly, just because the economy is in a slump, or because Jane Swift or William Bulger have other priorities. Students are essentially customers, and if UMass does not start catering to us, we will eventually find alternatives. Whitmore should stop blaming its huge inadequacies on being broke, and realize that problem areas, such as billing students, could be helped by just acting smarter. The administration should take a lesson from its student body that stretches its money everyday.

Stephanie O'Shea is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

ARTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM 11.20.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Ex-Soundgarden and Rage members join up forces on new release

I was in my friend's dorm room last week and she had her TV tuned to MTV2, and a really weird video came on. There were so many fireworks in the video, I couldn't see any of the band members. Instead, I only made them out to be dark figures.

"What the hell is this?" I asked my friend.

"I don't know. It sounds like Chris Cornell and Rage Against the Machine," my friend guessed. "Their name is Audioslave."

It did sound like them, but I took my friend's words with a grain of salt and decided to find out for myself who these guys were.

Yeah, well, I know this sounds weird, but she was right. Audioslave, whose self-titled debut album was released yesterday, is a new band that is a combination of ex-Soundgarden lead vocalist Chris Cornell and ex-Rage Against the Machine guitarist Tom Morello, bassist Tim Commerford, and drummer Brad Wilk.

ROCK-N'-OUT
With Samara Marblestone

Sound like a dangerous combination? I look at it as throwing a lit match onto gasoline.

I just want to throw something on the table for you – check this out: for those who were taking a nap during the late 90s, Soundgarden and Rage Against the Machine are two bands that broke up on very bad terms. Soundgarden was one of the founding fathers of grunge and consisted of lead vocalist Cornell, guitarist Kim Thayil, bassist Hiro Yamamoto, and drummer Matt Cameron. The band broke up in April of 1997 due to Cornell's alleged drug problem and other internal problems of the band. Rage Against the Machine, a once revolutionary and political rock band, consisted of lead vocalist Zack De La Rocha, Morello, Commerfield and Brad Wilk. De La Rocha left the band on a very bad note in 2000, which pretty much pronounced the death of the band.

So, let's take a vote. Who thinks that Audioslave is going to last, after the band members' tarnished histories?

Anyone? Anyone?

If Audioslave lasts, then don't be too surprised when you're sitting in a window seat on a plane and see a pig out-

Turn to ROCKIN, page 6

COURTESY ACTAVISTA.COM

EX-SOUNDGARDEN LEAD SINGER CHRIS CORNELL AND THREE MEMBERS FROM RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE HAVE FORMED AUDIOSLAVE.

Posters: making rooms fun

By Andrea Gross
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

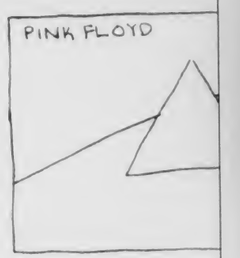
Posters are a big way to catch people's attention and to show them where one's interests lay. And so, it's no wonder when cruising down a college dorm hall, glancing through all open doorways, one will see a wide and colorful array of posters decorating students' rooms.

Aleena Bando, the president of Butterfield's House Council, has a poster hanging in her dorm room wall featuring the entire cast of A Midsummer Night's Dream by William Shakespeare.

"The print is tiny, but I love that it has the whole play on it," remarked Bando about the beige-colored poster with black text and a "whimsical fairy in the very center."

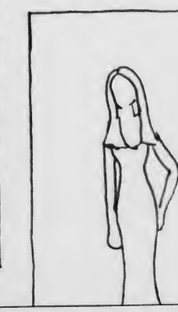
Bando, a freshman Pre-Journalism major, received this poster because "…it has all the words to the play on it. I took four years of theater (in high school) and every year I'd do the closing monologue from A Midsummer Night's Dream as my final project, and every year I got the same grade. Everyone just thought that was weird," she said.

Unfortunately, University of Massachusetts dorm students are forced to decorate their walls with only what they can tape onto them, as the use of nails and tacks is prohibited at UMass. Thus, if it weren't for posters, students would not have much to hang up. Walls without posters would be bare, said Lisa Ackroyd, a freshman Astrophysics major.

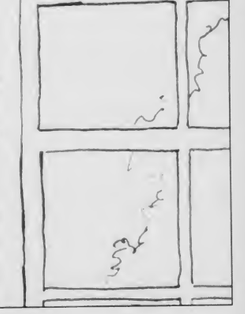


"Posters are a good way to escape from the asylum-like style of the average white-walled dorm room," she said.

A male telephone operator from the poster selling website all-posters.com, who refused to reveal his name, offered his insight as to where the appeal of posters derives its strength.



"Art work and home decorations make you feel good, and we're in the business of making people feel good," he said.



The trick of the business is to maintain a diverse selection, as

Turn to POSTER, page 6

COURTESY EPIC RECORDS

OTEP BREATHE SOME FRESH AIR INTO ROCK WITH THEIR FIRST ALBUM, SEVAS TRA. THE GROUP OFFERS A BRAID HARD TO COME BY IN ROCK BANDS: A FEMALE LEAD.

Female lead singer fires up Otep

By Toninho Scanlon-Valcimon
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

OTEP
Sevas Tra
Capitol

When the revolutionary new band Otep, named after the female lead singer in the four person band, broke onto the music scene in 2000, their innovative and emotionally charged sound was the catalyst that signaled a possible change as to how music lovers would look at hard rock. With their raw energy as a live band, Otep earned themselves a spot on Ozzfest 2000, without the backing of a record label. From there, this auspicious new band has since parlayed that energy into a large label deal with Capitol Records. This deal should bring their first album, Sevas Tra, to the ears of awaiting listeners, which have sadly been somewhat starving for new ideas and a new sound in the hard rock genre.

Female lead singers in rock bands are hard to come by. Two notable female leads are those of the bands Kittie and Sinister. However, other than these two talented singers, the realm of rock has been relatively scant of good female leads. Otep, as an individual, brings a clear unique woman's perspective to the hard rock world that one would be hard pressed to find in any genre. With her emotionally charged lyrics and a voice to back up her aggressive and self-empowering feelings, Otep can deliver a performance that more than stands up to any other male singer in the business. Also, she does not – in any way – hold back when it comes to subject matter. Her music flies in the face of many social and spiritual imperfections that everyone is afraid to talk about.

Without hesitation, Otep dives into the true nature of its concept of reality and brings to light the problems that it feels must be addressed. Their themes are not simply the growls and grunts of an adolescent or immature mind, but intelligent in nature and socially and spiritually enlightening. In fact, OTEP is not hard rock for the sake of being hard rock. They use the medium as the most effective method to get their message across.

This effective method doesn't only work strictly with their music, but also explodes over to their video, "Blood Pigs," which is getting spins on MTV2. In the video, Otep captures the raw power of its live performance, along with its own visions of what the song means to them. The video, filled with shots of both the band and eerie imagers of impaled pig heads and other such mind-bending occurrences, gives a clear and riveting sense of the band's true power. At a simple glance, the viewer knows right away that Otep offers something rare and something much more than the average band. Possibly the most beautiful aspect of the band is that they truly believe in what they preach. Also, the individual members of the band all came from different backgrounds, and all have different experiences and ideals to bring together unique sounds. Not only that, but each band member has classical training, which creates a special respect of the pure essence of music itself, and creates a more intelligent and in-depth sound than most other bands.

Otep have that certain something that is totally unidentifiable – something that is able to enthrall the listener completely. One will want to listen to it again and again, because the depth of the music continuously reveals aspects that one didn't hear before. In fact, most of the lyrics started as poetry, straight from the soul. The beauty of the music is second only to the beauty of the lead singer herself, a strong yet emotional woman who is not afraid to tell it like it is, and remain true to herself throughout all of the hardships in her life. Her dynamic sound, coupled with the fantastic ability of her musical accomplices make Otep a great band, and one surely off to a good start.

Lauryn Hill welcomes second chance

By Scott Enright
COLLEGIAN STAFF

During the peak of her success in 1999, Rolling Stone described Lauryn Hill's appearance at a universal Amphitheater show in Los Angeles.

Hill hit the stage wearing a long orange and red wrap/skirt, a white T-shirt and a Levi's jacket. The show was sponsored by the clothing company. The petite singer's minimal dreads were covered by a large, white knit cap, and her thin wrists adorned with a multitude of bangles. She was surrounded by dozens of performers who also wore a plethora of Levi's jeans jackets and skirts.

Today, minimal jewelry and accessories humble Hill's figure. In her time off, Hill has been through a major transformation.

In her new CD MTV Unplugged 2.0, she spends time singing and talking about the change she has been through.

"I know I have to face the temptations of my life," Hill says. "I will not abandon last now that I know the power that there is to express. The songs on [my album] Miseducation of Lauryn Hill] do not just put a definition on 'truth,' but rather affect the audience a melodic explanation that people will understand what they are meant to understand when they hear her new music.

"God doesn't lie and I know that he knows how to get to the hearts of people better than anybody," Hill says. So I don't worry about that because I know he related to who he is and anything that is suppose to be a reflection of that time and I'm cool."

She leaves the listener to almost visualize what she's been through.

"There was a period of time where I was just out," she says, just gone from the public. I came to terms with the fact that I had created this idyllic public [or] public illusion, and it held no bearing on who I am in my reality. "At that point I just said, I gotta do something and really explore the fact that this is who I am and I have to be who I am."

"Some miraculous things have happened to a tremendous amount of time and all. I'm just very blessed to be able to be here today and to share with you some of the things I've learned."

Now that Hill is performing again she refrains from any comments to say about what was going on in the four-year time off.

"I tended to earth unable to find my worth because I was just my own vanity," she sings in "Doo Wop (That Thing)." "Can I even factor that I have only light after in a ragged interpretation of this day and I'm in the shadow with my back to the light, too afraid to see it's me in the way."

Lauryn Hill performs on the Grammy Award winning, and somewhat reflective MTV Unplugged 2.0

Hill tells the listener during an interlude that she is still realizing that she had a problem; she is still working the steps she needs to overcome it.

"God is dealing with me everyday ... he showed me and know, look Lauryn, you're the problem," Hill says. "I'm going to show you how you're causing the problem and now I want you to be the solution. That's what all of these songs are about. Problem, cause and resolution."

Snuggling her lips together as if they were their own percussive instruments while strumming her acoustic guitar with the sharpest rhythmic phrasing, Hill's deep voice pulses with intensity throughout the captured MTV event.

In "Peace of Mind," she sings "What a joy it is to be able to get another chance ya' Everyday is another chance, to get it right this time."

Captain America takes on terrorism

By Erik Taylor
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

It has been said that comic books as a whole serve as a mirror for the current state of society. Captain America serves as a symbol of America and strives to uphold American ideals. The superhero debuted in 1941 with a cover depicting Cap trading blows with Hitler himself. It was quite a statement considering America had not yet officially announced its participation in World War II. After the war was over, the hero was erased in ice only to resemerge in the '60s with Marvels creation of the modern superhero.

Despite his confusing history, Captain America always tried to maintain the ideals that make him a symbol of America. Over time he has acted more like a superhero than the soldier he was meant to be. He led a team of superheroes called the Avengers against threats the U.S. couldn't handle. After the tragedy of 9/11, we were faced with a tragedy that no one expected and many couldn't handle. This event was dealt with in comics respectably, leading to many changes with characters and storylines. Captain America had a new challenge - to be a symbol of a country that faced its worst tragedy ever.

Marvel decided to relaunch the series under their more mature Marvel Knights imprint and gave Cap a new mission. He now lives in a world as it is how it should be, to show people what it could be. He fights our war on terror with a vigor fitting for the task. With a new and relevant Cap, Marvel had found a place for their hero and a fight worth fighting for.

Now what have respectable publications like The New York Times and USA Today been saying about the new mini-series about Captain America? With the popularity of the new Captain America series dealing with very relevant current problems, Marvel decided to take readers back to before Steve Rogers became Captain America. The series is called The Truth and it reveals the fictional truth about the creation of Captain America, dealing with America's history with racism.

In 1932, the U.S. government tested the effects of syphilis on black men and when nearly 400 tested positive for the disease, they were denied treatment and pushed aside. In The Truth, the government does the same by testing the Super Soldier Serum on black men in order to perfect its formula for the white Steve Rogers. Like the real life experiments on syphilis, The Truth exposes this aspect of Captain America's history.

There are many opinions about this mini-series but everyone agrees that it is a bold move by Marvel. Some say that it is necessary and it's only a gimmick to sell more books and gain publicity. Others say it's a good idea, offering us an intriguing way to view Cap's origin. It will spark some controversy for longtime fans that do not like their favorite character changed like this but Marvel promises that it won't change the character at all. Intense research of the time period has been done and Marvel assures people that the story will be told respectably. If Captain America is to serve as a symbol of America, he should be burdened with all of the evils America has done as well as its triumphs.

The first The Truth (out of a total of six) goes on sale today at ShowCase Comics in Hadley.

■ rockin

continued from page 5

side flying right alongside with you.

Let's take a closer look at Cornell alone. This dude is an awesome musician, but it always seems like nothing works out for him career-wise. Cornell went solo about two years ago and had a hit single, "Can't Change Me." His solo career had a very short life, and no one really knows why. Does Cornell have a problem with sticking with one project for a long time, or is there another unknown reason?

What about the orphans of Rage? Their amazing singer left them hangin' high and dry, and it seems like they're looking for a new daddy of some sort. Is Cornell the right choice? Musically, it is a great combination. But let's look at it rationally: just because the musical combination is magical, it doesn't mean that the band members' social chemistry will do the same.

So let's all close our eyes tightly, take a deep breath, and cross our fingers. If anyone has a lucky rabbit's foot or happens to be near a well and has a penny in his pocket, please take advantage. Audioslave is an amazing and unreal combination of two of the best modern rock bands ever.

Let's hope it lasts.

Samara Marblestone is a Collegian Columnist

■ posters

continued from page 5

the operator pointed out, in order to ensure that the interests of all their customers can be met - from little kids to college students to the elderly.

Posters, as noticeable as they are, provide a quick and easy way for others to learn something about an individual. In general, the posters that people choose reflect their interests, explained M.M.K., an undeclared UMass freshman who wished to be referred to by her initials.

"Posters express the individual who lives in the room," she said.

From a poster, one can learn someone's music taste, interest, hobbies, and even style of humor. According to Ackroid, posters can function as great conversation starters as well.

"When someone comes into a room and sees an Eminem poster they might be like 'I love Eminem, too!'" Ackroid said. "Voila - instant conversation."

Ackroid also loves posters "that have a message or a moral in them." She does not currently have any kind of said poster in her room, but she wishes she did as she finds them inspiring. Meanwhile, M.M.K. expressed a love of "posters of people."

In the religious book titled, Is There a Creator Who Cares About You? which examines the evidence for the existence of God, there is a section called "Art and Beauty," which deals with our love for aesthetic decorations such as posters. It quotes the recent book Symmetry, Causality, Mind by Professor Michael Leyton, where the professor poses the question, "Why do people pursue art so passionately?" As he points out, "Some might say that mental activity such as mathematics confers clear benefits to humans, but why art? What inner sense is involved?" The "Art and Beauty" section then elaborates on these puzzling questions. "People around the globe put attractive pictures or paintings on the walls of their home or office. Most people like to listen to some style of music at home and in their cars. Why? It certainly is not because music once contributed to the survival of the fittest." According to Leyton, "art is perhaps the most inexplicable phenomenon of the human species."

Not everyone is into posters, though. Stacey Bernardeau, a UMass freshman and psychology major, explained that she did not like posters because they are just replicas of other pictures that anyone else could buy. Bernardeau likes to hang up things of a more personal nature.

"Posters are not my thing because I'd rather hang up something with more meaning," she said. "For example, something someone made for me, a flag or a picture of my family."

Students most commonly buy posters of famous people, such as sports players and music artists. Some have even noticed humorous posters about drinking, drugs, and sex.

The website for Beyond the Wall (www.beyondthewall.com), a poster store, lists some of the top selling posters. Some of these include posters of the movie Dirty Dancing, Carmen Electra in a bathing suit, a copy of the painting "Starry Night" and Vin Diesel showing off his biceps.

Posters are relatively inexpensive, usually priced between $10 and $20. There are many poster-devoted stores such as Beyond the Wall at the Hampshire Mall, Holyoke Mall, and in downtown Northampton Media Play, also located at the Hampshire Mall, sells posters, along with Newbury Comics in downtown Amherst. If you are too lazy, or cannot find what you want at the store, check out the World Wide Web for websites like allposters.com.

Interested in Business?

The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
277 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Now playing for Friday 11/22 - Thursday 11/28
TOTAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
HALF PAST DEAD* PG-13 1:40 4:40 7:40 10:00
HARRY POTTER AND THE CHAMBER OF SECRETS* PG 1:00 4:00 7:00 10:00
MY BIG FAT GREEK WEDDING PG-13 1:30 4:25 7:25 10:05
SWEET HOME ALABAMA PG-13 1:45 4:45 7:45 10:20
THE RING PG-13 1:10 4:10 7:10 9:55
THE SANTA CLAUS 2 G 1:05 3:05 5:05 7:05 9:05
THE TRUTH ABOUT CHARLIE PG-13 1:15 4:15 7:15 10:10
GHOST SHIP R 1:20 4:20 7:20 10:15
SPY KIDS 3-D PG 1:45 7:45
SPHERE PG-13 1:50 4:50 7:50 10:30
*DENOTES THE MOVIE
• NO PASSES • NO SUPERSAVERS
Times & showtimes available at cinemark.com

BARBADOS
SPRING BREAK '03
Includes Free Meals, Free Parties, Free Cruise
ARE YOUR READY?
If you are ready for something different... Barbados is waiting for you! Legendary beaches and fantastic nightlife makes Spring Break in Barbados unforgettable.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

*Save $350 Off Move-In Costs
Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments
FREE HEAT & HOT WATER
Fully appliances kitchens
Washers/dryers available
Pool, volleyball, basketball
Minutes from Umass-On free busline
Call Sugarloaf Estates today!
413-665-3856
Visit us at sugarloafestates.com
*limited time offer

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY of PARIS
Two 5-week Summer Sessions:
I. June 2-July 8, 2003
II. July 12-Aug. 14, 2003
Two 3-week Sessions of French Immersion:
I. June 2-June 25, 2003
II. July 12- Aug. 1, 2003
Other Special Programs
Tel: (33) 1 40 62 06 14
Fax: (33) 1 40 62 07 17
or in the U.S. (303) 757-6333 summer@aup.edu www.aup.edu

Your Ticket to China
Shenzhen Internship Program
深圳
Spend a year teaching English conversation in the top-rated public school system of Shenzhen - China's economic miracle, a vibrant, modern city of four million adjacent to Hong Kong.
Begin with three weeks of training in Chinese language and in English teaching, with classroom practice, at Beijing University in August. Then, teach 15 classes per week at a Shenzhen junior-senior high school September 2003 - June 15, 2004. Optionally continue your study of Mandarin Chinese with college-credit courses and earn credits in an ESL practicum in Shenzhen.
WHAT YOU RECEIVE
• Round-trip ticket
• Free housing at Beijing University and train travel from Beijing to Shenzhen
• Free faculty housing and some meals. Shenzhen apartments have air-conditioning, telephone, and TV. Married couples can be accommodated.
• Stipend RMB 3,500 per month (approx. $425) plus RMB 4,000 bonus in June
• Paid 3-week vacation at Chinese New Year in January/February
YOUR NEXT STEP
For more information, email or phone:
Prof. William O'Donnell, University of Memphis
E-mail: chinapgm@cc.memphis.edu
Phone: 901 678-4584 office 901 857-2930 cell
Or visit our website: http://www.chinaprogram.org

New Gen Ed Science Course
"The best course I ever had."
www.bio.umass.edu/biochem/mydna
MY DNA
No prerequisites.
Check it out online!
Register now - My DNA - Biochem 100

■ A-10

continued from page 10

their guests 31-14. Northeastern's Tim Gale made sure that didn't happen in consecutive weeks as he rumbled for a career-best five touchdowns and 219 yards on 33 carries en route to winning the A-10 Offensive Player of the Week Award.

Gale was spelled on the run by Anthony Riley, who went 144 yards on 16 carries and picked up a score of his own as the run-heavy Husky offense ran roughshod over one of the worst run defenses in I-AA football. NU totaled 380 ground yards on 58 carries and QB Shawn Brady needed to attempt only 13 passes in the triumph.

The Wildcats went into halftime down just 24-17, but got steamrolled in the second 30 minutes. Stephan Lewis went for 159 and a touchdown on the ground, but the NU defense stood firm and allowed just 104 net yards on the ground and were the recipients of seven UNH turnovers.

The Huskies can wrap up a share of the A-10 title by turning aside IMU in Brookline Saturday. UNH can still play spoiler when it heads to Maine for a date with the Black Bears.

Avoiding the trap

Every year in the A-10 it seems, a team considered one of the favorites for the conference title goes into Richmond and comes out on the short end of an exhausting Spider victory. Maine needed a win there this weekend as it continued its hunt for the championship and got it, slipping by Richmond 21-14.

Kevin McMahan's 38-yard score with a minute to go in the first half proved the game-winner as the Black Bear defense clamped down to stave off the Spiders in the final 30 minutes. McMahan earned A-10 Rookie of the Week honors with five catches for 125 yards and a pair of scores.

The Spiders threatened to tie the game late in the third, but Maine held on fourth-and-goal at the one to take over possession. Richmond's Stacy Tutt was picked off by Brandon McGowan on the Black Bear 27 with 1:47 to go in the game.

Maine did get some bad news for its final contest of the year, as star QB Jake Eaton went down with a knee injury in the second and did not return. He went 10-of-13 for 140 before going down and his status for Saturday is uncertain.

The Bears host New Hampshire this weekend with the A-10 title on the line while Richmond heads across the state for a matchup with William and Mary.

Snoozer of the week

In what could have been a trap game for Villanova, the Wildcats dismantled the visiting Rhode Island Rams 45-3. After the score was tied at three in the early-going, it was all Villanova, as the Rams handed it the game by way of seven fumbles, four of which wound up in Nova's hands. Jayson Davis managed just 7-of-14 under center for only 70 yards.

The Wildcats barely needed their offense to show up, and got only 299 yards of total offense. Brett Gordon went just 13-for-18, throwing for 179 yards and three touchdowns, going to Shaz Brown, Brian White and Matt Chila.

Villanova heads to Newark for a matchup with Delaware, who had an off-week this past weekend. Nova still has a shot at an at-large bid to the NCAA Tournament, with its 8-3 overall record. URI plays host to UMass on Saturday with a chance for its second A-10 win of the season.

Pig's Skinny is out this week due to injury. It will return to its rightful place next week.

MAINE'S JAKE EATON, ONE OF THE CONFERENCE'S BEST SIGNAL-CALLERS, INJURED HIS LEFT KNEE AGAINST RICHMOND AND IS QUESTIONABLE FOR THIS WEEKEND AGAINST NEW HAMPSHIRE.

WE WANT YOU!

LOOKING TO BUILD YOUR RESUME?
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is looking for highly motivated individuals to work as sales representatives in the advertising department. Applicants must possess strong organizational, interpersonal, and communication skills. Come by Campus Center Room 113 to request an application today!

Styles by Deborah

Featuring Foil Highlights & Designer Haircuts for Students
$10 off Foils and Style Haircuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
$5 off Clipper Cuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

WIRELESS SAVINGS!

SAVE $40.00
Introducing the Sony Ericsson T61C
The New Look of Reliability
$69.99 Regular Price
$30.00 Mail-in Rebate
$10.00 Instant Rebate
$29.99 Your Cost
With new 1 year agreement. Some restrictions apply.
• Personalize your phone with snap-on front and back color covers and customizable ring tones
• Keep in touch with two-way text messaging
• Surf the web with the five-way joy stick and soft keys.
The T61C makes calling fun and easy!
4000 Night & Weekend Airtime Minutes when on the America's Choice Network
Plus
1000 Anytime Mobile To Mobile
Minutes to call any of our 30 million customers nationwide on our national mobile to mobile network
AMERICA'S CHOICE
300 anytime minutes FOR $39.99 monthly access With 1 or 2 year agreement
Unlimited nationwide long distance. No roaming charges coast-to-coast.
All when calling on the America's Choice® network
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 69¢/min. CDMA tri-mode phone with updated software required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley 322 Russell St. 413.587.3248
Holyoke 50 Holyoke Mall 413.533.2500
verizon wireless Authorized Retailer
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri. 9:01pm-5:59am Sat. 12am-Sun. 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and Calling Plan. $35 activation fee applies. $175 early termination fee applies. Requires credit approval. Cannot be combined with other service promotions. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Mobile to mobile calls depleted by calls made during night and weekend hours. Subject to taxes & other charges. Not available in all markets. Geographic and other restrictions apply. See brochure and sales representative for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless.

FRUGAL FRIDAY!
JOIN US FOR OUR SPECIAL SALES EVENT
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22ND
ONE DAY ONLY!
BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM and get an item of equal or lesser value
50% OFF!*
UMASS University of Massachusetts UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com
*Does not apply to sale items, regular priced merchandise only. Not valid with any other offer

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Get Greek Stuff F.A.S.T. Our suppliers get great discounts. Lettering, embroidery, novelties. Visit us online at GreekSports.com or (800)223-1897 sales@greeksports.com

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven Fundraiser. 3 hours of your time and absolutely no risk. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program. It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888)923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Builders Apartments, 2 Hudson Apartments. Lease begins December, January, February. Great rentals and low move in costs. Stop by or call 256-8554

1 Bedroom/ Full Bath/ kitchen/ living room/ Dining Area/ $740/ month Puffton Village utilities include. Call Jon 549-1621

Sunderland 2 bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Save $350 Off Move-In Costs Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments FREE HEAT & HOT WATER Fully applianced kitchens Washers/ dryers available Pool, volleyball, basketball Minutes from Umass On free busline Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 Visit us at sugarloafestates.com limited time offer

Apt. For Rent 1 1/2 blks. On Rt. 9 1/4 m. from town $950. 254-0340

2 apartments in house for rent. Four bedroom and 5 bedroom. Full Kitchen, Parking, heating included, laundry facility. $1400 and $1500 413-563-1888

Turners Falls 2+ bedroom apt. Quirky layout. Some new wood floors and lots of closets. 25-30 minutes to U Mass or NoHo. $700 with heat 433-3922.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Sunderland 2 Bedroom corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included available immediately 397-9912

Brandywine Apts. Now Leasing 1 &2 bedroom apts. Leases begin Nov, Dec, Jan or Feb. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywineapts.com Stop by or call 549-2600 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a new or used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition. 565-0509 582-9103

89 Nissan 240SX Coupe 155k 5speed Grt Cond Sporty $3000 Emily 546-0337

94 Merc Sable Wagon Well-maintained, Runs great. Reliable. 2200. /BO 549-7455

EMPLOYMENT

Winter Break Employment – Barnes & Noble at Boston University. Help us prepare for the upcoming semester. Needed: Cashiers, Shelvers, Customer Service, Phones. Flexible shifts (20,30, 40 + hrs per week) starting December 16th. January 25th. Store discount, conveniently located in Kenmore Sq. under the Citgo Sign on MBTA B, C, or D Green line. Meet our representatives Dec 2nd or 3rd at the Campus Center Concourse or call our Human Resource Dept. at 617-236-7488 or E-Mail: Hshy@barnesandnoble.com for more info.

Bartender Positions make up to $300/shift. No experience required. Great College Job. 1-800-806-0084 Ext. 1525

Wanted: Spring/ Summer Interns must be rebels, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box. Average Pay $9,300 413-549-3746

Part-Time Internship. Ad Sales, PR, Distribution. Well Paid Flexible Hours. E-mail ucal@bendnet.com with "Intern" in subject line.

EMPLOYMENT

Politics Got You Down? Clean Water Act is hiring grassroots organizers to help hold politicians accountable! Work on environmental/ public health campaigns. Join a winning team and fight for progressive causes you believe in. $345/wk + bonus & bens. Call today!!! 413-584-9830

Interviewing Now!! For Holiday Help and winter Break Work. $15.50 base- Appt. in our busy customer Service and sales departs. PT/ FT flex. Conditions Apply. Start NOW or After finals. . . 781-890-7667 617-323-3456

Attn: UMASS Students Holiday break not exciting? Make some cash, Build your Resume and work with our Student team. Call Or apply online. 781-890-7667 (Metrowest) 617-323-3456 (Boston City) www.winter-breakwork.com

Now. 21, 2002 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a spring 2003 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate for single w/bath $375/ mo w/ heat in puffton 2 bedroom w/ male undergrads starts jan. Inquire John at 549-0794 or jburgess@cellab-mail.cs.umass.edu

SERVICES

Fall leaf cleanups done cheap. Call Nate for a free estimate. 259-1312.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

On Bus Route 1 Bedroom Available Winter & Spring (fits two) 2 Bedroom Available for summer. Call 256-1989.

TRANSPORTATION

Air Taxi, transportation in/out of Northampton Airport to your destination. L & E Air Charter, (401) 524-1697

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! Springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK Atlanta, Cherokee, Holyoke, Mashpee, Mississippi Delta Email: kh@som.umass.edu

SPRING BREAK CHEAP!!! Call Logan (413) 210-5778

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now . . . Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuREan.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS / 3
3	NESN
4	Fox Sports Network
5	PBS / 57
6	HSCN Cinema
7	WB / 30
8	UPN 38
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX / 61
11	ABC / 40
12	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	ESPN Classic
20	CNN
21	CNN HL
22	Weather Channel
23	Learning Channel
24	History Channel
25	A & E
26	Discovery Channel
27	Discovery Health
28	Food Network
29	NASA
30	Home & Garden TV
31	Travel Channel
32	Lifetime
33	CNNfn
34	Tech TV
35	BET
36	CMT
37	USA
38	TNN
39	MTV
40	MTV2
41	VH-1
42	TNT
43	TBS
44	E! Entertainment
45	Sci-Fi Channel
46	Court TV
47	Nick at Nite
48	Comedy Central
49	Cartoon Network
50	Game Show Network
51	TV Land
52	FOX Family
53	Univision
54	Telemundo
55	College TV Network
56	C-SPAN
57	C-SPAN2
61	CTN

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day - Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

The Torques By Ken Fredette

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Quote of the Day

"It's a great thing when you realize you still have the ability to surprise yourself."

-American Beauty

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 33	HIGH: 51 LOW: 39	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – You're very likely to discover just what you're made of today and how you compare to the competition.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Arrangements you are working on may amount to more of an expense than you had expected today.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Much deserved recognition will come your way today – but this is no reason to let up.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You must look at the world around you from a realistic perspective.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You'll be accommodating to your friends and supporters, and you'll give those who do not agree with you the benefit of the doubt.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You'll be receiving messages of every kind throughout the day, and you mustn't make the mistake of taking things too literally.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You'll enjoy a renewed and healthier perspective today, as a result of a highly valuable opportunity.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You're spending too much time safeguarding your own reputation at this time.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – If it's affection you're after, you may have it today.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – The subtle, detailed approach will surely win the day.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may view this day as a lucky one in some respects, but in others you'll have to work harder than usual.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – You'll be thinking big thoughts today and getting in touch more firmly with your own destiny.

We need daily comics! If you are interested, please call 545-1809 and ask for the Comics Editor for more information.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cream of Spinach Soup

American Chop Suey

Cajun Lightning Chicken

Beans & Rice (vegan)

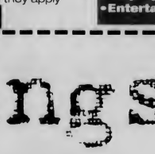
Ravioli Alfredo (vegetarian)

DINNER

Cream of Spinach Soup

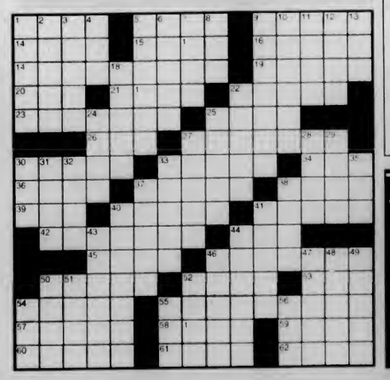
Turkey Cutlet

Roast Beef



Madras Tofu Curry (vegan)

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Wed: Reggae Night
Thurs: Fear Nuttin' Band $3 - Cover
Fri: Irish Seisiun
Sat: Few and Far Between (Jazz and Bluegrass)
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 Farm structure
5 Wide yawn
9 Not burning
14 Screenwriter James —
15 Author — Wiesel
16 March composer
17 Burger go-with (2 wds.)
19 Navajo dwelling
20 Fury
21 ISU location
22 Untidy
23 Desert safari
25 Ticket price
26 Beat the field
27 Heeds the alarm (2 wds.)
30 Continental divider
33 Shouted
34 Thicken
36 DC figures
37 Forest refuges
38 Tien Shan range
39 "— Girls"
40 Flaky
41 Vast chasm
42 Head palms
44 Harper or Majors
45 Internet lan
46 Spa offering
50 Playwright — Rice
52 Showroom item
53 Bagel partner
54 Unfired brick
55 Occupation in Alaska (2 wds.)
57 Fragrant shrub
58 Upscale cheese
59 Knowing look
60 Secret supply
61 Pouches
62 "Orinoco Flow" singer

DOWN
1 Fundamental
2 Socrates' forum
3 Direct elsewhere
4 Beauty-salon item
5 Kind of measles
6 UFO passenger
7 Tie holders
8 Startled cry
9 Worked at a theater
10 Rodeo gear
11 Carries wearily
12 "Fly Away" (2 wds.)
13 Sunbathe
18 Bette or Miles
22 Compels
24 Leather punches
25 Sprite
27 Scribble
28 Like gargoyles
29 Green veggies
30 Web site addr.
31 Coral ridge
32 Lhasa —
33 Sippity a banquet
35 Lily, to Pierre
37 Powerful beam
38 Fortas and Burrows
40 Implore
41 Early moralist
43 Ballroom numbers
44 Shop machines
46 Harmonious sound
47 Burns partner
48 Like caramel
49 Surplus
50 Revise
51 Old Kinks' song
52 Distinctive air
54 Unser and Gore
55 Air rifle ammo
56 Seine site

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12 3-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Andy Vogt
Photo Technician	Daniel Davies, Jr.
Copy Chief	Glen Straub
Production Supervisor	Shannon Farrington
Production Staff	Litty Nielsen, Scott Pihl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

NCAA picture clears up in A-10

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Well, things are a little bit clearer.

Coming into this weekend, four teams were tied atop the Atlantic 10 football standings with incredibly complicated tiebreakers set to decide the conference champion. One little thump by every team with sole possession of first place.

But with Massachusetts and William and Mary both losing this weekend, paving the way for a Maine and Northeastern showdown for sole possession of the conference. Both teams are all but guaranteed to move on should they win next week as the A-10 will likely still get at least two bids to the NCAA Tournament.

The Minutemen, Tribe and Wildcats of Villanova all have three losses, but are all battling it out for the 16 team postseason tourney. None has the best shot at making it in with a win as they have only three overall losses.

Hopefully, should both the Black Bears and Huskies lose this weekend, all that can be thrown out of whack again.

The perils of the A-10

William and Mary was a big-time favorite heading into Harrisonburg, Va. for a date with James Madison. Always a tough place to play, Bridgeforth Stadium claimed another victim, swallowing up the Tribe 34-31.

Dave Corley's last second heroics proved unfruitful for the visitor as JMU took the game in the first overtime when Raymond Hines plunged one yard for the three-point victory.

Corley's TD pass to Nick Rogers with 50 seconds to play in regulation forced overtime, but the Tribe could manage only a 42-yard field goal by Greg Kuehn in the extra session after losing the coin toss.

The Tribe played catch up all day and never led in the contest. A pair of quick touchdowns saw the Dukes go into halftime with a 14-7 lead over their in-state rivals. The home squad had three different players throw touchdown passes despite going just 7-of-16 in the contest. Wideout Mike Connelly's 44-yard strike to Casime Harris was the key play in the fourth, putting JMU up seven with less than eight minutes to play.

The Dukes carried the ball 52 times for 230 yards in the game and will look to play the role of spoiler in the conference when they head to Parsons Field for a date with NU.

The Tribe hosts Richmond in their finale.

	Conference	Overall
Maine	6-2	9-2
Northeastern	6-2	9-2
Villanova	5-3	8-3
Massachusetts	5-3	7-4
William and Mary	5-3	6-4
Delaware	4-4	6-5
Hofstra	4-5	5-6
James Madison	3-5	5-6
Richmond	3-5	3-7
New Hampshire	2-6	3-7
Rhode Island	1-7	3-8

Opportunity thrown away

Three weeks ago, Massachusetts was sitting pretty, needing just to knock off conference also-rans New Hampshire, Hofstra and Rhode Island in order to finish atop the A-10 and get an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament. But the Minutemen got showed just how tough a conference they play in when UNH dropped them 31-14 two weeks ago. This week end, a second dose of humble pie came in the form of a 31-28 last minute Hofstra victory in Amherst.

A pair of freak plays opened the door for the Pride, as an apparent offside went uncalled, resulting in a turnover on downs, and a failure to throw the ball away thwarted the Maroon and White. Ryan Cosentino's four-yard bullet to Marques Colston with 2:18 to play proved the deciding factor in the contest as time ticked away when Tim Day was dragged down by Shaun Kinsley.

Cosentino put forth a mammoth effort in the game, going 34 for 55 in the game for 364 yards and a pair of touchdowns. His performance was especially vital in that the Hofstra running game never got off the ground, picking up just nine yards on 28 carries.

With the loss, UMass only hope for making the postseason likely lies in a pair of losses by Northeastern and Maine, which would give the Maroon and White the conference's automatic bid. The Minutemen head to Rhode Island this weekend, while Hofstra hosts Liberty in a non-conference matchup.

History doesn't repeat itself

Last week, the New Hampshire Wildcats played host to a team in the driver's seat to the conference championship in UMass and they promptly dispatched their guests 31-14. Northeastern's Tim Gale made

Turn to A-10, page 7

JOSEPH LINGA/COLLEGIAN

NORTHEASTERN'S TIM GALE HAD A MONSTER DAY THIS WEEKEND, RUNNING FOR FIVE SCORES AND MORE THAN 200 YARDS. THE NU RUN ATTACK HAS THE SCHOOL BOUND FOR THE NCAAS BARRING A DISASTER AGAINST JMU THIS WEEKEND.

BOSTON COLLEGE'S TAJBER EAVES HAS BEEN ONE OF THE LOUSIEST ROOKIES THIS SEASON. HE SHOWED HIS FESTINESS LAST NIGHT BY BEING FINED AFTER SPEARING UNH'S CHRIS HEMINGWAY.

Offensive weekend for HE

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A week and a half ago, two teams battled to a 1-0 defensive decision in Orono, Me. in a game where both teams found goals tough to come by.

It looks like both Maine and Massachusetts were happy to see jerseys other than those they faced on Nov. 9. The two teams combined for 25 goals in four games this weekend.

Ending the hibernation

The Maine offense had been somewhat dormant entering this weekend, averaging a respectable, but underperforming, four goals per game. Looks like someone woke the snoozing beast.

The Black Bears put up 13 goals in a pair of games in Beantown, taking a vital four points in Hockey East. Six second-period goals spelled victory for Maine against Northeastern on Friday, and Jim Howard proved solid enough in goal to stay awake for the remainder of the 8-2 victory.

Six players had multiple point nights as 15 of the 18 Maine skaters tallied points. Lucas Lawson led all skaters with two goals, while Cameron Lyall and HE Rookie of the Week Greg Moore netted a goal and an assist apiece and Cliff Loya, Martin Kariya and Troy Barnes each had a pair of assists.

The next night, Maine had to face pre-season favorite Boston University at Walter Brown Arena, where it promptly upended the home squad with a 7-3 victory. Francis Nault and Todd Jackson had two goals and an assist each to move Maine to a perfect 3-0-0 in conference this season. The Terriers fell into a tie for third in the conference, as they have posted just six points this season.

The Black Bears chased BU netminder Sean Fields from the game midway through the second, when he allowed his fifth goal of the night. The junior turned aside just 12 shots on the night.

Maine hosts New Hampshire Friday in a key pre-break game for both teams.

Not the trapping Minutemen

Massachusetts' struggles to score and excellent defense coming into the weekend made one visiting member of the media ask if the Minutemen had returned to playing the trap utilized by former UMass Head Coach Joe Mallen.

The Maroon and White showed the gentleman just how wrong he had been by putting up six goals on sister school UMass-Lowell. Freshman Stephen Werner notched two goals and two assists, while sophomore Greg Mauldin added a pair of goals and an assist of his own for the Minutemen to put away the River Hawks.

Gabe Winer was solid between the pipes for the home squad, turning aside 28 of 31 shots. UML netminder Dominic Smart had his struggles at the other end of the ice, allowing five shots to find a home while stopping just 14 Minutemen offerings.

Saturday was slightly tougher for the Minutemen, having to play catch up for nearly the entire game and then holding off a barrage of UML chances to a 4-3 win at Tsongas Arena. With the win, the Maroon and White claimed the Alumni Cup, given to the winner of the season series between the two schools, and UMass Head Coach Don "Toot" Cahoon posted his 200th career victory.

The line of Tim Turner, Chris Capraro and Mike Warner scored three goals and picked up four assists on the night, with Warner putting home the game-winner at 12:21. Winer again proved strong down the stretch, stopping 31 of 34 UML offerings.

The Minutemen also broke senior Ed McGrane's 16-game point streak and dropped the River Hawks to 0-6 in the conference. Lowell faces BU Thursday in its last chance to pick up points before the winter break. The Minutemen host Iona on Thursday before heading to UNH for a key game on Sunday.

Eagles scoop up rivals

The top team in the conference and in the country, Boston College, went into last weekend's matchup with BU untarnished in the conference and came out in the same condition.

The Eagles marched into Walter Brown Arena and took a 3-2 decision over the Terriers on Friday night to remain undefeated on the year. The Terriers scored first, when John Cronin put home a goal at 7:29 of the first. But 22 seconds later, Justin Dziama converted a Ned Havern rebound and the Eagles never trailed in scoring the game's next two goals.

Tim Kelleher allowed just one more BU shot to find the back of the cage, making 30 saves on 32 shots. The performance earned the senior HE Defensive Player of the Week honors.

Then last night featured a battle for the ages, with No. 1 BC taking on No. 2 UNH at Conte Forum.

The two teams needed more than 60 minutes to settle the affair, and the Wildcats came away with a 3-2 victory when Sean Collins netted his second goal of the game 3:13 into the extra session.

The game featured a skirmish in which BC's Patrick Eaves (spearing) and UNH's Colin Hemingway (fighting) were thrown out of the game.

UNH goaltender Mike Ayers went down with an injury in the victory, and his status is uncertain for the weekend.

What vaunted offense?

Providence walked into the Whittemore Center with one of the top offensive trios in the nation in Peter Fregoe, John DiSalvatore and Devin Rask.

Looks like UNH didn't care. Ayers made 24 saves and defenseman Mick Mounsey posted a goal and an assist to lead the Wildcats, who are second in both Hockey East and the nation. Freshman netminder Bobby Goepfert made 36 saves, 19 in the first period, as the Providence defense, which has been questionable at best this season, failed to show up until it was too late.

Providence plays a critical home-and-home series with Merrimack this weekend.

	Conference				Overall
	W	L	T	Pts.	W	L	T
New Hampshire	5	1	1	11	7	1	2
Boston College	5	1	0	10	8	1	1
Maine	3	0	0	6	8	1	1
Providence	3	3	0	6	8	3	0
Boston University	3	3	0	6	5	3	2
Massachusetts	3	3	0	6	4	4	0
Northeastern	1	4	1	3	2	6	2
Merrimack	1	3	0	2	2	5	1
UMass-Lowell	0	6	0	0	4	7	0

YEAR TWO HAS BEGUN
ARTS PAGE 5.
WOMEN AT AUGUSTA?
ED/OP PAGE 4.
HOCKEY NIGHT IN AMHERST
SPORTS PAGE 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FIFTY-FIVE ☆☆☆☆☆ 11.21.02

Lombardi addresses SGA

ANDREW HATHAWAY/COLLEGIAN

CHANCELLOR LOMBARDI ADDRESSES THE STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION ABOUT BUDGET CUTS, UNION PAY INCREASES AND THE FUTURE OF UMASS BOSTON AS A FLAGSHIP CAMPUS AT LAST NIGHT'S MEETING IN THE CAMPUS CENTER.

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Chancellor John V. Lombardi answered questions on budget cuts, the fight for union pay increases and the possibility of UMass Boston becoming a future flagship school at last night's Student Government Association senate meeting.

Members of the Senate and Executive Cabinet questioned Lombardi on a number of issues and concerns. Lombardi considered budget cuts and funding for the University of Massachusetts at Amherst a top priority and encouraged student input to changes they would like to see on campus.

"I'm thrilled to be invited and grateful to be here tonight," Lombardi said. "We're focused on a lot of issues and our main importance is student life and academic programming and faculty. You know and I know that the financial situation here is not ideal and it's a significant problem and the state senate sent us love notes with budget cuts in them. We're really trying to rebuild faculty and look at the overall student environment and put classes and faculty back in the University."

Senate members questioned the administration and how they hope to attain more funding for the University. Questions further arose as to whether or not Lombardi supported the unions and their fight to get their promised pay increases that the State of Massachusetts had promised them.

"We have plans for more private funding and we've developed a foundation and it will have a board of select members. Fundraising is a highly professional business and we feel that this foundation is the vehicle to make things happen," Lombardi said. "Union contracts need to be funded so our goal is to get the state to fund them so that they can get their money."

Lombardi further explained that, despite concerns over the unions' presentation and fight for funding of their contracts, he supports and encourages their fight.

"It may not be in a style that people like, but peoples salaries were cut and they have a right to be pissed off," Lombardi said. "I'm not in favor of ranting and raving, but if they were told their salaries had been cut and they were ok with that I'd be worried. The core message here is that they should fund the contracts."

Senators questioned rumors that UMass Boston may be the next flag ship school as they are undergoing construction to place residential halls on their campus. Lombardi responded by explaining that he could not see UMass Boston becoming a new flagship University at all.

"Not a snowball's chance in hell," Lombardi said. "Boston is a good campus and they have an aggressive chancellor, but they are trying to create a campus in an urban area. We are a commonwealth University and we play in a different league and we don't see any competition with UMass Boston."

In addition to Lombardi's presence at last night's Senate meeting, three motions were presented to the Senate. A motion presented by the Select Committee on Public Safety requested the approval of an open forum on public safety and resident hall bulletins.

The Senate passed the forum, which is set to take place on Dec. 3 at 4 p.m. in the Campus Center, and a public safety bulletins bill unanimously.

Questions arose regarding a motion calling for the PVTA transit system to revoke their decision to stop running buses along Fraternity Row and North Village on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights.

The buses stopped service at the two stops after 10 p.m. on those nights and have by-passed the two stops throughout the semester as a result of safety concerns within the PVTA.

The motion was sent back into committee for further research.

A final motion was presented to the Senate regarding the wording of the policies and procedures hand book for Campus Activities. The motion requested that the Campus Activities handbook state that students have up to 48 hours to submit their contracts for events to be signed. The handbook currently states that contracts must be submitted at a minimum of six weeks in advance.

After a failed attempt to table the motion back into committee, the Senate passed the motion.

"I thought tonight went great, and I'm very happy that Chancellor Lombardi answered questions and showed us what kind of leader he is," said Speaker Dan Saunders.

UMPD arrests suspect in late September rape

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts Police arrested a student late last week without incident for the alleged rape of a woman in a Southwest residence hall.

According to UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons, James A. Moore, 21, of 48 Whitney St. in Boston was arrested and charged in relation to the incident, which occurred on Sept. 29 this year.

Lyons said that rape was not reported previously in the police log or otherwise because it came about in a roundabout way.

"It's an acquaintance rape situation," Lyons said.

The woman did not report the rape immediately, according to Lyons. "It first came to our attention Oct. 6," he said.

Since then, UMPD detectives have been actively investigating the case. "Interviews and evidence has been gathered. With the arrest, the basic preliminary investigation is done," Lyons said. "The case is still open. Until the court process is complete, it's not over."

Lyons said that alcohol was a factor in the incident.

This is the second rape reported on campus this year. Earlier in the semester, a female in Chadbourne Hall reported that she was sexually assaulted in first floor bathroom at about 4:30 a.m.

In that incident, the victim told police that she was grabbed from behind while in the bathroom and assaulted by a man in black ski mask. The resident reported that she was eventually able to elude her attacker and escape to her room. According to Lyons, the woman immediately called UMPD and reported the incident.

The attacker in that incident is described as a tall, very thin male dressed in black clothes. Because of the ski mask, the victim was not able to get a look at the attacker's face.

Since the attack, the UMass Detectives Bureau have released a sketch of someone they were looking to question with a possible connection to the incident, but no arrests have been made at this time. UMPD still consider the case open. Lyons asked that anyone with information related to the attack call the bureau at 545-0845.

Several other options exist to contact UMass police, as well. Tips can be emailed to UMass police at umpdmail@admin.umass.edu or phoned in to the anonymous UMass police tips line at 577-8477.

Last year, five rapes were reported on campus.

A woman in John Quincy Adams Tower reported that two men sexually assaulted her at around 6 a.m. on Sunday May 5. According to police reports, the woman stated that on her way back from the bathroom, two men hanging around in the hallway pushed her into her dorm room. Allegedly, one of the men held her down while the other sexually assaulted her.

The men fled the room screaming when she began to scream, according to a UMPD safety alert published at the time of the incident.

In a separate incident on April 18, three men allegedly attacked a woman at around 10 p.m. near the Fine Arts Center and sexually assaulted her.

On Oct. 22, 2001, two women reported being assaulted at the "maze" near McGuirk Alumni Stadium. Police arrested and charged three suspects in the case after pulling over a vehicle on Route 9 that matched the description of a vehicle at the scene of the crime.

The University provides several resources to help victims cope with sexual assault. The Everywoman's Center in Nelson House offers 24-hour counseling with a rape hotline at 545-0800.

The UMass police department also offers a 24-hour hotline at 545-2677 that can be used as a stepping-stone to refer victims who request help to counselors, officers, or other professionals.

Senate votes to 'protect' U.S.

By Jesse J. Holland
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON (AP) – Winding down the 107th Congress, the Senate approved the largest government reorganization since World War II in hopes of helping prevent another Sept. 11-type attack. But the months long effort may have been just a warm-up for a bigger battle to come: getting the new Homeland Security Department up and running.

"Setting up this new department will take time, but I know we will meet the challenge together," a jubilant President Bush said after the Senate, nearing adjournment for the year, voted 90-9 on Tuesday to authorize the new Cabinet agency.

On a day that gave Bush a number of decisive legislative victories, the president hailed the bill as "landmark in its scope."

"The United States Senate voted overwhelmingly to better protect America and voted overwhelmingly to help people find work," Bush said at a news conference Wednesday in Prague, Czech Republic, referring to bills creating the new department and bolstering businesses with terrorism insurance. "I want to thank the members of the United States Senate for working with this administration to do the right thing for the American people."

Speaking with Senate the Republican leaders from Air Force One as he flew to NATO meetings in Europe, the president said the Senate's work "ends a session which has seen two years worth of legislative work which has been very productive for the American people."

Eight Democrats and independent Sen. James Jeffords of Vermont voted "no" on the homeland security bill, which merges 22 diverse agencies with combined budgets of about $40 billion and which employ 170,000 workers. It will be the largest federal reorganization since the Defense Department was created in 1947.

But the battles over the department are just beginning. It will take months for the new agency to get fully off the ground. And a budget stalemate continues to block most of the extra money for domestic security enhancements both political parties want for the federal fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

On top of that, many senators were not happy with the final version of the bill and said they would work to make changes next year.

"I have no doubt that next year we will back addressing the shortcomings that are in this bill," said outgoing Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

But Republicans cheered the bill's passage, saying it was better to have a final product than to keep trying to amend this legislation this year. "The terrorists are not going to wait for a process that goes on days, weeks or months," said Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., who will be next year's Senate majority leader.

The Senate also:

- Sent Bush a bill making the government the insurer of last resort for terrorist attacks, with a maximum annual tab to taxpayers of $90 billion. The vote was 86-11.

-Voted 55-44 to approve U.S. District Court Judge Dennis Shedd to be an appeals court judge.

-Sent Bush a measure keeping federal agencies open through Jan. 11, needed due to unfinished spending bills.

-Used voice votes to approve about 130 land and water bills. They included a bill sent to the House extending for three years the CalFed project, aimed at restoring the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, which provides water for drinking and irrigation for much of the state.

The 107th Congress isn't officially finished yet. The Senate was to meet again Wednesday, with no voting planned. The House was to meet Friday to give final, voice-vote approval to small changes the Senate made in the homeland security bill before sending it to Bush for his signature.

Most senators fled Washington on Tuesday, cleaning out their desks and saying goodbye to departing members like 99-year-old GOP Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, as well as GOP Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, Fred Thompson of Tennessee, Bob Smith of New Hampshire and Phil Gramm of Texas.

Some Democratic senators were on their way out as well, including Sens. Jean Carnahan of Missouri, Robert Torricelli of New Jersey and Max Cleland of Georgia, all of whom either lost re-election campaigns or did not run.

Cleland, who lost his legs and an arm in Vietnam, used a variation on Gen. Douglas McArthur's famous farewell that "old soldiers never die, they just fade away" in his final Senate speech.

"This old soldier is not going to fade away, but I will take my battles to another front," Cleland said to Senate applause.

Completion of the homeland security bill ended a topsy-turvy odyssey for legislation that started inching through Congress nearly a year ago against Bush's will, only to see him offer his own version after momentum became unstoppable.

Democrats resisted Bush's bill because it restricted labor rights of the new department's workers. But many of them reversed course after their Election Day loss of Senate control was attributed partly to the homeland security fight.

"This is a substantial accomplishment, a historic day in the age of insecurity we've entered," said Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., one of many authors of homeland security legislation.

KEN LAMBERT/ASSOCIATED PRESS

SEN. TRENT LOTT, R-MISS., CENTER, TALKS TO PRESIDENT BUSH ON A SPEAKER PHONE IN LOTT'S CAPITOL OFFICE, YESTERDAY, ABOUT THE PASSAGE OF HIS HOMELAND SECURITY LEGISLATION.

MassPIRG's 'Hoops' will help hungry and homeless

By Terron Sahaker

[illegible] are important
When I found about the hunger
[illegible] in Massachusetts I
[illegible] appalled to help," Janice Stasz, freshman and organizer of the week's event said. "Help is needed [illegible]now."
One point that the campaign
[illegible] organizers is the Hunger
[illegible]. The Hunger Cleanup is [illegible] a walk-a-thon. Students
[illegible] together to gather
[illegible] and nonperishable
[illegible]. Yesterday's annual event is [illegible] instead of [illegible] hungry. The [illegible] hope to make. Hoops
[illegible] the annual event.
[illegible] to have Hoops for [illegible] students not realize that [illegible] only a worldwide
[illegible] also a local one," said
[illegible]. "Worcester cares and wants
[illegible] to decide
[illegible] and fund a bill to [illegible] hunger in this end up depending on the food bank."
Mass PIRG is a student directed organization that works on environmental, consumer protection, and democracy issues. The organization supports many public and student campaigns and programs. The Water Watch project is one program designed to provide communities with the resources and opportunities to impact water quality and clean up local waterways.
Other environmental campaigns are the Clean Air Campaign and the Parks and Forests Program. MassPIRG offers programs that directly involve student life, the Books for Books program and the Youth Vote Campaign.
For more information or to sign up your team for the tournament visit the MassPIRG table at the campus center this week or email hoops4hunger@yahoo.com

Pakistani lectures at SOM

By Mark Ostroff
Collegian Staff

In the first part of a two-part lecture series, nuclear physicist Dr. Pervez Hoodbhoy presented his documentary film, "Pakistan and India Under the Nuclear Shadow" at the Isenberg School of Management yesterday evening.
Hoodbhoy, a professor at Islamabad's Quriad-e-Azam University, is known for his work in anti-nuclear activism, as well as his advocacy in Pakistan-India regional peace. Hoodbhoy also worked as a visiting professor for schools including the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Carnegie-Mellon University. The documentary presented to last night's audience was filmed three months before the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on the United States. Hoodbhoy, believing this issue to be too important for lecture only, expressed the difficulty in making such a documentary.
"We wanted to show the people something tangible," he said, something more effective than what we could create in words."
According to Hoodbhoy, the documentary was particularly difficult to make, considering the efforts it took him and his crew to collect information from not only his home country of Pakistan, but from the nations rival India as well.
"Communication between the two countries is very poor," he said. "If authorities on both sides had found out that we were working on a nuclear matter they would have made things very difficult for us."
According to Hoodbhoy, tension between Pakistan and India had reached unprecedented levels, last year, during what was considered to be a military showdown in the controlled Kashmir region. At that time, according to Hoodbhoy, "one million troops stood eyeball-to-eyeball," while nuclear weapons were ready to be utilized by both sides. According to additional reports, about 3,000 men were also killed in the skirmishes. The documentary, initially elaborated on general issues surrounding nuclear war and later described the politics that caused the South Asian nuclear standoff.
According to the documentary, after the atoms, razing of Japanese cities Hiroshima and Nagasaki, nations like France, Britain, China, and a resenting Soviet Union, strived for nuclear technology. India, with the aid of the U.S. and Canada, had begun to pursue this technology. This was seen by India to be a step forward in technological development, as well as a good measure for regional security, but according to Pakistani Admiral Ramu Ramas, this was a promise yet to be fulfilled.
"If anything has worsened, it was the regional security situation," said Ramas in Hoodbhoy's documentary.
The security of the region had unraveled when neighboring Pakistan found out about Indian nuclear technology, after the 1974 test of its first bomb.
"India shot itself in the foot, said Hoodbhoy. "That was the signal for Pakistan to begin its own program."
The documentary also emphasized the economic impact of both nations where military spending, at times, goes as high as

JAMES HATHEWAY/COLLEGIAN
PERVEZ HOODBHOY PRESENTS HIS LECTURE AND FILM ENTITLED "PAKISTAN AND INDIA UNDER THE NUCLEAR SHADOW."

60 percent of the national budget, for more weapons.
"A deadly logic is now at work in these countries, Hoodbhoy said. "India and Pakistan are both looking to build their arsenals."
Hoodbhoy had also cited a comment by Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf, who justified the heavy military spending by saying, "We will eat grass, but we will have the bomb."
To give an example of the destructive power of Pakistan, Hoodbhoy, appearing in his own documentary, had said that while Pakistan, at one point, possessed only enough weapons to destroy Bombay and New Delhi, the nation is capable of destroying every Indian city, twice. According to Hoodbhoy, the Pakistani "siege mentality" is brought on by continued pressure of not only the Indian nuclear power next door, but from internal pressures from citizens as well as radical Islamic groups, who fear oppression from the larger India.
"They'll do to us, what Israel has done to Palestine," said Hoodbhoy, giving an example of Pakistan's "siege mentality."
Another cause for concern that Hoodbhoy had presented was the unusual fanaticism of Jihadic forces toward nuclear power. Showing clips of interviews and footage of outraged Islamic radicals, the audience was presented with a vivid description of just how far this fanaticism goes.
"We must be ready to fight," shouted one radical.
"It would be a joy for all Muslims [to attain] nuclear weapons," shouted another.
At the end of the documentary and a short follow-up discussion, Hoodbhoy argued that these kinds of sentiments could be stopped and blamed a part these sentiments on the hostile propaganda that both sides broadcast to their citizens. Hoodbhoy will be continuing his discussion at Smith College's Wright Hall at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow. "Are Islam and the U.S. on a Collision Course?" is the subject of his next lecture.

www.dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Eno Editorial/Opinion Editor
Dan Lamothe News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Verolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Harry Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Snow Day.
CLASSES CANCELED
Where will you be?
Buy the UNLIMITED Okemo/Stratton College Season Pass for only $299 plus tax ($399 after 12/6/02) and you can be skiing or riding the 196 slopes and trails of Okemo and Stratton.
OKEMO MOUNTAIN RESORT
www.okemo.com
www.stratton.com
STRATTON
Subject to S.A. terms. College students must provide original documentation of full-time status from the Reg. state's Office. College ID or fees will not be accepted as proof.

JOHN MAYER
LIVE IN CONCERT
with special guest NickelCreek
in stores now
www.johnmayer.com
SATURDAY NOVEMBER 23
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AT THE BOX OFFICE, AT ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500. ONLINE AT ticketmaster.com
EVENT DATE & TIME SUBJECT TO CHANGE. OUTLET, INTERNET & PHONE CHARGE ORDERS SUBJECT TO CONVENIENCE CHARGES.
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

Bush: NATO faces terror threats

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

PRAGUE (AP) — President Bush warned European allies Wednesday that NATO countries face threats from terrorism in this century as dangerous as those from German armies in the past, imploring member nations to stand together against Iraq's Saddam Hussein.
Resistant nations such as Germany will have to make their own decisions as to "how, if, and when they want to participate," Bush said.
"The world needs the nations of this continent to be active in the defense of freedom: not inward-looking or isolated by indifference," he said.
On the eve of a NATO gathering guarded by American warplanes overhead and overshadowed by the Iraq crisis, summit host Vaclav Havel, the Czech president, said his people prefer that Saddam Hussein peacefully surrender his weapons of mass destruction.
"If, however, the need to use force were to arise, I believe NATO should give honest and speedy consideration to its engagement as an alliance," he said.
NATO Secretary General George Robertson, previewing a gathering to expand and modernize the alliance, predicted there will also be "total unity of the heads of state and governments on support for the U.N. Security Council resolution" on Iraq. But it's too early to say what that support would mean for NATO, Robertson added.
"Even in this beautiful city, I don't think it is wise to cross bridges before you come to them," he said.
On the cobblestones of picturesque Old Town square, several hundred demonstrators – thousands fewer than were threatened — protested the summit that convenes Thursday.
Among them were about three dozen leftists whose banners read, "No war in the name of democracy," and "Don't drop bombs! Drop Bush!"
Tucked into the security of locked-down hotel across town, Bush told students that "great evil is stirring in the world."
"We've faced perils we've never thought about, perils we've never seen before, but they're dangerous, they're just as dangerous as those perils that your fathers and mothers and grandfathers and grandmothers faced."
Administration officials disclosed that U.S. ambassadors in 50 countries – including Germany – have been told to solicit support from allies for personnel and equipment to assist American forces in the war on terrorism and, possibly, on Iraq.
British Defense Secretary Geoff Hoon said his country was among those receiving a request, "but no decision has been taken on that." Britain's position would be discussed in Parliament on Monday, he said.
In Copenhagen, Danish lawmakers approved on Wednesday the participation of Danish soldiers and equipment in any international force in Iraq, if necessary.
Bush invoked the United States' involvement in World War II as he exhorted allies to join America now.
"U-boats could not divide us," Bush told the students, who sat silent through his speech. "The commitment of my nation to Europe is found in the carefully tended graves of young Americans who died for this continent's freedom."
During a separate meeting with Havel earlier in the day, Bush sought to quiet European fears that he is hungry for war. He promised consultation with allies, saying a military clash with Iraq was his "last choice" – and an avoidable one.
It is still possible Saddam could get the message, Bush said. "If the collective will of the world is strong, we can achieve disarmament peacefully."
Aides said afterward that Bush still believes it is highly unlikely that Saddam will comply, this war planning is fast under way. Bush discussed Iraq behind closed doors with President Ahmet Necdet Sezer of Turkey, whose country shares a border with Iraq and offers military bases critical to any U.S.-led attack.
Bush had no plans to meet with German Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder, whose recent re-election campaign infuriated the president by focusing on opposition to Bush's Iraq policy. White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said the two leaders were likely to exchange greetings at a black-tie summit dinner Wednesday.
Of Germany's opposition to using force against Iraq, Bush said: "It's a decision Germany will make just like it's a decision the Czech Republic will make, just like it's a decision Great Britain will make. It's a decision that each country must decide as to how, if and when they want to participate, and how they choose to participate."
The Czech government mobilized 12,000 police officers, 2,200 heavily armed soldiers and special anti-terrorist units to protect the presidents and prime ministers converging on this "city of 1,000 spires."
Miles above, U.S. fighter jets patrolled Prague airspace, supplementing Czech pilots who circled at lower altitudes in Soviet-era planes. Intelligence officials fear the leaders are an inviting target for terrorists.
On Thursday, NATO is to approve invitations to seven former communist states: Bulgaria, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Romania, Slovakia and Slovenia. Bush said the alliance should reach even further.
"We strongly support the enlargement of NATO, now and in the future. Every European democracy that seeks NATO membership and is ready to share in NATO's responsibilities should be welcome in our alliance," he said.
NATO is also due to announce plans for a 21,000-strong rapid response force that could mobilize in seven to 30 days to confront threats from terrorists, renegade governments or regional crises.

AP PHOTO/ALEXANDER ZEMLIANICHENKO
AS NATO LEADERS GATHER FOR SUMMIT TALKS ON TERRORISM IN PRAGUE, PRESIDENT BUSH ATTENDS THE PRAGUE ATLANTIC STUDENT SUMMIT IN PRAGUE, CZECH REPUBLIC, YESTERDAY. BUSH SAID THAT ADMITTING SEVEN MORE EX-COMMUNIST NATIONS AND READYING NATO FORCES FOR RAPID REACTION MISSIONS WORLDWIDE WILL MAKE THE ALLIANCE A CREDIBLE FORCE IN THE FIGHT AGAINST TERRORISM

SPRING BREAK
PARTY VACATIONS
CANCUN ACAPULCO JAMAICA
BAHAMAS FLORIDA S.PADRE
BIGGEST PARTIES! ABSOLUTELY BEST PRICES!
1-800-234-7007
www.ENDLESSsummerTOURS.com

JAMAICA
SPRING BREAK 2003
Spring Break Jamaican style. Everybody's invited.
From airfare and hotel transportation to parties and activities, these reliable tour operators will get you there.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710 www.sunsplashtours.com
Student Travel Services 1.800.648.4849 www.ststravel.com

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 11/22 - Thursday 11/28
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
HALF PAST DEAD* (PG13) 11:15 1:45 4:10 10:10
HARRY POTTER AND THE CHAMBER OF SECRETS* (PG) 11:00 11:30 2:30 3:00 6:00 6:30 9:30 10:00
8 MILE* (R) 11:05 11:25 1:50 2:15 4:35 5:00 7:15 7:50 9:50 10:30
GHOST SHIP (R) 11:40 4:50 7:55 10:25
JACKASS: THE MOVIE (R) 11:55 2:15 5:05 7:45 10:20
MY BIG FAT GREEK WEDDING (PG) 11:50 2:20 4:40 7:05 9:30
SWEET HOME ALABAMA (PG13) 11:20 1:45 4:45 7:20 10:05
THE RING (PG13) 11:10 1:40 4:20 7:00 9:55
THE SANTA CLAUS 2 (G) 11:35 2:00 4:30 7:10 9:35
THE TRUTH ABOUT CHARLIE (PG13) 1:55 7:30
• NO PASSES. NO SUPERSAVERS.
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

BARBADOS
SPRING BREAK '03
ARE YOUR READY?
If you are ready for something different... Barbados is waiting for you! Legendary beaches and fantastic nightlife makes Spring Break in Barbados unforgettable.
Sun Splash Tours 1.800.426.7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

WRITE FOR NEWS!

Styles by Deborah
Featuring Foil Highlights & Designer Haircuts for Students
Complementary consultation with every visit
$10 off Foils and Style Haircuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
$5 off Clipper Cuts with student ID EXPIRES 12/15/02
65 University Drive, Amherst • 549-5610

UMass Amherst Winter Semi-Formal
Celebrate the end of the semester!
Friday, Dec. 6, 2002
7:00p.m. - 12:45a.m.
Peking Garden on Rt. 9
DJ, Dancing, Dinner and Cash Bar!
(Positive ID Required)
Tickets are only $20
$25 at the door
On Sale now at the Campus Center Concourse STARS table
ALUMNI UMASS STARS

Interested in Business?
The Daily Collegian is looking for a new Business Manager and Assistant Business Manager for the spring semester. Great resume builder! Sophomores/Juniors call 545-3500 or stop by The Daily Collegian, downstairs Campus Center.
Needs to possess strong business and communication skills

ATTENTION COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break!
Wintersession
January 2-15, 2003
Day and Evening Classes
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Criminal Justice, Education, English, History, Mathematics, Music, Philosophy, Psychology, Women's Studies, Computer Boot Camp
Call (413) 572-8020 for registration information www.wsc.ma.edu/dgce
Westfield State College
Division of Graduate and Continuing Education
Western Avenue
Westfield Massachusetts 01086-1630

Apple Specialist
APPLE COLLEGE INTERNS WANTED
BECOME A PART OF TODAY'S EXCITING TECHNOLOGY WORLD!
DEVELOP A NEW SET OF PROFESSIONAL SKILLS THAT WILL SERVE YOU FOR A LIFETIME OF SUCCESS! GAIN REAL LIFE SALES EXPERIENCE AND MAKE YOURSELF MORE MARKETABLE AFTER GRADUATION! PROGRAM STARTS JANUARY 2003.
AND
GET THE COOLEST NEW PRODUCT, THE APPLE iPOD!
EARN AN AWARD OF NEW APPLE EQUIPMENT VALUED AT $3,000!
THE INITIATION FEE OF $500 COVERS THE COST OF YOUR SALES TRAINING WHICH WILL UTILIZE THE iPOD. The iPOD IS YOURS TO KEEP. YOU WILL USE YOUR SKILLS TO PERSONALLY INVITE PROSPECTIVE CUSTOMERS TO KEY APPLE SEMINARS.
TO RECEIVE AN INFORMATION PACKAGE AND APPLICATION PLEASE PROVIDE YOUR NAME, PHONE NUMBER, SCHOOL, AND EMAIL ADDRESS TO: GROWTH DEVELOPMENT ASSOCIATES
1-800-966-4321 OR SEND EMAIL REQUEST TO DADUNGEE@GROWTHDEVELOPMENT.COM.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

EDITORIAL@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Direct communication rather than sound bites

On Tuesday, Tiger Woods announced that, despite pressure from a recent editorial in The New York Times, he fully intends to participate in the Master's next year, which has again come under fire for taking place at the all-male Augusta National Golf Club.

The editorial, published in Monday's edition of The Times to immediate reaction, called on Woods to boycott the tournament as a form of protest, countering the club's longstanding and exclusive nature.

"A tournament without Mr. Woods would send a powerful message that discrimination isn't good for the golfing business," the editorial said.

In response, Woods agreed that women should have the right to play at Augusta, but that the decision was out of his hands.

"...it's not up to me," said Woods. "I don't have voting rights, I'm just an honorary member."

The editorial was undoubtedly spurred on by the attempts of Martha Burk, chairwoman of the National Council of Women's Organizations, who has brought her campaign for the inclusion of women to very public and controversial measures. For its part, the Augusta camp shot back with a perfunctory "no comment," and was followed by an interview with Hootie Johnson, chairman of Augusta National, with the Associated Press.

"This woman portrays us as being discriminatory and being bigots. And we're not," Johnson said. "We're a private club. And private organizations are good. The Boy Scouts. The Girl Scouts. Junior League. Sororities. Fraternities. Are these immoral?"

We at The Collegian feel that, as Woods himself went on to say, both sides are right to a degree. However, they must cease communication through the press, through radical forms of boycott, through off-the-cuff remarks and sit down with each other. If compromise or progress is to be made, it will not be through sound bites relayed back and forth between the two camps. Neither side will bring about much legitimacy continuing down that road.

Before The Times took the matter and best interests of an individual in to its own hands, both Woods and Augusta seemed comfortable with their respective positions, as they continue to do. Augusta will once again host the world's premier golfing event, and Woods will participate under the spotlight, highlighted for his game and not his political agenda.

We also agree with Woods in that one man should not be made the symbol for a cause he can't directly influence. The Times was wrong to suggest that the remedy to this conflict lies in his hands; Woods is certainly a powerful and influential figure, but allow him to pick and choose his own causes.

Down the road, there may be room for compromise and change. It's a process, however, that will only continue to stall under the present working condition. By beating around the bush, all involved parties are no better than the cause they cling to so dearly.

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this editorial.

Unsigned opinions represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com

Drowsy musings, or writing while tired

JAMIE LOO

I think I'm turning into a vampire.

Aside from my classes (well, some of them), I've spent most of my daylight hours for the past few days asleep and the night hours awake. At this point, when I go to get my car outside of the Bat Cave at night, I half expect to see Sara Michelle Gellar from "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," jump out of a corner, stake in hand.

I think most of the Collegian staff is also turning into the living dead. There are no windows in the Collegian office and thus hours, even days, could pass and we wouldn't know the difference. It was a rough weekend for most of the staff, and everyone's sleep schedule has been thrown out of whack.

I like to sleep. I think most people would agree that sleep is a wonderful thing. Unfortunately, the National Sleep Foundation (NSF), which conducts research on sleep related issues, has found that over the past few years Americans are getting less and less sleep. It has become a national epidemic, one-quarter, or 47 million adults in the U.S. do not get the minimum eight hours of sleep needed to function properly. People who reported being sleepy during the day were more likely to describe themselves as "dissatisfied with life" and "angry." They are also more pessimistic, anxious and stressed. Sleep deprivation can also lead to long-term problems such as obesity, diabetes and high blood pressure.

College campuses are a wonderland of sleep headed people. Only 35% of people between the ages of 18-29 get over eight hours of sleep. It seems to be a general consensus among most researchers that college students are sleep deprived because of the stressful environment. This is caused by a variety of factors such as academics, jobs, too much partying and time management. It was also found that people in our age group sleep less during the week and more on the weekends than older adults.

I've definitely seen and participated in some interesting displays of sleep deprivation while in college. Tuesday night I went to see "Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets" with my friends, Mike and Johnny. Mike had slept a total of 9 hours since last Friday and was a little crazy. First, his driving was scarier than usual. And then he couldn't enter the confirmation code correctly for us to pick up our Internet-bought movie tickets.

At the end of the movie, Mike, a Harry Potter purist, began to complain about essential parts of the book that were left out of the movie during the credits. In my drowsiness I began to counter argue his claims because the length of the movie was already two hours and forty minutes.

Then our conversation got pretty heated. Soon, the first Harry Potter movie got involved.

"That was a clutch scene, they shouldn't have cut it out!"

"What, of course it had to go there was no time for it. It was just extra stuff that other scenes already covered!"

We began to raise our voices a little. The people around us began to get up and leave. At some point we realized we were being a bit over the top.

Our age group is also more likely to use stimulants such as caffeinated drinks and over the counter drugs to stay awake. The NSF's website (www.sleepfoundation.com) actually has a caffeine calculator which can calculate the amount of caffeine you consume in a day. Apparently, 250 milligrams of caffeine each day, which is a few cups of coffee, is a healthy amount.

Aside from losing sleep from the upcoming pre-Thanksgiving exams, another serious problem is driving while being tired. The NSF met this week with researchers, federal agencies, corporations and organizations in a national summit to specifically address the issue of drowsy driving. The National Highway Transportation Safety Administration has estimated that at least 100,000 police-reported crashes are the direct result of driver fatigue each year, resulting in more than 1,550 deaths, 71,000 injuries, and $12.5 billion in costs.

So when you drive home for Thanksgiving break, make sure you get enough sleep before hitting the road. If you need caffeine consume only 250 milligrams. Don't fight with friends during the credits of movies, it's a little scary. Sleep during the night time, or you may turn into a vampire. Buffy will be waiting to get you too. On that note, it's probably time for this columnist to go to sleep.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Vampire (Columnist).

Divestment pays a peace dividend

JONATHAN ELSBERG

The concept of divestment from Israel is becoming a topic for discussion around UMass students, faculty, staff and administration. For those who don't know what it means or why it would even be up for discussion, it's a quick and dirty lesson.

Divestment is the opposite of investment. Instead of an investor putting their money into investment partners, such as financial markets, stocks, mutual funds, certain kinds of bonds, money deposited in banks and corporate partnerships. If it is currently in one of these assets, it will then be removed. It is done by choice, when an investor feels it is no longer a wise investment.

When large numbers of investors refuse to put their money in a specific investment, it can result in the value of that investment dropping. This is based on the basic principles of supply and demand: once fewer people are willing to buy a certain asset, the value of that asset will drop. If enough investors do this, the asset will fall in value. It is the goal of those who support divestment from Israel to put pressure on the Israeli government by making investors unwilling to buy Israeli assets, thus causing the value of those assets to fall.

A political movement usually based on moral principle, for example, the anti-Vietnam War movement of the 1960s, targeted against the racist Apartheid regime that ruled South Africa until 1993. Investors pressured companies directed from South African government bonds, South African corporate stocks and bonds and the stocks and bonds of other corporations that conducted business in South Africa and thus helped to maintain the economic power of the Apartheid government. These investors decided that it was wrong to make a profit at the expense of the human rights of the million of non-White South Africans who lived, at best, as second-class citizens, denied anything even approaching equal civil and human rights.

When the asset was the South African government bond, it became harder for the South African government to maintain a balanced budget, forcing it to reconsider the huge amounts of money it spent on police and military forces necessary to control and oppress the population. When the asset was a corporate bond or stock, the corporation's balance sheet began to look worse, because corporations usually own some of their own assets. As the value of those assets falls, the value of the entire corporation falls. If that happens, the corporation has a harder time borrowing money from banks to use, for example, in constructing a new factory. So, through this roundabout process, the corporations saw that their profits were falling – all because of the fact that they did business with the Apartheid regime. To regain those profits, the corporations were forced to stop doing business with South Africa, and this added additional pressure on the South African government to change its racist ways.

"It is not enough for us to want peace in the Middle East, we must do something to help make it a reality – but the tools at our disposal are limited."

Today, a new movement for divestment is growing at UMass universities and colleges around the country, and with other investors around the world.

The movement seeks to re-invigorate the ethics of investment that took hold in the struggle against Apartheid. This time, the target is the Israeli government and its decades old policy of occupation and oppression of Palestinian people in the West Bank, and Gaza Strip, as well as the second-class status of non-Jewish citizens within Israel.

It was not easy to convince the Board of Trustees of UMass to adopt an ethical investment policy in order to divest from Apartheid South Africa. It took years of organizing and the dedication of thousands of student, faculty, staff and administration activists. The struggle to implement ethical divestment from Israel will be much harder to achieve because the Israeli government has more supporters in the U.S. than did the apartheid South African government, but it must be done for the simple reason that it is the right thing to do. It is not enough for us to want peace in the Middle East, we must do something to help make it a reality – but the tools at our disposal are limited. Divestment is one of the best tools that we have. We must make the Israeli government understand that it cannot continue to crush the hopes and lives of Palestinians under the machine of military occupation, and along with this, the hope of ordinary Israeli citizens for peace and prosperity.

Ariel Rubinstein, a co-founder of the Israeli group Peace Now, has recently written that "Jewish existence requires putting an immediate and unilateral end to ruling over another people". This is not only an ethical imperative; it is the only real path to a truly just and lasting peace for all people in the region. It was Martin Luther King, Jr., who once said, "true peace is not the absence of tension, but the presence of justice." Justice and peace are two sides of the same coin. We must demand that UMass divest from the coin of war, occupation and oppression. Instead, UMass must invest in the coin of justice and peace – the only investment that pays a dividend worth having.

Jonathan Elsberg is a UMass student.

The blame game

PETER TROVATO

Richard Guy is dead. Only twenty-two years old, a former MIT physics major, and now he's gone. In 1999, Guy sat down in his dorm room, filled a plastic bag with nitrous oxide, placed it over his head and took a deep breath. The nitrous that he inhaled deprived his body of oxygen (hint: oxygen is needed for survival) and subsequently caused him to asphyxiate. All this to get a high, but instead of getting a temporary sense of euphoria, Richard got something much more permanent. This past month, Guy's parents filed a lawsuit against MIT, pointing the finger at the university for their son's death.

A common occurrence nowadays: personal decisions turn into catastrophic errors followed by a search for a scapegoat. Fingers are pointed and blame is handed out; cases are filed, out of court settlements are reached and money is paid. Is happiness and closure ever reached through the exchange of money? I doubt it, but yet everyday there is a new lawsuit and another person searching for a 'fall guy.'

A man walks into his next-door neighbor's yard and steps on a rake, which rises from the grass only to strike him in his face; he sues his neighbor for not properly putting away his tools. A woman drops her hot coffee in her lap and makes millions off of McDonald's because she suffers from a chronic case of 'butterfingers.' The list is endless; frivolous lawsuits have spread throughout courtrooms across America like a rampant plague. These suits are driven by money, and so is the society in which we live – they go together like a car accident and an insurance claim. Because of this, I have come to accept them as mere realities within our system. They are about greed and seeking comfort through monetary value. What I cannot come to accept is the notion of asserting blame – the need to point the finger.

"These suits are driven by money, and so is the society in which we live, therefore, they go together like a car accident and an insurance claim."

Constantly searching for blame is a mentality as much as it is a social norm. The idea of faulting others for our own mistakes isn't just a scene from a civil suit courtroom, it's a way of thinking and many have adopted the philosophy. The 'blame game' is played everywhere; it just takes on different shapes.

A corporation starts to lose profits; the salesmen aren't pushing their product successfully; the executive's game plan is becoming ineffective and the stock price starts to dwindle. But who feels the brunt when the business decides to make changes? More times than not the 'top dogs', who aren't getting the job done, feel little wrath for their own poor performance. They are protected. Instead it's the workers who are burnt. The people who clock in at 8 a.m. and work overtime are the ones asked to take a pay cut or are told two weeks in advance that their job is being taken away. The secretaries, the data analysts, and the bill stuffers are deemed expendable because the 'go-to guys' aren't holding up their end of the bargain. The problems and mistakes of the executives are taken out on the workers within the company. Remember Enron? The "blame game" at the corporate level.

Unfortunately, a form of this ridiculous game was played on our campus last year. The University budget exceeded its limits and UMass wound-up fifteen million dollars in debt. The miscalculations of the 'budget experts' and the 'head honchos' of this school resulted in tragic consequences. Professors who taught subjects, that were less subscribed to, were let go; athletic teams were told to clean out their lockers because people at the top of the pyramid didn't get the deal done. The people being told to pack their bags are feeling the blame for something that they are indirectly related to. Scapegoats, for the blunders of their bosses.

Forget demanding accountability. Forget what is fair. In the "blame game," anything goes. Fault anyone who you can connect to your error, even in the most distant setting, and then stick it to them; make them pay, fire them, and let them feel your pain as well. MIT is being sued for lax supervision in their dorms. The school will possibly pay millions of dollars in a lawsuit and now Resident Assistants will be forced to do bedroom checks of their twenty-two year old dorm residents. And this will all be sparked because fingers had to be pointed. It happens in universities, corporations and our homes.

Soon, our country may be going to war with Iraq. Saddam Hussein will be our target, our person to blame. Maybe he deserves this accusation but certainly the soldiers who will be dodging bullets and dropping bombs will be waiting pensively for the next few weeks. It's not fair, but it's the game we are in. It is the mentality we have adopted. It's the way of thinking that our most powerful figures have taken up, and it's dangerous. Who's your scapegoat? You better get one, they're going fast.

Peter Trovato is a Collegian Columnist.

From page to screen

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HARRY POTTER AND THE CHAMBER OF SECRETS
Directed by Chris Columbus
Starring Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint and Emma Watson

An evening sky, with its cool blue hues spread over its soft orange undertones, adorns the backdrop of the golden-trimmed Warner Brothers logo opening Harry Potter and the Chamber of Secrets. The initial notes from the ever-recognizable theme music now associated with the "Potter" films begin echoing the simplistic, yet enchanting melody throughout the theater. The camera pans over rooftops of quiet English suburbia, and the audience heavily packed with Potter fans sends "shushes" about the room, quieting those who had been talking only moments before. As the camera centers on a specific home – number four Privet Drive – and gracefully shifts down to the window of the building's smallest bedroom, the avid fan sits upright with knots in his or her stomach and anxious hands.

"Chambers of Secrets has arrived – at long last – to the big screen," the fan screams in his or her head, and while the thrill is not as great as the pending outburst suspended in limbo until the release of book five, it nonetheless creates a powerful flood of emotions that hit the roof come time the camera pinpoints young Harry, played by Daniel Radcliffe (David Copperfield), sitting in his room and smiling at the animated photography album Hagrid, the endearing, kindhearted giant played by Robbie Coltrane (The World is Not Enough, GoldenEye), gave him at Sorcerer's Stones' conclusion. It's a subtle and brief cinematic frame added to the movie's version of the tale and fills the avid fan with confidence, assuring: yes, with genuine emotion and just the right touch of special effects, indeed the "Potter" series – not just the introductory movie – can successfully translate to film.

Based on the 1998-released novel, which debuted at number one on the best-seller lists of the U.K. Whitaker Book Track, The New York Times, USA Today and the Wall Street Journal, Chamber of Secrets breathes life into J.K. Rowling's tale of mystery, danger, friendship, honesty and sense of belonging. It's a worldwide, far-reaching tale, with 42 million copies of the novel sold in more than 42 countries (17 million in United States and Canada) and encompasses a far better plot than Sorcerer's Stone.

"We devoted a good part of Sorcerer's Stone to setting up the world of Harry Potter," producer David Heyman stated in Warner Brothers' final production notes. "There was so much to introduce in terms of the magic, the settings and the characters. With Chamber of Secrets, we jump directly into the narrative and into the adventure."

Jumped indeed. And with film production beginning on Nov. 19, 2001 at Leavesden Studios in Hertfordshire,

Turn to FILM, page 6

The best and the worst

By Mike Kulak
COLLEGIAN HARRY POTTER GEEK

Once again, Harry Potter has hit the big screen. Audiences flood the movie theatres preparing to be dazzled by the young wizard and his friends. And hardcore fans, like myself, prepare to be disappointed as well. Not to say that the Harry Potter movies are anything short of amazing, but to a diehard fan of the books, inconsistencies abound. Being such a fan (yes, I am that crazy "Harry Potter" nut in your class), I have made two top 10 lists – inconsistencies with the book and well done adaptations.

TOP 10 INCONSISTENCIES

While the second movie does a much better joh of sticking to the book than the first movie, there are still plenty of inconsistencies. Some are bigger than others, but one thing remains the same – the book and the movie don't match up. So here are the top 10 – 10 being the least important, one being the most important.

10. Penelope Clearwater

One of the smaller discrepancies is that Penelope Clearwater is not petrified along with Hermione. This is followed with the general downplaying of all the other minor characters, but while Penelope's already small role is severely minimized in the movie to begin with, her absence from this scene is minor, but important.

9. Harry's Trunk

Another minor change in the movie is Harry has all of his wizarding possessions in his room over the summer. In the novel, one of Harry's big problems with the Dursleys is that his wizarding belongings are kept under lock and key. This was probably kept out of the movie to save time, but it downplays the mistreatment Harry suffers at the hands of his relatives.

8. Trouble with the Ministry

When Dobby dumps a cake on Mrs. Mason's head, Harry is supposed to receive a warning from the ministry of magic. In the film, he does not. It's not really a huge problem that this action is left out of the

Turn to TOP TEN, page 6

film

continued from page 5

England – three days after Sorcerer's Stone's commercial release – those behind the magic have definitely produced rather quickly a masterpiece worth resounding praise.

Human emotion is the film's greatest treasure – something slightly lacking in Sorcerer's Stone. The original "Potter" film filled fans with joy for the simple reason it was Rowling's words displayed on screen. Now after the fact, avid fans can admit the children lacked superb acting skills. Scenes with Harry discovering basic wizard concepts seemed forced. The wooden dialogue and face was right, but it was closer to wax. Hagrid's character look-alike read the lines from the book rather than actually witnessing Harry go through a coming-of-life-altering moment.

Radcliffe now 13 has grown. He's matured. And he's a much better actor for it. Just as Rupert Grint has all along been Ron Weasley without any shadow of doubt, Radcliffe has in Chamber of Secrets pinpointed Harry somewhere within his mind being. The world flowing from his mouth are natural as are the emotional expressions. He is completely spooked in Knockturn Alley, irritated in Artemis with Gilderoy Lockhart, worried about Hermione and Ginny's fate, and relieved to see Dumbledore back from Azkaban. There's something more than his perfectly matching glasses and haircut that make him Harry now, and the film thrives because of it.

That said, acting by Radcliffe is nothing compared to Grint (14) and Emma Watson (12, playing Hermione Granger). Day-day performs that best. Even an avid fan can forget he's on set, so long a time and intricate their emotional fashion has changes provoked from a direct play into Rowling's words to all wrong but beloved novel. Most intriguing Grint and Watson's chemistry from subtle glances and smiles to obvious awkward hand-shakes – will a specialized kiss/romantic tolerance between Hermione and Ron? The fourth movie directed Chris Columbus – executive in the films production notes – The kids' performances are more assured and quite frankly, the actors are better than they were in the first film." Maybe the biggest understatement we could possibly make.

Right on line Kenneth Branagh (Hamlet, Much Ado About Nothing) took the role of Defense Against the Dark Arts professor Gilderoy Lockhart. The actor is a good pet, proud if beyond petulant.

Lockhart is amongst the most challenging roles to either of the two films," stated Heaman in the production notes. "We needed someone who could be both annoying and charming, who would embrace Lockhart's narcissism, be hysterically funny, and still keep him grounded in reality."

In Branagh, they found him 10 times over.

He's very flamboyant, rather vain and terribly narcissistic," stated Branagh of Lockhart in the production notes. "He's a delicious character to play. Tenaciously amusing and charming, but we have to convince audiences that he could have done all the things he claims. We had to make him plausible."

And by the time Lockhart arrogantly swept into his classroom from his office stood on the high stone hallway and thunderously proclaimed himself as having authored this audience was thoroughly convinced. Branagh was hysterically egotistical and his film performance made – dare I write – the character even better than in the book's rendition.

Also a newcomer to "Potter" films in Chamber of Secrets Jason Isaacs (Black Hawk Down, The Patriot) was Lucius Malfoy.

It's my first film about wizards, and I don't get to wear wash [night blue] hair and walk around with a snake-headed cane very often," stated Isaacs in the production notes. "The fun and challenge of playing this character was making Lucius as grotesque as I could [get away with] keeping him real. [Lucius is] the most confident person I've ever stepped inside and completely suspects in his arrogance and ruthlessness. He's pure evil."

Isaacs lived up to his character's concept and more with English blond

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Quick Start A.S.
[illegible]

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups
[illegible]
Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Sunderland 2 Bedroom
Corner unit on bus route $820 utilities included/avail dbl immediately 397-1912

Now $180.00 Move In's Week Deal 1 bedroom apartments HEAT & HOT WATER Incl. appl. new Electronic Ignition Range, one of the best colleges in Basketball Monitors [illegible] Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 [illegible]

Apt. For Rent 1 & 2 rooms Avail. 9/1 & up to 5 min. walk 585-253-9546

Sunderland 2 Bedroom Townhouse on bus route $925 utilities included/avail immediately 397-1912

Brandywine Apts.
Now Renting 1 & 2 bedroom apts. Some have been New. Pool, Tan & Tube, Laundry, free coffee, free wine. Get them while they last.
Studios
Call 549-0360 Ask about one month free!

AUTO FOR SALE

Ford Ranger Pickup extended cab and four wheel drive All options very nice condition $5,500 552-9123

89 Nissan 240SX Coupe 155k 5-speed Gtr Good Sport's $8000 Emily 546-6337

'94 Metro Sable Wagon Well maintained, Reliable, Reliable 228K (H) 540-7435

EMPLOYMENT

Meat Dept. Sales Assoc. Part time afternoons & evenings weekends required Call Atkins 253-9528

Horse Dog sitter needed 11/27 - Dec. 2 in Shutesbury 7 miles from Campus $75/day 259-1765

Winter Break Employment - Barnes & Noble at Boston University. Help us prepare for the upcoming semester. Needed: Cashiers, Shelvers, Customer Service, Phones. Flexible shifts (20,30, 40 + hrs per week) starting December 16th - January 25th. Stores discount, conveniently located in Kenmore Sq. under the Citgo Sign on MBTA B, C or D Green line. Meet our representatives Dec. 2nd or 3rd at the Campus Center Concourse or call our Human Resource Dept at 617-236-7488 or E-Mail [illegible] for more info.

Bartender Positions make up to $400 shift. No experience required Event College Job 1-800-806-0084 Ext 1525

Wanted: Spring/Summer Interns must be role models, innovators, dissenters, seeking leadership outside the box Average Pay $9.50/hr 413-549-4746

Part Time Internship, A.I. Sales, PR, Distribution. Well Paid Flexible Hours. E-mail neal@pendnet.com with "Intern" in subject line

Politics Got You Down? Clean Water Act is hurting grassroots organizers to help hold polluters accountable! Work on environmental/public health campaigns. Join a swimming team and fight for progressive causes you believe in. $345/wk + bonus & benefits. Call today!!! 413-584-9830

EMPLOYMENT

Interviewing Now!!! For Holiday Help and winter Break Work. $15.50 base. Appt. in our busy customer Service and sales departs. PT/FT flex. Conditions Apply. Start NOW or After finals... 781-890-7667 617-423-3456

Attn: UMASS Students Holiday break not exciting? Make some cash, Build your Resume and work with our Student team. Call Or apply online. 781-890-7667 (Metrowest) 617 423-3456 (Boston City) www.winter-breakwork.com

Nov. 21, 2002 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a spring 2003 internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required—training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

EMPLOYMENT

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! $10 for year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

ROOM FOR RENT

Mill Valley Estates 2 & 3 Bedrooms Available now at $875 $1150 253-7377

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate for single w/bath $375/mo w/ heat in puffton 2 bedroom w/ male undergrads starts jan. Inquire John at 549-0794 or jburgess@bellslabmail.es.umass.edu

SERVICES

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Fall leaf cleanups done cheap. Call Nate for a free estimate. 259-1312.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SUBLET

On Bus Route 1 Bedroom Available Winter & Spring (fits two) 2 Bedroom Available for summer. Call 256-1989.

TRANSPORTATION

5 College Students: Are you in need of a ride to or from the airport for the holidays! Don't wait until it's too late- Call Valley Transporter. The Easy Way to the Airport, for a reservation today. 413-253-1350.

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group Go Free!!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

ALTERNATIVE SPRING BREAK
Atlanta, Cherokee, Holyoke, Mashpee, Mississippi Delta Email: kly@som.umass.edu

SPRING BREAK CHEAP!!! Call Logan (413) 210-5778

AT LAST!! Spring Break!! Book Now... Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. 2 Free trips. Sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

SPRING BREAK BLOWOUT Book Now!! Free Meals and Parties Party with MTV sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuREan.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!... 1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

YOUR AD HERE

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day ; Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN
Hampshire Services Cable Network

[illegible]

TV Listings coming soon...

to a Classifieds page near you.

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Zack & Zoof By Sandy Addison

ECG By SAE

Friends Don't Let Friends Drive With Kulak By Mike Kulak

Zack & Zoof By Sandy Addison

Quote of the Day

"She was a junkie for the printed word. Lucky for me, I manufactured her drug of choice."

-Grady Tripp
Wonder Boys

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 41	HIGH: 51 LOW: 33	HIGH: 36 LOW: 28

Horoscopes

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – You're going try to mount a search before the day is done for something special that may have been lost. I'm tellin' myself I found true happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Keep moving at a rapid pace throughout the day and the motorpsycho nitemare can't catch up to you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may actually find yourself agreeing with your critics today. It might take till the fourth time around.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You'll find yourself gravitating towards those with similar energies. When your gravity fails, don't let negativity pull you through.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Its important for you to remain true to your intentions and keep relying on those tactics that work. You can't rely no more to be standin' around waitin'.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may have a chance to observe something that other people are likely to consider once in a lifetime. 'Twas in another lifetime, one of toil and blood.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – That which few suspected and even fewer spoke about is likely to come to pass before this day is out. Speak good English as you invite them into your room.

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – A disappointment is in the offing, but you won't be disappointed when vain people let you down.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – While your spirits may wax and wane some, the truth is that there is really nothing for you to worry about. No use in worrying 'cause the world gone wrong.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – You may want to wait until you receive the advice of someone who has been in your shoes. You could stand inside my shoes.

CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – You won't have to wait long before something happens which forces your hand. Fold your hands and pray for rain.

LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – Dig farmers today, and in the morning milk their cows.

GIVE US COMICS!

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Rice Soup

Chicken Pesto Pasta

Philly Steak Sandwich

3-Cheese Quesadilla (vegetarian)

Tofu Fricassee (vegan)

DINNER

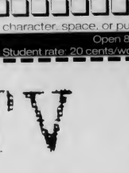
Tomato Rice Soup

BBQ Chicken Quarters

Baked Chicken Quarters

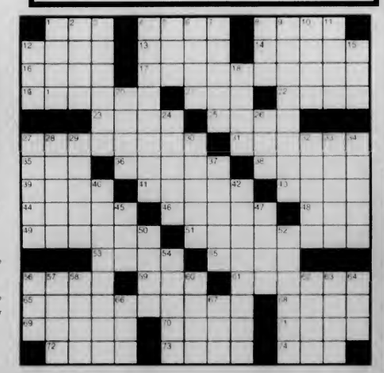
Beef Stew

Seitan Bourguignon (vegan)



Chocolate Dessert Night

If I was an ad, I would go here.



ACROSS
1 Kind of agent
4 Society, briefly
8 Will-o'-the-—
12 Baldwin of "Beetlejuice"
13 Sushi ingredient
14 Love affair
16 Big blow
17 Basement alternative (2 wds.)
19 Fastin
21 Pollen spreader
22 Bango cousins
23 Insincere
25 Set down
27 Gets
31 Manuel's gig
35 Thurman of films
36 Rings out
38 PC clog maker
39 Corduroy ridges
41 Hoof problems
43 Not sweet
44 Audibly
46 Fits of pique
48 Nest-egg letters
49 Admits (2 wds.)
51 Big League bit
53 11th-grade exam
55 A Great Lake
56 Reed instrument
59 Cat's boot
61 Drill command (2 wds.)
65 Rug or sofa
68 Wooded valley
69 Couples and Waring
70 Almost never
71 Time periods
72 Misplaced
73 Self-images
74 I-bill-stir movie

DOWN
1 Board
2 Pulley part
3 When mammoths roamed (2 wds.)
4 Saved records
5 Knightly title
6 Union parish
7 Stair post
8 "We — robbed!"
9 Nervy
10 Overcharge, slangily
11 Brownish-purple
12 Khan of note
15 Home: abbr.
18 Table extension
20 Paper fastener
24 Tolerates
26 Three in Rome
27 Not urban
28 Writer — Zola
29 Navigator Sebastian —
30 Gin drink
32 Decorous
33 — Hardy, Ind.
34 Wedding locale
37 Skyline feature
40 Postpones
42 Attics and closets
45 Bad-mouth, slangily
47 Please
50 Takes a snooze
52 Had to have
54 Nevada resort
56 — the wall
57 Singer — Ives
58 Two-color cookie
60 Bird part
62 Space preceder
63 Residue
64 Golfer Ernie —
66 In, to Fritz
67 Mil. rank: category

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-2-02 © 2002 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matt Despres
Photo Technician	James Schaffer
Copy Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	Jolene Rousseau, Lizy Nielsen, Dan Simmons

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

SPORTS@DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Fighting for playoff life

UMass needs win, help this weekend

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Don't blow this off as a meaningless game because it isn't.

In fact, there are a few ways that the Massachusetts football team (7-4, 5-3 Atlantic 10) could make the Division I-AA postseason.

The Minutemen still have an outside chance to win the A-10 or make the playoffs as an at-large bid.

Either situation begins with one must. The Maroon and White must take care of Rhode Island on Saturday and get some help.

The Minutemen would win the conference in just one of many, many (I don't want to count) scenarios. The only one that results in a UMass championship is as follows:

If UMass beats URI, Delaware beats Villanova, New Hampshire beats Maine, William and Mary beats Richmond and James Madison beats Northeastern, then the Maroon and White will win the A-10 and receive the automatic bid into the I-AA tournament. The wrong winner in any of those five games means UMass will not win the conference this year.

The other scenario is simpler to understand, but may be even harder to imagine. The Minutemen must beat Rhode, and if Delaware drops Nova, they could be in for an at-large bid.

"I think just Delaware's got to beat Villanova," UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "There's nobody else that could go. Who are they gonna take? The only other teams that have three losses are out of the Patriot League.

"So, they going to take two from the Patriot League and two from the A-10?" he added.

Overcoming the four-loss plateau to make the playoffs would be unprecedented, as shown in the NCAA manual. "The at-large record of a team will be scrutinized to determine a team's strength of schedule, however, more than three losses will place a team in jeopardy of not being selected," the manual reads.

Obviously, even a UMass win and Nova loss doesn't guarantee anything. Villanova could still get the bid, despite its loss to the Maroon and White, but one of the Minutemen's losses being to a strong I-A program (North Carolina State) would likely give them the leg up in case of even records.

Even more than a championship or a postseason bid, though, a win at URI would put the stamp on what Whipple and his players would consider a successful season.

That's the key," Whipple said. "I've never heard a football team that won eight games at the college level not say it was a good season. If you average eight wins a year, you're doing pretty well."

As for the actual matchup, quarterback Jeff Krohn, who has missed the last two games – both losses – with a head injury, is likely to start in Kingston Saturday.

"He'll start if he's healthy," said Whipple, who expects Krohn to be hale and hearty for Saturday's contest. "He was better [in practice] last night."

"We've added a couple things [for the offense]," Whipple added. "We're just a better team when we have Jeff in there."

Whipple, who got a call from the conference's head official this week regarding the non-off-sides call that end the Minutemen last week's game and, likely, a shot at the playoffs, wants this one as much for pride as any thing.

Turn to FINALE, page 7

FRESHMAN RB SCOTT BARRY (6) GAINS 125 YARDS RUSHING AGAINST URI TO BREAK THE 1000-YARD MARK FOR THE SEASON.

Dacko era begins vs. Sacred Heart

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The countdown is finally over.

Eight months. 30 weeks. 223 days.

On April 11, 2002, a completion in the changing of the guard in the Massachusetts women's basketball program occurred when Marnie Dacko was announced as the new head coach of the Minutewomen – replacing former coach Joanie O'Brien.

On Nov. 22, after spending most of her time in Amherst generating relationships with people around the school, the town and most importantly, all her players, Dacko will get her first crack at displaying her coaching skills in a regular season game, when the Minutewomen open up the 2002-03 campaign against Sacred Heart at home in the Mullins Center at 7 p.m.

